This proceeding is brought to enforce Order No. 27 issued by the Secretary of Agriculture regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and to prevent and restrain the defendants from handling milk in violation of the provisions of said Order No. 27; to secure a declaratory judgment, pursuant to the Federal Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934 (28 U. VI

Pursuant to the provisions of Sections 8b and 8c of the Act, the Secretary on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on 3 a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on an order substantially identical with the aforesaid order.

VII

In accordance with the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to Section 10 (i) of the Act, joint public hearings were conducted by Glenn J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, joint public hearings were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 1938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938, and at New York, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid all interested parties were afforded as opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed Federal and State orders. The said hearings were attended by representatives of producers, handlers and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area.

VIII

On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary, pursuant to the provisions of Section 8e of the Act, found and proclaimed that, as to milk produced for sale in the marketing area, the purchasing power of such milk during the base period, August 1909 to July 1914, could not be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture, but that the purchasing power of such milk could be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture for that portion of the post-war period between August 1921 and July 1929, inclusive.

IX

Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them of a proposed order, the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said order containing the terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner as, and made applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said order provides that "This order shall become effective after the issuance by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York of an order containing provisions similar to the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be complementary and on the first day of the month following, by more than three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary of (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement containing provisions similar to this order approved by him and signed by handlers of more than 50 percent of the milk sold in the marketing area, or, his determination approved by the President that the failure or refusal of handlers to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the act and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers pursuant to such declared policy of the act." A copy of the Federal Register of August 9, 1938, containing a true, correct and complete copy of said order is hereto attached as "Exhibit A." On August 5, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments, issued proposed Official Order No. 126, which order is substantially identical with Order No. 27. A true, correct and complete copy of proposed Official Order No. 126 is hereto attached as "Exhibit B."

X

On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary tentatively approved a marketing agreement regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area. Opportunity was given to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the order to execute said agreement but prior to the issuance of said order handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed within the marketing area failed or refused to sign said marketing agreement.

XI

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 8c (19) of the Act, the Secretary conducted a referendum of producers for the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of the order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938 (said month having, on the 25th day of July 1938, been determined by the Secretary to be a representative period), were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area.

XII

After conducting said referendum and after the refusal or failure of handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed within the marketing area to sign the aforesaid tentatively approved marketing agreement, the Secretary on the 24th day of August 1938, determined, which determination was approved by the President:

(A) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such marketing agreement tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

(B) That the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

(C) That the issuance of the order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who during the month of May 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area, and who voted in the above-mentioned referendum. Said findings and determination were published by the Secretary in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938.

XIII

On the 25th day of August 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, having conducted a poll to determine whether the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least seventy-five percent of the producers of milk produced in the production area for the marketing area and, having made all the findings required by the Rogers-Allen Act (N. Y. Laws of 1937, Chapter 383), declared Official Order No. 126, to be effective on September 1, 1938. The two orders are administered by a market administrator who was appointed by both the Secretary and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to administer both orders. A handler is obliged to file the same reports and make the same payments whether subject to Order No. 27 or to Official Order No. 126 and, whatever order a handler may be subject to, compliance with the terms of one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both.

XIV

On August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an order which was published in the Federal Register on the 27th day of August 1938, said order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938.

XV

Pursuant to Article II of said Order No. 27, the Secretary, on August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said order. Pursuant to Article II of Official Order No. 126, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, on September 2, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said order. Pursuant to Article V, Section 3 of both orders, the Market Administrator prescribed forms to be 7 used by each handler in making final monthly reports in accordance with said article and section.

XVI

Each of the defendants engages in the handling of milk, or cream therefrom, which was received at a plant approved by some duly authorized health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area and such handling is in the current interstate commerce as defined in Section 10 (j) of the act, or directly burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate commerce in such milk, and each of the defendants is, therefore, a handler of milk as defined in section 8c (1) of the act and in paragraph 6 of section 1 of Article I of Order No. 27, and as such, each of the defendants is subject to the applicable provisions of the act and of the Order.

XVII

Order No. 27 is now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect. Official Order No. 126 is likewise now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect.

XVIII

The purpose of said Order No. 27 is to promote, foster and protect commerce in milk among the states and to effectuate the declared policy of the Act. The purpose of said Official Order No. 126 is to promote, foster and encourage the intelligent and orderly marketing of milk through producer owned and controlled co-operative associations, and, in cooperation with the Federal Government, to protect the dairy industry and insure an adequate supply of milk for the inhabitants of the State of New York.

XIX

Approximately one-third of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced in states other than the state of New York. Approximately one-sixth of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced within the state of New York but crosses state lines on its way to be sold in the marketing area. Hence, approximately fifty percent of all milk produced for sale in the mar-
8 keting area crosses state lines in transit to the marketing area, and is, therefore, directly in the current of interstate commerce. A substantial amount of the milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area which does not cross state lines on its way to be sold in the marketing area is, prior to its ultimate disposition by handlers, physically and inextricably intermingled with milk which has crossed state lines on its way to be sold in the marketing area. When so intermingled, the milk which has not crossed state lines loses its separate identity and the regulation of milk which has crossed state lines cannot be made effective unless all such milk is subject to the same regulation. Unless all milk produced for sale in the marketing area, whether or not physically intermingled with milk which has crossed state lines on its way to the marketing area, is subject to the same regulation as such latter milk, discrimination will result against the milk which has moved in the current of interstate commerce as such milk will be unable to compete with the unregulated milk in the marketing area. It will, therefore, be diverted to other markets thereby producing such unstable and disorderly marketing conditions as seriously to impair the purchasing power of producers, the free flow of milk in interstate commerce will be disrupted, burdened, and obstructed, milk producers and handlers whose milk travels in the current of interstate commerce will be penalized, and the effectuation of the declared policy of Congress will be prevented.

XX

Section 2 of Article VI of each order requires the Market Administrator to compute from the reports submitted by handlers a so-called uniform price to producers which is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in the order. The failure of any handler to file a correct report with the Market Administrator results in the announcement by the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers, and if the utilization of milk by a handler not reporting is higher than the average utilization of milk of all handlers, the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator is lower than it otherwise would be and producers therefore fail to receive as high a price for milk as they would if all handlers reported. In addition, the failure of any handler to file a correct report makes it impossible for the Market Administrator to determine accurately the amount of money owned by such handler for milk received from producers.

XXI

Section 8 of Article VII of both orders requires each handler, whose net pool obligation for the preceding month (as defined in section 1 of Article VI of the orders) is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price, to pay to the Market Administrator on or before the 18th day of each month for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. The Market Administrator is required by section 9 of Article VII of both orders to pay on or before the 20th day of each month to handlers, whose net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price, the amount by which such handler's net pool obligation is less than such amount. Unless the handlers who are indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund make their payments on the 18th of each month as required, the Market Administrator will be unable to make the necessary payments to handlers having a credit against the Producer Settlement Fund and such handlers in turn will be unable to pay the full uniform price to producers.

XXII

The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Rock Royal Cooperative, Inc., is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $3,616.56. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $124.62 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

XXIII

The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $1,603.00. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $55.28 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

XXIV

On October 14, 1938, which was four days after the report was due, the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., filed a report with the Market Administrator, which report was incomplete and inaccurate, and was false and untrue inasmuch as it stated that all the milk handled by said defendant was received from said defendant's own farm. Said defendant neither owns nor operates any farm whatsoever. All the milk handled by it during the month of September 1938 was received from producers. If the defendant Central New York Co-operative, Inc., had filed a true and correct report such report would have shown an indebtedness to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $20,115.56, and plaintiff alleges that such sum is actually due the Market Administrator from the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund. This defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $712.25 as its pro rata 11 share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof. Each of the defendants has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to market administrator and is threatening to fail and refuse to comply with the provisions of the orders.

XXV

Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are identical in their terms and are administered by a market administrator, who was appointed to administer both orders. So far as the effective regulation of milk in the marketing area is concerned, it is immaterial whether a handler is compelled to comply with one order or with the other, in that compliance with the terms of one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both. Some of the milk which is sold in the marketing area does not cross state lines in transit to the market and is not physically intermingled with milk which has crossed state lines. Unless subject to the same regulation as milk which moves in the current of interstate commerce, such milk disrupts, burdens, and obstructs interstate commerce. If the plaintiff is mistaken in its contention that such milk is subject to the provisions of Order No. 27, it follows that such milk is subject to the provisions of Official Order No. 126, and the enforcement of Official Order No. 126 is necessary to prevent such milk from burdening, obstructing and affecting interstate commerce and to make effective the operation of Order No. 27.

XXVI

Each of the defendants is a competitior of other handlers in the marketing area and unless each of the defendants is immediately restrained from continuing to violate the order to which it is subject, and is immediately compelled to comply with all of its provisions, other handlers will be encouraged, or compelled by economic necessity, to refuse to comply with the provisions of the orders, the prices received by producers for milk will be lowered, commerce in milk among the several states will be disrupted, burdened, and obstructed, the lawful regulation of such commerce as provided in the Act will be rendered ineffective, the declared policy of Congress will be defeated, and the plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

12 Wherefore, plaintiff demands:

(1) That the court adjudge and declare that the defendants are subject to the provisions of Order No. 27.

(2) That the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, during the pendency of this suit.

(3) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of the defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by them under the provisions of Order No. 27, and commanding each of the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said Order No. 27 during the pendency of this suit.

(4) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(5) That the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of Order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area.

(6) That the court issue a permanent injunction commanding the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of said Order No. 27.

(7) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are not subject to Order No. 27, the court adjudge and declare that such defendants are subject to the provisions of Official Order No. 126.

(8) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of Official Order No. 126 during the pendency of this suit.

(9) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of such defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of Official Order No. 126, and commanding each of such defendants, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said Official Order No. 126 during the pendency of this suit.

(10) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding said defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(11) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of Official Order No. 126.

(12) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a permanent injunction commanding such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of Official Order No. 126.

(13) That the plaintiff be given all such other, further, and different relief as to this court may seem just and proper, together with judgment for costs.

18 # RULES, REGULATIONS, ORDERS

TITLE 7—AGRICULTURE

AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ADMINISTRATION

[Order No. 27]

Order Regulating Such Handling of Milk in the New York Metropolitan Marketing Area as Is in Interstate Commerce, and as Directly Burdens, Obstructs or Affects Interstate Commerce

Whereas, under the terms and provisions of Public Act No. 10, 73d Congress, as amended and as reenacted and amended by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States is empowered, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, to enter into marketing agreements with processors, producers, associations of producers, and others engaged in such handling of any agricultural commodity or product thereof as is in the current of interstate or foreign commerce, or which directly burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate or foreign commerce in such commodity or product thereof; and

Whereas, under the terms and provisions of said act, the Secretary of Agriculture is empowered to issue orders applicable to processors, producers, associations of producers, and others engaged in the handling of any agricultural commodity or product thereof specified in subsection (2) of section 8c, such orders to regulate only such handling of such agricultural commodity or product thereof as is in the current of interstate or foreign commerce or which directly burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate or foreign commerce in such commodity or product thereof; and

Whereas, the Secretary of Agriculture, having reason to believe that the execution of a marketing agreement and the issuance of an order with respect to the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area, would tend to effectuate the declared policy of said act, gave, on the 29th day of April 1938, notice of public hearings [1] to be held on a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed order, said hearings being held jointly with the Commission of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York at Albany, New York, May 16, 1938; Malone, New York, May 17, 1938; Syracuse, New York, May 18, 1938; Elmira, New York, May 19, 1938; New York City, May 20, 24, 25, and 26, 1938; and Albany, New York, June 3, 4, and 7, 1938, and at said times and places all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard on the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed order; and

Whereas, the Secretary of Agriculture has found and pro-19 claimed [1] the period August 1921–July 1929 to be the base period to be used in connection with ascertaining the purchasing power of milk produced for sale in the New York metropolitan marketing area; and

Whereas, the Secretary of Agriculture finds that a pro rata assessment on handlers at a rate not to exceed 2 cents per hundredweight of Class I, II–A, and II–B milk handled will provide funds necessary for the proper administration of this order; and

Whereas, the Secretary of Agriculture finds, upon the evidence introduced at the said public hearings:

1. That approximately one-third of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced in States other than the State of New York; that approximately one-third of the milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area passes through other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area; and that milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area which does not pass through other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area is physically and inextricably intermingled with that milk which is produced outside the State of New York for sale in the marketing area or which is produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area but which passes through other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area; and that all milk which is produced for sale in the marketing area is handled in the current of interstate commerce or so as directly to burden, obstruct, or affect interstate commerce in milk and its products, except as such milk is regulated by an order of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, to which this order is complementary;

2. That the prices calculated to give milk handled in the marketing area a purchasing power equivalent to the purchasing power of such milk as determined pursuant to section 2 and section 8e of the act are not reasonable in view of the available supplies of feeds, the price of feeds, and other economic conditions which affect the supply and demand for such milk, and that the minimum prices fixed in accordance with the method set forth in this order are such prices as will reflect such factors, insure a sufficient quantity of pure and wholesome milk and be in the public interest;

3. That this order regulates the handling of milk in the same manner as and is applicable only to handlers defined in a marketing agreement upon which hearings have been held;

4. That orderly marketing conditions for milk flowing into the New York metropolitan marketing area are so disrupted as to result in impairment of the purchasing power of such milk, and that the issuance of this order and all of its terms and conditions will tend to effectuate the declared policy of the act.

Now, therefore, the Secretary of Agriculture, pursuant to the authority vested in him by said act, hereby orders that such handling of milk produced for sale in the New York metropolitan marketing area as is in the current of interstate commerce or which directly burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate commerce, shall, from the effective date hereof according to article X, be in conformity to and in compliance with the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth.

Any utilization of milk claimed by a handler shall be subject to verification by the market administrator. Any claim by a handler of utilization of milk at the plant of any other person shall be accompanied by a complete statement of such utilization and written consent by such person for the market administrator to verify such statement by an audit of such person's records.

Any milk or cream which is on hand at any plant at the end of any month shall be classified in accordance with the form in which it leaves, or is utilized at, such plant not later than the 8th day of the following month.

SEC. 2. Classes of utilization.—The classes of utilization of milk shall be as follows:

1. Class I milk shall be all milk which leaves a plant as milk, chocolate milk, or any whole milk drink, and all milk the utilization of which is not established for classification in some other class named in this section, except that loss or waste of milk in the plant where received from producers, not to exceed 2 percent of the total quantity of milk received from producers, may be prorated to each class in the proportion which the milk in such class is of the total quantity of milk classified.

2. Class II–A milk shall be all milk the butterfat from which leaves or is on hand at a plant in the form of cream, except as set forth in paragraphs 5 and 7 of this section.

6. Class III–C milk shall be all milk the butterfat from which leaves a plant in the form of frozen desserts or homogenized mixtures which were sold outside of New York City.

7. Class III–D milk shall be all milk the butterfat from which is delivered as cream to a purchaser, not a handler, outside the State of New York and outside any county in other States in which there is a plant which is approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area, also milk the butterfat from which leaves or is on hand at a plant in the form of cream cheese.

8. Class IV–A milk shall be all milk the butterfat from which leaves or is on hand at a plant in the form of butter.

9. Class IV–B milk shall be all milk the butterfat from which leaves or is on hand at a plant in the form of American Cheddar cheese.

Article IV.—Minimum Prices

Payment of the minimum prices for milk received direct from producers shall be in accordance with article VII. Any handler who purchases or receives milk from a cooperative association of producers which is also a handler shall pay such cooperative association in full for such milk at not less than the minimum prices applicable pursuant to this article.

Article V.—Reports of Handlers

SECTION 1. Preliminary monthly reports.—On or before the 23rd day of each month each handler shall, when requested by the market administrator, report to the market administrator in the manner and form prescribed by him: (a) The total quantity of milk received during the first twenty days of such month from producers, and (b) the utilization of such milk in the several classes set forth in article III.

SEC. 2. Reports of deliveries per day per producer.—Each handler shall, upon request of the market administrator given not less than two weeks in advance, report the average deliveries of milk per day per producer during a specified period of time.

SEC. 3. Final monthly reports.—On or before the 10th day of each month each handler shall report to the market administrator, in the manner and on forms prescribed by the market administrator, with respect to milk received at each plant during the preceding month:

1. The total quantity of milk, with the average butterfat content thereof, received from producers, from other plants, from such handler's own farm, and from other handlers;

2. The total quantity of milk and of each product of milk moved out of such plant during such month or on hand at such plant at the end of such month, the butterfat content of each product; and the destination of any milk which moved out of such plant;

3. If classification of any milk is claimed by such handler on the basis of utilization at some other plant, the utilization of such milk, together with written consent for verification by audit thereof signed by the operator, if not a handler, of the other plant, and

4. The computation, pursuant to section 1 of article VI of such handler's net pool obligation.

SEC. 4. Verification of reports and payments.—The market administrator shall promptly verify all reports and payments of each handler by audit of such handler's records. Each handler shall, during the usual hours of business, make available to the market administrator or his representative such of his records and facilities as will enable the market administrator to:

1. Verify the receipts and utilization of all milk required to be reported pursuant to this article, and, in case of errors or omissions, ascertain the correct figures;

2. Weigh, sample, and test for butterfat content the milk received from producers and any product of milk upon which classification depends; and

3. Verify the payments to producers prescribed in article VII.

Article VI.—Determination of Uniform Price

22 each month shall be a sum of money computed for such month as follows:

1. Determine the total quantity of milk in each class at each plant;

2. Subtract from the quantity of milk in each class the quantity of such milk received from other plants or from other handlers;

3. Subtract pro rata out of each class the quantity of milk received from the handler's own farm;

4. Subtract from the remaining quantity of milk in each class, the quantity of each to which the prices in section 1 of article IV do not apply, which result shall be known as the "net pooled milk" in each class;

5. Multiply the total quantity of net pooled milk in each class, at all plants of the handler combined, by the respective class prices set forth in section 1 of article IV and add together the resulting sums;

6. Deduct, in the case of each plant where the average butterfat content of all milk received from producers is in excess of 3.5 percent and add in the case of each plant where the average butterfat content of all milk received from producers is less than 3.5 percent, an amount equal to the difference between the total value of the butterfat differentials on net pooled milk in Classes III–A, IV–A, and IV–B at the rates set forth in section 2 of article IV for such milk and the total value of the butterfat differentials on such milk as set forth in section 3 of article VII;

7. Deduct, in the case of each plant nearer New York City than the 201–210 mile zone, and add, in the case of each plant farther from New York City than the 201–210 mile zone, an amount equal to the difference between the sum of the respective transportation differentials, as set forth in section 3 of article IV, on all net pooled milk in Classes II–A, II–B, III–A, III–B, and III–C and the sum obtained by applying the appropriate zone differential set forth in column B of the schedule in section 3 of article IV to the total net pooled milk at each plant in Classes II–A, II–B, III–A, III–B, III–C, III–D, IV–A, and IV–B.

8. Deduct 20 cents per hundredweight for all net pooled milk received from producers at plants in the counties or portions of counties listed below in this section. The result thus obtained shall be known as the "handler's net pool obligation."

SEC. 2. Computation of the uniform price.—The market administrator shall, on or before the 14th day of each month, audit for mathematical correctness and obvious errors the final report submitted for the preceding month by each handler and, on the 14th day of such month, compute from all of such corrected reports the uniform price in the following manner:

1. Combine into one total the net pool obligations of all handlers;

2. Subtract the total of payments required to be made for such month by section 5 of article VII and the total of payments claimed pursuant to section 6 of article VII;

3. Add the amount of cash in the producer settlement fund;

4. Divide the result by the total quantity of milk represented in the sum obtained pursuant to paragraph 1 of this section; and

5. Subtract not less than 4 cents nor more than 5 cents to provide against the contingency of errors in reports and payments or of delinquencies in payments by handlers. This result shall be known as the uniform price for such month for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat received from producers at plants in the 201–210-mile zone.

Article VII.—Payments to Producers

SECTION 1. Time of payment.—On or before the 25th day of each month each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers shall make payment to each producer for all milk delivered by such producer at any plant during the preceding month at not less than the uniform price, subject to differentials set forth in sections 2 and 3 of this article. If, however, the net pooled milk in all classes at all plants of such handler is less than the total milk he received from producers and he does not pay the uniform price for all milk received from producers, such handler shall pay each producer the uniform price on such producer's pro rata share of the net pooled milk at all of his plants. Each handler shall give each producer a clear statement of the percentage of such producer's milk which was paid for at the uniform price and furnish a copy of such statement to the market administrator at the time payment is made.

SEC. 2. Transportation and location differentials.—The uniform price shall be plus or minus the differential shown in column B of the schedule contained in section 3 of article IV for the zone of the plant as established for the purposes of section 3 of article IV, plus 25 cents in the case of plants located in the counties listed in paragraph 8 of section 1 of article VI.

SEC. 3. Butterfat differential.—The uniform price shall be plus or minus, as the case may be, 4 cents per hundredweight for each one-tenth of one percent above or below 3.5 percent of average butterfat content of milk delivered by any producer during any month.

SEC. 4. Grade A premiums.—In addition to the uniform price and all other payments required pursuant to this article, each handler shall pay for milk which is qualified under the New York City Department of Health requirements for sale as Grade A milk and which is delivered to a plant similarly qualified, an amount per hundredweight equivalent to the following differentials on that Class I milk which such handler sold in the marketing area as Grade A milk;

Butterfat content (per cent)	Bacteria colonies per c. c.			Butterfat content (percent)	Bacteria colonies per c. c.
	10,000 or less	10,000 to 25,000	Over 25,000		10,000 or less	10,000 to 25,000	Over 25,000

After such determination, e cooperative association of producers shall be entitled to continue receive such payment until it has been disqualified by the Secretary, ter hearing, for failure to exercise the authority and to perform e functions upon which such determination was based.

The market administrator shall make the payments authorized by is section, or issue credit therefor, out of the producer settlement nd on or before the 25th day of each month, subject to verification of the reports upon which such payment is based. Such payments shall be made to each cooperative association of producers under the following conditions and at the following tes:

1. One cent per hundredweight of net pooled milk at any handler's lant which was caused to be delivered from its members by such sociation and on which such handler has made the reports and ayments required by this order.

2. Except as set forth in paragraph 3 of this section, 2½ cents per ndredweight of net pooled milk at plants of other handlers which as reported and collected for by such association.

3. Five cents per hundredweight of net pooled milk at plants erated by such association and, if, in addition to the other qualificaons, such association has been determined by the Secretary to have fficient plant capacity to receive all the milk of producers who are embers and to be willing and able to receive milk from producers t members, 5 cents per hundredweight of any net pooled milk hich was caused by it to be delivered to any other handler and which reported and collected for by such association.

SEC. 6. Market service payment.—The market administrator shall y out of the producer settlement fund to any handler immediately ter audit of claim for such payment made on forms supplied by the arket administrator;

2. Thirty cents per hundredweight of Class I milk sold during the months of November and December in the marketing area which was received from producers at a plant which is equipped for condensing or drying milk and from which, during the months of May and June preceding, in terms of equivalent of milk received at such plant, no milk in excess of 10 percent and no cream in excess of 50 percent was shipped to the marketing area.

SEC. 7. Producer settlement fund.—The market administrator shall establish and maintain a separate fund known as "the producer settlement fund" into which he shall deposit all payments made by handlers pursuant to sections 8 and 10 of this article and out of which he shall make all payments to handlers pursuant to sections 6, 9, and 10 of this article, and to cooperative association of producers pursuant to section 5 of this article.

SEC. 8. Payments to the producer settlement fund.—Each handler shall on or before the 18th day of each month pay to the market administrator for payment to producers through the producer settlement fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price.

SEC. 9. Payments out of producer settlement fund.—On or before the 20th day of each month the market administrator shall remit to each handler for payment to producers the amount, if any, by which such handler's net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. If at such time the balance in the producer settlement fund is insufficient to make all payments due to such handler, the market administrator shall reduce uniformly the payments made to each handler and shall complete such payments as soon as the necessary funds are available. No handler who, on the 25th day of the month, has not received the balance of such reduced payment from the market administrator shall be deemed to be in violation of section 1 of this article if he reduces his payments to producers by not more than the amount of the reduction in payment from the producer settlement fund.

SEC. 10. Adjustments of errors in payments.—Whenever verification by the market administrator of reports or payments of any handler discloses errors made in payments to or from the producer settlement fund, the market administrator shall promptly bill such handler for any unpaid amount, and such handler shall, within five days, make payment to the market administrator of the amount so billed. Whenever verification discloses that payment is due from the market administrator to any handler the market administrator shall, within five days, make such payment to such handler. Whenever verification by the market administrator of the payment to any producer for milk delivered to any handler discloses payment to such producer of less than is required by this article, the handler shall make up such payment to the producer not later than the time of making payment next following such disclosure.

Article VIII.—Expense of Administration

SECTION 1. Payment by handlers.—As his pro rata share of the expense of administration hereof, each handler shall, on or before the 20th day of each month, pay to the market administrator a sum not exceeding 2 cents per hundredweight on the total quantity of milk which was received from producers at plants operated by such handler, directly or at the instance of a cooperative association of producers, and which was utilized in Classes I, II–A, and II–B, the exact amount to be determined by the market administrator subject to review by the Secretary. This section shall not be deemed to duplicate any similar payment by any handler under any order issued by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to which this order is complementary.

Article IX.—Suspension, Termination, and Liquidation

SECTION 1. Continuing obligation of handlers.—Unless otherwise provided by the Secretary in any notice of amendment, termination, or suspension of any or all of the provisions hereof, such amendment, termination, or suspension shall not (a) affect, waive, or terminate any right, duty, obligation, or liability which shall have arisen or may thereafter arise in connection with any provision of this order; (b) release or waive any violation of this order occurring prior to the effective date of such amendment, termination, or suspension; or (c) affect or impair any right or remedies of the Secretary or of any other person with respect to any such violations.

SEC. 2. Continuing power and duty.—If, upon the termination or suspension of this order, there are any obligations arising hereunder, the final accrual or ascertainment of which requires further acts by any handler, or by the market administrator, or by any other person, the power and duty to perform such further acts shall continue notwithstanding such termination or suspension.

receipts and disbursements and deliver all funds or property on hand, together with the books and records of the market administrator, to such person as the Secretary shall direct; and (c) if so directed by the Secretary, execute such assignments or other instruments necessary or appropriate to vest in such person full title to all funds, property, and claims vested in the market administrator pursuant to this order.

24 ARTICLE X.—EFFECTIVE TIME

SECTION 1. Effective time.—This order shall become effective after the issuance by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York of an order containing provisions similar to the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be complementary and on the first day of the month following, by more than three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary of (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement containing provisions similar to this order approved by him and signed by handlers of more than 50 percent of the milk sold in the marketing area, or, his determination approved by the President that the failure or refusal of handlers to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the act and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers pursuant to such declared policy of the act.

In witness whereof, I, H. A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, have executed in duplicate and issued this order to become effective in accordance with article X hereof, and caused the official seal of the Department of Agriculture to be affixed hereto in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, this 5th day of August 1938.

Payments to the producer settlement fund.—Each handler shall, on or before the 18th day of each month, pay to the market administrator for payment to producers through the producer settlement fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price.

SECTION 9. Payments out of producer settlement fund.—On or before the 20th day of each month the market administrator shall remit to each handler for payment to producers the amount, if any, by which such handler's net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. If at such time the balance in the producer settlement fund is insufficient to make all payments due to such handler, the market administrator shall reduce uniformly the payments made to each handler and shall complete such payments as soon as the necessary funds are available. No handler who on the 25th day of the month has not received the balance of such reduced payment from the market administrator shall be deemed to be in violation of section 1 of this article if he reduces his payments to producers by not more than the amount of the reduction in payment from the producer settlement fund.

SECTION 10. Adjustments of errors in payments.—Whenever verification by the market administrator of reports or payments of any handler discloses errors made in payments to or from the producer settlement fund, the market administrator shall promptly bill such handler for any unpaid amount, and such handler shall, within five days, make payment to the market administrator of the amount so billed. Whenever verification discloses that payment is due from the market administrator to any handler the market administrator shall, within five days, make such payment to such handler. Whenever verification by the market administrator of the payment to any producer for milk delivered to any handler discloses payment to such producer of less than is required by this article, the handler shall make up such payment to the producer not later than the time of making payment next following such disclosure.

Article VIII—Expense of Administration

SECTION 1. Payment by handlers.—As his pro rata share of the expense of administration hereof, each handler shall, on or before the 20th day of each month, pay to the market administrator a sum not exceeding 2 cents per hundredweight on the total quantity of milk which was received from producers at plants operated by such handler, directly or at the instance of a cooperative association of producers, and which was utilized in Classes I, II–A, and II–B, the exact amount to be determined by the market administrator subject to review by the Commissioner.

Article IX—Suspension, Termination and Liquidation

SECTION 1. Continuing obligation of handlers.—Unless otherwise provided by the Commissioner in any notice of amendment, termination or suspension of any or all of the provisions hereof, such amendment, termination or suspension shall not (a) affect, waive, or terminate any right, duty, obligation, or liability which shall have arisen or may thereafter arise in connection with any provision of this order; (b) release or waive any violation of this order occurring prior to the effective date of such amendment, termination or suspension; or (c) affect or impair any rights or remedies of the Commissioner or of any other person with respect to any such violations.

SECTION 2. Continuing power and duty.—If, upon the termination or suspension of this order, there are any obligations arising hereunder, the final accrual or ascertainment of which requires further acts by any handler, or by the market administrator, or by any other person, the power and duty to perform such further acts shall continue notwithstanding such termination or suspension.

The market administrator shall (a) continue in such capacity until discharged by the Commissioner; (b) from time to time account for all receipts and disbursements and deliver all funds or property on hand, together with the books and records of the market administrator, to such person as the Commissioner shall direct; and (c) if so directed by the Commissioner, execute such assignments or other instruments necessary or appropriate to vest in such person full title to all funds, property and claims vested in the market administrator pursuant to this order.

SECTION 3. Liquidation.—Upon the termination or suspension of this order, the market administrator shall, if so directed by the Commissioner, liquidate the business of the market administrator's office and dispose of all funds and property then in his possession or under his control, together with claims for any funds which are unpaid and owing at the time of such termination or suspension.

Any funds collected for expenses, pursuant to the provisions of this order, over and above the amounts necessary to meet outstanding obligations and the expenses necessarily incurred by the market administrator in liquidating the business of the market administrator's office shall be distributed by the market administrator to handlers in an equitable manner.

51 In United States District Court for the Northern District of New York

Civil Action No. —

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF,

v.

JETTER DAIRY COMPANY, INC., DEFENDANT

Filed Nov. 26, 1938

Plaintiff, by Ralph L. Emmons, United States Attorney in and for the Northern District of New York, instituting these proceedings under the direction of the Attorney General, upon request of the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, respectfully shows to the Court and alleges:

I

The defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business at Oriskany Falls, Oenida County, State of New York.

II

This proceeding is brought under Section 8a (6) of the Act of May 12, 1933 (48 Stat. 31; 7 U. S. C. A., Section 608a (6)), as amended August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750), and as reenacted and amended by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, approved June 3, 1937 (50 Stat. 246) (the said Act of May 12, 1933, as reenacted and amended being hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), vesting 52 the several district courts of the United States with jurisdiction specifically to enforce and to prevent and restrain any person from violating any order issued by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of Title I of said Act.

III

This proceeding is brought to enforce Order No. 27 issued by the Secretary of Agriculture regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and to prevent and restrain the defendant from handling milk in the current of interstate commerce, or so as directly to burden, obstruct, or affect such commerce in milk, in violation of the provisions of said Order No. 27.

IV

Pursuant to the provisions of Sections 8b and 8c of the Act, The Secretary, on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on an order substantially identical with the aforesaid order.

In accordance with the terms of the said notice, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to section 10 (i) of the Act, joint public hearings were conducted by Glenn J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms 53 of said notice, the aforesaid public hearing were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 1938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938; and at New York, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed order. The said hearing was attended by representatives of producers, handlers and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area.

VI

On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary, pursuant to the provisions of Section 8c of the Act, found and proclaimed, that, as to milk produced for sale in the marketing area, the purchasing power of such milk during the base period, August 1909 to July 1914, could not be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture, but that the purchasing power of such milk could be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture for that portion of the post-war period between August 1921 and July 1929, inclusive.

Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of a proposed Order, the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the Marketing Area in the manner provided in the Act, said Order containing terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner as, and made applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in, the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said Order provides that "This Order shall become effective after the issuance 54 by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, of an order containing provisions similar to the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be complementary and on the first day of the month following, by more than three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary of (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement containing provisions similar to this order approved by him and signed by handlers of more than 50 percent of the milk sold in the marketing area, or. his determination approved by the President that the failure or refusal of handlers to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the act and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers pursuant to such declared policy of the Act." A copy of the Federal Register of August 9, 1938, containing a true, correct, and complete copy of said Order No. 27 is hereto attached as "Exhibit A."

VIII

On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary tentatively approved a Marketing Agreement regulating the handling of milk in the Marketing Area. Opportunity was given to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the Order to execute said agreement, but prior to the issuance of said order, handlers of more than 50 percent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed Register of August 9, 1938, containing a true, correct, and complete agreement.

IX

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 8c (19) of the Act, the Secretary conducted a referendum of producers for the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938 (said month having, on the 25th day of July 1938, been determined by the Secretary to be a representative period), were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the Marketing area.

After conducting said referendum and after the refusal or failure of handlers of more than 50 percent of the volume of milk covered by said Order which was marketed within the Marketing Area to sign the tentatively approved Marketing Agreement relating to milk, the Secretary on the 24th day of August 1938, determined, which determination was approved by the President:

(A) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such Marketing Agreement tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

(B) That the issuance of the Order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

(C) That the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the Marketing Area, and who voted in the above-mentioned referendum. Said findings and determination were published by the Secretary in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938.

XI

On August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an order which was published in the Federal Register on the 27th day of August 1938, said order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938. Prior to this date, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York had issued Official Order No. 126 containing provisions similar to the provisions of said Order No. 27, and to which said order is complementary. Said Official Order No. 126 likewise became effective on September 1, 1938.

XII

Pursuant to Article II of said Order, the Secretary on August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said Order. Pursuant to Article V, Section 3, The Market Administrator prescribed forms to be used by each handler in making final monthly reports in accordance with said Article and Section.

XIII

The defendant engages in the handling of milk, or cream therefrom, which was received at a plant approved by a duly authorized authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area, and such handling is in the current of interstate commerce as defined in section 10 (j) of the Act or directly burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate commerce in such milk, and the defendant is, therefore, a handler of milk as defined in Section 8c (1) of the Act and in paragraph 6 of Section 1 of Article I of the Order, and as such is subject to the applicable provisions of the Act and of the Order.

XIV

Order No. 27 is now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect.

XV

The purpose of said Order No. 27 is to promote, foster and protect commerce in milk among the States and to effectuate the declared policy of the Act.

XVI

Approximately one-third of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced in States other than the State of New York. Approximately one-sixth of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced within the State of New York but crosses State lines on its way to be sold in the marketing area. Hence, approximately fifty percent of all milk produced for sale in the marketing area crosses State lines in transit to the marketing area, and is, therefore, directly in the current of interstate commerce. A substantial amount of the milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area which does not cross State lines on its way to be sold in the marketing area is, prior to its 57 ultimate disposition by handlers, physically and inextricably intermingled with milk which has crossed State lines on its way to be sold in the marketing area. When so intermingled the milk which has not crossed State lines loses its separate identity and the regulation of milk which has crossed State lines cannot be made effective unless all of such milk is subject to the same regulation. Unless all milk produced for sale in the marketing area, whether or not physically intermingled with milk which has crossed State lines on its way to the marketing area, is subject to the same regulation as such latter milk, discrimination will result against the milk which has moved in the current of interstate commerce, as such milk will be unable to compete with the unregulated milk in the marketing area. It will, therefore, be diverted to other markets, thereby producing such unstable and disorderly marketing conditions as seriously to impair the purchasing power of producers, the free flow of milk in interstate commerce will be disrupted, burdened, and obstructed, milk producers and handlers whose milk travels in the current of interstate commerce will be penalized, and the effectuation of the declared policy of Congress will be prevented.

XVII

Section 2 of Article VI of the Order requires the Market Administrator to compute from the reports submitted by handlers a so-called uniform price to producers which is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in the Order. The failure of any handler to report to the Market Administrator results in the announcement by the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers, and, if the utilization of milk by a handler not reporting is higher than the average utilization of milk of all handlers, the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator is lower than it otherwise would be and producers therefore fail to receive as high a price for the milk as they would if all handlers reported. In addition, the failure of any handler to file a report makes it 58 impossible for the Market Administrator to determine the amount of money owed by such handler for milk received from producers.

XVIII

Section 8 of Article VII of Order No. 27 requires each handler, whose net pool obligation for the preceding month (as defined in section 1 of Article VI of the Order) is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price, to pay to the Market Administrator on or before the 18th day of each month for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. The Market Administrator is required by Section 9 of Article VII of Order No. 27 to pay on or before the 20th day of each month to handlers, whose net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price, the amount of which such handler's net pool obligation is less than such amount. Unless the handlers who are indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund make their payments on the 18th day of each month as required, the Market Administrator will be unable to make the necessary payments to handlers having a credit against the Producer Settlement Fund, and such handlers in turn will be unable to pay the full uniform price to producers.

XIX

The defendant has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of October. On the basis of such report the defendant is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $14,616.05. The defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $535.37 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of Order No. 27, pursuant to Article VIII thereof. The defendant has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to 59 the Market Administrator and is threatening to refuse to comply with the other provisions of the order.

XX

The defendant is a competitor of other handlers in the marketing area and unless the defendant is immediately restrained from continuing to violate the order, and is immediately compelled to comply with all of its provisions, other handlers will be encouraged, or compelled by economic necessity, to refuse to comply with the provisions of the order, the prices received by producers of milk will be lowered, commerce in milk among the several States will be disrupted, burdened, and obstructed, the lawful regulation of such commerce as provided in the Act will be rendered ineffective, the declared policy of Congress will be defeated, and the plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

Wherefore, Plaintiff demands:

(1) That the Court order the defendant to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not issue, preventing and restraining the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors and assigns, from violating any of the provisions of Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area during the pendency of this suit.

(2) That the Court order the defendant to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not issue, commanding the defendant to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of Order No. 27, and commanding the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors and assigns, to comply with all of the provisions of said Order No. 27 during the pendency of this suit.

(3) That the Court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors and assigns, from violating the provisions of Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area.

(4) That the Court issue a permanent injunction commanding the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors and assigns, to comply with all the provisions of said Order No. 27.

60 (5) That plaintiff be given all such other further and different relief as to this Court may seem just and proper, together with judgment for costs.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF, HOLTON V. NOYES, AS COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE AND MARKETS OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, APPLICANT FOR INTERVENTION

v.

ROCK ROYAL CO-OPERATIVE, INC., ET AL., DEFENDANTS

Motion of Holton v. Noyes as Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York for Leave to Intervene

Filed Nov. 19, 1938

Holten V. Noyes, as Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, moves the court for leave to intervene as a party plaintiff in this action in order to assert his claim against the defendants as set forth in his proposed complaint, of which a copy is hereto attached, on the ground that official order No. 126 of the Department of Agriculture and Markets, adopted, promulgated, and made effective by him, is similar and complementary to order No. 27, which was made effective by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, that if the defendants are not subject to the provisions of order No. 27 they are subject to the provisions of official order No. 126; that the same facts which would constitute a violation by the defendants of order No. 27 constitute a violation of official order No. 126, if the defendants are subject to said official order No. 126; and that the claim of the applicant and the main action herein therefore have questions of law and fact in common. The question of whether the defendant is subject to either or both orders is a single controversy, in that the defendants have violated both order No. 27 and order No. 126 in the same manner, by failing to pay to the Market Administrator various sums of money for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund, and, further, by the failure of the defendants to pay their pro rata share of the expenses of administration, as more fully set forth in the proposed complaint hereto attached.

Civil Action No. —

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF, HOLTON V. NOYES, AS COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE AND MARKETS OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, APPLICANT FOR INTERVENTION

v.

ROCK ROYAL CO-OPERATIVE, INC., ET AL., DEFENDANTS

Intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, as Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, by Milo R. Kniffen, his attorney, for his complaint alleges:

1. The United States of America has heretofore commenced an action against the defendants above named under Sec. 8a (6) of the Act of May 12, 1933 (48 Stat. 31; 7 U. S. C. A., Section 608a (6), as amended August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750), and as reenacted and amended by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, approved June 3, 1937 (50 Stat. 246) (the said Act of May 12, 1933, as reenacted and amended, being hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), investing the several district courts of the United States with jurisdiction specifically to enforce and to prevent and restrain any person from violating any order issued by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of Title I of said Act.

2. The claim of the intervening plaintiff arises out of the same controversy as that of the original plaintiff, in so far as the defendants above named are concerned, and the intervening complaint herein is ancillary to the original complaint of the plaintiff herein.

3. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Rock Royal, in the County of Delaware, State of New York.

4. The defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and 64 by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business in the City of Cortland, County of Cortland, State of New York.

5. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Schuyler Junction, County of Herkimer, State of New York.

6. This proceeding is brought to enforce official order No. 126, issued by the intervening plaintiff herein, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and to prevent and restrain the defendants from handling milk in violation of the provisions of said official order No. 126; or, if the court shall find, however, that those defendants who handle milk which does not cross state lines on its way to the marketing area for sale burden, obstruct, or affect interstate commerce, to hold such defendants subject to the provisions of order No. 27, issued by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and, if the court finds that such defendants are subject to the provisions of order No. 27, to prevent and restrain them from violating such order.

7. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 258–m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), the Commissioner on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "marketing area". On April 29, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on a Marketing Agreement and an order substantially identical with the aforesaid order.

8. In accordance with the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, the intervening plaintiff herein, pursuant to Section 10-i of the Act, and Section 258–n of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), joint public hearings were conducted by Glenn J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, who 65 was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, joint public hearings were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 1938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938, and at New York, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid, all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed federal and state orders. The said hearings were attended by representatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area.

9. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings, and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of a proposed order, the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said order containing the terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner as, and made applicable only to, persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said order provides that "This order shall become effective after the issuance by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York of an order containing provisions similar to the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be complementary, and on the first day of the month following, by more than three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary of (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement containing provisions similar to this order approved by him and signed by handlers of more than 50 per cent of the milk sold in the marketing area, or his determination approved by the President that the failure or refusal to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the act, and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers pursuant to such declared policy of the act." On August 26, 1938, the Secretary
66 having made all necessary findings, issued an order providing that order No. 27 should become effective on September 1 1938.

On August 5, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments, issued proposed official order No. 126, which order was substantially identical with order No. 27. On August 25, 1938, the Commissioner having duly conducted a poll to determine (Sec. 258-m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937) whether the issuance of official order No

126 was favored by at least seventy-five per cent of the producers of milk produced in the production area for the marketing area, and, having made all the findings required by the said section 258-m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, declared official order No. 126 to be effective Sept. 1, 1938.

10. Order No. 27 and official order No. 126 are administered by a market administrator who was appointed by both the Secretary and the Commissioner to administer both orders. A handler is obliged to file the same reports and make the same reports whether subject to official order No. 126 or whatever order the handler may be subject to. Compliance with one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both.

11. Pursuant to Article II of said order No. 27, the Secretary, on August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said order. Pursuant to Article II of Official Order No. 126, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, on September 2, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said order. Pursuant to Article V, Section 3 of both orders, the Market Administrator prescribed forms to be used by each handler in making final monthly reports in accordance with said article and section.

12. Order No. 27 is now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect. Official order No. 126 is likewise now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect.

13. The purpose of said order No. 27 is to promote, foster, and protect commerce in milk among the states, and to effectuate the declared policy of the Act. The purpose of said official order No. 126
67 is to promote, foster, and encourage the intelligent and orderly marketing of milk through producer-owned and controlled co-operative associations, and, in cooperation with the Federal Government, to protect the dairy industry, and insure an adequate supply of milk for the inhabitants of the State of New York.

14. Section 2 of Article VI of each order requires the Market Administrator to compute from the reports submitted by handlers a so-called uniform price to producers which is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in the order. The failure of any handler to file a correct report with the Market Administrator results in the announcement by the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers, and, if the utilization of milk by a handler not reporting is higher than the average utilization of milk of all handlers, the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator is lower than it otherwise would be, and producers therefore fail to receive as high a price for milk as they would if all handlers reported. In addition, the failure of any handler to file a correct report makes it impossible for the Market Administrator to determine accurately the amount of money owed by such handler for milk received from producers.

15. Section 8 of Article VII of both orders requires each handler whose net pool obligation for the preceding month (as defined in section 1 of Article VI of the orders) is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price to pay to the Market Administrator on or before the 18th day of each month for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. The Market Administrator is required by section 9 of Article VII of both orders to pay on or before the 20th day of each month to handlers whose net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price, the amount by which such handler's net pool obligation is less than such amount. Unless the handlers who are indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund make their payments on the 18th of each month as required, the Market Administrator will be unable to make the necessary payments to handlers having a 68 credit against the Producer Settlement Fund, and such handlers in turn will be unable to pay the full uniform price to producers.

16. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $3,616.56. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $124.62 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

17. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $1,603.00. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $55.28 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

18. On October 14, 1938, which was four days after the report was due, the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., filed a report with the Market Administrator, which report was incomplete and inaccurate, and was false and untrue inasmuch as it stated that all the milk handled by said defendant was received from said defendant's own farm. Such defendant neither owns nor operates any farm whatsoever. All the milk handled by it during the month of September 1938, was received from producers. If the defendant Central New York Co-operative, Inc., had filed a true and correct report, such report would have shown an indebtedness to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $20,115.56, and plaintiff alleges that such sum is actually due the Market Administrator from the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund. This defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $712.25 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof. Each of the defendants has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to the Market Administrator, and is threatening to fail and refuse to comply with the provisions of the orders.

39 19. Order No. 27 and official order No. 126 are identical in their terms and are administered by a market administrator, who was appointed to administer both orders. So far as the effective regulation of milk in the marketing area is concerned, it is immaterial whether a handler is compelled to comply with one order or with the other, in that compliance with the terms of one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both. Unless the milk which moves in the current of interstate commerce, or which burdens and obstructs and affects interstate commerce and is therefore beyond the power of the state to regulate, is subject to the same regulation as the milk which is purely intrastate in character, regulation by the State of the latter milk will be ineffective. If the defendants are not subject to official order No. 126, it follows that they are subject to the provisions of order No. 27, and the enforcement of order No. 27 is necessary to insure the effective control of the purely intrastate milk subject to official order No. 126.

20. Each of the defendants is a competitor of other handlers in the marketing area, and, unless each of the defendants is immediately restrained from continuing to violate the order to which it is subject, and is immediately compelled to comply with all of its provisions, other handlers will be encouraged, or compelled by economic necessity, to refuse to comply with the provisions of order No. 27 and official order No. 126, the prices received by producers for milk will be lowered, and the intervening plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

(1). That the court adjudge and declare that the defendants are subject to provisions of official order No. 126.

(2) That the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of official order No. 126, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, during the pendency of this suit.

(3) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of the defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by them under the provisions of official order No. 126, and commanding
70 each of the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said official order No. 126 during the pendency of this suit.

(4) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(5) That the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of official order No. 126 regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area.

(6) That the court issue a permanent injunction commanding the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of said official order No. 126.

(7) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are not subject to official order No. 126, the court adjudge and declare that such defendants are subject to the provisions of order No. 27.

(8) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of order No. 27, during the pendency of this suit.

(9) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of such defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of order No. 27, and commanding each of such defendants, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said order No. 27 during the pendency of this suit.

(10) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding said defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., to file true
71 and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(11) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of order No. 27.

(12) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a permanent injunction commanding such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of order No. 27.

(13) That the intervening plaintiff be given all such other, further, and different relief as to this court may seem just and proper, together with judgment for costs.

Civil Action No. 32 Consolidated Cause

Complaint of intervening plaintiff

Filed Dec. 15, 1938

Intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, as Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, by Milo R. Kniffen, his attorney, for his complaint against Jetter Dairy Company Inc. alleges:

1. The United States of America has heretofore commenced an action against the defendants above named under Sec. 8a (6) of the Act of May 12, 1933 (48 Stat. 31; 7 U. S. C. A., Section 608a (6) as amended August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750), and as reenacted and amended by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, approved June 3, 1937 (50 Stat. 246) (the said Act of May 12, 1933, as reenacted and amended being hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), vesting the several district courts of the United States with jurisdiction specifically to enforce and to prevent and restrain any person from violating any order issued by the Secretary pursuant to the provision of Title I of said Act.

2. The claim of the intervening plaintiff arises out of the same controversy as that of the original plaintiff, insofar as the defendant is concerned, and the intervening complaint herein is ancillary to the original complaint of the plaintiff herein.

74 3. Upon information and belief defendant is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business at Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, State of New York.

4. This proceeding is brought to enforce Official Order No. 126, issued by the intervening plaintiff herein, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and to prevent and restrain the defendant from handling milk in violation of the provisions of said Official Order No. 126, or, if the Court shall find, however, that the defendant is handling milk which does not cross state lines on its way to the marketing area for sale, burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate commerce, to hold that such defendant is subject to the provisions of Order No. 27, issued by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and, if the Court finds that the defendant is subject to the provisions of Order No. 27, to prevent and restrain it from violating such order.

5. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 258m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), the Commissioner on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same time and places on a Marketing Agreement and an order substantially identical with the aforesaid order.

75 6. In accordance with the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, the intervening plaintiff herein, pursuant to Section 10 i of the Act and Section 258-n of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), joint public hearings were conducted by Glenn J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, joint public hearings were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 1938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938; and at New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the time and places aforesaid all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed federal and state orders. The said hearings were attended by representatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area.

7. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings, and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of a proposed order, the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area

n the manner provided in the Act, said order containing the terms nd conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, nd no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner, as and made applicable only to, persons in the respec- 6 tive classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as afore- aid. Said order provides that "This order shall become effective fter the issuance by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets f the State of New York of an order containing provisions similar o the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be com- lementary, and on the first day of the month following, by more han three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary f (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds f the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement ontaining provisions similar to this order approved by him and gned by handlers of more than 50 per cent of the milk sold in the arketing area, or, his determination approved by the President that he failure or refusal to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the eclared policy of the act, and that the issuance of the order is the nly practical means of advancing the interest of producers pursuant o such declared policy of the act. On August 26, 1938, the Secre- ary, having made all necessary findings, issued an order providing hat order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938.

On August 5, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, fter giving opportunity to interested parties to file written argu- ents, issued proposed official order No. 126, which order was sub- antially identical with order No. 27. On August 25, 1938, the Com- issioner having duly conducted a poll to determine (Sec. 258-m of he Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, Chapter 3 of the Laws of 1937) whether the issuance of official order No. 126 as favored by at least seventy-five per cent of the producers of ilk produced in the production area for the marketing area, and, aving made all the findings required by the said section 258-m of he Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, de- clared official order No. 126 to be effective Sept. 1, 1938.

8. Order No. 27 and official order No. 126 are administered by a market administrator who was appointed by both the ecretary and the Commissioner to administer both orders. A han- ler is obliged to file the same reports and make the same reports hether subject to official order No. 126 or whatever order the handler ay be subject to. Compliance with one order constitutes compliance ith the terms of both.

9. Pursuant to Article II of said No. 27, the Secretary, on ugust 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator nder said order. Pursuant to Article II of Official Order No. 126, he Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New ork, on September 2, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market dministrator under said order. Pursuant to Article V, Section 3 f both orders, the Market Administrator prescribed forms to be used by each handler in making final monthly reports in accordance with said article and section.

10. Order No. 27 is now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect. Official Order No. 126 is likewise now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect.

11. The purpose of said order No. 27, is to promote, foster, and protect commerce in milk among the states, and to effectuate the declared policy of the Act. The purpose of said official order No. 126 is to promote, foster, and encourage the intelligent and orderly marketing of milk through producer-owned and—controlled cooperative associations, and, in cooperation with the Federal Government, to protect the dairy industry, and insure an adequate supply of milk for the inhabitants of the State of New York.

12. Section 2 of Article VI of each order requires the Market Administrator to compute from the reports submitted by handlers a so-called uniform price to producers which is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in 78 the orders. The failure of any handler to file a correct report with the Market Administrator results in the announcement by the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers, and, if the utilization of milk by a handler not reporting is higher than the average utilization of milk of all handlers, the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator is lower than it otherwise would be, and producers therefore fail to receive as high a price for milk as they would if all handlers reported. In addition, the failure of any handler to file a correct report makes it impossible for the Market Administrator to determine accurately the amount of money owed by such handler for milk received from producers.

13. Section 8 of Article VII of both orders requires each handler whose net pool obligation for the preceding month (as defined in section I of Article VI of the orders) is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price to pay to the Market Administrator on or before the 18th day of each month for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. The Market Administrator is required by section 9 of Article VII of both orders to pay on or before the 20th day of each month to handlers whose net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price the amount by which such handler's net pool obligation is less than such amount. Unless the handlers who are indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund make their payments on the 18th of each month as required, the Market Administrator will be unable to make

79 14. The defendant has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of October. On the basis of such report the defendant is indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $14,216.05. The defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $535.37, as its pro rata share of the expenses of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof. The defendant has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to the Market Administrator and is threatening to refuse to comply with the other provisions of the order.

15. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are identical in their terms and are administered by a market administrator, who was appointed to administer both orders. So far as the effective regulation of milk in the marketing area is concerned, it is immaterial whether a handler is compelled to comply with one order or with the other, in that compliance with the terms of one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both. Unless the milk which moves in the current of interstate commerce, or which burdens and obstructs and affects interstate commerce and is therefore beyond the power of the state to regulate, is subject to the same regulation as the milk which is purely intrastate in character, regulation by the State of the latter milk will be ineffective. If the defendant is not subject to official order No. 126, it follows that it is subject to the provisions of order No. 27, and the enforcement of Order No. 27 is necessary to insure the effective control of the purely intrastate milk subject to official order No. 126.

16. The defendant is a competitor of other handlers in the marketing area, and, unless the defendant is immediately restrained from continuing to violate the order to which it is subject, and is immediately compelled to comply with all of its provisions, other handlers will be encouraged, or compelled by economic necessity, to refuse to comply with the provisions of order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, the prices received by producers for milk will be lowered, and the intervening plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

(1) That the court adjudge and declare that the defendant is subject to provisions of official order No. 126.

(2) That the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of official order No. 126, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, during the pendency of this suit.

(3) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding the defendant to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of official order No. 126, and commanding the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said official order No. 126 during the pendency of this suit.

(4) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding the defendant to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of official order No. 126, and commanding the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors and assigns, to comply with all of the provisions of said official order No. 126, during the pendency of this suit.

(5) That the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining the defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, successors and assigns, from violating the provisions of official order No. 126, regulating the handling of milk in the Marketing Area.

(6) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant is not subject to official order No. 126, the court adjudge and declare that the defendant is subject to the provisions of order No. 27.

81 (7) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant is subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining such defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of order No. 27, during the pendency of this suit.

(8) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant is subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding such defendant to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of Order No. 27, and commanding such defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said order No. 27 during the pendency of this suit.

(9) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant is subject to order No. 27, the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining such defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of order No. 27.

(10) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant is subject to order No. 27, the court issue a permanent injunction commanding such defendant, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of order No. 27.

(11) That the intervening plaintiff be given all such other, further, and different relief as to this court may seem just and proper, together with judgment for costs.

Answer

Defendant, Rock Royal Co-Operative, Inc., for an answer to the complaint, alleges:

First. Admits on information and belief, the allegations stated in Paragraphs marked "I, II, III, IV, V"; so much of Paragraph marked "IX" as alleges that the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27, and that on or about August 5, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture, issued proposed Official Order No. 126. Admits that said "proposed Official Order No. 126 is substantially identical with Order No. 27."

Second. Admits on information and belief, so much of Paragraph marked "X" as alleges that handlers of more than 50% of the volume of milk covered by said Orders, failed to sign a Marketing Agreement.

Third. Admits on information and belief, that the Secretary conducted a purported referendum of producers for the purported purpose of ascertaining whether Order No. 27 was favored by at least two-thirds of the producers, mentioned in Paragraph marked "XI."

Fourth. Admits on information and belief, that on or about August 24, 1938, the Secretary made a purported determination, which 88 was subsequently approved by the President, and which contained the statements set forth under Paragraphs A, B, and C of said "XII" allegation, and that said Findings were published in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938.

Fifth. Admits on information and belief, that the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, conducted a purported poll of producers, and thereafter, did on August 25, 1938, make certain purported Findings, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 o the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, and declared Offici Order No. 126 to be effective on September 1st, 1938. Tenth. Defendant, for a first, separate, distinct answer and affirma tive defense, alleges on information and belief, that said Order N 27 and Official Order No. 126 are illegal and void on the ground tha in issuing said Order No. 27, the Secretary exceeded his administr tive authority and power for the reason that the number of pr ducers represented in such purported referendum, was 65,255, which number only 33,663 or 51.6% voted "yes" in favor of sai Order. The provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, Subdivision 19, U. Code, are as follows:

"(19) Producer referendum.—For the purpose of ascertainin whether the issuance of an order is approved or favored by producer as required under the applicable provisions of this title, the Secreta may conduct a referendum among producers. The requirements approval or favor under any such provisions shall be held to be com plied with if of the total number of producers or the total volume production, as the case may be, represented in such referendum, th percentage approving or favoring is equal to or in excess of th percentage required under such provision. Nothing in this subsecti shall be construed as limiting representation by cooperative associ tions as provided in subsection (12)." (As added June 3, 1937, c. 29 Sec. 2 (f), 50 Stat. 247.)

Eleventh. On information and belief, the findings of the Secretary of Agriculture to the effect that the provisions of said statute were complied with, is unsupported by said referendum or by any probative evidence on which to base such finding.

Twelfth. On information and belief, the Commissioner of 90 Agriculture of the State of New York, in issuing said Official Order No. 126, exceeded his administrative authority and power, and said Order was and is void, for the reason that the number of producers represented in said purported poll, was upwards of more than 44,000, of which number, only 25,935, or 59% voted "yes" in favor of said Order. The provisions of Section 258m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, being part of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937, provide:

"If after such hearing the commission shall find, either upon the testimony given at the hearing or upon information concerning conditions existing in the milk industry in such marketing area, which the commissioner has otherwise obtained, that conditions exist so affecting the orderly marketing of milk in such area, that public interest requires that the public policy declared in section two hundred and fifty-eight-k of this chapter shall be effective and that it is favored by at least seventy-five per centum of the producers of milk produced in the production area for said marketing area, he may by order fix and determine for such marketing area fair and equitable minimum prices to be paid to producers.

"4. In determining the approval or request for an order as herein provided or the termination thereof on the part of producers the commissioner shall consider the approval, request, or favor in respect thereto by any bona fide cooperative association of producers engaged in marketing milk within such marketing area as the approval, request, or favor either of making an order or of termination thereof of the producers who are under contract with such cooperative association of producers."

The Finding by the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York that at least 75% of the producers within the production area, approved or favored the proposed Order, was unsupported by said poll or by any probative evidence on which to base such finding.

On information and belief, in determining the purported approval of the producers of milk in said area, certain cooperative association, which were not "bona fide cooperative associations of producers engaged in marketing milk" were permitted to cast votes of all of their members of persons represented as being their members, and such votes were or may have been improperly considered in violation of said statute.

91 alleges on information and belief, the provisions of said Order No. 27 were violative of the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, Subdivision 5, which requires that Orders "in the case of milk and milk products" shall fix prices which "shall be uniform as to all handlers." On information and belief, Orders No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are violative of said statute, in that the prices therein provided to be paid to producers are not uniform as to all handlers, but on the contrary, handlers of upwards of 50% of all milk in said marketing area are exempted from the provisions thereof.

Said Orders, by identical provisions, provide as follows:

"Article VII.—Payments to Producers

"SECTION 1. Time of payment.—On or before the 25th day of each month each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers shall make payment to each producer for all milk delivered by such producer at any plant during the preceding month at not less than the uniform price, subject to differentials set forth in sections 2 and 3 of this article."

On information and belief, said Orders contain no similar provision applicable to cooperative associations which are engaged in the competitive sale of milk with other handlers of the same class.

By reason thereof, said Orders are violative of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Fourteenth. Defendant, for a third affirmative defense, alleges on information and belief, that the said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, in that:

"a. The said Orders deny to this defendant, the right to purchase milk upon the same terms and conditions, no more and no less, as those imposed upon other handlers of the same class.

"b. They attempt to deprive this defendant of large sums of money, to be paid to other handlers, without due process of law, and in violation of the liberty guaranteed to it by the Fifth Amendment.

"c. They attempt to deprive this defendant of its property rights, including subsisting contract rights, without due process of law.

92 "d. They attempt to take money, which is the private property of this defendant, without due process, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

"e. They are wholly arbitrary, capricious and unequal."

Fourteenth. Defendant for a Fourth affirmative defense, alleges on information and belief, that said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are illegal and void and violative of Title 15 U. S. Code relating to monopolies and combinations and illegal restraint of trade, in that the same permit certain handlers who are exempted from the provisions of said Orders, and certain other handlers who have a competitive advantage thereunder, to engage in unfair trade practices, and without loss to themselves, sell milk as distributors, at prices lower than the cost thereof to other handlers who are also distributors and who are subject to the provisions of said Orders, thereby said handlers may be excluded from engaging in a lawful business, to wit: The purchase and sale of milk, in violation of Title 8, Section 41 of the U. S. Code; of the provisions of Title 15 U. S. Code, and f such handlers' rights, in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth mendments to the Constitution.

The said statutes, to wit: Title 7, Section 608c of the U. S. Code, nd the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State f New York, known as Sections 258m and 258n, are void for the eason that they are violative of the said Fifth and Fourteenth mendments to the Constitution.

Fifteenth. Defendant for a Fifth Affirmative defense, alleges on nformation and belief, that the provisions of said Order No. 27 and fficial Order No. 126 are of such a technical and complicated nature, hat the producers entitled to vote in the referendum and poll conucted by the Secretary and Commissioner, on which issuance of said rders were predicated, were obliged to reply upon explanations of he meaning of said Orders by persons and agencies which claimed o understand them.

On information and belief, the Metropolitan Cooperative 3 Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, hereinafter referred to as Bargaining Agency," a New York membership corporation, hose membership was limited to cooperative corporations, and whose embers were exempt from paying producers the uniform price as ated in said Orders, and so many of whose members as were engaged n the sale of milk as distributors, were exempted from paying a uni-rm price for their milk, caused to be circulated by pamphlets, newsapers, public statements and radio addresses, an explanation which sserted that said Orders guaranteed "an equal purchase price to be aid by all handlers for milk for the same use" and that each producer ould be paid at a uniform rate. The Department of Agriculture of he United States issued a pamphlet consisting of 13 pages, making he same assertions.

The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, member of the argaining Agency, also issued and uttered public statements to the me effect.

Said statements were intended to, and did induce wide-spread elief among producers to the effect that the said Orders "required ll handlers to pay the uniform price to all producers" and that all andlers were charged "the same cost for milk." Said statements ere untrue and, on information and belief, were made by the Bar-aining Agency, Dairymen's League and others in furtherance of a nspiracy to convert the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c U. S. ode, and of Sections 258m and 258n of the Agriculture and Markets aw of the State of New York, to their personal ends as instruments o create an illegal monopoly in the purchase and sale of fluid milk, nd in restraint of trade, with intent to inflict damage upon this efendant and others in a like situation.

Said wide-spread and public misrepresentations, constituted a raud upon the milk producers in the marketing area who were ntitled to vote in said referendum and poll, and upon the Secretary f Agriculture of the United States and the Commissioner of Agri-lture of the State of New York, and rendered said referendum and poll void and of no effect and rendered Order 27 and Official Order No. 126, null and invalid.

94 Sixteenth. Defendant for a Sixth affirmative defense, alleges that it is not engaged in business as a distributor of milk, but acts only, as a non profit cooperative corporation in selling the milk of its producer members and others, if any, who deliver milk to its plant, to distributors for re-sale in the marketing area, described in said Orders.

The dealer to whom defendant sells its milk, is one of those to whom the discriminatory provisions of the said Orders apply, and thereby said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, by their terms, and by the operation thereof, tend to discriminate against the customer purchasing milk of the defendant and to exclude it from the milk business, and by such operation exclude this defendant and its members from the sale of its milk and that of its members, and further tends to create a monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk, in handlers who are given a competitive advantage by the provisions of said Orders, to the exclusion of this defendant and others similarly situated.

Seventeenth. Defendant for a seventh affirmative defense alleges that said Orders are discriminatory in that the prices fixed therein for milk other than fluid milk and cream are less than the fair market value thereof, and in that large dairy companies control the principal markets for surplus or manufactured milk, and it is impossible for this defendant to successfully engage therein without possession of large capital, which it and others in a like situation have not, in order that they may conduct nation-wide advertising campaigns and otherwise compete with such large companies.

Such unfair and discriminatory manipulation of the price of milk in the lower brackets, tends to create an illegal monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk in said large dairy companies, to the ultimate exclusion of this defendant and its principal customer.

95 Eighteenth. Defendant for an Eighth affirmative defense alleges that the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, of the U. S. Code, and of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, are illegal and void on the ground that they attempt to delegate to cooperatives who are also dealers or distributors of milk the right to dictate the terms and conditions on which distributors, other than cooperatives, may purchase milk, and at the same time to exempt themselves from compliance therewith, and also delegates to certain large cooperatives, which are in fact dealers or distributors, the power to deny their producer members the right to express their favor or disfavor for or against Order No. 27, Official Order No. 126, and/or any other Orders issued under said statutes, contrary to the expressed intent of said statutes and in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

cial Order No. 126, at the time of making demand upon this defendant for payment of moneys into the Producer Settlement Fund, failed to furnish to this defendant any accounting or statement as to the basis for such demand, and on information and belief said Administrator has refused to furnish such information to the public and to companies in a like situation with this defendant.

Since the demand of said Administrator in effect required payment by this defendant of moneys collected for milk of defendant's producer members to be contributed to other producers, defendant asserts that it is entitled to know the basis upon which such demand is made, and is entitled to a statement of the account thereof, and the said Administrator exceeded his administrative authority, if any, in keeping his calculations and accounts secret from this defendant and others in a like situation. By such course said Administrator 96 has appropriated to himself the powers and rights of dictatorship and of imposing upon this defendant and others payments of large sums of money without any accounting and in violation of the purpose and reasonable intent of the statutes and Orders, and of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. Assuming the validity of the said Orders and statutes under which the same issued (which, however, defendant denies), such arbitrary assessment is unwarranted, and this action is prematurely brought.

This suit on the equity side of the Court seeks an injunctive enforcement of the arbitrary decrees and demands of said Administrator, whose denial of reasonable access to his accounts and the basis of his demands is repugnant to the principles of equity. Said action is an unconscionable attempt to use a Court of Equity to enforce arbitrary powers in said Administrator, which defendant asserts do not exist.

Wherefore defendant Rock Royal Cooperative, Inc., demands judgment:

1. Dismissing the complaint.

2. An affirmative adjudication that Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 be declared to be invalid, illegal, null, and void on the grounds stated in the separate defenses above set forth.

3. Affirmatively adjudging that the provisions of Title 7, 608c, U. S. Code, and the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, are unconstitutional and void as being violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, on the grounds separately stated in the affirmative defenses above set forth.

4. That the defendant, Rock Royal Cooperative, Inc., have such further judgment, order, and relief as to the Court may seem just.

Fifth. Eighth. Denies that it has any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief, as to the allegations contained in Paragraphs marked "VI, VII, VIII, IX, XIX, XX, XXI, XXIII, XXIV, and XXV," except to the portions thereof heretofore admitted, and therefore denies the same.

Ninth. Said defendant further answering the complaint, on information and belief, denies the same and each and every allegation therein contained, not hereinbefore specifically admitted or denied.

Tenth. Defendant, for a first, separate, distinct answer and affirmative defense, alleges on information and belief, that said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are illegal and void on the ground that in issuing said Order No. 27, the Secretary exceeded his administrative authority and power for the reason that the number of producers represented in such purported referendum, was 65,255, of which number only 33,663, or 51.6%, voted "yes" in favor of said Order. The provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, Subdivision 19, U. S. Code, are as follows:

"(19) Producer referendum.—For the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of an order is approved or favored by producers, as required under the applicable provisions of this title, the Secretary may conduct a referendum among producers. The requirements of approval or favor under any such provision shall be held to be complied with if, of the total number of producers or the total volume of production, as the case may be, represented in such referendum, the percentage approving or favoring is equal to or in excess of the percentage required under such provision. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as limiting representation by cooperative associations as provided in subsection (12)." (As added June 3, 1937, c. 296, Sec. 2 (f), 50 Stat. 247.)

Eleventh. On information and belief, the findings of the Secretary of Agriculture to the effect that the provisions of said statute were complied with, is unsupported by said referendum or by any probative evidence on which to base such finding.

Twelfth. On information and belief, the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, in issuing said Official Order No. 126, exceeded his administrative authority and power, and said Order was and is void, for the reason that the number of producers represented in said purported poll, was upwards of more than 44,000, of which number only 25,935, or 59%, voted "yes" in favor of said Order. The provisions of Section 258m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, being part of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937, provide:

"If after such hearing the commissioner shall find, either upon the testimony given at the hearing or upon information concerning conditions existing in the milk industry in such marketing area, which the commissioner has otherwise obtained, that conditions exist so affecting the orderly marketing of milk in such area, that public interest requires that the public policy declared in section two hundred and fifty-eight-k of this chapter shall be effective and that it is favored by at least seventy-five per centum of the producers of milk produced in the production area for said marketing area, he may by order fix and determine for such marketing area fair and equitable minimum prices to be paid to producers.

"4. In determining the approval or request for an order as herein provided or the termination thereof on the part of producers the commissioner shall consider the approval, request or favor in respect thereto by any bona fide cooperative association of producers engaged in marketing milk within such marketing area as the approval, request, or favor either of making an order or of termination thereof of the producers who are under contract with such cooperative association of producers."

The Finding by the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York that at least 75% of the producers within the production area approved or favored the proposed Order, was unsupported by said poll or by any probative evidence on which to base such Finding.

On information and belief, in determining the purported approval of the producers of milk in said area, certain cooperative associations, which were not "bona fide cooperative associations of producers engaged in marketing milk" were permitted to cast votes of all of their members or persons represented as being their members, and such votes were or may have been improperly considered in violation of said statute.

101 leges on information and belief, the provisions of said Order No. 27 were violative of the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, Subdivision 5, which requires that Orders "in the case of milk and milk products" shall fix prices which "shall be uniform as to all handlers." On information and belief, Orders No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are violative of said statute, in that the prices therein provided to be paid to producers, are not uniform as to all handlers, but on the contrary, handlers of upwards of 50% of all milk in said marketing area are exempted from the provisions thereof.

Said Orders, by identical provisions, provide as follows:

"Article VII—Payments to Producers

"Section 1. Time of payment.—On or before the 25th day of each month, each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers shall make payment to each producer for all milk delivered by such producer at any plant during the preceding month at not less than the uniform price, subject to differentials set forth in sections 2 and 3 of this article."

On information and belief, said Orders contain no similar provision applicable to cooperative associations which are engaged in the competitive sale of milk with other handlers of the same class.

By reason thereof, said Orders are violative of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Fourteenth. Defendant, for a third affirmative defense, alleges on information and belief, that the said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, in that:

a. The said Orders deny to this defendant, the right to purchase milk upon the same terms and conditions, no more and no less, as those imposed upon other handlers of the same class.

b. They attempt to deprive this defendant of large sums of money, to be paid to other handlers, without due process of law, and in violation of the liberty guaranteed to it by the fifth Amendment.

c. They attempt to deprive this defendant of its property rights, including subsisting contract rights, without due process of law.

e. They are wholly arbitrary, capricious, and unequal.

Fourteenth. Defendant for a Fourth affirmative defense, alleges on information and belief, that said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are illegal and void and violative of Title 15 U. S. Code relating to monopolies and combinations and illegal restraint of trade, in that the same permit certain handlers who are exempted from the provisions of said Orders, and certain other handlers who have a competitive advantage thereunder, to engage in unfair trade practices, and without loss to themselves, sell milk as distributors, at prices lower than the cost thereof to other handlers who are also distributors and who are subject to the provisions of said Orders, thereby said handlers may be excluded from engaging in a lawful business, to wit: the purchase and sale of milk, in violation of Title 8, Section 41 of the U. S. Code; and the provisions of Title 15 U. S. Code, and of such handlers' rights, in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

The said statutes, to wit: Title 7, Section 608c of the U. S. Code, and the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, known as Sections 258m and 258n, are void for the reason that they are violative of the said Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

Fifteenth. Defendant for a Fifth Affirmative defense, alleges on information and belief, that the provisions of said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are of such a technical and complicated nature, that the producers entitled to vote in the referendum and poll conducted by the Secretary and Commissioner, on which issuance of said Orders were predicated, were obliged to rely upon explanations of the meaning of said Orders by persons and agencies which claimed to understand them.

On information and belief, the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, hereinafter referred to as 103 "Bargaining Agency," a New York membership corporation, whose membership was limited to cooperative corporations, and whose members were exempt from paying producers the uniform price as stated in said Orders, and so many of whose members as were engaged in the sale of milk as distributors, were exempted from paying a uniform price for their milk, caused to be circulated by pamphlets, newspapers, public statements, and radio addresses, an explanation which asserted that said Orders guaranteed "an equal purchase price to be paid by all handlers for milk for the same use" and that each producer would be paid at a uniform rate. The Department of Agriculture of the United States issued a pamphlet consisting of 12 pages, making the same assertions.

Said statements were intended to, and did induce wide-spread belief among producers to the effect that the said Orders "required all handlers to pay the uniform price to all producers" and that all handlers were charged "the same cost for milk." Said statements were untrue and, on information and belief, were made by the Bargaining Agency, Dairymen's League and others in furtherance of a conspiracy to convert the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c U. S. Code, and of Sections 258m and 258n of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, to their personal ends as instruments to create an illegal monopoly in the purchase and sale of fluid milk, and in restraint of trade, with intent to inflict damage upon this defendant and others in a like situation.

Said wide-spread and public misrepresentations constituted a fraud upon the milk producers in the marketing area who were entitled to vote in said referendum and poll, and upon the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, and rendered said referendum and poll, void and of no effect, and rendered Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, null and invalid.

104 Sixteenth. Defendant for a Sixth affirmative defense alleges that it is not engaged in business as a distributor of milk, but acts only as a non-profit cooperative corporation in selling the milk of its producer members and others, if any, who deliver milk to its plant, to distributors for re-sale in the marketing area, described in said Orders.

The dealer to whom defendant sells its milk is one of those to whom the discriminatory provisions of the said Orders apply, and thereby said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, by their terms, and by the operation thereof, tend to discriminate against the customer purchasing milk of the defendant and to exclude it from the milk

business, and by such operation, exclude this defendant and its members from the sale of its milk and that of its members, and further tends to create a monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk, in handlers who are given a competitive advantage by the provisions of said Orders, to the exclusion of this defendant and others similarly situated.

Seventeenth. Defendant for a seventh affirmative defense alleges that said Orders are discriminatory in that the prices fixed therein for milk other than fluid milk and cream, are less than the fair market value thereof, and in that large dairy companies control the principal markets for surplus or manufactured milk, and it is impossible for this defendant to successfully engage therein without possession of large capital, which it and others in a like situation, have not, in order that they may conduct nation-wide advertisin, campaigns and otherwise compete with such large companies.

Such unfair and discriminatory manipulation of the price of milk in the lower brackets tends to create an illegal monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk in said large dairy companies, to the ultimate exclusion of this defendant and its principal customer.

105 Eighteenth. Defendant for an Eighth affirmative defense, alleges that the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c of the U. S. Code, and of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, are illegal and void on the ground that they attempt to delegate to cooperatives who are also dealers or distributors of milk, the right to dictate the terms and conditions on which distributors, other than cooperatives, may purchase milk, and at the same time, to exempt themselves from compliance therewith, and also delegates to certain large cooperatives, which are in fact dealers or distributors, the power to deny their producer members, the right to express their favor or disfavor for or against Order No. 27, Official Order No. 126 and/or any other Orders issued under said statutes, contrary to the expressed intent of said statutes and in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Nineteenth. Defendant for a Ninth affirmative defense, alleges that Erskine M. Harmon, Market Administrator of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, at the time of making demand upon this defendant for payment of moneys into the Producer Settlement Fund, failed to furnish to this defendant, any accounting or statement as to the basis for such demand, and on information and belief, said Administrator has refused to furnish such information to the public and to companies in a like situation with this defendant.

Since the demand of said Administrator, in effect, required payment by this defendant of moneys collected for milk of defendant's producer members, to be contributed to other producers, defendant asserts that it is entitled to know the basis upon which such demand is made, and is entitled to a statement of the account thereof, and the said Administrator exceeded his administrative authority, if any, in keeping his calculations and accounts secret from this defendant and others in a like situation. By such course, said Administrator has appropriated to himself the powers and rights of 106 dictatorship and of imposing upon this defendant and others, payments of large sums of money without any accounting; and in violation of the purpose and reasonable intent of the statutes and Orders, and of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. Assuming the validity of the said Orders and statutes under which the same issued (which, however, defendant denies), such arbitrary assessment is unwarranted, and this action is prematurely brought.

This suit on the equity side of the Court seeks an injunctive enforcement of the arbitrary decrees and demands of said Administrator, whose denial of reasonable access to his accounts and the basis of his demands, is repugnant to the principles of equity. Said action is an unconscionable attempt to use a Court of Equity to enforce arbitrary powers in said Administrator, which defendant asserts, do not exist.

Wherefore, defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Cooperative, Inc., demands judgment:

1. Dismissing the complaint.

2. An affirmative adjudication that Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 be declared to be invalid, illegal, null, and void on the grounds stated in the separate defenses above set forth.

3. Affirmatively adjudging that the provisions of Title 7, 608c U. S. Code, and the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, are unconstitutional and void as being violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, on the grounds separately stated in the affirmative defenses above set forth.

4. That the defendant, Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Cooperative, Inc., have such further judgment, order and relief as to the Court may seem just.

Filed Nov. 22, 1938

Defendant, Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., for its answer on behalf of itself and its members, alleges by its attorneys. Haskell & Foley:

1. Denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to the allegations of paragraphs I, III, VI, VII, VIII. X, XII, XXII, and XXIII.

2. With respect to the allegations of paragraph V, denies so much thereof as alleges that this defendant handles milk in violation of Order No. 27, or official Order No. 126 and denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether the other defendants handle milk in violation of said orders.

3. With respect to the allegations of paragraph IX, denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether Order No. 27 was issued upon the evidence introduced at the hearings referred to in said paragraph and after giving opportunity to interested persons to file written arguments in support of or in opposition to the findings and provisions or any of them of a proposed order, and denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether official Order No. 126 was issued after the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets had given opportunity to interested 108 parties to file written arguments and denies that order No. 27 contains only terms and conditions authorized by the Act.

4. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XIII denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether the poll therein referred to was conducted.

5. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XVI admits that this defendant engages in the handling of milk or cream therefrom received at plants approved by some duly authorized health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area and denies each and every other allegation of said paragraph insofar as the same relates to this defendant and denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to the allegations of said paragraph insofar as the same refers to the other defendants.

6. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XVII admits that the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets declared the orders referred to in said paragraph effective as of September 1, 1938, and denies each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

7. Denies each and every allegation of paragraph XVIII.

8. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XIX, admits approximately one-third of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced in states other than New York and denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

9. With respect to paragraph XX, admits that the orders therein referred to require the Market Administrator to compute a uniform price to producers from the reports of handlers, which price is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in said orders. So far as said paragraph relates to this defendant, denies that a failure by it to report to the Market Administrator results in the announcement by the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers or in a uniform price lower than it would other-109 wise be if the utilization of milk handled by this defendant is higher than the average utilization of milk by all handlers or that the producers therefore fail to receive as high a price for milk as they would if all handlers reported and deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

10. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XXI, admits that Section 8 of Article VII of both orders and Section 9 of Article VII of both orders contain the requirements alleged in said paragraph and denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

11. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XXIV admits this defendant owns and operates no farms, denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to the allegations of said paragraph which refer to the other defendants, and denies each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

12. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XXV, admits the orders referred to therein are identical in terms and are administered by a Market Administrator appointed to administer both orders and that compliance with the terms of one order is compliance with the terms of both and that some milk sold in the marketing area does not cross state lines in transit to the market and is not physically intermingled with milk which has crossed state lines and denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief with respect to each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

13. With respect to the allegations of paragraph XXVI, admits this defendant competes with handlers in the marketing area, denies any knowledge or information with respect to the allegations of said paragraph insofar as they refer to the other defendants and denies each and every other allegation of said paragraph.

For a First, Separate and Affirmative Defense

14. This defendant was organized on or about June 12, 1934, pursuant to the Co-Operative Corporations Law of the State of New York.

110 15. The members of this defendant at all times have been dairy farmers producing milk upon their own farms.

16. The principal activity of this defendant at all times has been and is the distribution of milk produced by its members on behalf of its members and at all times since its formation this defendant has acted for and on behalf of its members in the distribution of the milk produced by them on their farms and at all times since its formation this defendant and its members have conducted and do conduct the business of distributing the milk produced on its members farms as a joint enterprise in which this defendant and its members have been and are jointly engaged.

17. At all times since on or about June 12, 1934, this defendant and its members as part of the said joint enterprise have distributed and sold milk produced on its members farms and milk received from others than its members in New York City and all milk distributed by this defendant and its members as part of the said joint enterprise has been and is milk received from its own members farms or received from handlers of milk.

18. The milk produced by defendant's members and received by defendant from handlers of milk is sold in New York City to retail establishments and to ultimate consumers by defendant and its members in the course of the said joint enterprise carried on by defendant and its members and the proceeds received from the sale of such milk less the expenses of distributing the same are remitted to the members of this defendant and there is no sale of the said milk produced by this defendant's members until the same is sold in New York City to retail stores and ultimate consumers in the course of the said joint enterprise.

19. By reason of the foregoing, none of the milk handled by this defendant is subject to the provisions of Article VI, Article VII, Section 8, or Article VIII of Order No. 27 or Order No. 126.

For a Second Separate and Affirmative Defense

20. The Act referred to in the complaint under which Order No. 27 was issued empowers the Secretary of Agriculture to issue orders regulating the marketing of milk sold in the marketing area 111 which milk was received in the marketing area by way of interstate commerce and which orders shall complement orders issued by the State authorities and regulate only such milk as is not regulated by the State authorities.

21. Order No. 27 is not complementary to Order No. 126, the order of the New York State authorities regulating the marketing of milk in the marketing area. The said Order No. 27 purports to regulate all milk sold in the marketing area and said Order No. 27 regulates the same milk as is regulated by the order of the State authorities and said Order No. 27 is in duplication of and not complementary to said Order No. 126 of the State authorities.

22. That by reason of the foregoing, the said Order No. 27 was beyond the power of the Secretary of Agriculture to issue and is illegal, null, void and of no effect.

For a Third Separate and Affirmative Defense

23. The said Order No. 27 purports to regulate interstate commerce in milk by setting forth a comprehensive scheme of prices to be paid to producers of milk in respect of all milk sold in the marketing area, irrespective of where such milk is produced or of the manner in which such milk reaches the marketing area.

24. By reason thereof said Order No. 27 was beyond the power of the Secretary of Agriculture to issue and beyond the power of Congress to authorize to be issued, and said order in invalid, null, and void.

For a Fourth Separate and Affirmative Defense

25. All the milk handled by this defendant and its members which is produced by its members is produced in the State of New York and all milk handled by this defendant which is received from others than its members is purchased by this defendant in the State of New York.

26. All milk handled by this defendant is sold in the State of New York and none of the milk handled by this defendant crosses state lines at any time, nor is such milk handled by this defendant mixed with milk which has crossed state lines or has been produced 112 in other states and none of the milk handled by this defendant is at any time in the current of interstate commerce nor does any of the milk handled by this defendant at any time affect, interfere with, burden, or obstruct interstate commerce.

27. By reason of the foregoing, the milk handled by this defendant is not subject to regulation by Congress and insofar as the said Order No. 27 seeks to fix the prices to be paid for such milk, the said order is beyond the power of Congress to authorize and is null and void.

For a Fifth Separate and Affirmative Defense

28. The Act referred to in the complaint pursuant to which the said Order No. 27 was issued provides that no order containing provisions such as found in said Order No. 27 should become effective until approved by producers of at least two-thirds of the milk shipped to be sold in the marketing area affected by said order.

29. Upon information and belief, said Order No. 27 was issued only after a vote of such producers shipping milk to be sold in the New York metropolitan marketing area had been taken and only after the requisite number of such producers had approved the issuance of said order.

30. The said provision requiring the consent of a portion of said producers before the said Order No. 27 could be issued is an unconstitutional and invalid attempt to delegate to private persons the legislative powers of Congress contrary to Article I, Section 1 of the Federal Constitution and violative of the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that no person shall be deprived of liberty or property without due process of law, by reason of which the said order is unconstitutional, invalid, null, and void.

For a Sixth Separate and Affirmative Defense

31. The statute pursuant to which official Order No. 126 was issued provides that no order containing provisions such as found in said Order No. 126 should become effective until approved by at least three-fourths of the producers affected by such order.

113 32. Upon information and belief, said Order No. 126 was issued only only after a vote of the producers affected by said order had been taken and only after the requisite number of such producers had approved the issuance of said order.

33. The said provision requiring the consent of a portion of said producers before said Order No. 126 could be issued is an unconstitutional and invalid attempt to delegate to private persons, the legislative power of the New York State legislature contrary to Article III, Section 1 of the Constitution of the State of New York and contrary to Article I, Section 6 of the Constitution of the State of New York and to the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that no person shall be deprived of liberty or property without due process of law, by reason whereof the said Order No. 126 is unconstitutional, invalid, and void.

For a Seventh Separate and Affirmative Defense

34. Repeats and realleges each and every allegation set forth in paragraphs numbered 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18.

35. Order No. 27 and Order No. 126 provide for the fixation of a uniform price to be paid each month to the producers of milk, which uniform price is computed upon the basis of various minimum prices required to be paid by said orders for milk dependent upon the ultimate utilization of the milk received from producers and is based upon all milk utilized in the marketing area and subject to the said orders.

36. The said orders provide for the establishment of a producers' settlement fund into which must be paid by handlers the amount by which a figure arrived at by taking the total quantity of milk handled by them which is subject to said orders and multiplying such quantity by the applicable minimum prices therefor, exceeds a figure arrived at by multiplying said quantity by the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator. The orders provide that from such settlement pool there shall be turned over to each handler of milk whose obligation for the payment of milk to producers calculated at the minimum prices is less than their obligation calculated at the uniform price an amount equal to such difference, 114 and such handlers are required to pay over pro rata to the producers from whom they have received milk the amount so received from the producers' settlement fund.

37. The amount which the members of this defendant were entitled to receive for the milk produced on their farms and distributed by this defendant and its members during September 1938 pursuant to the said joint enterprise conducted by this defendant and its members was in excess of the amount such members would receive if said members had received for their milk an amount equal to the quantity of milk produced by said members on their farms and distributed by this defendant and its members in the course of said joint enterprise multiplied by the uniform price fixed for September 1938 pursuant to said Orders.

38. The method adopted in said Orders for the calculation of th uniform price to be paid to producers for milk received from them is such that upon information and belief such uniform price at al times will be less per unit of milk than the amount the members o this defendant will receive for their milk upon its distribution b this defendant and said members pursuant to the aforesaid join enterprise.

39. The said Orders insofar as they require payment to the sai producers' settlement fund in respect of milk produced by the mem bers of this defendant on their farms and distributed by said mem bers and this defendant as part of the joint enterprise conducted b said members and this defendant take without compensation fro the members of this defendant the difference between the amoun which the said members of this defendant are and will be in th future entitled to receive for their milk pursuant to the said join enterprise conducted by defendant and its members, and the less amount which said members would receive for their milk, if the received therefor an amount calculated upon the uniform price, an through the device of the said producers settlement fund turn ove the amount so taken to other producers of milk, and said orders thu deprive the members of this defendant whom this defendant repr sents and appears for in this suit, of their property, witho 115 due process of law, and to the extent that said orders seek t compel this defendant to make payment for the milk produce on its members farms as if said milk were purchased from said mem bers, deprive this defendant and its members of the liberty carrying on their joint enterprise, whereby they dispose of the mil produced by the said members and all milk purchased by this d fendant from handlers of milk, without due process of law, whereb said Order No. 27 and the provision of the Act authorizing sa order are contrary to the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Const tution and unconstitutional, null and void and by reason where said Order No. 126 and the provisions of the Agriculture and Ma kets Law authorizing said order are contrary to the Fourteen Amendment to the Federal Constitution and contrary to Article Section 6 of the Constitution of the State of New York.

For an Eighth Separate and Affirmative Defense

40. Order No. 126, referred to in the complaint was issued by th New York State authorities pursuant to the Agriculture and Ma kets Law of the State of New York, for the purpose of fixing pric to be paid to producers for milk by handlers in respect of milk so in the New York metropolitan marketing area.

41. Plaintiff sustains no injury or damages by reason of any vi lation of said Order No. 126, nor does plaintiff represent any perso who do suffer injury or damage by reason of any such violation.

42. By reason of the foregoing plaintiff is without power to maintain the within action insofar as it seeks to enforce the said Order No. 126.

Wherefore, defendant Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., prays judgment dismissing the complaint.

Civil Action No. 32. Consolidated cause

Amended answer

Filed Feb. 25, 1939

Defendant, Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., for an amended answer to the complaint of plaintiff United States of America, respectfully alleges:

First. Admits the allegations contained in Paragraphs marked "I, II, and III." Admits that on or about April 29, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture and Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York issued purported notices of public hearings on proposed Marketing Agreements, as stated in Paragraph IV of the complaint.

Second. Admits so much of Paragraph marked "V" as alleges that joint public hearings were held by Glen J. Gifford, as designee of the Secretary, and by the Commissioner of Agriculture at the various places and at the times stated in said Paragraph. Admits on information and belief that various persons attended and were heard at said hearings.

Admits that the Secretary issued a "Finding" substantially as stated in Paragraph VI of the complaint.

Third. Admits so much of Paragraph VII of the complaint, as alleges that the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27; that the same contained the provisions which are stated therein as published in the Federal Register of August 9, 1938.

121 Fourth. Denies that it has any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief, as to the allegations contained in Paragraph marked "VIII," and therefore denies the same.

Fifth. Admits so much of Paragraph IX, as alleges that the Secretary conducted a purported referendum of producers, but denies that the same was conducted pursuant to the provisions of 8c (10) of the Act.

Sixth. Admits on information and belief, so much of Paragraph X, as alleges that on or about August 24, 1938, the Secretary issued a "determination," which was approved by the President, as stated in subdivision A, B, and C of said Paragraph.

Seventh. Denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief, as to the allegations contained in Paragraph marked "XI," and therefore denies the same, except that defendant admits on information and belief, that the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture, publicly declared that Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, were effective on September 1st, 1938.

Eighth. Admits the allegations of Paragraph marked "XII" and so much of Paragraph marked "XIII" of the complaint, as alleges that the defendant engages in the sale of milk which was received at a plant authorized to receive milk to be sold in the Marketing Area; admits that the milk of one of three such plants operated by the defendant, passes by rail from Bridgewater, N. Y., to Weehawken, N. J., and then back to New York City. Denies that it has any knowledge of information sufficient to form a belief, as to the allegations in said Paragraph contained, which alleges that said milk "is in the current of inter-state commerce * * * or directly burdens, obstructs or affects inter-state commerce."

Ninth. Denies the allegations contained in Paragraph XIV of the complaint, for reasons set forth in the affirmative defenses hereinafter stated. Admits that the purported purpose of Order No. 27, 122 is as stated in Paragraph marked "XV," but denies that the same either promotes, fosters or protects commerce in milk, so as to effectuate the declared policy of the Act.

Tenth. Admits so much of Paragraph XVI that asserts that if all milk sold in the Area is not subject to the same regulations, that discrimination will result against milk not so regulated, but alleges that the said Orders, by their terms, do not apply to all such milk, and that the same are discriminatory, and that such discriminatory provisions, have contributed to disorderly market conditions. Defendant further answering the allegations contained in said Paragraph, denies that it has any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief, as to such other allegations, and therefore, denies the same.

Eleventh. Admits so much of Paragraph XVII, as correctly quotes the provisions of the "Order," and that computations cannot be made by the Market Administrator without information or figures to be used in such computation. Admits so much of Paragraph marked "XVIII" as correctly quotes the provisions of Order No. 27, and admits that the Market Administrator cannot make payment of sums of money which he has not received, or which he does not possess.

Admits that the defendant has failed and refused to pay to the said Administrator, the sum of $14,616.05, and the further sum of $535.37.

Thirteenth. Admits so much of Paragraph XX as alleges that the defendant is a competitor of other handlers in the Marketing Area, and affirmatively alleges that such competing handlers as handle upwards of more than 40% of all the milk in said marketing Area, are not subject to the provisions of said Order. Denies that the failure of this defendant to pay the sums above set forth, will either disrupt or obstruct the lawful regulation of commerce, or that plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

Fourteenth. Defendant further answering the complaint, 123 denies the same and each and every allegation therein contained, not hereinbefore specifically admitted or denied.

Fifteenth. Defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., for an answer plaintiff United States of America, has heretofore commenced an action against the defendants in this consolidated cause, as stated in paragraph marked "1"; admits the allegations contained in paragraphs marked "2, 3, and 4."

Admits on information and belief, the allegations contained in paragraph marked "5," and so much of paragraph marked "6" as alleges that joint public hearings were held by Glenn J. Gifford at the times and places therein stated, and that various persons present were heard concerning the proposed Marketing Order and Agreement.

Sixteenth. Admits so much of paragraph "7" as alleges that the Secretary issued Order No. 27 on August 5, 1938. As to all allegations of the amended complaint, purporting to set forth or interpret the provisions of said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, this defendant makes reference to the Orders themselves as to their contents. Admits that on or about August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an Order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective September 1, 1938; that on August 25th, the Commissioner issued Official Order No. 126 and declared the same to be effective September 1, 1938.

Seventeenth. Admits that E. M. Harmon was designated as Market Administrator of the Federal and State Orders, and on information and belief admits that the Market Administrator prepared certain forms for making monthly reports and otherwise. Admits that the purported purposes of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are as stated in paragraph marked "11," but denies that said Orders either could or did, effectuate the declared policies of the Acts under which they were promulgated.

Admits so much of Paragraph "12" as alleges that the Market Administrator cannot make computations of the uniform price and otherwise without figures from which to make calculations; and admits so much of paragraph "13" as alleges that the Market Administrator cannot make payments through the Producer Settlement Fund in the absence of moneys therein.

Eighteenth. Denies that it has any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to allegations in paragraph "14" that, assuming the validity of the Orders, which defendant denies, the defendant would be indebteded to the Market Administrator in the sum of $14,616.05, and therefore denies the same. Defendant admits that 2¢ per cwt. on the October purchases of milk made by the defendant, amounts to upwards of $535.37. Defendant denies the allegation that it has failed to make payment of said sum, and alleges that payment thereof was made to the Market Administrator under protest. Defendant admits that it has refused to pay the sum of $14,616.05 to the Administrator.

Nineteenth. Admits so much of paragraph "16" as alleges that defendant is a competitor of other handlers in the marketing area.

Twentieth. Defendant further answering the complaint of the in-therein contained, not hereinbefore specifically admitted or denied, or concerning which defendant has not specifically admitted or denied similar allegations in the complaint in the original action, in which the United States of America was plaintiff, and Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., was defendant.

Twenty-first. Defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., in support of the several affirmative defenses to the complaints of plaintiff United States and of the intervening plaintiff, which affirmative defenses are hereinafter separately stated, alleges that the Metropolitan Marketing Area, defined by Order No. 27, includes the City of greater New York, and territory adjacent thereto, wholly within the territorial boundaries of the State of New York.

Milk dealers, licensed as such, under the provisions of Section 253 of the Agriculture and Markets Law, of the State of New York, alone, have the right to engage in the purchase and sale of milk in said Marketing Area, and the term "milk dealer" includes—

"Any person who purchases or handles or sells milk, including * * * cooperative corporations and unincorporated cooperative associations."

125 Such dealers are, by Article 1, Subdivision 6, of Order No. 27, denominated as "handlers." A handler is there defined as—

"Any person who engages in the handling of milk or cream therefrom, which was received at a plant approved by any Health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the Marketing Area * * * this definition shall be deemed to include a cooperative association of producers with respect to any milk received from producers at any plant operated by such association, or with respect to any milk which it causes to be delivered from producers to any other handler for the account of such association, and for which such association, collects payments."

The health authority in the "Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area," is the Department of Health of the City of New York, which inspects country receiving plants, farms, dairies, and other facilities of milk producers, as well as bottling and distributing facilities in the City of New York. The Official records of said Department of Health of the City of New York, as of August 1938, disclosed that there were 54,111 milk producers whose dairies had been inspected and approved for the production of Grade B milk for shipment to and sale in the City of New York; 6,109 milk producers whose dairies had been approved for the production of Grade A milk for shipment to, and sale in the City of New York, making in all 60,220 milk producers. Said producers were located in the States of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Vermont, hereinafter referred to as the "New York Milk Shed." Included therein, are the producers delivering to this defendant's plants, whose minimum production of milk is upwards of more than 40,000 quarts of milk daily.

Upwards of 420 country receiving plants have been approved for the receiving and shipping of Grade B milk, and upwards of 86 milk receiving plants for receiving and shipping Grade A milk, making a total of upwards of 506 milk receiving stations in all in said New York Milk Shed. Included therein, are defendant's three receiving stations.

Twenty-second. At all the times hereinafter mentioned, this defendant was a competitor of, and has sold milk in its business, in competition with dealers operating the country milk receiving stations in the New York Milk Shed above referred to, and who shipped milk received at said stations to the Metropolitan Area and sold the same in competition with milk sold by defendant.

Twenty-third. Defendant's principal competitors are as follows:

126 a. The Borden Company and various corporations subsidiary thereto, hereinafter referred to "Bordens."

b. National Dairy Products Corporation, and various subsidiaries thereof, including Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., Muller Dairies, Inc., Breakstone Brothers, Inc., and Sheffield Condensed Milk Company, hereinafter referred to as "National Dairy."

c. Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "Dairymen's League" and various corporations subsidiary thereto, including Hauk & Schnabt Dairy, Inc., DeLancey Milk and Cream Company, and Lincoln Farm Products Corp., and which corporations were formerly operated by Dairymen's League as separate corporations, but on information and belief, whose businesses were combined with Dairymen's League, and are now operated as branches thereof since about August 1938.

d. Other dealers, known in the industry as "independent dealers." Defendant is an "independent dealer."

This defendant and said competitors, in so far as they are engaged in the sale of milk for fluid consumption in the City of New York, are all dealers or handlers of a like class.

Defendant and its said competitors, are also known in the industry as "distributors." The Dairymen's League therefore, occupies a dual capacity as a cooperative agent of producers and as a distributor. It claims that "distributors buying from the Dairymen's League, handle 40%—approximately 50,000 forty-quart cans daily of the Metropolitan Market's supply." Dairymen's League, as a distributor, sells milk in competition with defendant and other distributors, including those purchasing their supplies from it, and is a dominating factor in the prices which defendant and other competing dealers can demand and procure for fluid milk.

Twenty-fourth. As of August 1938, the Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and Sheffield Condensed Milk Company, operated and now operate, upwards of 99 approved milk receiving stations in said New York Milk Shed, receiving milk from upwards of 10,100 producers; the greater part of said producers deliver milk to Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and are organized in a membership cooperative corporation, known as Sheffield Producers' Cooperative Association, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "Sheffield Cooperative."

On information and belief, said Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and some or all National Dairy subsidiaries above referred to, also purchase supplies of milk from other cooperative associations 127 operating approved milk receiving stations in the said New York Milk Shed.

Dairymen's League was in August, 1938, operating upwards of 107 approved milk receiving plants in the New York Milk Shed, receiving milk from 11,106 producers.

As of August, 1938, Bordens operated upwards of 77 approved milk receiving stations, receiving milk from upwards of 8,610 producers, all of whom, on information and belief, were and are members of Dairymen's League; milk of said producers is delivered to Bordens and payment therefor, is made by the Bordens to said Dairymen's League, which in turn pays said producers, and also pays producers delivering milk to its own plants.

The number of approved producers included in Dairymen's League membership was in August, 1938, upwards of 19,716.

On information and belief, several subsidiaries of Bordens, purchase milk from producers at other approved milk receiving stations in the New York Milk Shed, but the exact number of said stations and producers delivering thereto, is not known to this defendant.

Twenty-fifth. On June 7th, 1938, a Certificate of Incorporation of "Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc," hereinafter referred to as "Bargaining Agency," was filed in the Office of the Secretary of State of the State of New York, by or on behalf of Seward A. Miller, 11 W. 42nd Street, New York City, attorney for Dairymen's League, whereby there was created a membership corporation. Said Certificate provided in part:

"10. The membership of the corporation, shall be limited to cooperative associations organized under or subject to the provisions of the Cooperative corporations Law of the New York State, or of similar laws of any other State, and organized and controlled by milk producers."

Shortly thereafter, the Dairymen's League and Sheffield Cooperative became members of said new corporation or Bargaining Agency. Other cooperatives, operating country receiving plants, were solicited to become members of the Bargaining Agency, and some did so. The officers, members, agents, and servants of the Bargaining Agency, in furtherance of the scheme hereinafter set forth, procured the formation of cooperative corporations among the milk producers delivering milk to plants owned by independent dealers, including this defendant, which said cooperatives were neither milk dealers, handlers, or bona fide cooperatives, within the meaning of Title 7, Section 608c U. S. Code, and Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York.

128 Twenty-sixth. Defendant further alleges that the Congress, by the passage of Title 7, Section 608c, U. S. Code, as amended, and the Legislature of the State of New York, by the passage of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937, as amended, attempted to provide an enabling ct and a procedure whereby, through cooperation, producers could effect the pooling of their milk, and thereby to provide for an equitable distribution of the proceeds thereof, ratably among the producers.

Defendant further alleges that, contrary to the spirit and intent of said statutes, the Bargaining Agency entered upon a program or scheme to procure for several large member cooperative corporations, including the Dairymen's League, a competitive advantage over proprietary corporations and dealers, including this defendant and others similarly situated, in the purchase and sale of milk, and thereby to discriminate against defendant and said others, and to establish in said Bargaining Agency members and companies dealing with them, a monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk in the Metropolitan Area. Said scheme had as its object, the confiscation of this defendant's property rights without due process, and the denial to it of equal protection of the law, contrary to the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

On information and belief, the Bargaining Agency was at all times, dominated and controlled by the Dairymen's League and Sheffield Cooperative.

In furtherance of the scheme above set forth, the Bargaining Agency, presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, hereinafter referred to as "Secretary," and to the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, hereinafter referred to as "Commissioner," a proposed marketing agreement and Order, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and requested that the same be promulgated under the authority conferred by Title 7, Section 608c U. S. Code, hereinafter referred to as the "Federal Act," and under the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, hereinafter referred to as the "State Act."

First Affirmative Defense

Twenty-seventh. Under authority of Section 8b and 8c of the "Federal Act," and the provisions of section 258m of the State Act, 129 the Secretary and Commissioner gave notice of public hearings on said proposed Marketing Agreement and Order, and after such hearings, the Secretary on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27 and the Commissioner made public, proposed Official Order No. 126. The Secretary elected to conduct a referendum of producers pursuant to the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c (19) of the Act for the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of the proposed Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May, 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area. The Commissioner elected to conduct a poll for the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was approved or favored by at least 75% of the producers residing in the State of New York, who during the month of May, 1938, were engaged in production of milk for sale in the marketing area. After conducting said referendum and po the Secretary and Commissioner "determined" that two-thirds of t producers in the production area covered by Order No. 27 and 75 of the producers in the production area covered by Official Order N 126, approved or favored the issuance of said Orders. On inform tion and belief, said Findings and determinations by the Secreta and Commissioner, were predicted solely on the said referendum a poll, and the votes cast therein.

Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are illegal and void f fraud connected with said referendum conducted by the Secreta and poll conducted by the Commissioner, on which, issuance of sa Orders were predicated.

The Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, in furtherance their scheme, prior to said referendum and poll, carried on an elabor campaign of false and misleading propaganda through the media of newspapers, radio speeches, letters, pamphlets, and otherwise, c culated to mislead and deceive milk producers entitled to vote there or whose votes were entitled to be cast on their behalf by cooperativ

On April 29th, 1938, the Secretary signed a notice of hearing the proposed Marketing Order, and published said notice to the pr ducers in the New York Milk Shed, accompanied by a proposed Ord stating however:

"The provisions proposed by the Metropolitan Cooperative Mi Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., are set forth below as possib provisions of a marketing agreement and of an order. Th 130 publication in this form is for the convenience of interest parties and is not to be considered as in any way signifyi their approval by the Secretary of Agriculture."

Hearings on the proposed Federal and State Orders were he jointly thereafter. Coincident therewith, and on or about April 1938, the Bargaining Agency issued a 24-page booklet, on the co of which was contained the following statement: "Mr. Dairymen Save this Booklet. The Plant It Explains May Save Your Firm Said booklet contained statements which were grossly untrue, and particular, stated on page 1:

"Principles Upon Which the Order Is Based

"The fundamental requirements of the industry which the Or seeks to establish are five in number, viz:

"1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for same use.

"2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fl markets.

* * * * * * *

"Complete simplicity in the terms of the Order is impossible par because of the complexity of the subject dealt with and partly beca of the impossibility of giving the desired legal effect to certain p visions without employing the language of the Courts. It is c fidently believed that the present Order can successfully withstand any assaults upon its legality."

Coincident therewith, one Baldwin, as executive secretary of the Bargaining Agency, issued and circulated generally, an inflammatory letter, calculated to arouse hatred toward dealers, including this defendant. Referring to the "dealer," Baldwin said in part:

"He has ground you down in poverty * * * attend the meetings and hearings—listen to the radio talks. Vote for your own best interests."

Prior to the vote on said proposed Order, widespread, innumerable statements and representations were made to all producers in the area, by both the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, their members, agents, servants, and affiliates, to the effect that all handlers would be required to pay the uniform price to all producers, and that no handler had a competitive advantage over the other. Specifically, as an example, the Dairymen's League News, the official newspaper of the Dairymen's League, on August 16th, 1938, contained the following statements on page 5:

131 "Uniform Pool Prices for Producers

"The order requires handlers to pay the uniform, or blended, price calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class I milk outside of the marketing area. In such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable.

* * * * * * *

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk sold in the marketing area and assures for that milk payments to all producers at a uniform rate, except for the transportation and other differentials provided."

Thereafter the Department of Agriculture, in August 1938, issued a printed pamphlet under the seal of the Department stating, on pages 12 and 13:

"The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool, or blended, price, calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as class I milk outside of the marketing area.

* * * * * * *

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk sold in the marketing area, and for that milk assures payments to all producers at a uniform rate, except for the transportation and other differentials provided."

The foregoing statements were and are untrue. Identical provisions of Article I of said Orders provide:

"5. 'Producer' means any person who produces milk which is delivered to a handler at a plant which is approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

"6. 'Handler' means any person who engages in the handling milk, or cream therefrom, which was received at a plant approved any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the ma keting area.

* * * * * * *

"This definition shall be deemed to include a cooperative associati of producers with respect to any milk received from producers any plant operated by such association or with respect to any mi which it causes to be delivered from producers to any other hand for the account of such association and for which such association c lects payment."

The only provision in said Orders directing payment to produc is as follows:

"Article VII—Payments to Producers

"Section 1. Time of Payment.—On or before the 25th day of ea month, each handler which is not a cooperative association 132 producers shall make payment to each producer for all m delivered by such producer at any plant during the preced month at not less than the uniform price, subject to differentials forth in sections 2 and 3 of this article."

There is no provision in said Orders directing payment of the u form price to producers delivering to cooperatives, including Dai men's League, which claims to receive 40% of all the milk in area.

On the contrary, the actual price paid to all such producers by Dairymen's League was less than the "uniform price" by a s stantial amount, and prices paid to producers delivering to so other cooperatives were also less than the "uniform price."

The statements above quoted to the effect that all handlers pay same cost for milk sold in the marketing area were also false untrue, since said Orders fail to impose upon Dairymen's League obligation to pay such uniform prices for the 40% of all the mil the area handled by it, and also in like manner exempt the ot cooperatives operating country receiving plants.

On information and belief, the falsity of such representation well known to the agents of the Secretary in charge of the Da Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The sou of defendant's information is an affidavit of E. W. Gaumnitz, c of the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Adminis tion, United States Department of Agriculture, verified Decembe 1938, and which said affidavit was served on this defendant in action on a motion now pending for a preliminary injunction.

Such statements were also false for the reason that the Orders their terms obligated this defendant, and others similarly situa who paid the cost of operation of their country plants, to pay to producers for milk at its source the prices fixed by the Orders.

Orders required dealers such as Bordens, purchasing from cooperatives such as Dairymen's League, to pay for milk which had already been received, cooled, and made ready for shipment only the base price. The Orders contained no requirement that such dealers pay such cooperatives for such services, the cost of which amounts to from 10¢ per cwt. to 25¢ per cwt. in an economical operation, dependent upon volume and other elements.

Said producers who voted in the referendum and poll were 133 informed by the Official Bulletin of the Federal Government that the Orders for which they were voting contained provisions requiring equal payment to producers and equal cost to handlers when, in truth and in fact, the provisions of said Orders were to the exact contrary.

On information and belief, such false and fraudulent representations were made by Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, with deliberate intent to deceive such producers as were accorded the individual right to vote in the referendum and poll conducted on said orders, and tended to deceive such producers and influence them to vote "yes," or to refrain from voting "no."

Said Orders are discriminatory as between producers and as between handlers, and the false and fraudulent misrepresentations to producers, as above set forth, constituted a fraud upon those producers represented in the referendum and poll, and upon the agencies of the United States and State of New York.

By reason thereof, said referendum and poll were and are, illegal and void for fraud, and said Orders are thereby rendered null and void.

Second Affirmative Defense

Twenty-eighth. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are invalid illegal and void, for the reason that the same discriminate between this defendant as a distributor of milk in competition with cooperatives including the Dairymen's League as stated in Paragraph Twenty-seventh above, and also discriminates against this defendant and dealers engaged principally in the sale of fluid milk in favor of the Dairymen's League, National Dairy, and Bordens, which purchase milk through members of the Bargaining Agency, and other dealers engaged both in manufacture of milk, and sale of fluid milk, in that the price schedules established to be paid for milk utilized in manufactured classes, are preferential, less than the fair market value thereof; such preferential prices constitute a discount or rebate to said competitors on part of their milk, which is applied to the blended price paid for all milk, and such discount is actually intended to and does amount to a discount on the price paid by such competitors for fluid milk, and gives to them a competitive advantage over defendant and others similarly situated, thereby denying to them the right to purchase fluid milk on the same competitive terms, no more and no less, as applied to Dairymen's League, Bordens, Sheffields and several independent competitors, which handle more than 134 70% of the milk sold in the marketing area.

Said Orders are also discriminatory against this defendant, and grant a competitive advantage to defendants' chief competitors, Bordens, National Dairy and Dairymen's League, in that by the provisions of Article 7, Section 1, said competitors are permitted to "blend" the prices paid, or purported to have been paid by said competitors for milk produced in the production area and sold in other markets, with the uniform price, thereby reducing the purchase price paid by said competitors for milk sold in the Metropolitan Area in competition with this defendant.

The construction placed upon said provisions of Order No. 27 by the Secretary, is set forth in a pamphlet issued by the United States Department of Agriculture in October 1938, on the cover of which is printed "Market Administrator, New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, 95 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y." Page 14 of said pamphlet states:

"Handlers are required to pay the uniform pool, or blended, price, calculated by the Market Administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class 1 milk outside of the Marketing Area. In such instance, the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable. For the remainder of each producer's milk, the handler may pay such prices as he sees fit, but is required to furnish the producer with a statement of the percentage of the producer's milk paid for at the uniform price."

Under this provision, defendants' chief competitors, which have plants which are approved for both the production area under Order No. 27 and other marketing areas as well, are permitted to pay a price less than the bona fide actual value for milk sold outside of the Metropolitan Marketing Area, and by "blending" such price, actually pay much less for the milk purchased and sold in competition with defendant. Such competitive advantage tends to create a monopoly in defendants' chief competitors and the Orders thereby become instrumentalities by which defendant will, if said Orders are enforced against it, be forced out of business and excluded from carrying on its established business of buying and selling milk. Such discrimination, the purpose and effect of which is to create a monopoly in defendant's said competitors, is confiscatory and violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution, 135 and by reason thereof, the said Orders are unconstitutional and void.

Said Orders are also violative of the statutes under which they purport to have been issued in that the freight differentials therein stated, are unfair and discriminatory against handlers and producers in areas beyond the 200 milk zone, so-called, and in addition to such discrimination, the same grant a preference in price to producers and cooperatives in eighteen counties, all of which are less than 200 miles from New York City.

The actual wholesale delivered cost per quart of milk, under Official Order No. 27 and Order No. 126 above referred to, including operation of country receiving plants, freight, processing, bottling, delivery, taxes, license fees, and the actual overhead expenses, which are necessary to the operation of such business, was, in the month of September and October 1938 and now is upwards of 9¾¢ per quart, and on information and belief, the costs other than the price paid to producers for milk by Bordens, National Dairy, and the Dairymen's League, and other competing dealers, are approximately the same.

The Dairymen's League, in its official newspaper, the Dairymen's League News, dated November 15, 1938, makes the following statement:

"To pay established prices, pay for full butter fat content and all other charges 9¾¢ is figured as the absolute minimum at which handlers can sell milk to stores and make full payment to producers."

The market price of milk in the wholesale or dealer-to-dealer trade in New York City, in which defendant sells its milk, has been since September 1st, 1938, the effective date of said Orders, and now is, from 8¢ to 9¢ per quart, with the average being not to exceed 9¢, and defendant is obliged to sell its milk at said market price in competition with milk of the same kind and quality. Should defendant refuse to sell at such price, its customers can, and will, purchase from defendant's competitors above enumerated and other competitors, at said 8¢ to 9¢ price.

Indeed, the Dairymen's League News for November 29th, 1938 (published November 28th), states:

"In the New York City market, there is considerable unfair competition, it was stated. Most of it is in the store trade. Milk is being offered to stores at 8, 8½, and 9¢ per quart."

136 "Unfair competition", by sale of milk at less than the cost thereof to this defendant and dealers similarly situated, has been since September 1st, 1938, and now is being actively carried on by defendant's chief competitors, Dairymen's League, National Dairy, and Bordens, all of whom purchase milk through cooperatives which belong to the Bargaining Agency.

If defendant is compelled to pay the price stated in the Official Orders, under the present market re-sale price in New York City, which is dominated by the companies above referred to, and other corporations purchasing milk from producers who are affiliated directly or indirectly with the Bargaining Agency, defendant's capital will be exhausted and it will be obliged to discontinue business.

Defendant's chief competitors are making use of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, normally intended to lawful price fixing Orders, as a cloak for, and as an instrumentality for an illegal monopoly and combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade, as defined by the Anti-Trust Laws. Such unlawful use of said invalid Federal and State Orders, is made possible solely by reason of the discriminatory provisions thereof, as is more fully set out in the several affirmative defenses herein.

By reason of the premises, said Orders are discriminatory as against this defendant, and are invalid and void, as being violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

Third Affirmative Defense

Twenty-ninth. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, hereinafter referred to as the "Federal and State Orders," are illegal and void on the ground that in issuing the same, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, exceeded their administrative authority and power for the reason that the purported referendum and poll of producers, purported to have been taken by the Secretary and Commissioner, were and are void on the following grounds:

a. The purported referendum was not conducted in compliance with the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c–19, U. S. Code, in that producers and cooperative associations entitled to vote therein, were denied the right to cast their votes in favor of, or against the proposed Orders.

137 b. Less that two-thirds of the producers represented in the referendum on Order No. 27, and less than 75% of those represented in the poll on Official Order No. 126, signified themselves in favor of said Orders.

c. The Dairymen's League, Cooperative Association, Inc., which is actually a dealer, handler and distributor, selling milk in competition with this defendant, who is also a dealer, handler and distributor, was permitted, in said referendum and poll, to cast upwards of 20,000 votes therein, which votes unquestionably controlled the result thereof, and by such method, the bona fide producers delivering milk to said competing dealer, herein referred to as Dairymen's League, were denied the right to vote in favor of or against said Orders, in violation of the clear intent of the statutes under which the same purport to have issued.

d. Said Orders discriminate in favor of said Dairymen's League and against this defendant, and other handlers similarly situated, and deny to this defendant, which was allowed no vote or voice in the adoption of said purported Orders, due process and equal protection of the law, both in the manner of adoption and in the terms of said Orders, contrary to the provisions of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution, and contrary to the express provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, U. S. Code, as amended.

The Findings by the Secretary, as stated in Subdivisions (A), (B), and (C), which were as follows:

"(A) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such Marketing Agreement tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

"(B) That the issuance of the Order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

of Paragraph "X" of the complaint, are without any probative evidence to support the same, and amount merely to an expression of opinion of the Secretary as to the matters purported to have been "found."

Fourth Affirmative Defense

Thirtieth. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126. are illegal and void in that by the provisions thereof, the class prices of milk utilized in Class 3A, consisting of milk used in the manufacture of evaporated milk; condensed milk, etc., is determined by prices paid at various condenseries located in foreign states outside of the New York 138 Milk Shed, a number of which condenseries are, on information and belief, operated or controlled by affiliates or subsidiaries of the National Dairy and of Bordens, and thereby, said Orders have, by said provisions, delegated to the operators of said condenseries, the power and authority to fix the price to be paid by defendant's said competitors for milk purchased in competition with the defendant, and thereby said companies have been delegated the power to fix and control the amount of competitive advantage which they may obtain over defendant and others in a like situation. Said delegation of power was unlawful, and exceeded the administrative authority of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, and is illegal and void as constituting an unlawful restraint of trade and in that it tends to create a monopoly in the purchase and sale of fluid milk in defendant's chief competitors above referred to.

Thirty-first. Said Orders are further discriminatory against defendant in that the same by their provisions, direct that defendant and other handlers or milk dealers, who are not cooperative corporations, pay the prices established by said Orders, and by the Market Administrator thereunder, but exempt handlers who are cooperative corporations including the Dairymen's League and all members of the Bargaining Agency, from paying producers the so-called "uniform" price, contrary to the intent of Section 608c–5 (A) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Under said Orders, for the month of September, 1938, the Dairymen's League paid to its upwards of 20,000 milk producers supplying milk to the said Dairymen's League and Borden Company, at a base rate on all milk of said producers, of upwards of 10¢ per cwt. less than the "uniform" price required to be paid by defendant to its producers. Said underpayment by Dairymen's League, applied to the portion of its milk used in fluid form, amounted to a rebate or discount of upwards of 20¢ per cwt. on such fluid milk. In addition thereto, said Dairymen's League and other cooperatives, in making settlement with the Producers' Settlement Fund, was, by the terms of said Orders, allowed an additional reduction of upwards of 5¢ per cwt. on all of its milk which, when applied to the portion thereof used in fluid form, constituted a further discount of upwards of more than 10¢ per cwt. on said fluid milk.

On information and belief, the competitive advantage to National Dairy, Bordens and Dairymen's League, in the prices charged 139 for milk in the lower brackets, when applied to the portion of milk used by them in fluid form, constituted a further rebate or competitive advantage over defendant, equal to upwards of at least 30¢ per cwt. on said milk.

Thirty-second. Defendant further alleges that said competitive advantage to defendant's competitors as above set forth, denied to this defendant, the right to purchase milk of the same kind and class, under the same terms and conditions, no more and no less, as applied to other citizens who were milk dealers and handlers of the same class and in the same business.

Such discriminatory competitive advantage to defendant's competitors, tends to create a monopoly in said competitors, over this defendant in the purchase and sale of milk, and permits some or all of said chief competitors to engage in an actual combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade against this defendant and others in a like situation, and thereby to confiscate its property and property rights without due process and to deny it equal protection of the law in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments.

Fifth Affirmative Defense

Thirty-third. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are invalid and void as an attempted delegation to one group (cooperative handlers), of the power to regulate the business of another group of the same class and in the same business (handlers other than cooperatives). By such device, there has been delegated to cooperative corporations, which are also handlers and distributors of milk, the power to prescribe prices to be paid by this defendant and others in a like situation, and at the same time, exempt themselves from compliance with such regulation.

Said cooperatives, which control upwards of 50% of all the milk in the area, have been delegated the power to deny producers deliver-here sought to be enforced, and thereby to discriminate against competing handlers of the same class, including this defendant, and against producers delivering to such cooperatives.

Such delegation of powers by the Congress is unconstitutional, and an abandonment of the legislative duties imposed upon the Congress by the Constitution.

140 Said Orders are invalid and void for the reason that they expropriate moneys from one group of dealers of the same class (handlers other than cooperatives), including this defendant, to be paid through the Market Administrator, to a competing group (cooperative handlers), which are not subject to the price fixing provisions thereof. Thereby such cooperative competitors of defendant, are receiving a subsidy from the capital assets of defendant, which has been and now is being used in this cunningly devised scheme, to confiscate this defendant's business, and to create a monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk in the controlling members of the Bargaining Agency. The provisions of Title 7, 608c of the U. S. Code, as amended, and of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, as amended, are unconstitutional and violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution, in that the same, and the Orders issued thereunder, confiscate the property of defendant without due process and deny it equal protection of the law.

Such unlawful expropriation of defendant's moneys, without due process, for the use of its competitors, tends to create a monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk, and an unlawful combination in restraint of trade in defendant's chief competitors as defined by the Federal Anti Trust Laws (Title 15, U. S. Code), in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

Said Orders are wholly arbitrary, capricious and unequal.

Sixth Affirmative Defense

Thirty-four. Defendant further alleges that it operates milk receiving stations at Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, N. Y., Solsville, Madison County, N. Y., and Bridgewater, Oneida Co., N. Y., receiving from and purchasing the milk of upwards of 300 milk producers residing in the vicinity of said plants, and whose milk is naturally tributary thereto. In that connection, defendant has a capital investment in physical assets, including land, building and machinery of upwards of more than $50,000.00, and in the City of New York, has a further capital investment in delivery trucks, milk bottles, cases, cans, and other paraphernalia necessary to its business, all of the value of upwards of more than $10,000.00.

Defendant's business in the City of New York, has been built up over a long period of years and at an actual out-of-pocket cost 141 of many thousands of dollars, and the good will value of the trade which defendant serves in New York City, is upwards of the sum of more than $10,000.00.

Under the Orders, defendant as a handler of fluid milk, is charged more than the uniform price. It pays its producers that price and the excess to the Market Administrator. For the month of September, defendant paid to said Administrator, under protest, the sum of $15,200.99 for the Producers' Settlement Fund, and the sum of $535.37, administrative expense, which defendant also paid under protest. Upwards of more than $3,000.00 of said sum, was taken from defendant's capital and constituted a capital loss for the month of September, 1938. Under the provisions of the Orders, the Administrator, on information and belief, has distributed the same to other handlers, who in turn, pay the same out to producers. Some of said sums were paid for marketing services.

If defendant succeeds in this action, it cannot trace the sums already paid by it through the hands of the Administrator to the handlers, and thousands of producers to whom they ultimately pass, and even if they could be so traced, it would be utterly impossible to recover the same through actions at law. If the prayer of the plaintiff, that a preliminary injunction issue, commanding this defendant to pay to the Administrator, the amounts demanded on account of October purchases of milk, this defendant will suffer irreparable damage, and if such compulsory payments are continued, defendant will be summarily destroyed in advance of any adjudication in this action. Such a mandatory preliminary injunction will also do this defendant irreparable injury and damage, in that thereby, it will continue to be the victim of unbridled and conscienceless unfair competition, at the hands of its competitors, to whom the price-fixing provisions of the Orders are not applicable.

By reason thereof, this defendant is wholly without any adequate remedy at law in the premises.

Thirty-fifth. No application was made by the defendant to the Secretary under the provisions of Title 7, 608c (15) (A), prior to the commencement of this action, for the reason that this defendant was threatened by Erskine M. Harmon, Market Administrator, appointed by the Secretary and plaintiff Commissioner, his agents and servants, and others working in concert with him, including the Bargaining Agency, its officers and members; the Dairymen's League, in-142 cluding its Officers, agents, and members; one E. Manning Gaynor, appointee and agent of plaintiff Commisisoner, that if defendant sought relief in the Courts from the discriminatory provisions of said Orders, that it would be summarily forced out of business by interference with, and stoppage of defendant's milk supply, without which it could not continue in business. Reference is made to the complaint and amended complaint in an action brought in this Court by this defendant against Erskine M. Harmon et al., as to the details of such threats and acts of coercion and intimidation.

This defendant, on or about November 17, 1938, made application to this Court, for a preliminary injunction, restraining said Harmon, as agent of the Secretary of Agriculture and the other defendants pending the trial and determination of its rights, and while said application for said preliminary injunction was pending, and before the granting thereof, and on November 23, 1938, this defendant was served with a complaint herein, and with an Order to show cause why a preliminary mandatory injunction should not issue against this defendant. The complaint herein was verified by Edwin W. Gaumnitz, as the appointee of the Secretary of Agriculture, and this action is brought in the name of the United States, by and on behalf of the Secretary of Agriculture, to enforce the provisions of Order No. 27 issued by said Secretary. By causing this action to be instituted, the Secretary has voluntarily submitted all questions of the lawfulness and/or legality of said Order to this Court, and has disqualified himself from acting in a quasi judicial capacity in any administrative hearing for review thereof.

Wherefore, defendant demands judgment as follows:

1. Dismissing the complaint on the following grounds:

a. That Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are invalid, illegal and void as being violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution, and on the grounds separately stated in the affirmative defenses herein.

b. That the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c, U. S. Code and the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, are unconstitutional and void, as being violative of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States on the grounds separately stated in the affirmative defenses above set forth.

2. That the defendant have such further judgment, order and relief, as to the Court may seem just.

Opinion denying motions to strike

Filed Dec. 27, 1938

COOPER, J.: This is a motion by the plaintiff to strike from the answer of the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., and of other defendants, certain paragraphs relating chiefly to affirmative defenses.

The grounds of the motion are that said paragraphs:

147 (a) Fail to state a legal defense to plaintiff's claim, and

(b) Contain only allegations which are redundant, immaterial, impertinent, and scandalous.

The intervening plaintiff makes a like motion on the same grounds to strike out the same paragraphs.

The Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., is a New York State Corporation engaged in the business of buying fluid milk from producers and selling it to consumers through a jointly owned subsidiary corporation.

On August 5th, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, hereinafter called the Secretary, issued order No. 27 effective Sept. 1, 1938, under the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act as amended in 1937. This order was to be carried out under the direction of a market administrator appointed by the

Among other things Order 27 provided that the method for the fixing of prices monthly for prices to be paid to the producers and for the establishment of a so-called Milk Pool to which these handlers (meaning those who buy from the producers and sell to distributors or sell directly to consumers) should pay or from which they should receive certain sums fixed by the Market Administrator depending upon the use to which the milk received from the producers was put under the various classified uses specified in Order No. 27.

The Market Administrator determined upon the basis of the reports made by the defendant Jetter Dairy Company and other defendants that certain payments were due from the Jetter Dairy Company and the other three defendants.

This action is brought by the Government to compel payment of such moneys by injunction.

148 A like order was issued by the State Commissioner of Agriculture hereinafter called the Commissioner under State Statutes intended to bring about joint milk control, and price fixing in cooperation with the Secretary.

The same person appointed Federal Administrator was appointed State Administrator to make more effective the joint Federal and State Control of the production and distribution of Milk.

The State Commissioner's complaint seeks to compel like action if the milk is sold in intra-state and not interstate commerce, the Federal Act applying only to milk sold in interstate commerce or directly affecting interstate commerce.

It is conceded that the milk of the Jetter Dairy Company is sold in Interstate Commerce because it passes through New Jersey in going from farm to market. For present purposes it will be assumed that the milk of all defendants is sold in interstate commerce.

When it is sought to obtain the order of a Court of Equity requiring citizens to obey an order of an administrative or executive department of the Government, the conscience of the Court must be satisfied that the order should be issued. As sometimes stated, the order is in the sound discretion of the Court.

If it were otherwise, resort to a court would not be necessary.

Morrison v. Work, 266 U. S. 481.

McNulty v. National Mediation Board, 18 Fed. Sup. 494.

The motion is to strike out the balance of the answer from paragraphs 25 to 35 inclusive. Paragraph 26 of the defendants amended answer alleges the incorporation of the Metropolitan 149 Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency with the Dairymen's League, Sheffield Cooperative and others.

It further alleges that agents of the Metropolitan Agency procured the formation of a cooperative association among milk producers delivering milk to independent non-cooperative handlers and that such cooperatives so formed were neither dealers, handlers nor Paragraph 26 alleges that the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency formed a scheme to procure competitive advantages for several large cooperative dealers over the independents, proprietary dealers such as the defendant Jetter Company and others and to establish a monopoly under the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency.

Paragraph 27 constituting the first affirmative defense alleges the joint referendum by Federal and State agencies upon proposed Federal Order 27 proposed by the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency and State order 126 and alleges misstatements contained in the public notice issued by the Secretary and misrepresentations by printed statements of the Metropolitan Cooperative Bargaining Agency and by the Dairymen's League (alleged to handle 40% of all milk received in the Metropolitan Marketing Area) and that these misstatements and misrepresentations were a fraud upon the producers and induced them to believe that the terms of the orders were other than they actually were.

There are certain further allegations of speeches, letters or radio talks.

It is impracticable to refer to each of the remaining paragraphs of the answer, but it may be said that paragraphs 27 to 35 inclusive set forth defenses of these kinds, viz:—

1. Order 27 is invalid because it failed to comply with the Federal Statute under which it was issued; viz, the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937.

150 The grounds are chiefly these:

The handlers having failed to approve the proposed order No. 27 the Act required a finding by the Secretary that two-thirds of the Producers favor the Order and permits a referendum of producers to determine such approval.

That the secretary directed the referendum to be conducted and such vote as was had in favor of the order was induced by misunderstanding or misrepresentations as to the terms and effect of order 27 and that the referendum, therefore, did not give true expression of approval by the producers and the Secretary's finding, therefore, based on the Referendum for the promulgation of the order was without any actual or substantial support.

The defendant's argument appears to be that the secretary having elected to ascertain the approval of the producers by the Referendum, cannot reply upon hearings or any other means of ascertaining the approval of the producers. That the order is not such as it was represented to be and has various discriminatory, confiscatory and other unconstitutional provisions and effects referred to hereinafter and that a Court of Equity cannot in good conscience find that the order was promulgated in accordance with the statute nor that it should be enforced.

Defendant's cite, to support their contention, among others:

DiGiovanni v. Camden F. I. Company, 296 U. S. 64, 73, and certain railroad cases holding that in the absence of a finding of essential facts the order cannot be sustained.

Plaintiff urges that defendants nowhere allege that the result of the referendum would have been different had no such representations been made.

151 Assuming that there is no such specific allegation, the unmistakable and necessary inference to be drawn from defendant's affirmative allegations is to that effect.

The pleading on such a motion as this must be given every fair intendment that may be drawn therefrom. Plaintiff urges that the affirmative defenses are not a simple, concise and direct pleading, but are prolix, redundant, scandalous, and state no defense and constitute no defense.

Plaintiff's cite the N. Y. Civil Practice Act 8 (e) and the Federal Practice Act and cases such as Cantanzaritti vs. Bedrin (Nor. Dist. Pa.). Not yet Reported.

Polk vs. Mutual Reserve Fund, 128 Fed. 524, and many cases relating to invulnerability from attack of legislative bodies and public officers.

This Court agrees that the motive behind the Legislation cannot be attacked for if the Courts could inquire into such subject, there would be danger of invasion by the Judicial branch upon the legislative branch of three branch constitutional form of Government.

The same is true in large measure of the Acts of Administrative Offices but here the statute is the guide and apart from motive, acts not in compliance with the statute are not valid or enforceable.

The plaintiff also urges upon the basis of a number of Supreme Court citations including—

Johnson v. Drew, 171 U. S. 93.

Douglas vs. Noble, 261 U. S. 165.

Red (c) Oil Company vs. Board of Agriculture, 224 U. S. 380, that in a wide variety of situations discretionary administrative determinations of fact are conclusive, and that this order was such an administrative determination.

152 The statutes and the situations in those cases are not in close analogy.

The statutes here provided that the Secretary might avail himself of a Referendum to determine whether or not two-thirds of the producers approved the proposed order. Having done so that referendum should be held to be the basis of his action and if it was not in fact a referendum upon the proposed order the validity of the order may be affected thereby. Compliance with the statute is necessary to the validity of the order.

Fosgate Company vs. Kirkland, 19 Fed. (Supp.) 152, 160.

The defendant's allegations that the order was issued upon a referendum where the producers who voted were misled as to its where if the allegations are true there was no other evidence before the Secretary justifying the promulgation of the order.

That there may be and perhaps is other support for the order which may be shown on the trial should not prevent the defendant's from being given their day in Court.

The evidence the defendant's may introduce upon the trial, however, must be documentary evidence and will not include any oral statements, radio speeches (unless the text thereof cannot be shown in writing by undisputable proof) nor letters to individuals but only letters shown to have been sent generally to producers or large numbers thereof.

The alleged publications, radio speeches, etc., of the Metropolitan Marketing Agency, Dairymen's League, etc., will be competent evidence if shown to have a large circulation among producers or to have been delivered over well known radio stations with the text preserved in writing.

It is quite true that the Secretary is not responsible for the 153 Acts of the non-governmental organizations but the proposed order was admittedly suggested by the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency, of which the Dairymen's League and others are members and had representation upon its board. It is not so important that the Secretary did not send out such publications as it is whether he had knowledge and whether or not the Referendum vote was induced thereby.

In this connection the fact that the Dairymen's League, through its officers and not through its members, could and did vote for approximately 20,000 producer members is not without significance.

The Secretary is not burdened to any extent with defending the acts of these non-governmental agencies, for only evidence as to which there can be little or no dispute will be received and these agencies can be made parties hereto if they desire to present any evidence they desire, but only with the consent of the plaintiff.

2. The remaining defenses allege the invalidity of the order on constitutional grounds and on the grounds of discrimination which results or may result in driving all but the large cooperatives from the milk business.

The grounds are chiefly these:

(a) The order exempts Cooperative handlers from paying producers the uniform price required to be paid by non-corrosive handlers and permits cooperative handlers to pay into the equalization fund a lesser base amount than non-cooperative handlers.

(b) The order fixes low prices to three large groups of handlers for milk in the lower brackets (sold for other than fluid milk consumption), and is in effect a rebate which can be and is applied in reducing the price by these groups for fluid milk; which preferred handlers sell 70% of the milk sold in the marketing area; that the order permits three large groups to pay lower prices for fluid

sold outside the marketing area, which latter price is not fixed in the order, all of which results in a competitive advantage to these groups.

(c) That unfair freight differentials are fixed in the order not based on actual freight costs, which is discriminatory.

(d) That no sale price to consumers or to distributors being fixed in the order the foregoing discrimination above set forth, and otherwise, permits the large dealers, or some of them, to reduce the price to those selling to consumers to a point below the costs of fluid milk to defendants and others in like situation to a point below the cost with the most efficient operation, and that the order procured, it is, alleged, by the large dealers, particularly Dairymen's League, was designed by them to so permit the underselling of defendants and others in like situation at a price below cost for the purpose of driving them out of business and creating a monopoly in such large dealers, and the payments into the milk pool sought to be enforced by the complaint results in a confiscation of their property to the point of total confiscation.

(e) There are certain other allegations of illegal and unlawful delegation of power to a majority or two-thirds, which permits the majority or the two-thirds to regulate the business of the minority for the benefit of the majority or two-thirds in violation of fundamental law.

The power to fix in the order the price to be paid to producers is not challenged, nor the fixed price itself.

The numerous authorities cited on this point need not be considered.

The contention is that the same price is not fixed for all but discrimination is practiced in the various ways above referred to, some of which appear on the face of the order and others of which can only be shown by proof.

155 Involved in this discrimination is the exactions of the milk pool which result in alleged discrimination in favor of certain large producers and against these defendants and others like them.

That a price fixing or price control when by reason of discrimination or otherwise it becomes an arbitrary discriminatory regulation having a demonstrably irrevalence to the legislative, is unconstitutional and an unwarranted interference with individual liberty is declared in Nebbia vs. New York, 291 U. S. 502, 539.

Plaintiff argues that the milk pool is only a stabilization fund by which the burden of the surplus may be shared by all producers and distributors citing Nebbia vs. New York, Supra, and various other cases.

But the defendants allege the milk pool as operated under and by the terms of the order is arbitrary and discriminatory and goes to the length of exacting from them, in connection with the price cutting by the big handlers and distributors especially cooperatives, and despite their effective operation, practically their entire capital assets in a series of periodic exactions.

Discrimination in favor of a cooperative association of farmers and laborers is not invalid but valid and approved, urges the plaintiff, citing

Liberty Warehouse Company Burley T. G. Coop M. Assn., 276 U. S. 71, and other cases.

Some discrimination in favor of Farmer Cooperatives, when confined within reasonable limits, is undoubtedly valid, but, argues the defendants, a giant cooperative, controlling 40% of the milk supplied to the Metropolitan area and which uses its preferential treatment to combine with a few others to destroy competition and control the market is not the cooperative intended by the Statute, and in any event gets so much preference, under the whole scheme as to unlawfully take all of defendant's property if it would attempt to comply with the order.

Defendant's, to support their contention that the exactions for the milk pool under the order and in effect by reason of discrimination and otherwise is to take defendant's property and give the same to other competitors, cite

Railroad Retirement Board vs. Alton R. R., 295 U. S. 330.

Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank vs. Radford, 295 U. S. 555, and others.

These cases have no analogy of fact and are not under the commerce clause except the Alton case.

The question under discussion is one that could best be decided upon the evidence when presented and upon facts to be found therefrom.

Borden Company vs. Baldwin, 293 U. S. 194, 210, 213.

Moreover, a statute valid when enacted, may become invalid by a change in the conditions to which it applies.

Adkins vs. Childs Hospital, 294 U. S. 405, 415.

The defendants allege in substance that the statute delegates power to two-thirds of the producers to make the order binding on the remaining third and that such delegation is unlawful.

Defendant asserts that the statute here is like that in Carter vs. Carter Coal Company, 298 U. S. 238, 310, where such delegation as was there involved was held in violation of the 6th amendment.

Plaintiff asserts that there is no such delegation of power in the statute here involved as in the statute in the Carter Coal case and cites, Edwards vs. U. S. 91 Fed. (2nd) 767.

U. S. vs. Whittenburg, 21 Fed. Supp. 713.

U. S. vs. Goldsmith Fruit Company, 19 Fed. Supp. 147.

However, the statute and an order thereunder have been held to constitute invalid delegation of power.

Fosgate Company vs. Kirkland, 19 Fed. Supp. 152.

It is not necessary to decide that question at this time but such allegations should not be stricken from the answer in view of the need for an early determination of this case it seems unnecessary and undesirable to prolong the discussion of the defense since the Court is of the opinion that they should not be stricken out but that the defendants should have opportunity to present their defenses and the proof thereunder and that such defenses are not frivolous nor without some legal standing.

Some present doubtful questions, where the questions involved can best be decided on the evidence from which facts can be found. Especially is this so, where the suit in equity is to enforce an order.

The Court does not intend by this decision to express any opinion on the merits of the defenses but merely that they should not be stricken out on the grounds stated in the motion.

The Court understands that the defenses in all cases are or are to be the same.

Any questions of difference in standing on the part of the defendants appear not to be urged and are not now decided.

The motions are denied.

Amendments to amended answer of Jetter Dairy Company, Inc.

Add at the end of Paragraph "Twenty-sixth" of the answer, the following:

"Intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League, was instrumental in procuring the passage by the Legislature of the State of New York, of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937, known as the Rogers-Allen Law, and after its passage, actively participated in creating and in incorporating the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency.

Add at the end of Paragraph "Twenty-eighth," the following:

"Immediately after the promulgation of said Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, entered into a conspiracy to promote the illegal monopoly above set forth, and to put upon the defendant Jetter, and others in a like situation, a constraint upon their freedom in purchasing and selling milk upon a fair competitive basis, and by illegal coercion, intimidation, and threatened withholding of an adequate supply of milk to supply their trade, thereby to prevent said defendant and others in a like situation, from appealing to the Courts for protection, and to deprive them of the benefits of due process of law, and sustaining through the Courts, their constitutional rights. To that end, said intervening plaintiffs, Dairymen's League and Bargaining Agency, attempted to take into their own hands, enforcement of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, and to appropriate to themselves, the functions of the Court and Judiciary, and to impose upon defendant Jetter, and others in a like situation, compliance with said Orders, regardless of their legality.

159 In carrying out said conspiracy, the intervening plaintiffs, Bargaining Agency and the Dairymen's League, with the aid and assistance of E. Manning Gaynor, agent of the intervening plaintiff, Noyes, and Wellington Griffith, Jr., Referendum Agent of the Dairy Section, Department of Agriculture of the United States, Erskine M. Harmon, Administrator, and others, attempted to compel the defendant Jetter and others in a like situation, to comply with said Orders, and to refrain from prompt appealing to the Courts for an adjudication of their rights.

The specific acts of said intervening plaintiffs, their agents and servants, and others above named, are those concerning which proof has already been received in evidence on this trial.

Civil Action No. 32. Consolidated cause

[Title omitted.]

Amended complaint of intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League Co-Operative Association, Inc.

Filed Dec. 29, 1938

Intervening Plaintiff, Dairymen's League Co-Operative Association, Inc., by Seward A. Miller, its attorney, for its amended complaint against each defendant alleges upon information and belief:

1. The intervener, Dairymen's League Co-Operative Association, Inc., is a non-stock, non-profit co-operative association, organized in 1919 under Article XIIIA of the Membership Corporations Law of the State of New York, which Article was in 1926 incorporated in and made a part of the Co-Operative Corporations Law of said State and such Association is now subject to the provisions in Articles 1-3 thereof. The principal office of the Association is at Utica, New York.

2. That said Co-Operative Association is now and has been for several years last past engaged in making collective sales or marketing of milk or its products as agent for the producers thereof in interstate and also in intrastate commerce, and is duly qualified to 161 act under and is operating under the provisions of Act of Congress of February 18, 1922, known as the Capper-Volstead Act.

3. The United States of America has heretofore commenced an action against the defendants above named under Sec. 8a (6) of the Act of May 12, 1933 (48 Stat. 31; 7 U. S. C. A., Section 608a (6), as amended August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750), and as reenacted and amended by the Agriculture Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, approved June 3, 1937 (50 Stat. 246) (the said Act of May 12, 1933, as reenacted and amended, being hereinafter referred to as the "Act") investing the several district courts of the United States with jurisdiction specifically to enforce and to prevent and restrain any person from violating any order issued by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of Title I of said Act.

4. The claim of this intervening plaintiff arises out of the same controversy as that of the original plaintiff, insofar as the defendants above named are concerned, and the intervening complaint herein is ancillary to the original complaint of the plaintiff herein.

5. That largely because of the failure of the defendants to make the payments required by the Order hereinafter described, the Administrator of the Federal and State Orders has made extra deductions from the equalization fund in order that the equalization provided for by the Orders continue in effect and as a result thereof, monies which otherwise would be distributed by the Administrator to this intervener and other handlers have been withheld by him.

6. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is a co-operative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Rock Royal, in the County of Delaware, State of New York.

162 7. The defendant Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business in the City of Courtland, County of Courtland, State of New York.

8. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-Operative, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Schuyler Junction, County of Herkimer, State of New York.

9. The defendant Jetter Dairy, Inc., is a domestic business corporation of the State of New York, having its principal office and place of business at Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, State of New York.

10. This proceeding is brought to enforce Order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area and to prevent and restrain the defendants from handling milk in violation of the provisions of said Order No. 27; or, if the court shall find, however, that those defendants who handle milk which does not cross state lines on its way to the marketing area for sale burden, obstruct or affect interstate commerce, to hold such defendants subject to the provision of Order No. 27, issued by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and, if the court finds that such defendants are subject to the provisions of Order No. 27, to prevent and restrain them from violating such Order.

11. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 258-m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), the Commissioner on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed order regulating the handling of 163 milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau

Suffolk and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "marketing area." On April 29, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on a Marketing Agreement and an order substantially identical with the aforesaid Order.

12. In accordance with the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to Section 10-i of the Act, and Section 258-n of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), joint public hearings were conducted by Glenn J. Gifford, and employee of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, joint public hearings were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 1938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938, and at New York, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid, all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed Marketing Agreement and the proposed Federal and State Orders. The said hearings were attended by representatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area.

13. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings, and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written 164 arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of a proposed Order, the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said Order containing the terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner, as and made applicable only to, persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the Marketing Agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said Order provides that "This order shall become effective after the issuance by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York of an order containing provisions similar to the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be complementary, and on the first day of the month following, by more than three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary of (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement containing provisions similar to this order approved by him and signed by handlers of more than 50 per cent of the milk sold in the marketing area, or, his determination approved by the President that the failure or refusal to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the act, and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interest of producers pursuant to such declared policy of the act." On August 26, 1938, the Secretary having made all necessary findings, issued an order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938.

On August 5, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments, issued proposed Official Order No. 126, which Order was substantially identical with Order No. 27. On August 25, 1938, the 165 Commissioner having duly conducted a poll to determine (Sec. 258–m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937) whether the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least seventy-five per cent of the producers of milk produced in the production area for the marketing area and, having made all the findings required by the said Section 258–m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, declared Official Order No. 126 to be effective September 1, 1938.

14. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are administered by a Market Administrator who was appointed by both the Secretary and the Commissioner to administer both Orders. A handler is obliged to file the same reports and make the same reports whether subject to Official Order No. 126 or whatever Order the handler may be subject to. Compliance with one Order constitutes compliance with the terms of both.

15. Pursuant to Article 2 of said Order No. 27, the Secretary, on August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said Order. Pursuant to Article II of Official Order No. 126, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, on September 2, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said Order. Pursuant to Article V, section 3 of both Orders, the Market Administrator prescribed forms to be used by each handler in making final monthly reports in accordance with said Article and Section.

16. Order No. 27 is now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect. Official Order No. 126 is likewise now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect.

17. The purpose of said Order No. 27 is to promote, foster and protect commerce in milk among the states, and to effectuate the declared policy of the Act. The purpose of said Official Order No. 126 is to promote, foster, and encourage the 166 intelligent and orderly marketing of milk through producer-owned-and-controlled co-operative associations, and, in co-operation with the Federal Government, to protect the dairy industry and insure an adequate supply of milk for the inhabitants of the State of New York.

18. Section 2 of Article VI of each Order requires the Market Administrator to compute from the reports submitted by handlers a so-called uniform price to producers which is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in the Order. The failure of any handler to file a correct report with the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers, and, if the utilization of milk by a handler not reporting is higher than the average utilization of milk of all handlers, the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator is lower than it otherwise would be, and producers therefore fail to receive as high a price for milk as they would if all handlers reported. In addition, the failure of any handler to file a correct report makes it impossible for the Market Administrator to determine accurately the amount of money owed by such handler for milk received from producers.

19. Section 8 of Article VII of both Orders requires each handler whose net pool obligation for the preceding month (as defined in Section I of Article VI of the Orders) is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price to pay to the Market Administrator on or before the 18th day of each month for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. The Market Administrator is required by Section 9 of Article VII of both Orders to pay on or before the 20th day of each month to handlers whose net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price the amount of which such handler's net pool obligation is less than such amount. Unless the handlers who are indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund make their payments on the 18th of each month as required, the Market Administrator will be unable to make the necessary payments to handlers having a credit against the Producer Settlement Fund, and such handlers in turn will be unable to pay the full uniform price to producers.

20. The defendant Rock Royal Co-Operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $3,616.56. The defendant Rock-Royal Co-Operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $124.62 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the Orders pursuant to Article VIII hereof.

21. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-Operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-Operative, Inc. is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $1,603.00. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-Operative, Inc. is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $55.28 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the Orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

22. On October 14, 1938, which was four days after the report was due, the defendant Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., filed a report with the Market Administrator, 168 which report was incomplete and inaccurate, and was false and untrue inasmuch as it stated that all the milk handled by said defendant was received from said defendant's own farm. Said defendant neither owns nor operates any farm whatsoever. All the milk handled by it during the month of September 1938 was received from producers. If the defendant Central New York Co-Operative, Inc., had filed a true and correct report, such report would have shown an indebtedness to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $20,115.56, and the plaintiffs allege that such sum is actually due the Market Administrator from the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund. This defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $712.25 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the Orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof. Each of the defendants has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to the Market Administrator, and is threatening to fail and refuse to comply with the provisions of the Orders.

23. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are identical in their terms and are administered by a Market Administrator, who was appointed to administer both Orders. As far as the effective regulation of milk in the marketing area is concerned, it is immaterial whether a handler is compelled to comply with one Order or with the other, in that compliance with the terms of one Order constitutes compliance with the terms of both. Unless the milk which moves in the current of interstate commerce, or which burdens and obstructs and affects interstate commerce and is therefore beyond the power of the state to regulate, is subject to the same regulation as the milk which is purely intrastate in character, regulation by the State of the latter milk will be ineffective. If the defendants are not subject to Official Order
No. 126, it follows that they are subject to the provisions of 169 Order No. 27, and the enforcement of Order No. 27 is necessary to insure the effective control of the purely intrastate milk subject to Official Order No. 126.

24. Each of the defendants is a competitor of other handlers in the marketing area, and, unless each of the defendants is immediately restrained from continuing to violate the Order to which it is subject, and is immediately compelled to comply with all of its provisions, other handlers will be encouraged, or compelled by economic necessity, to refuse to comply with the provisions of Order No. 27 and Official

Order No. 126, the prices received by producers for milk will be lowered, and the intervening plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

Wherefore, the intervening plaintiff demands:

(1) That the Court adjudge and declare that the defendants are subject to provisions of Order No. 27.

(2) That the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of said Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, during the pendency of this suit.

(3) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of the defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by them under the provisions of said Order No. 27, and commanding each of the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said Order No. 27 during the pendency of this suit.

(4) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding the defendant Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(5) That the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, 170 employees, successors, and assigns from handling milk in the Marketing area until compliance with said Order.

(6) That the court issue a permanent injunction commanding the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of said Order No. 27.

(7) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are not subject to Order No. 27, the court adjudge and declare that such defendants are subject to the provisions of Official Order No. 126.

(8) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of Official Order No. 126, during the pendency of this suit.

(9) That if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of such defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of Official Order No. 126, and commanding each of such defendants, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said Official Order No. 126, during the pendency of this suit.

(10) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., is subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding said defendant Central New York Co-Operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(11) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No 126, the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, 171 their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of Official Order No. 126.

(12) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to Official Order No. 126, the court issue a permanent injunction commanding such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors and assigns to comply with all the provisions of Official Order No. 126.

(13) That the intervening plaintiff be given all such other, further, and different relief as to this court may seem just and proper.

Filed Dec. 27, 1938

Intervening Plaintiff, Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., by Edmund F. Cooke, its attorney, for its complaint alleges:

1. The United States of America has heretofore commenced an action against the defendants above named under Sec. 8a (6) of the Act of May 12, 1933 (48 Stat. 31; 7 U. S. C. A., Section 608a (6), as amended August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750)), and as reenacted and amended by the Agriculture Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, approved June 3, 1937 (50 Stat. 246) (the said Act of May 12, 1933, as reenacted and amended, being hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), investing the several district courts of the United States with jurisdiction specifically to enforce and to prevent and restrain any person from violating any order issued by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of Title I of said Act.

2. The claim of the intervening plaintiff arises out of the same controversy as that of the original plaintiff, in so far as the defendants above named are concerned, and the intervening complaint herein is ancillary to the original complaint of the plaintiff herein.

173 3. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is a co-operative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Rock Royal, in the County of Delaware, State of New York.

4. The defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is a co-operative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business in the City of Cortland, County of Cortland, State of New York.

5. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Cooperative, Inc., is a co-operative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Schuyler Junction, County of Herkimer, State of New York.

6. Upon information and belief, the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, State of New York.

7. This proceeding is brought to enforce official order No. 126, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Market Area, and to prevent and restrain the defendants from handling milk in violation of the provisions of said official order No. 126; or, if the court shall find, however, that those defendants who handle milk which does not cross state lines on its way to the marketing area for sale burden, obstruct, or affect interstate commerce, to hold such defendants subject to the provisions of order No. 27, issued by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and, if the court 174 finds that such defendants are subject to the provisions of order No. 27, to prevent and restrain them from violating such order.

8. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 258–m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), the Commissioner on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "marketing area." On April 29, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on a Marketing Agreement and an order substantially identical with the aforesaid order.

9. In accordance with the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to Section 10–i of the Act, and Section 258–n of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937), joint public hearings were conducted by Glenn J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, who was designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, joint public hearings were conducted at Albany,

New York, on May 16, 1938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938, and at New York, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and 175 places aforesaid, all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed federal and state orders. The said hearings were attended by representatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area.

10. Upon evidence introduced at the said hearings, and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of a proposed order, the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued order No. 27 regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said order containing the terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner, as and made applicable only to, persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said order provides that "This order shall become effective after the issuance by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York of an order containing provisions similar to the provisions of this order and to which this order shall be complementary, and on the first day of the month following, by more than three days, publication in the Federal Register by the Secretary of (a) his finding that the order is approved by more than two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum, (b) a marketing agreement containing provisions similar to this order approved by him and signed by handlers of more than 50 per cent of the milk sold in the marketing area, or, his determination approved by the President that the failure or refusal to sign tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared 176 policy of the act, and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interest of producers pursuant to such declared policy of the Act." On August 26, 1938, the Secretary having made all necessary findings, issued an order providing that order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938.

On August 5, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments, issued proposed official order No. 126, which order was substantially identical with order No. 27. On August 25, 1938, the Commissioner having duly conducted a poll to determine (Sec. 258-m of the Agriculture and Market Law of the State of New York, Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937) whether the issuance of official order No. 126 was favored by at least seventy-five per cent of the producers of milk produced in the production area for marketing area, and, having made all the findings required by the said section 258-m of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, declared official order No. 126 to be effective Sept. 1, 1938.

11. Order No. 27 and official order No. 126 are administered by a market administrator who was appointed by both the Secretary and the Commissioner to administer both orders. A handler is obliged to file the same reports and make the same reports whether subject to official order No. 126 or whatever order the handler may be subject to. Compliance with one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both.

12. Pursuant to Article II of said order No. 27, the Secretary, on August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said order. Pursuant to Article II of Official order No. 126, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of 177 New York, on September 2, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said order. Pursuant to Article V, Section 3 of both orders, the Market Administrator prescribed forms to be used by each handler in making final monthly reports in accordance with said article and section.

13. Order No. 27 is now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect. Official order No. 126 is likewise now and has, since September 1, 1938, been continuously in full force and effect.

14. The purpose of said order No. 27 is to promote, foster, and protect commerce in milk among the states, and to effectuate the declared policy of the Act. The purpose of said official order No. 126 is to promote, foster, and encourage the intelligent and orderly marketing of milk through producer-owned-and-controlled co-operative associations, and, in cooperation with the Federal Government, to protect the dairy industry, and insure an adequate supply of milk for the inhabitants of the State of New York.

15. Section 2 of Article VI of each order requires the Market Administrator to compute from the reports submitted by handlers a so-called uniform price to producers which is based upon the utilization of milk by all handlers in the various classes specified in the order. The failure of any handler to file a correct report with the Market Administrator results in the announcement by the Market Administrator of a uniform price which is not based upon the total utilization of milk by all handlers, and, if the utilization of milk by a handler not reporting is higher than the average utilization of milk of all handlers, the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator is lower than it otherwise would be, and producers therefore fail to re-
178 ceive as high a price for milk as they would if all handlers reported. In addition, the failure of any handler to file a correct report makes it impossible for the Market Administrator to determine accurately the amount of money owed by such handler for milk received from producers.

16. Section 8 of Article VII of both orders requires each handler whose net pool obligation for the preceding month (as defined in section I of Article VI of the orders) is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price to pay to the Market Administrator on or before the 18th day of each month for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. The Market Administrator is required by section 9 of Article VII of both orders to pay on or before the 20th day of each month to handlers whose net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price the amount of which such handler's net pool obligation is less than such amount. Unless the handlers who are indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund make their payments on the 18th of each month as required, the Market Administrator will be unable to make the necessary payments to handlers having a credit against the Producer Settlement Fund, and such handlers in turn will be unable to pay the full uniform price to producers.

17. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Rock Royal Co-op-
179 erative, Inc. is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $3,616.56. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $124.62 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

18. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of September. On the basis of such report the defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc. is indebted to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund in the sum of $1,603.00. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $55.28 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof.

19. On October 14, 1938, which was four days after the report was due, the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., filed a report with the Market Administrator, which report was incomplete and inaccurate, and was false and untrue inasmuch as it stated that all the milk handled by said defendant was received from said defendant's own farm. Said defendant neither owns nor operates any farm whatsoever. All the milk handled by it during the month of September 1938 was received from producers. If the defendant Central New York Co-operative, Inc., had filed a true and correct report, such report would have shown an indebtedness to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Pro-

180 for payment to producers through The Producer Settlement Fund. This defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $712.25 as its pro rata share of the expense of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof. Each of the defendants has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to the Market Administrator, and is threatening to fail and refuse to comply with the provisions of the orders.

20. The defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., has filed a report with the Market Administrator for the month of October. On the basis of such report the defendant is indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $14,616.05. The defendant is also indebted to the Market Administrator in the sum of $535.37, as its pro rata share of the expenses of administration of the orders pursuant to Article VIII thereof. The defendant has failed and refused to pay its indebtedness to the Market Administrator and is threatening to refuse to comply with the other provisions of the order.

21. Order No. 27 and official order No. 126 are identical in their terms and are administered by a market administrator, who was appointed to administer both order. So far as the effective regulation of milk in the marketing area is concerned, it is immaterial whether a handler is compelled to comply with one order or with the other, in that compliance with the terms of one order constitutes compliance with the terms of both. Unless the milk which moves in the current of interstate commerce and is burdening and obstructing and affecting interstate commerce and is therefore beyond the power of the state to regulate, is subject to the same regulation as the milk which is purely intrastate in character, regulation by the State of the 181 latter milk will be ineffective. If the defendants are not subject to official order No. 126, it follows that they are subject to the provisions of order No. 27, and the enforcement of order No. 27 is necessary to insure the effective control of the purely intrastate milk subject to official order No. 126.

22. Each of the defendants is a competitor of other handlers in the marketing area, and, unless each of the defendants is immediately restrained from continuing to violate the order to which it is subject, and is immediately compelled to comply with all of its provisions, other handlers will be encouraged, or compelled by economic necessity, to refuse to comply with the provisions of order No. 27 and official order No. 126, the prices received by producers for milk will be lowered, and the intervening plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury.

Wherefore, the intervening plaintiff demands:

(1) That the court adjudge and declare that the defendants are subject to provisions of official order No. 126.

(2) That the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of official order No. 126, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, during the pendency of this suit.

(3) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of the defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by them under the provisions of official order No. 126, and commanding each of the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said official order No. 126 during the pendency of this suit.

182 (4) That the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(5) That the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and handling of milk in the marketing area.

(6) That the court issue a permanent injunction commanding the defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of said official order No. 126.

(7) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are not subject to official order No. 126, the Court adjudge and declare that such defendants are subject to the provisions of Order No. 27.

(8) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating any of the provisions of order No. 27, during the pendency of this suit.

(9) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding each of such defendants to pay all amounts now due and owing by it under the provisions of order No. 27, and commanding each of such defendants, its agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all of the provisions of said order No. 27 during the pendency of this suit.

183 (10) That, if the court shall determine that the defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is subject to order No. 27, the court issue a preliminary injunction commanding said defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., to file true and correct reports on the forms prescribed by the Market Administrator during the pendency of this suit.

(11) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a permanent injunction preventing and restraining such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns from violating the provisions of order No. 27.

(12) That, if the court shall determine that any of the defendants are subject to order No. 27, the court issue a permanent injunction commanding such defendants, their agents, officers, attorneys, employees, successors, and assigns to comply with all the provisions of order No. 27.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ET AL., PLAINTIFF

ROCK ROYAL CO-OPERATIVE INC., ET AL.

Findings of fact, conclusions of law and order directing judgment

Filed March 21, 1939

The issues of this fact raised by the answers of the defendants, Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Co-operative, Inc., and Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., having duly come on to be tried by the Court at a term held by the undersigned without a jury, in the City of Albany, Northern District of New York, on the 27th day of December, 1938, and said trial having continued until January 17, 1939, and the plaintiff, United States of America, having appeared by John S. L. Yost, Charles J. McCarthy, and Harold L. Schilz, Special Assistants to the Attorney General; E. O. Mather, Senior Attorney, Department of Agriculture; Ralph L. Emmons, United States Attorney; and the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, as Commissioner of Agriculture and markets, having appeared by Milo R. Kniffen and Louis S. Wallach, Esqs.; and the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League Co-operative Association, having appeared by Seward A. Miller, Edward Schoeneck, and Paul J. McCauley, Esqs., and the intervening plaintiff, Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., having appeared by Edmund F. Cooke and Richard Cooke, Esqs., and the defendants, Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Co-operative, Inc., and Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., having appeared by Willard R. Pratt, Esq.; the defendant, Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc.; having ap-185 peared by Charles W. Jenkins, Esq.; and Samuel Rubinton, Esq., and the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., having appeared by Messrs. Haskell & Foley, and Leonard Acker, Esq., and the allegations and proofs of the parties having been fully heard, and due deliberation having been had, I decide and find as follows:

Findings of fact

1. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the Laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Rock Royal, in the County of Delaware, State of New York, at which place, it operates a milk receiving station, receiving milk from 82 producers in August 1938.

2. The defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the Laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business in the City of Cortland, County of Cortland, and State of New York, operating milk receiving stations at Maybury Mills, Youngs Crossing, Kortright, and Sheds, N. Y., receiving milk from 484 producers in the month of August, 1938.

3. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Co-operative, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Schuyler Junction, County of Herkimer, and State of New York, operating a milk receiving station at Schuyler Junction, N. Y., and in August, 1938, received milk from 60 producers.

4. Defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., is a business
186 (proprietary) corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the stock corporation law of the State of New York, and having its principal place of business at Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, N. Y. Said corporation operates milk receiving stations at Solsville, Madison County, N. Y., Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, N. Y.; and Bridgewater, Oneida County, N. Y., receiving a minimum of more than 40,000 quarts of milk daily from milk producers. Said milk is all re-sold in the City of New York.

5. On June 7th, 1937, a Certificate of Incorporation of "Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc.," hereinafter referred to as "Bargaining Agency," was filed in the Office of the Secretary of State, of the State of New York, whereby there was created a membership corporation. Said Certificate provided in part:

"10. The membership of the corporation, shall be limited to co-operative associations organized under or subject to the provisions of the Cooperative Corporations Law of the New York State, or of similar laws of any other State, and organized and controlled by milk producers."

Shortly thereafter, the Dairymen's League and Sheffield Cooperative became members of said new corporation or Bargaining Agency. Other cooperatives, operating country receiving plants, were solicited to become members of the Bargaining Agency, and some did so. The officers, members, agents and servants of the Bargaining Agency, assisted in the formation of cooperative corporations among the milk producers delivering milk to plants owned by independent dealers, including defendant Jetter.

Said Bargaining Agency is the intervening plaintiff.

6. The Bargaining Agency, presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and to the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, a proposed marketing agree-
187 ment and Order, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and requested a hearing thereon under the authority of the Act, and under the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York. A true, correct and complete copy of such proposed marketing agreement and order, together with the notice of hearing thereon, is attached as Exhibit 21 to the stipulation of agreed facts, hereinafter referred to as "stipulation."

7. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 8b and 8c of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (Public No. 137, 75th Congress; 50 Stat. 246; 7 U. S. C. 601 et seq.) (hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary"), on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed Order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on an Order substantially identical with the aforesaid Order.

8. Pursuant to the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to Section 10 (i) of the Act, and Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, joint public hearings were conducted by Glen J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on 188 behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, the aforesaid public hearings were conducted at Albany, N. Y., on May 16, 1938; at Malone, N. Y., on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, N. Y., on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, N. Y., on May 19, 1938; and at New York, N. Y., on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, N. Y., on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, N. Y., on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid, all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed Order. The said hearings were attended by producers, representatives of producers, handlers and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area. All of the defendants knew of said hearings, but none of the defendants appeared or were represented at any hearing.

9. On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary, pursuant to the provisions of Section 8c of the Act, made a finding and proclaimed that, as to milk produced for sale in the marketing area, the purchasing power of such milk during the base period, August 1909 to July 1914, could not be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture, but that the purchasing power of such milk could be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture for that portion of the post-war period between August 1921 and July 1929, inclusive.

10. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings, and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of the proposed Order (which notice was published in the Federal Register on July 23, 1938), the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said Order con-
189 taining the terms and conditions held by the Secretary to be authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner, as, and made applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said order also contains the findings by the Secretary, required by the applicable provisions of the Act, to be made by him.

11. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to the findings and provisions, of any of them, of the proposed Order, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, on August 5, 1938, made the findings required by Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, and issued proposed Official Order No. 126 which Order is substantially identical with Order No. 27 and contains the terms and conditions held by the Commissioner to be authorized by the applicable provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York and no others.

12. On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary tentatively approved a marketing agreement regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, and on or about August 6, 1938, delivered copies thereof to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the Order, but prior to the issuance of said Order, handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said Order, which was marketed within the marketing area, failed or refused to sign said marketing agreement.

13. Under authority of the provisions of Section 8c (19) of the Act, Secretary conducted a referendum of producers in order to assist him in determining whether the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who,

during the month of May 1938 (said month having, on the 190 25th day of July 1938, been determined by the Secretary to be a representative period), were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area. The referendum was held at the times and places set forth in a schedule of polling places issued by the Department of Agriculture prior to said referendum.

14. After conducting said referendum and after the refusal or failure of handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said Order, which was marketed within the marketing area to sign the tentatively approved marketing agreement relating to milk, the Secretary on the 24th day of August, 1938, made a determination, which determination was approved by the President:

(a) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such marketing agreement, tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

(b) That the issuance of the Order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

(c) That the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May, 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area, and who voted in the above-mentioned referendum.

Said findings and determination were published by the Secretary in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit II to stipulation.

15. On August 25, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, found, after conducting a poll, that the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least 75 per cent of 191 the producers of milk produced in the production area for the marketing area, and declared Official Order No. 126 to be effective on September 1, 1938. Said Order has not been terminated.

16. On August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an Order which was published in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, said Order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938. Order No. 27 has not been terminated.

Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are hereinafter referred to as the "Order."

17. The Order established prices to be paid for milk according to its utilization. Milk for fluid consumption, known as Class I, is fixed arbitrarily, depending upon the market price of butter. Class 2A milk, utilized in the manufacture of cream for fluid consumption, is likewise arbitrarily fixed. Under such provisions, the price for fluid milk, has been since September 1, 1938, $2.45 per cwt.

Prices for milk manufactured into various milk products are the assumed market values thereof, based on market prices of the products into which said milk is manufactured, and which products are sold in country-wide competition. These prices are determined monthly by the Administrator in accordance with the formulas therefor contained in the Order.

18. The Metropolitan Marketing Area, as defined by the Order, includes the City of New York, and territory adjacent thereto, wholly within the territorial boundaries of the State of New York.

19. Milk dealers, licensed as such, under the provisions of Sections 253 and 257 of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, alone, have the right to engage in the purchase and sale of milk in said Marketing Area, and the term "milk dealer" includes

"Any person who purchases or handles or sells milk, including * * * cooperative corporations and unincorporated cooperative associations."

192 A "dealer" who handles milk received at an approved plant is a handler within the meaning of the Order. All of the defendants are handlers as defined in the Order.

20. All handlers purchasing milk in the production area, are required to report to the Market Administrator monthly, a statement of the amounts of milk purchased by such handler, and the utilization thereof, Article V, Section 3. Based on the total reports, the Administrator computes the total value of the milk of such handler, based on the prices provided for in the Order, Article VI, Sec. 1. The result of such computation, is the handler's "net pool obligation."

21. By the provisions of Article VI, Section 2, the Administrator computes from all reports of all handlers, a so-called "uniform price," which is deemed to be the average price payable to producers for milk for such month, subject to certain differentials which are hereinafter referred to. Such computation is made after subtracting certain special payments to cooperatives, and to proprietary handlers, under the provisions of Article VII, Sections 5 and 6.

22. By the provisions of Article VII, Section 1, on or before the 25th day of each month, "each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers," is required to pay to each producer, the uniform price for all milk delivered by producers during the preceding month, and which was sold in the marketing area.

23. Cooperative associations, which are handlers, are not required to make payment for similar milk at the uniform price, or at any stated price.

24. All handlers are required by the provisions of Article VII, Section 8, on or before the 18th day of each month, to pay to the Market Administrator, for the Producer Settlement Fund "the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding 193 month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pool milk of such handler, by the uniform price." Applied to fluid milk, under this provision, each handler is required to pay to the Producer Settlement Fund, for all milk so utilized, the difference between $2.45 per cwt. and the uniform price, for all Class I milk.

25. Handlers selling milk received from producers in the production area, but marketed outside of the marketing area, are under no requirement to pay the uniform price for such milk, nor do they pay into the Producer Settlement Fund for the difference between the uniform price and the actual market value of such milk, or otherwise. Such handlers are permitted to blend prices paid or purported to have been paid for such milk sold in other markets, with the uniform price announced by the Administrator for milk sold in the area, thereby reducing the actual price paid by such handlers, for milk sold in the Metropolitan Area, in competition with milk sold by the defendants.

The construction placed upon said provisions of Order No. 27 by the Secretary, is set forth in a pamphlet issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, Dairy Section, in October 1938, on the cover of which is printed "Market Administrator, New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, 95 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y." Page 14 of said pamphlet states:

"Uniform Pool Prices for Producers

"Handlers are required to pay the uniform pool, or blended price, calculated by the Market Administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class I milk outside of the Marketing Area. In such instance, the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable. For the remainder of each producer's milk, the handler may pay such prices as he sees fit, but is required to furnish the producer with a statement of the percentage of the producer's milk paid for the uniform price."

194 Thus, the handler may multiply the total pounds of milk sold by it in the area by the uniform price; multiply the total pounds of milk sold in other markets and which is called "unpriced milk," by "such prices as it sees fit;" add the totals, and divide by the total pounds of milk, to obtain the average of "blended" price paid producers for all milk. If the price figured by the handler for unpriced milk, is lower than its actual market value, the handler, by blending, is thereby permitted to pay producers for all milk at less than the Order price, and less than the actual value thereof.

26. While cooperative corporations are exempted from any requirement to pay either the uniform price to its producers, or any stated proportion thereof, and are permitted to blend prices of milk received in the production area in accordance with their sales of portions thereof in the marketing area, and portions in other markets, in addition, said cooperatives are, by the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c (5) (F), U. S. Code, permitted to "blend" any prices actually paid, with prices obtained or charged for unpriced milk produced outside of the production area.

27. The principal health authority in the Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, as described by the Order, is the Department of Health of the City of New York, which inspects country receiving plants, farms, dairies and other facilities of milk producers, as well as bottling and distributing facilities covering all milk sold within the City of New York.

Some of the milk receiving stations in the production area which are approved by the Department of Health of the City of New York, are also approved by the Health authorities of the City of Newark, State of New Jersey, and by the State of New Jersey for delivery to Newark and other cities and communities in said State.

195 28. The Official records of the Department of Health of the City of New York, as of August 1938, disclosed that there were 54,111 milk producers whose dairies had been inspected and approved for the production of Grade B milk for shipment to and sale in the City of New York; 6,109 milk producers, whose dairies had been approved for the production of Grade A milk for shipment to, and sale in the City of New York, making in all 60,220 milk producers. Said producers were located in the States of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Vermont, herein referred to as the "production area." Included therein, are the producers delivering to defendant's plants.

29. Approximately 420 country receiving plants have been approved for the receiving and shipping of Grade B milk, and approximately 86 milk receiving plants have been approved for receiving and shipping Grade A milk, making a total of approximately 506 milk receiving stations in all, in said production area. Included therein, are defendants' receiving stations.

30. At all times hereinafter mentioned, defendant Jetter Dairy Company, hereinafter referred to as "Jetter," was a competitor of, and has sold milk in its business, in competition with dealers operating the country milk receiving stations in the New York Milk Shed above referred to, and who shipped milk received at said stations to the Metropolitan Area and sold the same in competition with milk sold by said defendant. The defendants Rock Royal Cooperative, and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, at all the times herein mentioned, have been and now are, selling milk to independent dealers for resale in competition with milk received at the country plants described in the next preceding paragraph.

a. The Borden Company and various corporations subsidiary thereto hereinafter referred to as "Bordens."

b. Various subsidiaries of National Dairy Products Corporation, hereinafter referred to as "National Dairy."

c. Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "Dairymen's League."

d. Other dealers, known in the industry as "independent dealers." Defendant Jetter is an independent dealer.

The defendant Jetter, the dealers purchasing the milk supply of the defendants Rock Royal and Schuyler Junction, and said competitors above enumerated, insofar as they are engaged in the sale of milk for fluid consumption in the City of New York are all "milk dealers" as defined by Section 253 of the New York Agriculture and Markets Law, and are all "handlers" as defined by Article I, Subdivision 6 of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

32. Defendant Jetter, customers of defendants Rock Royal and Schuyler Junction, and their competitors, are also known in the industry as distributors. The Dairymen's League occupies a dual capacity as a cooperative agent of producers and as a distributor. The Dairymen's League, as a distributor, sells milk in competition with the defendant Jetter and other distributors, including distributors purchasing their supplies from it, and is a factor in the price which defendant Jetter and their competing dealers can demand and procure for fluid milk.

33. Dairymen's League was in August 1938 operating 109 approved milk receiving plants in the New York Milk Shed, receiving milk from 11,391 producers.

34. The records of the Department of Health of the City of New York, show that as of August 1938 Bordens operated 65 approved milk receiving stations, receiving milk from 8,404 producers.
197 All of said producers were and are members of Dairymen's League; milk of said producers is delivered to Bordens and payment therefor, is made by Bordens to said Dairymen's League, which in turn pays said producers, and also pays producers delivering milk to its own plants.

35. The number of approved producers included in Dairymen's League membership was in August 1938 upwards of 19,500.

Reports to the Market Administrator, show that total utilization of milk in the marketing area by all handlers, was as follows:

	For month	Per day
	Pounds	Pounds
September	203, 478, 066	6, 782, 602
October	211, 945, 396	6, 836, 980

36. The Dairymen's League, which has receiving stations approved for the Metropolitan Area, and also for the State of New Jersey, and various localities therein, reported a total utilization of milk in Class I in the marketing area, as follows (Exhibits 11–12–54):

	Total for month	Total per day

37. The Milk Control Board of the State of New Jersey, fixed a base price of $2.76 per cwt. to producers for 3.5 milk F. O. B.
198 country milk plants, which price was in effect in New Jersey from September 1st and still continues.

Said Milk Control Board of the State of New Jersey fixed the wholesale price from dealers to stores, at 11¢ per quart of milk bottled in glass in two rural districts, and at 12¢ per quart of milk in glass from dealers to stores in the three more heavily populated districts in the State, and fixed a minimum price to consumers out of stores in the two rural districts, of 12¢ per quart, and in the three heavily populated districts, of 13¢ per quart.

No resale prices are fixed in the State of New York, either from dealers to stores, or stores to consumers.

The fair market value of "unpriced" Class 1 milk produced in the production area and sold by handlers in New Jersey (based on producers and resale prices fixed by Control Board, in September, October, and November 1938, was $2.76 per cwt.

38. The uniform price for 3.5 milk in the 200 milk zone fixed by the Administrator, was as follows: September, $1.87; October, $1.91; November, $2.10.

The Dairymen's League paid its producers a base price for 3.5 milk in the 200 mile zone, in cash and certificates of indebtedness (considered as cash), as follows: September, $1.75 per cwt.; October, $1.81 per cwt.; November, $2.01 per cwt.

The difference between the value of Class 1 milk sold by the Dairymen's League in New Jersey (as fixed by the New Jersey Control Board), and the prices paid for the same to producers per cwt., was as follows: September, $1.01 per cwt.; October, 95¢ per cwt.; and November, 75¢ per cwt.

39. The amount by which the price actually paid for Class 1 milk sold in the marketing area was reduced by "blending" proceeds of New Jersey milk with proceeds of New York milk, as applied generally to the Dairymen's League, was as follows:

	Total volume sold in New Jersey	Difference between New Jersey price and price paid producers
pt.	10,208,500	$103,105
t.	10,457,153	99,342
v.	10,143,275	76,074

The Dairymen's League, as a distributor, was engaged only in the holesale or dealer-to-store and dealer-to-institutions trade. Total les reported by the Dairymen's League of Class 1 milk sold in the arketing area, included its own wholesale business and amounts of lass 1 milk furnished to the Borden Company, delivered to its wn stations and milk sold to other distributors. The following is statement of the total amounts of milk utilized by the League in s own wholesale trade; the total amount of milk sold by it in lass 1, including amounts handled by Bordens, other dealers, and e League in its own distributing business, and a statement by which e Class 1 price would be reduced by applying the difference beween the actual value of milk sold in New Jersey and the total tual price paid therefor to producers by the League:

42. The Dairymen's League was paid by the Administrator under Article VII, Section 6 (1) for receiving milk which was moved to other plants for manufacture, 23¢ per cwt. plus certain mileage charges for transportation. These figures, broken down, are as follows:

	Total lbs. of milk	Total amount paid	Total allowance for receiving milk

Summarizing the total competitive advantage to the Dairymen's League from sales in New Jersey, payments under Article VII, Sections 5 and 6, Producer Settlement Fund, and by payment to producers for milk at less than the uniform price, the Dairymen's League had the following competitive advantages, as shown by the preceding tables:

45. Sheffield Farms Company, a subsidiary of National Dairy, in September utilized 40,083,075 pounds of Class 1 milk in New York State, and 6,426,443 pounds of milk in New Jersey, as well as milk from other markets. For out-of-market milk, on September 24, 1938, the Company negotiated with its producers to pay the uniform price in full payment for such out-of-market milk. The base price paid by Sheffield Farms was accordingly $1.87, or 89¢ per cwt. less the price fixed by the New Jersey Control Board. This amounted to $57,191.96. Applied to Class 1 milk used in the area (40,083,075 pounds), this amounted to $.1427 per cwt. on said milk, and the Class I price paid by the Sheffield Farms Company was thereby reduced in that amount. The Sheffield Company received payments under Article VII, Section 6, from the Producer Settlement Fund for market service payments, $38,224.57, which, when applied to Class 1 milk, amounted to $.0936 per cwt., and was equivalent to a discount 203 thereon. Combining the two figures, the Sheffield Company has a competitive advantage of $.2363 arising out of said two items for September milk.

In October the Sheffield Company sold 6,737,848 pounds of milk in New Jersey, for which it paid $1.88 per cwt. The difference between the New Jersey Control price of $2.76 and said price was 88¢, and totalled $59,292.64. The Sheffield Company paid its producers for all milk used in the area, at a base price of $1.87 per cwt., or 4¢ under the uniform price, on 67,306,590 pounds of milk, amounting to $25,922.63. The Company also received a market-service payment of $26,430.96. The three concessions aggregate $91,656.23, which, when applied to 43,662,117 pounds of Class 1 milk, amounted to a concession or reduction of $.2099 per cwt.

46. No evidence was received showing the actual operations of the Borden Company, either quantity or utilization of milk purchased through the Dairymen's League, nor was any evidence received as to quantity of milk purchased by Sheffield Farms Company from cooperatives, or the prices paid by either Bordens or Sheffields for milk purchased from cooperative sources.

47. By the provisions of the Order, proprietary handlers are required to pay producers the minimum prices stated therein and are obliged to pay their own plant receiving costs. Dealers buying from cooperatives are required by the Order to pay cooperatives only the minimum prices without any necessity upon such handlers to pay, or upon such cooperatives to charge, any sum as a handling charge to be applied on the cost of operating the milk-receiving station.

48. The average daily fluid shipments of milk to New York City for the months of August and September 1938 were approximately as follows:

	Quarts
By rail, in tank cars	1,380,000
By rail, in 40-quart cans	140,000
By automobile tank trucks	1,560,000

204 Fluid milk shipments to New York are approximately 50% by rail and 50% by tank truck.

The allowances for trucking milk which are provided in Article VII, Section 6, Sub-section 1 of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, represent the approximate cost of shipping milk by tank trucks.

The standard rate, approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, for shipments of milk by rail in tank cars from points 201–210

miles from New York City, is 2.7 cents per gallon equivalent to 31.2 cents per hundredweight. The freight differentials in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are approximate to the nearest half-cent of the differences per hundredweight between this standard tank car rate for the 201–210 mile zone and such rate for each other ten-mile zone. These standard tank car rates are 70% of the standard rate for the shipment of milk in 40-quart cans in less than carload lots. Truck competitive rates have been established at certain points which are somewhat lower than the approved standard tank car rates for those points.

Where shipment is made by rail in tank cars or in cans to a city plant not on railroad tracks, there is an additional cost for transportation between the rail terminal and the city plant. Where shipment by tank truck is from country receiving plants to city plants, the tank truck delivers the milk to the city plant and the trucker's charge or truck operating cost covers such delivery to the city plant.

The truck rates for the first 25 miles are 9¢ per cwt., and beyond that zone, $\frac{1}{10}$ of 1¢ per cwt. for each additional mile, amounting to 1¢ for each 10 miles.

49. Establishment of freight differentials was designed to make the base delivered cost of all milk to New York City the same.

205 Milk delivered to New York by truck, in the various zones, costs the handler, according to zones, the actual freight, plus or minus freight differentials, according to whether the point of origin is less or more than 200 miles. Without reducing the schedules to each 10-mile unit, the net freight cost, after applying the differentials, in various typical zones, is as follows:

0-mile	.115	+.105	.225
0-mile	.165	+.07	.235
0-mile	.215	+.035	.25
0-mile	.265	.00	.265
0-mile	.305	−.02	.285
0-mile	.315	−.02	.295
0-mile	.365	−.045	.32
0-mile	.415	−.08	.335
0-mile	.465	−.09	.375
0-mile	.515	−.115	.40
0-mile	.565	−.14	.425

The Jetter Dairy Company, being in the 231–240 mile zone (actually 250 miles by highway), its total freight cost is 6½¢ more per cwt. than milk in the 25-mile zone. It is also higher than in any intermediate zone. Defendant, Schuyler Junction Cooperative's plant is at Schuyler Junction, N. Y., in the same zone; the plant of defendant, Rock Royal Cooperative is in the 176–180 mile zone, and the plants of the defendant Central Cooperative are principally beyond the 200-mile zone, so that the total delivered cost of said milk is greater than the delivered cost of upwards of —% of all milk sold in the area.

Milk by volume within various zones is as follows:

Miles from New York	Percent

50. By the provisions of Article VI, Section 8, handlers receiving milk in 18 counties therein enumerated, in making return to the Administrator, are permitted to deduct 20¢ per cwt. for all net pool milk received from producers at plants in said counties. Producers in said counties are paid 20¢ per cwt. more for all milk, than producers in other localities, including all producers delivering to the several defendants herein.

Accordingly, the price received by producers delivering to the three Cooperative defendants, is reduced by the increased amount of payments to producers in said 18 preferred counties, and in effect, moneys paid by handlers for milk of said defendant cooperatives, are in part expropriated to make such preferential payment to producers in the counties receiving such preferential payments.

51. In effect, the uniform price return directed to be paid to producers delivering to the Jetter Dairy Company, is reduced by payment to producers in the 18 preferential counties, and moneys of said producers delivering to defendant Jetter, and other proprietary handlers, ouside of said preferred counties, are expropriated to make payment to producers therein of payment of 20¢ per cwt. in excess of the uniform price.

52. All producers do not receive the same base price for milk. By the terms of the Order, and by its application in practice, there is a differentiation between producers, in payments made as follows:

a. Cooperative corporations are not required to pay the uniform price.

207 b. Cooperative handlers, which are also distributors, may sell milk direct to storekeepers and consumers at less than prices fixed by the Order, plus processing and delivery charges, and reduce payments to producers, to the extent of such underselling.

c. Cooperative corporations may charge back to their producers losses in operations as milk distributors whereas proprietary handlers cannot do so.

d. Producers in the 18 counties enumerated in Article VII, Section 8, receive 20¢ per cwt., preferential payment, on all their milk.

e. Payment to producers outside of the 18 counties above referred to, is reduced below the true uniform or average price for all milk, by the amounts deducted from them to make up the 20¢ plus paid to producers in said 18 counties.

f. Prices paid to producers delivering to handlers, whether cooperative or proprietary, which sell fluid milk in the Metropolitan Area, and also in the State of New Jersey and other markets, are paid less than the actual value of milk delivered by them, by the process of "blending" arbitrary prices for milk sold outside of the market, which bear no true relations to the actual value thereof, with prices charged for milk sold in the area.

g. Prices received by all producers delivering to either proprietary or cooperative handlers which do not receive the cooperative payments provided for by Article VII, Section 5 of the Order (the greater part of which is paid to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association), are reduced by the amounts deducted from the uniform price, and paid from the Producer Settlement Fund to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, and such other cooperatives as receive such payments.

53. Grade B milk sold for fluid consumption in the Metropolitan Area, brings the same price, regardless of butterfat content.

54. Handlers receiving milk containing more than 3.5 butterfat content are at a disadvantage in finding markets, by reason of the extra price for each point of butterfat in excess of 3.5 required to be paid to producers by the provisions of Article VII, Section 3 of the Order. Said handlers are, in effect, required to pay a greater base price for said milk by utilization, than is paid by handlers purchasing lower testing milk, and must either sell at a loss or lose their customers.

208 55. Handlers whose milk receiving stations are beyond the nearby freight zones, are at a disadvantage in selling milk, in that the base price of said milk delivered in New York, is increasingly high, as the handlers' receiving stations are at increasing distances from New York.

56. By the terms and application of the Order, there is a differentiation between handlers who sell milk at wholesale and retail in the marketing area, and the prices required to be paid by said handlers for fluid milk, in the following particulars:

a. Cooperative handlers, who are also distributors, are under no requirement to pay any stated price for milk sold to stores and consumers.

b. The price accounted by cooperative handlers to the Producer Settlement Fund, is reduced by payments to them out of said Fund, pursuant to Article VII, Section 5.

c. The large handlers, both cooperative and proprietary, being principally National Dairy subsidiaries, Borden's and subsidiaries, Dairymen's League and several smaller companies, including Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., and the several companies operated by Aaron J. Rubenfeld, which are engaged in manufacturing milk into milk products, receive so-called "market service payments" under Article VII, Section 6, which are not and cannot be received by small handlers, who combine fluid milk operations with manufacturing on a small scale in their own plants, thereby, in effect, substantially reducing the prices paid by such large handlers for milk utilized in fluid form.

d. Proprietary handlers purchasing direct from producers, are obliged to pay for the cost of maintenance and operation of milk receiving stations, and the cost of receiving milk, whereas handlers purchasing from cooperative associations, are required to pay only the base price for such milk. Such receiving station or plant handling costs are from 15¢ to 30¢ per cwt.

e. By the terms and application of the Order, the same large handlers referred to in the next preceding paragraph, both proprietary and cooperative, in making payment for all milk purchased in the production area, are permitted to pay a blended price, which price is computed upon the prices fixed in the Order for milk sold in the marketing area, and with arbitrary prices fixed by such handlers as they see fit, for milk sold outside of the area, which milk is known as "unpriced milk," thereby, in effect, reducing the price paid by such handlers for fluid milk sold in the marketing area.

209 None of the defendants are engaged in the manufacture of milk products. None of said defendants are engaged in marketing milk outside of the marketing area.

f. National Dairy subsidiaries, including Sheffield Farms and the Borden Company, purchase milk from cooperatives. The Dairymen's League, which is also a distributor, is a cooperative. Said companies, by the reports filed with the Administrator, handle more than 50% of the fluid milk sold in the area, and the greater part of milk sold out of the area.

g. Handlers purchasing milk in areas producing milk of high butterfat content, pay a higher price for milk utilized in fluid form than handlers purchasing milk of less butterfat content, although the resale price of such milk in New York City, is neither greater nor lesser by reason of butterfat content.

h. Handlers purchasing milk beyond the 25-mile zone, in each succeeding zone, pay a greater delivered cost for milk delivered to the marketing area, for the reason that the freight differentials established by the provisions of Article IV, Section 3, are not comparable to the actual difference in freight costs, said unfavorable difference increasing from ½¢ per cwt. in the 50-mile zone, to 22½¢ per cwt. in the 500-mile zone.

1. Defendant Rock Royal's plant is in the 176–180-mile zone; the plants of the defendant Jetter and Schuyler Junction Cooperative are in the 231–240-mile zone, and the several plants of the defendant Central Cooperative, are beyond the 200-mile zone.

57. The Market Administrator has no facilities for checking the actual disposition of milk reported by various handlers, nor for checking whether cream withdrawn from storage, is cream which was already in storage, or is cream delivered to the storage plant and immediately withdrawn. The size and complicated nature of utilization of milk by the large companies, their plant-to-plant transactions within their own business, and their in-market and out-of-market sales, make it impractical for the Administrator to check the accuracy of reported utilization, and disposition except from the books of such large handlers.

58. In the fierce competition for fluid milk business in the Metropolitan Area, hereinafter referred to, there is a strong incentive 210 to manipulate milk between plants and in and out of the market by the large companies, having facilities so to do, for the purpose of obtaining a competitive advantage. Such large companies have made full use of such competitive advantage in application of the Order to their businesses.

59. Prices fixed by the Administrator pursuant to the formulas contained in the Order, for approved milk utilized in the manufacture of cheese for the months of September and October 1938, were less than the prices paid by cheese factories purchasing unapproved milk, which was not subject to regulation of any health authority, to the extent of 20¢ per cwt. The cost of producing unapproved milk is less than the cost of producing approved milk. Bordens, National Dairy, and the League were able to, and did purchase approved milk for such cheese porposes, since they are also engaged in such business, and thereby enjoy discriminatory advantage.

60. The Dairymen's League News, for May 17, 1938, Exhibit 24 in evidence, states "Today, More than half of all milk sold in the Metropolitan district, is handled through stores."

The average minimum delivered cost per quart of fluid milk delivered to stores in New York City, by handlers, based on the prices fixed in the Order, has been since September 1st 1938, and now is, ¼¢ per quart.

61. On September 1, 1938, a majority of the handlers selling Grade milk in the dealer-to-store trade, raised the price of such milk to ¼¢ per quart.

62. On September 1, 1938, the Jetter Dairy Company had been selling to one Weintraub, 30 cases of milk daily, at 9¾¢ per quart. On September 4, 1938, intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League solicited said account, and by selling at 9¢ per quart, acquired 10 cases of said trade. Gold Medal Farms, Inc., by same price cutting, as the League, on same day also acquired 10 cases of said trade.
1 In order to retain the balance of 10 cases of such trade, Jetter Dairy Company was compelled to and did reduce its price to 9¢ per quart on September 5, 1938.

63. Within two weeks after September 1st, milk was being sold generally in the dealer-to-store trade in the City of New York at from 8¢ to 9¢ per quart. The Sheffield Farms Company, in order to capture the trade of Herman Lavender, furnished said Lavender milk at 9¾¢ per quart; rebated to said Lavender ¾¢ per quart on purchases, and in addition thereto, delivered 13 quarts per case, one extra quart of milk further reducing the price ¾¢ per quart, making the net cost to said Lavender, 8¼¢ per quart.

The Sheffield Company sold milk to one Rose Paley; gave her 35 cases of milk free, in order to induce her to buy "Breakstone milk." Prior to that time, the Dairymen's League had given the same with 35 cases of free milk to procure her to buy Dairymen's League milk. The Grandview Dairy Company refused to give Mrs. Paley any free milk, and she discontinued buying from them, obtaining her requirements from Sheffields and Dairymen's League, who made the concessions above referred to. Sheffields billed milk to Mrs. Paley at 9¾¢ per quart, collected that amount, and rebated to her in cash at the rate of ¾¢ per quart. The Dairymen's League charged her 9¢ per quart.

64. The practices above referred to were general throughout the milk industry, and the capture of trade by price cutting is known as "chiseling."

65. Certain producer dealers, with large number of cows, are not subject to the Order. The Balsam Dairy Company, selling milk in Brooklyn, sold milk to Israel Hock, a storekeeper, at 8½¢ per quart in September 1938.

66. It is common practice in the marketing area for storekeepers to buy milk from several dealers, varying the quantities pur-212 chased from each in accordance with the price concessions, free milk, or other concessions, which such storekeepers can obtain from one dealer as against another.

67. From September 1st, 1938, to January 1st, 1939, the Jetter Dairy Company lost 240 cases of daily trade to competitors by reason of concessions. It recaptured upwards of 40 cases of this trade, but in doing so was obliged to give in free milk, cream, and cash, several hundreds of dollars. In addition, said defendant sustained a loss on each quart of milk sold by it through the Jetter Dairy Company or the Triboro Milk & Cream Co., which sells milk received from producers delivering to the Jetter Dairy Company. In order to stop further losses of trade captured by competitors who undersold the Jetter Dairy Company and Triboro Milk & Cream Company, the said defendant was obliged to reduce the price of milk charged to all customers to prices ranging from 8¢ to 9¢ per quart, in order to meet such competition. The principal stockholders of Jetter Dairy Company and Triboro Milk & Cream Co. are identical.

68. The Order contains no provision prohibiting unfair methods of competition and unfair trade practices, as permitted by Title 7, Section 608c (7) (A).

69. Intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League is a member of a so-called "Farm Conference Board," being the only member of the Board engaged in the purchase and sale of milk. Said Farm Conference Board proposed, and the Dairymen's League actively sponsored and supported in the New York State Legislature, a proposed Act known as the "Rogers-Allen Bill," which was enacted as Chapter 383 of the 1937 Laws of the State of New York. Pursuant to the provisions or purported provisions of said Act, hereinafter referred to as the "Rogers-Allen Law," the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, was formed. Several directors of the Dairymen's League acted as incorporators of said corporation, and were active in the creation and organization thereof.

213 70. Following incorporation of the Bargaining Agency, its officers, directors, and employees procured producers selling milk to proprietary handlers, to form many cooperative corporations for the purpose of joining the Bargaining Agency. Cooperatives were formed around the three plants operated by the defendant Jetter; which were known as the Solsville Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc.; the Oriskany Falls Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc., and the Bridgewater Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc. Only the Bridgewater Cooperative joined the Bargaining Agency. The Bargaining Agency, in some instances, advanced the fees for filing certificates of incorporation.

71. In July 1937, E. M. Harmon addressed a meeting of the Bargaining Agency with regard to "government aid" in a marketing program. On October 25, 1937, a committee of attorneys was appointed by the Bargaining Agency to prepare a surplus program or plan. In November 1937, Allan Miller, attorney for the Dairymen's League, presented to said committee, a proposed milk-marketing agreement. E. M. Harmon, employee of the Dairy Section of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, spent three days monthly commencing with November 1937, with representatives of the Bargaining Agency.

Conferences continued through January and February 1938, and February 20, 1938, a directors' meeting of the Bargaining Agency was held in Syracuse, N. Y., in which the program, which ended in the adoption of the Federal and State marketing orders, was formally launched. An account thereof is contained in Exhibit 23–C to the stipulation in evidence, which quotes Edmunde F. Cooke, counsel for the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency in this action, as saying, "in the long run, the Producers' Bargaining Agency will prove to the milk industry of the State that their program is the right one."

In the Market News issued by the Bargaining Agency for April 1938, reference was made to said Marketing Order program. Said news stated, "just as soon as this plan has met the approval of the Federal Officials, he will present it to our readers complete, and Chairman Rolfe, with the assistance of Executive Secretary Baldwin and fieldman, have arranged many meetings among the members, in which the plan will be discussed in detail."

72. Thereafter, the Bargaining Agency presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and to the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, the proposed marketing order, referred to in the 6th Finding of Fact herein. The referendum described in Finding No. 13 hereof, was then held.

73. Prior to the referendum, there were sent to each producer as to whom available information indicated that he might be eligible to vote in said referendum (a) a copy of the Order as issued August 1938, by the Secretary; (b) a schedule of polling places (Exhibit to stipulation); (c) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "Questions and Answers on the Federal-State Milk Program for New York" (a copy of which pamphlet is Exhibit 8 to stipulation); and (d) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "New York Milk, Explanation of the Federal-State Marketing Plan Contained in Order No. 27" (a copy of which pamphlet is Exhibit 9 to stipulation). Approximately 70,000 copies of the said Order, the said schedule of polling places, and the said pamphlets were sent through Federal-State Agencies to such producers. A copy of letter accompanying such material sent to producers in New York State is Exhibit 10 to stipulation.

74. Prior to said referendum and poll, the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, in furtherance of their scheme, carried on an elaborate campaign of false and misleading propaganda through the medium of newspapers, radio speeches, letters, pamphlets, and otherwise, calculated to influence milk producers entitled to vote therein, or whose votes were entitled to be cast on their behalf by cooperatives.

215 On April 29, 1938, the Secretary signed a notice of hearing on the proposed Marketing Order, and published said notice to the producers in the New York Milk Shed, accompanied by a proposed Order, stating however:

"The provisions proposed by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., are set forth below as possible provisions of a marketing agreement and of an order. Their publication in this form is for the convenience of interested parties and is not to be considered as in any way signifying their approval by the Secretary of Agriculture."

Hearings on the proposed Federal and State Orders were held jointly thereafter. Coincident therewith, and on or about April 28, 1938, the Bargaining Agency, issued a 24-page booklet, on the cover of which was contained the following statement: "Mr. Dairyman * * * Save this Booklet. The Plan it Explains May Save your Farm." Said booklet contained statements which were grossly untrue, and in particular stated on page 1:

"Principles Upon Which the Order Is Based

"The fundamental requirements of the industry which this Order seeks to establish are five in number, viz.:

"1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.

"2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid market.

* * * * * * *

ently believed that the present Order can successfully withstand any ssaults upon its legality."

Prior to the vote on said proposed orders, widespread, innumerble statements and representations were made to all producers in the rea, by both the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, their nembers, agents, servants, and affiliates, to the effect that all handlers ould be required to pay the uniform price to all producers, and that no handler had a competitive advantage over the other. Specifically, as an example, the Dairymen's League News, the official newspaper of the Dairymen's League on August 16, 1938, contained the following statements on page 5:

"The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool, or blended rice, calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during month unless the handler has received milk and old it as Class 1 milk outside of the marketing area. In such an nstance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each roducer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the roportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable.

* * * * * * *

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk old in the marketing area, and assures for that milk payments to ll producers at a uniform rate except for the transportation and ther differentials provided."

Thereafter, the Department of Agriculture in August, 1938, issued printed pamphlet under the seal of the Department, stating on ages 12 and 13:

"The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool, or blended rice, calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk nd sold it as class 1 milk outside of the marketing area.

* * * * * * *

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk old in the marketing area, and for that milk assures payments to ll producers at a uniform rate except for the transportation and ther differentials provided."

The foregoing statements were and are untrue. Identical provisions of Article 1 of said Orders, provide:

"5. 'Producer' means any person who produces milk which is delivered to a handler at a plant which is approved by any health uthority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

"6. 'Handler' means any person who engages in the handling of ilk, or cream therefrom, which was received at a plant approved y any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the arketing area.

217 "This definition shall be deemed to include a cooperative association of producers with respect to any milk received from producers at any plant operated by such association or with respect to any milk which it causes to be delivered from producers to any other handler for the account of such association and for which such association collects payment."

The only provision in said Orders directing payment to producers is as follows:

"Section 1. Time of Payment.—On or before the 25th day of each month, each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers shall make payment to each producer for all milk delivered by such producer at any plant during the preceding month at not less than the uniform price, subject to differentials set forth in sections 2 and 3 of this article."

218 75. Said representations as to the text and effect of said proposed marketing Order, were untrue. There was no provision requiring payment of a uniform price to all producers, or any requirement that any stated price or any price bearing relation to the prices by the Order, be paid to producers of cooperatives including the Dairymen's League. By reason of the differentiation between various producers as to locality, and otherwise, stated in Finding No. 52 herein, there was no general equality of payments to producers.

76. The statement to the effect that all handlers pay the same cost for milk in the marketing area, was also untrue for the reasons stated in paragraphs 54 through 58, inclusive.

77. Many of the producers who voted in the referendum and poll, expressed only their favor or disfavor with regard to a marketing order which assured equal treatment and equal payments to all producers, and an equal price to be paid for milk by all handlers.

78. The results of the aforesaid referendum were as follows: 45,644 votes cast, of which 7,017 were rejected as invalid. Of the 38,627 votes counted as valid, 33,663 votes, or 87.1 percent were in favor of the issuance of the Order, and 4,964 votes, or 12.9 percent were opposed thereto. Of the 7,017 votes which were rejected, 6,547 votes were rejected either because the voters were members of cooperative associations which had cast ballots for all of their members, or because the voters were not qualified to vote, not having delivered milk to an approved plant during the month of May 1938. Of the votes rejected for this reason, 5,110 votes were in favor of the issuance of the Order, and 1,437 votes were opposed thereto. 470 votes were rejected because the voter had failed to mark his ballot either for or against the Order, or because it was not possible to determine whether the ballot was marked for or against the Order.

79. The finding that the Order "was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who * * * voted in the above-mentioned referendum," was unsupported by any substantial evidence, and said referendum determined only that many of the 219 producers voting therein "favored an Order which required equal payments to all producers, and payment of the same price for milk by all handlers." The inference to be drawn from such vote, was that such producers did not favor or approve an Order which exempted large handlers from payment of the uniform price to their producers, and which did not require equal prices to be paid by all handlers, but on the contrary, permitted certain large handlers to pay reduced prices for their milk supply.

80. The Dairymen's League actively sponsored the proposed Federal and State Marketing Orders, and, as disclosed by the hearing, Exhibit A-3 to the stipulation, by its attorneys, attended all hearings, examined various witnesses and introduced elaborately prepared evidence in book form. The Dairymen's League News, its official organ, actively advocated adoption of the Order and attacked persons, newspapers and others, who were either actually against adoption of the Order or who were claimed to be against the same.

81. The Bargaining Agency, of which the Dairymen's League was the largest member, expended between December 1st, 1937, and June 1, 1938, $63,338.76 for salaries of employees and directors, publicity, printing, radio ($4,405.51), and other expenses while carrying on the Federal-State Order program; from June 1st to September 1st, a three-month period, the Agency spent $45,299.15; radio expenditures increased to $7,029.05, and advertising and publications (exclusive of "Market News"), $7,979.79. From September 1st, 1938, to December 1st, 1938, the Agency expended $31,348.98; there were no expenditures for radio and advertising and publications dropped to $2,871.91.

82. The activities of the Bargaining Agency are partly reviewed in Exhibit 59. E. C. Bardin, in his report printed therein, stated (Dec. 1938):

"With field men and other directors, I have travelled approximately 20,000 miles spreading the gospel of cooperation. I have not tried to discuss the details of the Order, but have dealt with the broad general program."

Homer S. Rolfe, in the President's address at the same time, said (see Defendants' Exhibit 59):

0 "Last year at the first annual meeting of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, I said that the occasion marked a new forward step in cooperative effort. I was referring to the fact that producers had been given the right to work together cooperatively by the enactment of the Rogers-Allen law and now had an opportunity to solve their marketing problems."

* * * * * * * *

"The Bargaining Agency is generally credited as being the force which and the medium through which this plan was prepared and accepted by producers and with their support made effective. History will record that the long sought permanent marketing program control surplus was established in 1938 on a solid foundation.

backed by Federal-State assistance, and put into operation with united producer support.

* * * * * * * *

"On February 7, several representatives of the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture met with the Board of Directors. Work was started on drafting a marketing agreement to incorporate the principles that had been agreed upon.

* * * * * * * *

"The first hearing was held at Albany on May 16th and the final one was held on June 4th. At hearings, members of Bargaining Agency appeared as proponents of Order.

"It was not until August 18, 19, and 20 that voting took place. This gave the Bargaining Agency sufficient time to comply with requests for information and with the assistance of State and Federal officials, extension departments, and many volunteers, it was possible to acquaint producers generally with the provisions of the Order.

"In doing this many meetings were held, the mail brought every producer copy of Order and official explanation; the American Agriculturist, dairy papers, and newspapers brought out the facts and objectives; advertisements by newspapers and by radio, all combining, brought forth a well-informed and united producer sentiment for adoption of a surplus control plan as provided for in the Federal-State Marketing Order.

"On August 25th, the result of the vote was announced and producers were delighted to find that the Order had been approved by approximately 87% of the qualified producers voting.

* * * * * * * *

"The magnitude of the vote and the speed and determination with which it was put into effect were impressive."

83. The Dairymen's League cast 22,287 votes in favor of Order No. 27, and 17,361 votes in favor of Official Order No. 126.

Defendant Jetter, as a distributor, was permitted no vote.

The producers under contract with the Dairymen's League, or who were members thereof, were permitted no vote.

84. The Dairymen's League, having been accredited the privilege of casting 22,287 votes out of a total of 60,220 milk producers, the remaining milk producers in the production area together, if all voted, could not cast the two-thirds vote necessary to promulgate a marketing order agreeable to them. The Dairymen's League cast approximately two-thirds of the total number of 33,663 votes counted in favor of the issuance of the Order.

85. The Orders were issued as a result of the program of the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League, begun with sponsoring of the Rogers-Allen Law and continued through the formation of the Bargaining Agency formulation and proposal by the Bargaining Agency, of the proposed Federal Orders, and finally adoption of same by the casting of 33,663 votes in favor of the Order, of ch 22,287 were cast by the Dairymen's League.

. The purpose and effect of said program and Order was to give he Dairymen's League a competitive advantage over its com- tors, including the defendants, and to create in said Dairymen's gue and the Bargaining Agency, and in handlers buying milk n them, to the exclusion of the defendants and all others, the rol of fluid-milk business in the marketing area. To that end, Dairymen's League, Bargaining Agency, and E. Manning Gaynor ein referred to as Gaynor), who was personal representative of rvening plaintiff Noyes, entered into a conspiracy to establish aid Dairymen's League, Bargaining Agency, and dealers pur- ing milk from Bargaining Agency members, including Dairy- 's League, an illegal monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk aid marketing area.

. One Charles H. Baldwin, acting individually and as Executive etary of the Bargaining Agency herein called "Baldwi"), one ner Rolfe and one Jay C. Treat, acting individually and as ident and Secretary, respectively, of the intervening plaintiff gaining Agency and intervening plaintiff Dairymen's League, ed and published certain letters, pamphlets, official newspapers, it: The Bargaining Agency News and the Dairymen's League s, which said letters and other printed statements contained ats against any dealers who might appeal to the Courts for any dication of its rights, and entered upon a campaign to compel ributors and dealers of milk in the same position as defendants to sign contracts which surrendered their rights to due process. Said printed utterances were circulated among producers.

88. Gaynor procured one Faulkner, a producer delivering to defendant Jetter, to visit said Gaynor at Leonardsville, ., and there requested Faulkner to arrange for withholding milk e defendant Jetter unless it signed a marketing agreement; said nor requested one Dake to withhold delivery of substantial ntities of milk from Eisenberg Farms, Inc. Said Dake withheld milk until said Eisenberg signed, and then released the milk. nor told Eisenberg that his milk would be released when he ed a marketing agreement in the Administrator's office. Eisen- signed at the Administrator's office, and his milk was released.

aldwin, executive secretary of the Bargaining Agency, solicited Dumont, who had been active in a milk strike during 1937, to y to the Market Administrator for a "job," which was to include ing localities where dealers "refused to go along with the Order" "drying up" the milk stations of such dealers by withholding until they complied.

. Said Gaynor, in public speeches and privately over the tele- ne, threatened and caused to be threatened, all dealers, with sum- y withholding of their milk supplies, unless they signed mar- ng agreements.

90. On August 29th, 1938, E. H. Baldwin, acting individually and as executive secretary of defendant Bargaining Agency, caused to be issued and distributed to producers delivering milk to defendant Jetter and to other producers in the marketing area, a letter, which letter contained the following:

"Dear Producer: Before you receive this letter, a Federal-State Milk Marketing Order covering the Metropolitan New York Milk Market, will have been signed by the President. This Order will, no doubt, become effective September 1st.

"To the casual observer, a wonderful battle has been won, but we who have known the opposition, realize that the real battle is ahead.

"As you know, the dealers in Boston took the Boston Order into Court and have held up its full operation for over a year. Over two million of the farmers' money has been held up by the dealers.

* * * * * * *

223 "This producers can stop by inducing dealers to consent to the operation of the Order as an agreement. Your dealer, by such consent, voluntarily refrains from using the Courts to block the Order. * * * We want results through compliance with the Order, not law suits.

* * * * * * *

"You will be contributing greatly towards that end if you singly or collectively with other producers insist that your dealer cooperate with others in signing this order at once. If you have not already done this, won't you please take care of it immediately?

"Won't you also cooperate with me by giving your advice on questions that you will find on the enclosed page?"

Attached to said letter was purported questionnaire, which in part contained the following:

"Questionnaire to be returned to C. H. Baldwin, Ex. Sec., Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., Room 118, Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, N. Y.

"1. Can you stand continued low prices while dealers argue this matter out in the courts?

"3. In your opinion are farmers in your community ready for a movement to compel the buyers to sign the Order, pay the price and live up to its terms?

"6. Will you support the Bargaining Agency in that move if others will?

"7. In Boston the dealers tied up over two million dollars of the farmers' money in the courts. Do you think farmers will work together to prevent dealers here from doing this?

"NOTE.—The information on this questionnaire will be held in the strictest confidence by me, and your name will not be used in any way."

91. On September 21st, 1938, Jay C. Treat, individually and as an Officer of the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, issued a let-er which was circulated throughout the New York Milk Shed, and among producers delivering milk to defendant Jetter. This letter stated in part:

"almost every dealer in the Metropolitan Market has signed the agreement. In some instances, it has been necessary to exert producer pressure and the willingness of producers to cooperate in withholding or offering to withhold their milk until their dealer signed has been encouraging and gratifying."

92. During the early part of September, 1938, Gaynor was principally engaged in directing producers and cooperative associations in a program of withholding milk from dealers who refused to sign the proposed agreement, or who did not make reports and comply with the Order. Milk which was so withheld was chiefly diverted to the intervening plaintiff Dairymen's League, which acted in concert and in cooperation with said Gaynor.

In the weekly newspaper of the plaintiff Dairymen's League, known as the "Dairymen's League News," and particularly in the copy thereof dated September 6th, 1938, on the first page thereof, was contained the following statement:

"Dealers Sign Up

"Fred H. Sexauer, president of the Dairymen's League, estimated the new program would raise League members' September returns $1,000,000 over what they receive for August milk.

"More than 75 per cent of New York's milk supply was under voluntary agreement when the plan began operating. Included were distributors buying from the Dairymen's League. They handle 60%—approximately 50,000 cans daily—of the market's supply."

On page 14 of said issue, was the following statement:

"'NO FOOLIN',' " Say Sub-District 17–A Members

"At the August Meeting of sub-district 17–A, held in the Congregational Church at Kiantone as guests of Kiantone and Fresburg Locals, delegates and associate delegates informed Director Grout in no uncertain terms that the membership of the sub-district will not allow dealers to nullify the benefits of the new marketing Order, by passing unanimously the following resolution:

* * * * * * *

"'Whereas, in Boston with a similar order dealers have tied up the cream of the milk check in court litigation, and threats of similar actions are circulated in this area: Therefore be it

"'Resolved, that sub-district 17–A in regular meeting ask and demand that our Association and officers insist on our full rights from the start of the State and Federal Marketing Order, and be it further

"'Resolved, that all dealers be required to give satisfactory proof of the acceptance of the terms of the order, or no milk be sold them and in carrying out this plan, we pledge our officers our cooperat and support in agreeing to any diversion necessary to accomp their purposes.'"

On page 15 of said issue, the M'rket Administrator, Harmon, quoted as saying:

"It is my duty to administer the rules and regulations that h been formulated and approved by producers. It is my purpose to just that, and to do it to the best of my ability. This may at tim not be to the liking of some people, some may be made u happy."

225 93. In the issue of the Dairymen's League News of Septe ber 20, 1938, the following item appeared on the front page:

"Producers Ready to Divert Milk From Non-Complying Deale

"League Gets Vote of Thanks from Bargaining Agency for It Offer of Marketing Facilities.

"Volunteer enforcement agents—100 strong—were riding the road last week explaining to farmers how they could convince recalcitran metropolitan milk handlers of the advantages of complying with the law by obeying the rules and regulations of the new federal-stat marketing program.

"This action followed a meeting of delegates of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency in Syracuse, September 10. The delegates voted to have 100 farmers go out as volunteer enforcement agents to "crack down" on dealers who have not signed the marketing agreement. They were to explain to producers delivering to such dealers that they could divert their milk and not lose money. Such diversion it was believed would quickly bring the few New York holdouts into line."

The same article on pages 1 and 2 quoted Gaynor as follows:

"In a spirited speech, Mr. Gaynor told the dairymen that they 'need not think about dealers for two minutes.' He explained the provisions for diverting milk from dealers who fail to comply with the regulations. 'The Dairymen's League plants are open—and others too,' said Mr. Gaynor. 'Call me up, I'll tell you where to put the milk. You won't have to divert very long before these dealers will be ready to sign up.'"

The Dairymen's League News of September 27th, 1938, on the front page thereof, contained the following statements:

"J. C. Treat, secretary of the New York metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, made the prediction in Syracuse that all the larger dealers would be signed up by the end of last week. Except for a few small handlers, Mr. Treat predicted the sign-up would be almost 100 per cent. None of these smaller dealers handle more than 50 or 75 cans a day and practically all of them are in the 'spot buyers' class, he said.

"Mr. Treat also reiterated a former statement made by the Bargaining Agency to the effect that the squad of 100 producer volunteers were still on duty in the milk shed and that shipments of milk would be diverted from those buyers who declined to pay full prices as called for by the order or who might attempt through court action to obstruct administration of the order."

226 Dairymen's League and Bargaining Agency.

94. In the October 11th issue of the Dairymen's League News, on the first page thereof, was contained the following:

"Producers Stop Dealer's Milk—He Signs Up

"Buffalo Milk 70% Under New State Order—Bargaining Agency Puts Pressure on Procrastinators."

"Producers Prepared for Non-Compliers

"N. Y. C. Marketing Order Calls for Dealers' Reports Oct. 10

"Preparations to apply 'farmer pressure' to any milk handlers who fail to comply with requirements of the federal-state milk marketing agreement were being formulated last week by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency."

On page 2 of said issue, was contained the following statement:

"The farmer's opportunity lies in mass action through business cooperative organization. Farmers today depend more and more on their own responsible leaders for information. Elected cooperative leaders must know reasons for low prices and be prepared with constructive plans."

95. In the "Milk Producers' Market News," the official paper of the plaintiff Bargaining Agency, for the month of October 1938, published prior to October 15th of said month, and copies of which were distributed generally to the producers delivering milk to defendant's (Jetter's) plants, were contained among others, the following statements:

"Please bear in mind that our able Secretary, J. C. Treat, who is in charge of the "MINUTE MEN," is doing a fine job and these men, who are distributed throughout the milk shed, are on the watch at all times for disturbances, chiseling, and other items that are not for the best interests of your producers."

"Remember that in the last issue of the Market News, on the front page, your writer advised you producers to watch out for the small minority of trouble makers and see to it that they are kept in their place. We also suggested that whenever you find one of them sticking their nose in the picture and trying to disrupt what you have approved, then a good idea is to swat the nose and talk afterwards."

from dealers failing to abide by provisions of the federal-state marketing agreement.

"The producers diverted 1,300 cans from a New York dealer who E. M. Harmon, administrator of the agreement, said failed to file the first monthly report of milk sales.

"Homer S. Rolfe, president of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, said the agency ordered the milk diverted from the dealer to cheese plants. The agency, he added, will pay the difference between the cheese plant price and the price they would have received from the dealer."

"We farmers are like the tramp who stopped at a lady's door and asked for something to eat. She gave him some bread and said: 'Now, I don't give you this bread for your sake, but for the Lord's sake.' The farmer looked to the dry bread and turning to the woman, said: 'Then for Christ's sake, put some butter on it.' Now, if the dealers won't give us a living price for milk for our sake, perhaps they will for Christ's sake. Not bad!"

The reference to the "mighty fine work" alleged to have been carried on at Bridgewater refers to activity among patrons delivering milk to the defendant Jetter.

228 96. Sub district president of plaintiff Dairymen's League (Dist. No. 11), has canvassed producers delivering to defendant Jetter, since September 1st, 1938, and represented to such producers, that payments for their milk were in danger; that said producers should leave Jetter and deliver milk to the plaintiff Dairymen's League before such procedures sustained loss of payment for milk delivered.

Plaintiff Dairymen's League, with knowledge that the defendant Jetter and others similarly situated, could not survive continued enforcement of the Federal Order when accompanied by the destructive competition of the League, the National Dairy and Borden subsidiaries and affiliates, in the October 11th issue of the Dairymen's League News, printed the following statement:

"How Can the 'Cheap Milk' Dealer Pay?

"Apprehension was felt in some quarters that some producers may receive something of a shock when they get paid for their milk.

"This uneasiness was due to the fact that it is well known that a lot of milk is being sold to stores in New York City at less than cost. There is a considerable question as to whether some of the firms selling this milk cheap will have money with which to pay producers at the rates established by the market administrator."

97. The Market News issued by the Bargaining Agency for December, 1938 (Exhibit 23 to stipulation), states on page 30:

"Syracuse, Nov. 21.—There will be no let up in activities of the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producer's Bargaining Agency to obtain full compliance with the Federal-State milk marketing program, declared Charles H. Baldwin, Executive Secretary today.

"Mr. Baldwin made this statement following a conference with his attorney, Edmund F. Cooke, and other lawyers who argued against an application by Jetter Dairy Company to restrain Mr. Baldwin, the Bargaining Agency and the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association before United States Judge Frank Cooper in Albany Saturday.

"The Jetter Dairy sought to restrain these defendants and Metropolitan Market administrator E. M. Harmon and officials of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets from enforcing the marketing program which was instituted September 1 under The Rogers-Allen law and the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

"The Jetter case marks a new milestone in the progress of New York Milk Shed dairy farmers. Never before have dealers sought to enjoin farmers, although there have been cases where dairymen have had to seek protection of the courts from the acts of dealers. Starting of this case seems to indicate the desperate desire of dealers to wreck this program and frighten producers into acceptance of less money for their milk. The effect, however, will be the opposite. Indignation is running high among farmers all through the State, and I believe they will now be more insistent than before that every dealer comply in every respect with this marketing program, which has already added more than $2,500,000 to dairymen's income."

September	$1.95	$1.90	$1.8
October	1.90	2.00	1.8

Note.—The actual cash return, including certificates of indebtedness, considered as cash, was less than the prices stated. In 1938, the September net cash price, including certificates of indebtedness, was $1.75 per cwt. and for October, $1.81 per cwt. (Exhibits 11, 12).

Sheffeld Farms Company, in corresponding years, paid its producers net, as follows:

September	$1.96	$2.20	$1.8
October	1.90	2.20	1.8

The statement that "this marketing program * * * has already added more than $2,500,000 to dairymen's income" is contrary to the statistics in evidence, as part of Exhibit A–3.

97–a. Intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League, by its acts in procuring the passage of the Rogers-Allen Law, the formation of the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, and through its own activities and those of the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining 230 Agency, has conspired to convert the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c U. S. Code, as amended, and of the Rogers-Allen Law (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 as amended), as instruments of coercion, restraint of trade and monopoly. In furtherance of such conspiracy, said intervening plaintiffs aided in procuring the promulgation or issuance of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, and, by specific acts referred to in Findings Nos. 90 to 97 inclusive hereof, have practiced coercion and intimidation upon the defendants and others in a like situation, to compel defendants and others, to comply with said Orders, regardless of their legality. At the time of the trial, the intervening plaintiffs were continuing such coercive measures.

98. In August, 1938, the Dairymen's League caused to be transferred all of the fluid milk business theretofore carried on by its several wholly owned subsidiary stock corporations, to itself, and since September 1st, 1938, said distributing business has been conducted by said intervening plaintiff, wholly in its own name.

99. Since September 1st, 1938, Bordens and the Dairymen's League have withdrawn from approval by the health authority in the marketing area, a number of milk receiving stations, which are listed on defendants' exhibit 53.

100. The Dairymen's League utilized the same facilities owned and operated by it, and owned and operated by the Borden Company prior to September 1, 1938, that it has utilized since said date, and the services performed by it prior to September 1, 1938, were substantially the same as those performed since said date, except for withdrawal of certain plants from approval within the marketing area.

101. The intervening plaintiff Dairymen's League is engaged in business as a distributor of milk in the Newark, New Jersey, district.

231 102. Defendant Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., engages in the handling of milk received at plants approved by a duly authorized health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

103. Approximately one-third of the milk sold in the marketing area is produced in states other than New York. Approximately one-third of the milk produced in New York and sold in the marketing area passes through other states on its way to the marketing area. A large part of the milk produced in the State of New York and sold in the marketing area which does not pass through other states on its way to the marketing area, is inextricably intermingled with milk which is produced outside of New York or which passes through other states on its way to the marketing area. Unless all milk sold in the marketing area is subject to the same regulation, milk which is regulated will be discriminated against.

104. The members of Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., at all times have been and are dairy farmers producing milk upon their own farms, all of which are in New York State.

105. Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., operates four milk plants located at Sheds, Youngs Crossing, Maybury Mills and Fortright, which plants and the contents thereof it leases from Hegton Milk Corporation.

106. Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., owns all the issued and outstanding stock of Hegeman Farms Corporation, Hamilton Milk and Cream Co., Inc., and Cato Milk Company, Inc.

107. Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., receives the milk of its members and of approximately seventy-five producer patrons whose milk is marketed on the same basis as the milk of its members at the aforesaid milk plants and ships said milk to the said Hegeman Farms Corporation, Hamilton Milk and Cream Co., Inc., and Cato Milk Company, Inc., all of the stock of which it owns, to be sold in the marketing area on behalf of the members and the producer patrons of Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc. The milk is sold by Hegeman Farms Corporation, Hamilton Milk and Cream Co., Inc., and Cato Milk Company, Inc., in the martion, Inc., which distributes the net proceeds pro rata among its members and producers patrons.

108. Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., is holding in its treasury a sum in excess of $5,000.00, which represents the difference between the aggregate distributions to its members and producer patrons for September 1938, at the uniform price and the total amount available for distribution and which otherwise would have been distributed to said members and producer patrons.

109. In addition to the foregoing Findings of Fact which were requested by defendants, the Court finds the facts to be as stated in paragraphs numbered 10 to 14, inclusive; 17 to 21, inclusive; 24, 27, 30 to 40, inclusive; 50, 53, 54, and 55 of the proposed Findings of Fact submitted by the plaintiff, subject to the changes, additions, omissions, and qualifications noted on the margins thereof, and such paragraphs of plaintiff's proposed findings subject to such changes, additions, omissions, and qualifications, are hereby adopted as the findings of the Court.

233 Conclusion of Law

1. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against the defendant Jetter Dairy Company and so-called proprietary handlers, in that they are required to pay producers, the uniform price fixed in the Order, for all milk sold in the marketing area, whereas cooperative corporations which are milk dealers of the same class engaged in the sale of milk to stores and consumers in direct competition with defendant Jetter, and other proprietary handlers, are under no requirement to pay the uniform price or any stated price to producers for such milk.

2. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as against the Jetter Dairy Company and other proprietary handlers, in that said handlers are required to account to the Producer Settlement Fund for the difference between the uniform price and the prices stated in the Order, whereas the price accounted into said Fund by cooperative handlers, is reduced by payments to them out of said Fund, pursuant to Article VII, Section 5 of the Order.

3. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against all of the defendants and against other cooperative and proprietary handlers, which are not engaged in the manufacture and sale of milk products in that the large handlers, both cooperative and proprietary, being principally National Dairy subsidiaries, Bordens and subsidiaries, Dairymen's League and several smaller companies, including Queensboro Farms Products, Inc., and the several companies operated by Aaron J. Rubenfeld, which are engaged in manufacturing milk into milk products, receive so-called "market service payments" under Article VII, Section 6, which are not and cannot be received by small handlers, who combine fluid milk operations with manufacturing on a small scale in their own plants, thereby in effect, substantially reducing the prices paid by such large handlers for milk utilized in fluid form.

4. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against certain handlers, including all the defendants, in that the same regulates all of the businesses of handlers dealing only in the marketing area, while regulating only part of the business of the larger handlers, whose businesses extend to adjacent markets outside of the area.

By the terms and application of the Order, the same large handlers referred to in the next preceding paragraph, both proprietary and cooperative, in making payment all milk purchased in the production area, are permitted to pay a blended price, which price is computed upon the prices fixed in the Order for milk sold in the marketing area, and with arbitrary prices fixed by such handlers as they see fit, for milk sold outside of the area, which milk is known as "unpriced milk," thereby, in effect reducing the price paid by such handlers for fluid milk sold in the marketing area.

5. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as against proprietary handlers purchasing milk direct from producers, in that such handlers 34 are obliged to absorb the cost of maintenance and operation of their milk receiving station, and the cost of receiving milk therein, whereas handlers purchasing milk from cooperative corporations are required to pay only the base producer price for such milk, and are not obliged to pay such cooperative associations, any part of the so-called handling charge, or in any manner for services rendered by the cooperative association in that regard. Such receiving station or plant handling costs were from 15¢ per cwt. to 30¢ per cwt.

6. Application of the provisions of Order No. 27 to handlers, coupled with competitive practices of handlers in the marketing area, has resulted in a loss to all dealers selling wholesale fluid milk in the area, and has confiscated capital of proprietary handlers engaged principally in sales of fluid milk at wholesale to stores. The Order is discriminatory as to such handlers, including the defendant Jeter Dairy Company, and in favor of other handlers, both cooperative and proprietary, whose operations include other markets; who are engaged in the manufacture of milk and milk products, and who receive payments from the Producer Settlement Fund, under the provisions of Article VII, Sections 5 and 6.

7. The provisions of Order No. 27 are discriminatory as to the defendants, Rock Royal Cooperative and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, and in favor of the Dairymen's League and other large handlers, which receive payments under the provisions of Article VII, Sections 5 and 6, and which blend "unpriced" milk with milk sold in the market, in that such larger handlers are able to undersell said defendants.

8. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to the defendants who are engaged principally in the fluid milk business and operating wholly within the marketing area, in that moneys of said defendants are [illegible]ated to be paid to competitors of said defendants, and in effect to give to such competitors, consisting principally of the Dairymen's League, Bordens' and Sheffields, a subsidy from the capital account of the defendants and others in a like situation, whereby monopoly may be created in said large competitors, and the several defendants be forced out of business by exhaustion of capital and by inability to meet competitive prices of said preferred companies.

9. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as between producers, in that there is no requirement that cooperative associations be required to pay the uniform price or any price to producers delivering to such associations.

Cooperative handlers, which are also distributors, may sell milk direct to storekeepers and consumers at less than the minimum delivered cost thereof, based on prices contained in the Order and deduct the losses occasioned by such price cutting from the prices paid to producers.

Cooperative handlers may sell milk to other dealers without making any charge for handling or receiving costs, thereby in effect reducing prices charged for milk, and deduct the sums so rebated to such handlers from payments made to producers.

10. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as between producers, in that producers in 18 counties, enumerated in Article VII, Section 8, receive 20¢ per cwt., preferential payment on all of their milk.

235 Prices paid by cooperatives to producers outside said preferred counties, are also reduced by such preferential payments to producers in the 18 preferred counties, in the adjustments made with the Producer Settlement Fund.

11. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to producers delivering to handlers, whether cooperative or proprietary, whose businesses are only partly regulated by the Order, which sell fluid milk in the Metropolitan Area, and also in the State of New Jersey and other markets, in that the producers are paid less than the actual value of milk delivered by them, accomplished by "blending" arbitrary prices for milk sold outside of the area, which bear no true relation to the actual value thereof with prices charged for milk sold in the area.

12. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to all producers delivering to handlers, whether cooperative or proprietary, which producers do not receive the cooperative payments provided for by Article VII, Section 5, of the Order (the greater part of which is paid to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc.), and whose prices are reduced by the amounts deducted from the uniform price under Art. VII, Sec. 5, and which are paid from the Producer Settlement Fund to the Dairymen's League Cooperative, and such other cooperatives as receive such payments.

13. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to all producers delivering to either proprietary or cooperative handlers, which handlers do not have facilities to receive payments under the provisions of Article VII, Section 6, and payments made to such producers are reduced the amounts deducted and paid from the Producer Settlement d under the provisions of Said Article VII, Section 6.

. The Act as applied in Order No. 27 denies to the several de-lants equal protection of the law, and tends to confiscate the perty of the defendants without due process of law, and are vio-ve of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitu-of the United States and to Article I, Subdivision 6, of the New k State Constitution.

. The provisions of Title 7, Section 608c (5) (A) (B) (ii), and er No. 27 are violative of the Fifth Amendment to the Con-tion of the United States on the ground that they are discrimi-ry as between proprietary handlers purchasing milk from pro-ers and proprietary handlers of milk of the same class, purchas-milk from cooperative associations.

. The provisions of Title 7, Sec. 608c (E), and Order No. 27 violative of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the ted States, in that the same provide for payments to cooperative dlers of milk which are denied to proprietary handlers, for idenl services, said handlers all being milk dealers of the same class.
reby proprietary handlers are denied the right to purchase milk the same terms and conditions, no more and no less, as those lied to cooperative handlers.

. The provisions of Title 7, 608c (B) (ii), U. S. Code, are viola-of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United es, in that they expropriate money from dealers and producers the benefit of competing dealers and of producers selling to said dealers, without due process of law.

18. The provisions of Title 7, 608c (B) (ii) U. S. Code, are invalid and are unauthorized by the Constitution, or the Com-ce Clause thereof. The equalization payments authorized therein, titute a subsidy to be paid by dealers and producers, having well blished fluid milk markets, to competing dealers and producers.

. The Finding by the Secretary, that Order No. 27 is approved avored by two-thirds of the producers producing milk in the proion area, is invalid; is unsupported by any substantial probative lence and amounts merely to an expression of opinion by the etary.

. The intervening plaintiff Dairymen's League and the intervenplaintiff, Bargaining Agency, have been and now are, engaged conspiracy in restraint of trade or commence against the defend-Jetter, Rock Royal Cooperative, Schuyler Junction Cooperative; dlers buying from said cooperatives, and other handlers, for the pose of controlling the purchase and sale of milk, and destroying petitors of the Dairymen's League and its customers, including defendants, in violation of the provisions of Title 15, U. S. Code, ions 1 to 7. Said intervening plaintiffs and others have been and are, engaged in a scheme or conspiracy to discriminate in price ween purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, which discrimination is against the defendants Jetter, Rock Royal Cooperative, and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, and is violative of the provisions of Title 15, U. S. Code, Sections 12–14, inclusive.

21. The provisions of Order No. 27 are violative of the provisions of Title 15, U. S. Code, Sections 1–7, 12–14, and the intervening plaintiffs Dairymen's League and Bargaining Agency, in violation of the provisions of said Title 15, U. S. Code, which are known as the Federal Anti Trust Laws, are now engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy and are now threatening, by coercion, intimidation and the other unlawful acts stated in the Findings and Conclusions of Fact therein, to impose upon the defendants Jetter, Schuyler Junction Cooperative, and the Rock Royal Cooperative, compliance with the illegal and unlawful terms of Order No. 27; and to restrain them from exercising their legal right of engaging in the purchase and sale of milk, free from any constraint or discrimination, after the decision of this case and regardless of any decision rendered herein.

22. The complaint of the plaintiff, United States of America should be dismissed as to each defendant.

23. The complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, should be dismissed as to each defendant.

24. The complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., should be dismissed as to each defendant.

25. The complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., should be dismissed as to each defendant.

26. The said regulation set forth in Order No. 27 is not a valid regulation of interstate commerce, and said order is null and void.

237 27. The Act provides that an order containing provisions such as found in Order No. 27 may become effective only when approved by producers of two-thirds of the milk shipped to be sold in the marketing area affected by the order.

28. Order No. 27, insofar as it requires payment to the Producer Settlement Fund in respect of milk produced by members of Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., takes without compensation from said members the difference between the amount which said members are and will be entitled to receive for their milk, pursuant to the manner in which said milk is distributed and the lesser amount which said members will receive for their milk if they are paid therefor an amount calculated upon the uniform price. Through the device of the Producer Settlement Fund the amount so taken is turned over to other producers of milk. The order thereby deprives the members of Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., which members it represents and appears for in this suit, of their property without due process of law, contrary to the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

29. Defendant Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., is entitled to judgment dismissing the complaint on the merits.

n addition to the foregoing Conclusions of Law which were ed by defendants, paragraphs numbered 2, 3, 4, 6, 11, 12, 13, of the proposed Conclusions of Law submitted by plaintiff, to the changes, additions, omissions, and qualifications noted margin thereof, are hereby adopted by the Court as its addi-Conclusions of Law.

and 8c of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (Publ No. 137, 75th Congress; 50 Stat. 246.7, U. S. C. 601 et seq.) (hereu after referred to as the "Act"), the Secretary of Agriculture of th United States (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary"), on Apr 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed marketin agreement and a proposed order regulating the handling of milk i the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of th City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Wes chester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinaft referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Co missioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New Yor pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the laws of 1937 o
New York gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same tim and places on an order substantially identical with the aforesai order.

(Same as Defts. No. 9.) 6. Pursuant to the terms of the sai notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agricultur and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to Section 10 (i of the Act, and Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New Yor joint public hearings were conducted by Glen J. Gifford, an employe of the Department of Agriculture, who was designated by the Se retary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Com missioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordan 240 with the terms of said notice, the aforesaid public hearin were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 1938;
Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, o
May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938, and at Ne York, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recesse until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, New York, o
May 24, 1938, May 25 and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, o June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid all i terested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concernin the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the pr posed order. The said hearings were attended by producers, repr sentatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in th marketing area. All of the defendants knew of said hearings but none of the defendants appeared or was represented at any hearing.

(Same as defts. No. 10.) 7. On the 5th day of August 1938 the Secretary, pursuant to the provisions of Section 8c of the Act, made a finding and proclaimed that, as to milk produced for sale in the marketing area, the purchasing power of such milk during the base period, August 1909 to July 1914, could not be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture, but that the purchasing power of such milk could be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture for that portion of the post-war period between August 1921 and July 1929, inclusive.

(Substantially same as defts. No. 11.) 8. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of the proposed order (which notice was published in the Federal Register on July 342 23, 1938), the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said order containing terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner as, and made applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said Order also contains the findings by the Secretary, required by the applicable provisions of the Act, to be made by him. Said order was published in the Federal Register of August 9, 1938.

(Same as defts. No. 12.) 9. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of the proposed order, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, on August 5, 1938, made the findings required by Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, and issued proposed Official Order No. 126, which order is substantially identical with Order No. 27 and contains terms and conditions authorized by the applicable provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York and no others.

(Granted.) 10. A true, correct, and complete stenographic transcript of the oral testimony introduced at the said hearings was made, consisting of 2,979 pages. Eighty-eight exhibits of documentary character were introduced into evidence at said hearing, which exhibits in general contained statistics, descriptive information, and economic studies pertaining to the milk industry in the area comprising the New York milk shed. Briefs and written arguments were submitted to the Secretary and to the Commissioner at the conclusion of 342 said hearing on the evidence introduced at said hearing on behalf of the following parties:

(Granted.) 11. Substantial evidence supporting all of the findings of the Secretary and the terms and conditions contained in Order No. 27, and the findings of the Commissioner and the terms and conditions contained in Official Order No. 126 was introduced at the said hearing.

(Granted that there was such evidence but these are not all found as facts.) 12. With respect to the finding of the Secretary that orderly marketing conditions for milk flowing into the New York Metropolitan marketing area were so disrupted as to result in impairment of the purchasing power of such milk and that the issuance of Order No. 27 would tend to effectuate the declared policy of the Act, there was evidence introduced at the said hearing showing that:

(Granted.) (A) The furnishing of an adequate and reliable supply of fresh wholesome milk to a large and populous metropolitan area presents problems peculiar to the milk industry. These problems are inherent in the handling and production of milk and spring from the nature of that commodity. Pure wholesome milk is a very important element of diet. It is also a highly perishable commodity and unless handled promptly and under proper sanitary conditions it deteriorates very rapidly and becomes unfit for use as fluid milk. For this reason the various health authorities in the marketing area require that all milk that is sold in the marketing area in fluid form be produced on farms and handled at plants approved by them and operated in accordance with stringent sanitary regulations. Milk produced on unapproved farms or delivered to unapproved plants is not permitted to be sold in the marketing area.

244 (Granted if "greatly" in the 2nd line and "substantially" in the 8th line are eliminated.) (B) Compliance with the sanitary regulations imposed by the various health authorities greatly increases the cost of producing milk. While milk which is produced on farms and handled at plants which do not comply with these sanitary regulations cannot be sold as fluid milk in the marketing area, it is suitable for use in the manufacture of dairy products such as evaporated milk, butter, and cheese. As milk can be produced on unapproved farms which are under less strict sanitary conditions at a substantially lower cost, the producer whose milk is approved for sale in the marketing area cannot compete in the general market for milk and its products and he cannot, therefore, afford to produce milk in compliance with the applicable sanitary regulations unless he can market a reasonable proportion of his milk as fluid milk at prices higher than the prices paid for milk used for manufacturing purposes.

(Granted.) (C) If the approved farms produced just enough milk at all seasons of the year to satisfy the demand of the consumers for fluid milk, or if milk could be stored for a considerable period of time, the problems with which Order No. 27 deals would not exist, but the factors involved in the production of milk prevent an exact correlation between supply and demand and the physical nature of milk makes its storage in fluid form impossible. The demand for fluid milk fluctuates, to some extent, from day to day but is relatively stable throughout the entire year. The production of milk, on the other hand, is subject to wide seasonable fluctuations. The amount of milk produced by a cow depends on the weather, the food supplied to the cow and the cow's stage of lactation. Cows normally freshen in the spring and produce their greatest flow of milk on pasture during the early summer. Because of the biological cycle and the fact 245 that feeds are less plentiful and more expensive during the fall and winter, the supply of milk in the spring will normally be greatly in excess of the supply during the fall and winter and also greatly in excess of the demand. During the year 1936, for example, in the area producing milk for the New York market, the June production of milk was approximately one and two-thirds times as great as the November production.

(Granted except last two lines which are refused.) (D) In order to insure an adequate supply of milk at all times it is necessary for the health authorities in the marketing area to approve sufficient producers to supply adequately the market demand for milk during the winter or short season, including a surplus sufficient to take care of daily fluctuations in demand. Conservative estimates place the necessary daily surplus at from 10 to 20% of the daily fluid requirements. Producers normally are able to market approximately 80% of their milk as fluid milk during the month of November, but during the month of June, by reason of the increased quantity of milk produced, they can market only 50% of their milk as fluid milk. The other 50% must be sold, if at all, for manufacturing purposes in competition with milk produced on unapproved farms under less exacting sanitary conditions and cannot be sold at prices which will compensate the producer for his compliance with the sanitary regulations.

(Granted.) (E) The nature of the milk industry makes a surplus of milk inevitable, and the burden of this surplus, if distributed equitably among all producers, can be borne by the industry without hardship. (Refused.) The troubles which have beset the industry in the past have sprung mainly from the failure to distribute this burden equitably, and the terms and provisions of Order No.
246 27 would tend to effectuate such a distribution. (Granted.) Experience has shown that failure to distribute this surplus among producers inevitably leads to ruinous competition and demoralization of the market, resulting in injury to all producers and to the general public.

(Granted.) (F) The problems of the dairy industry of the State of New York have been a matter of concern to the state legislature for many years. Numerous studies have been made by various legislative committees, and other bodies. Among the various studies which have been made in the milk industry in New York, are the following: investigations by the Wicks Committee in 1916 and 1917; investigation by the Committee of Eleven in 1924; investigation by the Ten Eyck Committee in 1926 and 1927; investigation by the Emergency Committee of the New York Milk Shed in 1932. The reports of these various committees were considered in connection with a comprehensive investigation made in 1932 and 1933 by a joint legislative committee, and the report of that committee to the Legislature (Legislative Document, 1933, No. 114) resulted in the creation in April 1933 of a Milk Control Board which was given broad powers to regulate the entire dairy industry of the State, including power to fix prices to be paid to producers and to be charged to consumers for milk. The Milk Control Board thus formed was replaced in 1934 by the Division of Milk Control in the Department of Agriculture and Markets, to which Division the powers and duties of the Milk Control Board were transferred. Authority to fix milk prices was extended by the acts of three successive Legislatures, but was permitted to expire on April 1, 1937.

247 (Granted.) (G) This program failed to produce all of the beneficial results expected, largely because of the State's inability to regulate prices to be paid to producers in other states. By reason of the State's inability to regulate such prices, the New York market was demoralized with milk purchased from producers in other states at prices lower than those paid in New York. In consequence of this situation, New York State producers were threatened with the loss of their market; and actually suffered such loss in many instances. In order to protect their market, New York producers were forced to meet this competition by selling their milk at disastrously low prices. Immediately prior to the promulgation of Order No. 27 and for a considerable period prior thereto, the prices paid for milk to producers in the New York milk shed were so low as seriously to impair the purchasing power of the producers.

(Granted that there was some evidence but these are not found as facts.) 13. With respect to the findings and the terms and conditions of Order No. 27 and the terms and conditions of Official Order No. 126 which are challenged in this case, there was evidence introduced at said hearing showing:

(A) Reasonableness of the Class III–A, IV–A, and IV–B Prices

(Granted.) The products manufactured from milk classified as Class III–A, IV–A, and IV–B compete with similar products produced in other sections of the country. Unless the Order prices for milk in these classes are at a level which will enable them to compete with similar products manufactured in other sections of the country, handlers will be unable to manufacture the surplus milk.

248 The formulas contained in Article IV of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 reflect nation-wide factors of supply and demand and establish prices at a level which enable the New York handler to compete with manufacturers of similar products produced elsewhere.

The formula for pricing Class III–A milk represents the cost of milk at the large evaporated milk plants in the North Central States plus 10¢ which represents the difference between the cost of transporting the evaporated milk equivalent of 100 pounds of milk from such plants to New York City and the cost of transporting the same quantity of evaporated milk from the 201–210 mile zone to New York City. This is the same formula which was in effect under State Milk Control and is the formula previously used by the large classified price buyers in the New York market. The minimum prices paid for milk at the evaporated milk plants listed in Article IV have been since May 31, 1935, fixed by the Federal Evaporated Milk Marketing Agreement. The alternative formula is the formula for the Northeastern States contained in the aforesaid Federal Evaporated Milk Marketing Agreement.

The formula for pricing Class IV–A milk is the average of the highest prices for 92 score butter at wholesale in the New York market, less 4¢ allowance for making, plus 20% for over-run, multiplied by 3.5 which is the butterfat content of the milk; 92-score butter is the highest grade commercial butter. The over-run allowance is a recognition of the fact that cream containing one pound of butterfat will make approximately 1⅕ pounds of butter. The formula which was in effect under New York State Milk Control and which has been used historically in the New York market was identical except that the over-run allowance was only 16%. Twenty per cent for over-run results in a somewhat higher price for the milk. Skim milk which results as a by-product has very little commercial value, especially during the spring and summer. The cost of manufacturing butter at a plant which operates only intermittently is 249 higher than the cost at a plant which operates throughout the entire year at a relatively stable level. Under conditions existing at New York approved plants, four cents is approximately the average cost of making a pound of butter, and twenty percent is the approximate over-run which can reasonably be expected.

The formula for pricing Class IV–B milk represents the average of the weekly quotations at the Wisconsin Cheese Exchange (plus 1¢ per pound representing the difference in cost between shipping a pound of cheese from Wisconsin to New York City and shipping a pound of cheese from the 201–210 milk zone to New York City), the Gouverneur Cheese Board at Gouverneur, New York, and the Cuba Board of Trade at Cuba, New York, less 3¢ allowance for making and multiplied by 9.45 which is the average yield from 100 pounds of 3.5 per cent milk. The Class IV–B formula is the same formula which was in effect under State Milk Control and is the formula which had previously been used by the large classified price buyers in the New York market. The cost of manufacturing cheese at a plant which operates only intermittently is higher than the cost at a plant which operates throughout the entire year. Under conditions existing at New York approved plants three-cents is the ap-roximate average cost of making a pound of cheese and 9.45 pounds the approximate average yield from 100 pounds of 3.5 per cent ilk.

(B) Transportation Differentials

(Granted.) The standard tank car rate approved by the Interstate ommerce Commission for shipments of milk by rail in tank cars om points in the 201–210 mile zone is 2.7¢ per gallon, equivalent to 1.2¢ per cwt. The transportation differentials in Order No. 27 and fficial Order No. 126 are approximate, to the nearest half cent, of e differences per hundred-weight between the standard tank car rate the 201–210 mile zone and such rate for each other 10 mile zone. The andard tank car rates are 70% of the standard rates for the shipment of milk in 40-quart cans in less than carload lots. Truck competitive rates have been established at certain points which are somewhat lower than the approved standard tank car rates r these points. The Interstate Commerce Commission has not approved rates for shipping milk in tank trucks. Such rates are fixed r individual contract. The transportation differentials follow a stom of long standing in the industry. Under State Milk Control differentials were based on the less than carload rates approved the Interstate Commerce Commission. The largest part of the lk shipped to the marketing area formerly traveled in 40-quart ns, but a very small percentage of the milk traveling to New York ty now travels in 40-quart cans; slightly under 50% travels by ilroad tank cars and slightly over 50% by tank trucks.

(C) Butterfat Differentials

(Granted.) Butterfat is the most important single constituent in lk. The butterfat content of milk delivered by producers to ndlers varies from day to day, from season to season, and beeen different producers. For a long time it has been the custom the New York market to establish prices on the basis of milk ntaining 3.5 percent butterfat, with an appropriate differential for lk containing more or less than 3.5 percent butterfat. The tterfat differentials established by Section 2 of Article I of der No. 27 and of Official Order No. 126 follow a custom of g standing, and are the same differentials which were in effect der state milk control. Such differentials are reasonable and re-t the approximate difference in value of milk containing varying tterfat content.

(D) Payments to Cooperatives

(Refused as not relating to demonstrable facts.) A cooperative ociation of producers which has its entire activities under the con-l of its members and which has and exercises full authority in sale of the milk of its members, using its best efforts to supply

Class I milk to the marketing area in times of short supply and to secure utilization of milk in times of long supply in a manner to assure the greatest possible return to all producers, can and 251 does perform valuable services for the market as a whole. The extent to which a cooperative can perform such services depends upon the degree of control which it exercises over the utilization of the milk of its members. The payments authorized by Section 5 of Article VII to be made to the different types of cooperatives for performing such services for the market are a reasonable compensation for the services performed by such cooperatives.

The effectiveness of the plan embodied in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 is largely dependent upon the utilization of surplus milk in such a manner as to afford the greatest return to producers and the greatest stability to the market. This in turn requires that a market be provided at all times for all the milk of all the producers; that the milk be transported the shortest possible distance, and that as much of the surplus as possible be manufactured in the higher surplus classifications. The proprietary handler being actuated only by the profit motive, will handle sufficient milk to meet his fluid requirements and will handle surplus milk only when he sees the possibility of handling it profitably. The cooperative association, on the other hand, is interested in securing the utilization of all the milk of all its members in such a manner as to return the highest possible amount to producers. The maintenance of surplus facilities and the handling of surplus milk for the benefit of the market as a whole, instead of for the purpose of making a profit on the manufacturing operations, results in substantial extra expense to cooperatives. Since such operations benefit the market as a whole the cost thereof should be distributed among all producers and should not be charged only to the producers who are members of the cooperatives. The cooperative payments provided by Section 5 of Article VII are a necessary step in the distribution of the burden of surplus milk equitably among all producers and are therefore essential to the effective administration of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

252 (E) Market Service Payments

(Refused for same reason.) The market service payments for which provision is made in Article VII, Section 6, Subsection 1 of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are designed to reimburse a handler for the actual cost involved in transferring milk from a receiving and shipping plant to a plant where it can be manufactured in the classes specified in the aforesaid subsection when the milk is not needed as fluid milk in the marketing area. The allowance of 2¢ per cwt. is approximately the average cost of handling milk at a country receiving station. The mileage allowances represent approximately the average cost of transporting milk by truck. These allowances, therefor, simply reimburse the handler for the actual out-of-pocket cost involved in shipping surplus milk to a manufacturing plant. In the absence of some provision in the Order enabling a handler to recoup the expenses so incurred, it would be necessary for him either to refuse to accept the milk of some of his producers or to ship the milk to the marketing area regardless of the price which it would bring.

The market service payments for which provision is made in Article VII, Section 6, Subsection 2 of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 are designed to reimburse a handler who operates a plant which is primarily a manufacturing plant for the increased unit cost involved in the curtailment of his manufacturing operations resulting from the shipping of fluid milk to the marketing area during the short season. The allowance of 30¢ per cwt. is a reasonable allowance and represents approximately the average increased cost. Such market service payments are necessary to secure the utilization of surplus milk during the flush season and an adequate supply of milk to the fluid market during terms of short supply and are, therefore, essential to the administration of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

(F) The Marketing Area

(Granted.) The marketing area, as defined in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, is identical with the Metropolitan area which was regulated under the New York State Milk Control, except that Rockland County is not included in the present marketing area. The marketing area is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean, Long Island Sound, and the Hudson River, as natural boundaries. It has not been the custom for wholesale or retail routes in the marketing area to cross the Hudson River into New Jersey, and routes which operate both in and outside of the marketing area are found only in the upper boundaries of Westchester County.

(Granted.) 14. The prices paid to producers for milk sold in the State of New Jersey but produced outside the state have never been regulated either by the State of New Jersey or by the State of New York and the competitive situation was unchanged by the issuance of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126. Milk approved for sale in the marketing area which is produced in states other than New Jersey and sold in New Jersey must therefore compete with milk not approved for sale in the marketing area which is produced in states other than New Jersey and sold in New Jersey. Prior to the adoption of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 this competitive situation resulted in the payment of not more than the prevailing market price to producers delivering milk to approved plants, which milk was sold in New Jersey. (Refused.) The prevailing market price during the months preceding the adoption of the orders was substantially below the uniform prices which have since been in effect under Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126. (Granted.) Since the adoption of these orders there is constant pressure from producers to require handlers subject to the orders to pay the uniform price for all milk delivered to approved plants regardless of where sold. The resale prices in the State of New Jersey have not changed since the adoption of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126. At least one New York handler ceased selling milk in the State of New Jersey on the date on which the orders went into effect. At least two companies which sell fluid milk both in the marketing area and 254 in the State of New Jersey and which are also engaged in manufacturing operations, have lost a portion of their fluid milk business in the marketing area since September 1, 1938.

(Same as Defts'. No. 13.) 15. On the 5th day of August, 1938, the Secretary tentatively approved a marketing agreement regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, and on or about August 6, 1938, delivered copies thereof to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the order, but prior to the issuance of said order, handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed within the marketing area failed or refused to sign said marketing agreement. Subsequent to the issuance of Order No. 27 a marketing agreement which regulates the handling of milk in the same manner as Order No. 27 and is applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in Order No. 27 was signed by handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by Order No. 27.

(Substantially same as Defts'. No. 14.) 16. Under authority of the provisions of Section 8c (19) of the Act, the Secretary conducted a referendum of producers in order to assist him in determining whether the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938 (said month having, on the 25th day of July, 1938, been determined by the Secretary to be a representative period), were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area. The referendum was held at the times and places set forth in a schedule of polling places issued by the Department of Agriculture prior to said referendum. Said schedule of polling places contained 308 designated polling places located as follows:

Maryland	1
Massachusetts	1
New Jersey	16
New York	233
Pennsylvania	35

255 The location of the polling places was such that every producer delivering milk to a plant approved by an authorized health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area had ready access to one or more polling places.

(Granted except as to the last sentence.) 17. Prior to the referendum there were sent to each producer as to whom available information indicated that he might be eligible to vote in said referendum (a) a copy of the order as issued August 5, 1938 by the Secretary; (b) the schedule of polling places above mentioned; (c) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "Questions and Answers on the Federal-State Milk Program for

New York;" and (d) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "New York Milk, Explanation of the Federal-State Marketing Plan Contained in Order No. 27." Approximately 70,000 copies of the said order, the said schedule of polling places, and the said pamphlets were sent through Federal-State Agencies to such producers. (Although said pamphlets did not undertake to explain in detail all of the provisions of the Order, it cannot be said that statements contained in said pamphlets were inaccurate or misleading.)

(Granted.) 18. The proposed Order No. 27 received widespread publicity throughout the entire milk shed. The complete text of the order was published in "The Dairymen's League News," "The Bargaining Agency News" and "The Dairy Farmer's Union," all of which are dairy papers having a wide circulation. (Refused.) The proposed order was discussed both favorably and unfavorably by the aforesaid papers and by farm papers and newspapers generally. It cannot be said that explanations of Order No. 27 contained in "The Dairymen's League News" and "The Bargaining Agency News" were inaccurate or misleading.

256 (Granted.) 19. Prior to the referendum exhaustive and painstaking efforts were made to secure a complete and accurate list of all co-operative associations who might be qualified to vote in the referendum. Such efforts included consultations with county agents, extension workers from various universities in the Northeastern States, and officials of local departments of health throughout the area, examination of the corporation records in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of New York, conferences with leaders of producer groups and of handlers' organizations, with officials of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets and with other informed sources. After weeks of work a list of 193 co-operative associations was secured, which was, as far as could be ascertained, a complete list of co-operative associations whose producers delivered milk to plants approved by health authorities in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area.

(Granted.) 20. On July 8, 1938, a letter was sent to the last known address of each of said co-operative associations over the signature of E. W. Gaumnits, Chief of the Dairy Section, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, and that of Mr. Kenneth F. Fee, Director, Division of Milk Control, Department of Agriculture and Markets, State of New York. This letter advised the co-operative associations of the steps which must be taken by them in order that they might be determined to be qualified to express the approval or disapproval of producers belonging to such association.

(Granted.) 21. Copies of the letter mentioned above were sent to the Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., at Cortland, New York, and to the Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Cooperative, Inc., at Schuyler Junction, New York. These letters were never returned as unclaimed, but no reply was received from either of these associations. The defendant Rock Royal Cooperative Association, Inc., did not start receiving milk from producers until August 6, 1938, and its name did not appear on any list as having been a co-operative association receiving milk from producers during the month of May 1938.

257 (Same as Defts. No. 80.) 22. The results of the aforesaid referendum were as follows: 45,644 votes cast, of which 7,017 were rejected as invalid. Of the 38,627 votes counted as valid, 33,663 votes, or 87.1 per cent, were in favor of the issuance of the order and 4,964 votes, or 12.9 per cent, were opposed thereto. Of the 7,017 votes which were rejected, 6,547 votes were rejected either because the voters were members of co-operative associations which had cast ballots for all of their members or because the voters were not qualified to vote, not having delivered milk to an approved plant during the month of May 1938. Of the votes rejected for this reason, 5,110 votes were in favor of the issuance of the order, and 1,437 votes were opposed thereto. 470 votes were rejected because the voter had failed to mark his ballot either for or against the order or because it was not possible to determine whether the ballot was marked for or against the order.

(Refused in favor Defts. No. 15.) 23. After conducting said referendum and after the refusal or failure of handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed within the marketing area to sign the tentatively approved marketing agreement relating to milk, the Secretary on the 24th day of August 1938 made a determination, which determination was approved by the President;

(a) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such marketing agreement tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

(b) That the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

258 (c) That the issuance of the order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May, 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area, and who voted in the above mentioned referendum.

Said findings and determination were published by the Secretary in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938. There was substantial evidence before the Secretary supporting the said findings and determinations. The evidence showed that conditions in the marketing area and in the milk shed supplying the marketing area were such that without regulation of the industry in such a manner as to insure adequate prices to producers and to bring about an equitable distribution of the burden of necessary surplus milk in the market, the purchasing power of milk in the base period set forth in Order No. 27 could not be reestablished and maintained.

the Laws of 1937 of New York, conducted a poll to assist him in determining whether the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least 75 per cent of the producers of milk produced in the production area. This poll was conducted at the same times and places as the referendum conducted by the Secretary of Agriculture. All producers located within the State of New York who had delivered milk to approved plants at any time after January 1, 1936, were permitted to vote in said poll and co-operative associations of producers were permitted to vote for their members in the same manner in which they voted in the referendum on Order No. 27. The results of such poll were as follows: 29,883 votes counted as valid were cast, of which 25,935 votes or 86.8 per cent were in favor of the issuance of the order and 3,948 votes or 13.2 per cent were opposed thereto.

259 (Same as defts.' No. 16.) 25. On August 25, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York found, on the basis of such poll, that the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least 75 per cent of the producers of milk produced in the production area for the marketing area and declared Official Order No. 126 to be effective on September 1, 1938. Said order has not been terminated.

(Substantially same as defts.' No. 17.) 26. On August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an order which was published in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, said order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938. Order No. 27 has not been terminated.

260 (Refused as largely argumentative.) 28. A co-operative association of producers is under constant pressure from its producer members to secure the highest possible return for the milk which it handles and is also required to find some means of utilization for all the milk produced by its members. In the absence of a market-wide pool, a co-operative association would be under the same economic compulsion as other handlers to compete for the fluid milk market and might be under constant temptation to cut prices in order to secure a larger proportionate share of that market. With a market-wide pool in operation, the same compulsion does not exist and the interests of the producer members of co-operatives can be better served by disposing of the surplus milk in the form of manufactured products than in selling fluid milk at a price which will not reimburse the co-operative association for the expenses which it has incurred in handling such milk. If a co-operative association sells milk for fluid purposes at a price which will not compensate it for the handling, it is unable to return to its producers the uniform price. Instead of selling its milk at such a price, the co-operatives can cause this milk to be made into manufactured products and, if these manufactured products can be sold at a price which will compensate the co-operative for the cost of handling, the co-operative can return to its producer members the full uniform price. The co-operative is therefor relieved of the incentive which formerly compelled it to meet the competition of the proprietary handlers in the fluid milk market.

(Refused as mere opinion.) 29. Co-operative associations may have as producer members anywhere from a few to several thousand farmers. These farmers are losely held together by reason of membership in the co-operative, but if the co-operative returns to them month after month a price substantially lower than the uniform price, these members will cease to do business with the co-
261 operative. The possibility that co-operative associations might be able to undersell other handlers by paying their producers less than the uniform price was carefully considered during the time that Order No. 27 was in process of formulation, but it was realized by all concerned that the interest of the producers in securing the highest possible return for their milk would make such a result not only improbable but impossible. To assume that a co-operative association would set out deliberately to capture the fluid market by underselling proprietary handlers, would require the assumption that the thousands of producers involved would deliberately make a sacrifice of thousands or hundreds of thousands of dollars per month in the hope of ultimately securing domination of the fluid milk market. Experience has shown that such a hope would be futile. Long experience in dealing with agricultural problems has also demonstrated that such a concerted long range program could never be successfully carried on by thousands of scattered farmers even when joined together through a co-operative association.

(Refused.) 30. The co-operative association must dispose of all the milk of its producer members whereas a proprietary handler is subject to no such compulsion. A proprietary handler, by closing plants or selection of producers, can limit its purchases to its business needs but a co-operative association must find an outlet for all the milk of all its producers even though the finding of such an outlet may result in substantial extra expense. The expenses necessarily incurred in performing this service may cause its expenses for a eriod to exceed its income from its handling operations and if the o-operative were forced to return each month to its producers the niform price without deducting such expenses, it might be forced either to go out of business or to cease performing these serv-22 ices. It has (Granted) long been the policy both of Congress and of the State of New York to foster the development f co-operative associations. Since it is only through cooperation at the producers are enabled to meet handlers on anything approaching even terms, any provision in the order which might make impossible for co-operatives to exist would be an unwarranted scrimination against them.

(Granted.) 31. The Dairymen's League, which is the largest cooperative engaged in the wholesaling of milk in the New York Metropolitan marketing area, has lost part of its wholesale business since ptember 1, 1938, although its total fluid milk sales, which include les of milk to other handlers have somewhat increased. (Refused.) he Dairymen's League did not initiate price-cutting in the market- g area and has not engaged in price-cutting. Price-cutting was ini- ted by some of the so-called independent operators and has been gaged in most actively by the aforesaid independents.

(Granted.) 32. Approximately one-third of the milk produced for e in the marketing area is produced in states other than the State New York. Approximately one-third of the milk produced in State of New York for sale in the marketing area passes through er States on its way to be sold in the marketing area; a large part the milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the mar- ing area which does not pass through other States on its way to sold in the marketing area is physically and inextricably inter- ngled with that milk which is produced outside of the State of w York for sale in the marketing area or which is produced in the te of New York for sale in the marketing area but which passes ough other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area.

(Granted.) 33. Each of the defendants has been since prior to ptember 1, 1938, and is now, engaged in the handling of milk shipped to the marketing area received by it at one or more plants operated by it and approved by the New York City Health Department for the receiving of milk to be sold in the rketing area. Milk received by the defendant Jetter Dairy Com- y, Inc., at its receiving plant located at Bridgewater, New York, hipped to the marketing area by rail through the State of New sey. Milk received by defendant Central New York Co-operative ociation, Inc., at its receiving plants is shipped to its New York y depot by tank trucks, which since October 1, 1938, have usually owed a route entirely within the State of New York. Prior to ober 1, 1938, such trucks often passed through the State of New sey en route to New York City. When tank trucks are not avail- e, milk is shipped to New York City via Delaware, Lackawanna Western Railroad and via Lehigh Valley Railroad through the te of New Jersey. All milk handled by the defendants is sold in the marketing area in competition with milk produced in States other than the State of New York and shipped to the marketing area from receiving plants approved by a health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area and in competition with milk produced in the State of New York and shipped to the marketing area from receiving plants approved by a health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area through States other than New York State. Unless the milk produced for sale in the marketing area which does not travel directly in the current of interstate commerce is subject to the same regulation as the milk which travels directly in the current of interstate commerce, the result will be discrimination against the milk which travels directly in the current of interstate commerce. Such handling of milk by the defendants is in the current of interstate commerce or directly burdens, obstructs, or affects interstate commerce, and each of the defend-

264 ants is a handler as defined in Order No. 27.

(Granted.) 34. Pursuant to Article II of Order No. 27, the Secretary on August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under said Order, and pursuant to Article II of Official Order No. 126, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York designated said E. M. Harmon as Market Administrator under Official Order No. 126. Said E. M. Harmon, in the execution of his duties as Market Administrator under said Orders, has supplied all handlers, including the defendants, with forms prescribed in accordance with the provisions of the Orders upon which to report purchases, sales, and use use of milk, and said E. M. Harmon has been and now is acting as Administrator under said Orders. Each of the defendants has filed the reports which were due on October 10th, November 10th, and December 10th, but have not paid the amounts of their obligations to the Producer Settlement Fund. The amounts due from such defendants to the Market Administrator for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund as shown by said reports are as follows:

	September	October	November
Jetter Dairy Co	Paid	14,616.05	9,039.77
Rock Royal	3,616.56	3,055.24	1,508.34
Schuyler Junction	1,603.00	1,337.40	731.64
Central New York	20,115.56	19,581.00	11,069.13

(Granted.) 35. The defendant Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., does not own any farms. It handles milk produced by its members upon their own farms and also the milk of approximately 75 producers who are not members of and have no written contracts with Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc.

265 (Granted over Deft's. 7.) 36. The Dairymen's League is a nonstock, nonprofit cooperative association, organized in 1919 under Article XIII A of the Membership Corporations Law of the State of New York, which Article was in 1926 incorporated in and made a part of the Cooperative Corporations Law of said State, and such Association is now subject to the provisions of Articles 4 and 6 of such law as well as the general provisions in Articles 1–3 thereof. The principal office of the Association is at Utica, New York.

(Granted.) 37. The Dairymen's League is now and has been for a number of years engaged in making collective sales of milk and its products as agent for the producers thereof in interstate and also in intrastate commerce, and is duly qualified to act under and is operating under the provisions of the Act of Congress of February 18, 1922, known as the "Capper-Volstead Act."

(Granted.) 38. The Dairymen's League, in cooperation with the New York State Conference Board of Farm Organizations, of which it is a member and the sole member representing milk producers only, sponsored and supported the enactment of Chapter 383, New York, Laws of 1937, commonly known as the "Rogers-Allen Law."

(Granted.) 39. After the passage of such act and on or about the 7th day of June 1937, representatives of the Dairymen's League and representatives of other cooperative associations of the state organized and incorporated the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., under the Cooperative Corporations Law of the State of New York.

(Granted.) 40. About November 1, 1937, the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., appointed a lawyers' committee composed of Edmund F. Cooke, Esq., attorney for the Bargaining Agency, Frank B. Lent, Esq., an attorney for the Dairymen's League, and Lloyd Anderson, Esq., attorney for Crow-266 ley Milk Producers' Association, Inc., to act as a committee to draft a form of marketing agreement for submission to the Bargaining Agency. Shortly thereafter, Henry S. Manley, Esq., became attorney for the Sheffield Producers' Cooperative Association, Inc., and, as such, became a member of the committee. There was submitted to this committee a proposed draft of a volutary agreement prepared by Allan D. Miller, Esq., one of the attorneys for the Dairymen's League.

(Same as Deft's. 6.) 41. Early in 1938 the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and to the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, respectively, petitions for the issuance of federal and state orders, pursuant to the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 and of Chapter 383, New York, Laws of 1937, commonly known as the "Rogers-Allen Law," and accompanied said petition with a proposed form of order regulating the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area.

(Refused.) 42. The Bargaining Agency did not enter upon a program or scheme to procure for any of its member co-operatives an unlawful competitive advantage in the purchase and/or sale of milk over the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., and other proprietary corporations and dealers similarly situated.

(Refused.) 43. The Bargaining Agency did not enter upon a program or scheme to establish in the Bargaining Agency, its members, companies dealing with it or its members, or any of the aforesaid, a monopoly in the purchase and/or sale of milk in the marketing area.

(Refused.) 44. The Bargaining Agency did not enter upon a program or scheme with the object or intent of confiscating any of the property rights of the defendant, Jetter Dairy Company, Inc.

(Refused.) 45. The Bargaining Agency was not at any time dominated or controlled by the Dairymen's League and the Sheffield Co-operative, or either of them.

267 (Refused.) 46. During the period that Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 have been in effect the Dairymen's League has not engaged in any program designed or intended to take away customers from the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc.

(Refused.) 47. The average price returned by the Dairymen's League to its producers for milk delivered by them during the month of September 1938, after the blending of all of its sales in all markets and the deduction of all of its expenses, including a charge for general administrative expenses of approximately 5¢ per hundred weight and including an amount of 5¢ per hundred weight retained by the League as a loan from its producers, pursuant to the terms of its contract with them, and including differentials, was approximately 4¢ per hundred weight below the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator.

(Refused.) 48. The average price returned by the Dairymen's League to its producers for milk delivered by them during the month of October 1938, after the blending of all of its sales in all markets and the deduction of all of its expenses, including a charge for general administrative expenses of approximately 5¢ per hundred weight and including an amount of 5¢ per hundred weight retained by the League as a loan from its producers, pursuant to the terms of its contract with them, and including differentials, was approximately 4¢ per hundred weight below the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator.

(Refused.) 49. The average price returned by the Dairymen's League to its producers for milk delivered by them during the month of November 1938, after the blending of all of its sales in all markets and the deduction of all of its expenses, including a charge for general administrative expenses of approximately 5¢ per hundred weight and including an amount of 5¢ per hundred weight retained by the League as a loan from its producers, pursuant to the terms of its contract with them, and including differentials, was approximately 3¢ per hundred weight below the uniform price announced by the 268 Market Administrator. However, producers of 82% of the milk delivered to the League during the month of November received an additional differential of 20¢ per hundred weight, which brought the average payment to all of its producers considerably above the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator.

(Granted.) 50. The reasonable wholesale delivered cost per quart of milk in glass bottles to stores in New York City upon the basis of the Class I price, including operation of country receiving plants, freight, processing, bottling, delivery costs, taxes, license fees, and reasonable overhead expenses, was from 9¢ to 9¾¢ per quart, during the months of September, October, and November, 1938.

(Refused.) 51. The Dairymen's League, during the period that Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 have been in effect, has not achieved or attempted to achieve a monopoly in the handling or sale of milk in the metropolitan milk market.

(Refused.) 52. Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 in no way tend to create or effectuate a monopoly.

(Granted.) 53. During the months of September, October, and November, 1938, the prices fixed by the New Jersey Milk Control Board were for milk delivered at the dealer's plant in New Jersey. Such prices were applicable only to milk produced and sold in New Jersey and did not apply to milk produced in other states, such as New York and Pennsylvania, and sold, for example, in Northern New Jersey markets. (Refused.) No price being fixed for such milk, the market for milk imported into New Jersey from other states was a highly competitive one.

(Granted.) 55. The Market Administrator, E. M. Harmon, at no time coerced or intimidated any handler of milk; nor did he threaten to use or use his influence to cut off any handler's supply of 269 milk in order to induce said handler to sign a marketing agreement or to comply with Order No. 27 or for any other purpose; nor did any person, agency, or association, acting under the said E. M. Harmon's direction or with his advice or consent, threaten, coerce, or intimidate any handler in any manner whatsoever or for any purpose connected with the formulation, promulgation, administration, or enforcement of the marketing agreement, or Order No. 27 or otherwise.

(Refused.) 56. None of the defendants were in any way threatened, coerced, or intimidated by any person with the purpose or intent of compelling any of the defendants to sign a marketing agreement or to comply with Order No. 27.

Respectfully submitted.

Y. Said corporation operates milk receiving stations at Solsville, Madison County, N. Y.; Oriskany Falls, Oneida 279 County, N. Y., and Bridgewater, Oneida County, N. Y., receiving a minimum of more than 40,000 quarts of milk daily from milk producers. Said milk is all resold in the City of New York.

(Granted because stipulated.) 5. On June 7th, 1937, a Certificate of Incorporation of "Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc.," hereinafter referred to as "Bargaining Agency," was filed in the Office of the Secretary of State, of the State of New York, whereby there was created a membership corporation. Said Certificate provided in part:

"10. The membership of the corporation, shall be limited to cooperative associations organized under or subject to the provisions of the Cooperative Corporations Law of the New York State, or of similar laws of any other State, and organized and controlled by milk producers."

Shortly thereafter, the Dairymen's League and Sheffield Cooperative became members of said new corporation or Bargaining Agency. Other cooperatives, operating country receiving plants, were solicited to become members of the Bargaining Agency, and some did so. The officers, members, agents, and servants of the Bargaining Agency assisted in the formation of cooperative corporations among the milk producers delivering milk to plants owned by independent dealers, including defendant Jetter.

Said Bargaining Agency is the intervening plaintiff.

(Granted same as pltffs 41.) 6. The Bargaining Agency presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and to the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York a proposed marketing agreement and Order, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and requested a hearing thereon under the authority of the Act, and under the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York. A true, correct, and complete copy of such proposed marketing agreement and order, together with the notice of hearing thereon, is attached as Exhibit 21 to the stipulation of agreed facts, hereinafter referred to as "stipulation."

(Refused because better stated in plaintiffs 36.) 7. The intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "Dairymen's League," is a cooperative corporation, organized under the cooperative corporations law of the State of New York, and having its principal place of business at Utica, N. Y.

280 (Granted Public, No. 127 changed to 137 same as pltff's no. 5.) 8. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 8b and 8c of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (Public, No. 127, 75th Congress; 50 Stat. 246; 7 U. S. C. 601 et seq.) (hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary"), on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed Order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, gave notice of public hearings to be held at the same times and places on an Order substantially identical with the aforesaid Order.

(Granted same as plaintiff's no. 6.) 9. Pursuant to the terms of the said notices, and upon the request of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to Section 10 (i) of the Act, and Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, joint public hearings were conducted by Glen J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriculture, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearings, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf of the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, the aforesaid public hearings were conducted at Albany, N. Y., on May 16, 1938; at Malone, N. Y., on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, N. Y., on May 18, 1938; at Elmira, N. Y., on May 19, 1938; and at New York, N. Y., on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then recessed until May 24, 1938, and were continued at New York, N. Y., on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, N. Y., on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid, all interested parties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the provisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed Order. The said hearings were attended by producers, representatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area. All of the defendants knew of said hearings, but none of the defendants appeared or were represented at any hearing.

281 August 1938, the Secretary, pursuant to the provisions of Section 8e of the Act, made a finding and proclaimed that, as to milk produced for sale in the marketing area, the purchasing power of such milk during the base period, August 1909 to July 1914, could not be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture, but that the purchasing power of such milk could be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture for that portion of the post-war period between August 1921 and July 1929, inclusive.

(Granted substantially same as pltff's. no. 8.) 11. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings, and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of the proposed Order (which notice was published in the Federal Register on July 23, 1938), the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said Order containing the terms and conditions held by the Secretary to be authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner as, and made applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said order also contains the findings by the Secretary, required by the applicable provisions of the Act, to be made by him.

(Granted same as pltff's. no. 3.) 12. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to the findings and provisions, of any of them, of the proposed Order, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, on August 5, 1938, made the findings as required by Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, and issued proposed Official Order No. 126 which Order is substantially identical with Order No. 27 and contains the terms and conditions held by the Commissioner to be authorized by the applicable provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York and no others.

(Granted same as pltff's. no. 15.) 13. On the 5th day of A'gust 1938, the Secretary tentatively approved a marketing agreement regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, and on or 282 about August 6, 1938, delivered copies thereof to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the Order, but prior to the issuance of said Order, handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said Order, which was marketed within the marketing area, failed or refused to sign said marketing agreement.

(Granted substantially same as pltffs. 16.) 14. Under authority of the provisions of Section 8c (19) of the Act, Secretary conducted a referendum of producers in order to assist him in determining whether the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938 (said month having, on the 25th day of July 1938, been determined by the Secretary to be a representative period), were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area. The referendum was held at the times and places set forth in a schedule of polling places issued by the Department of Agriculture prior to said referendum.

(Granted over pltffs. 23.) 15. After conducting said referendum and after the refusal or failure of handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said Order, which was marketed within the marketing area to sign the tentatively approved marketing agreement relating to milk, the Secretary on the 24th day of August 1938, made a determination, which determination was approved by the President:

(a) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such marketing agreement, tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

(b) That the issuance of the Order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

(c) That the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area, and who voted in the above mentioned referendum.

Said findings and determination were published by the Secretary in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit II to stipulation.

(Granted same as pltff's. no 23.) 16. On August 25, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, found, after conducting a poll, that the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least 75 per cent of the producers for milk produced in the production area for the marketing area, and 283 declared Official Order No. 126 to be effective on September 1, 1938. Said Order has not been terminated.

(Granted substantially same as plaintiff's no. 26.) 17. On August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an Order which was published in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, said Order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938. Order No. 27 has not been terminated.

Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are herein after referred to as the "Order."

(Granted.) 18. The Order established prices to be paid for milk

Class I, is fixed arbitrarily, depending upon the market price for butter. Class 2A milk, utilized in the manufacture of cream for fluid consumption, is likewise arbitrarily fixed. Under such provisions, the price for fluid milk, has been since September 1, 1938, $2.45 per cwt.

Prices for milk manufactured into various milk products, are the assumed market values thereof, based on market prices of the products into which said milk is manufactured, and which products are sold in country-wide competition. These prices are determined monthly by the Administrator in accordance with the formulas therefor contained in the Order.

(Granted.) 19. The Metropolitan Marketing Area, as defined by the Order, includes the City of New York, and territory adjacent thereto, wholly within the territorial botindaries of the State of New York.

(Granted.) 20. Milk dealers, licensed as such, under the provisions of Sections 253 and 257 of the Agriculture and Markets Law of the State of New York, alone, have the right to engage in the purchase and sale of milk in said Marketing Area, and the term "milk dealer" includes

"Any person who purchases or handles or sells milk, including * * * cooperative corporations and unincorporated cooperative associations."

(Granted except that the figures should read Art. V, Sec. 3.) 21. All handlers purchasing milk in the production area, are required to report to the Market Administrator monthly, a statement of the amounts of milk purchased by such handler, and the utilization 84 thereof, Article V, Section 2. (Granted, should read Art. VI sec. 1.) Based on the total reports, the Administrator computes the total value of the milk of such handler, based on the prices provided for in the Order, Article VI, Sec. 7. The result of such computation, is the handler's "net pool obligation."

(Granted.) 22. By the provisions of Article VI, Section 2, the Administrator computes from all reports of all handlers, a so-called "uniform price," which is deemed to be the average price payable to producers for milk for such month, subject to certain differentials which are hereinafter referred to. Such computation is made after subtracting certain special payments to cooperatives, and to proprietary handlers, under the provisions of Article VII, Sections 5 and 6.

(Granted.) 23. By the provisions of Article VII, Section 1, on or before the 25th day of each month, "each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers," is required to pay to each producer the uniform price for all milk delivered by producers during the preceding month and which was sold in the marketing area.

(Granted.) 24. Cooperative associations which are handlers a not required to make payment for similar milk at the uniform pr or at any stated price.

(Granted.) 25. All handlers are required by the provisions Article VII, Section 8, on or before the 18th day of each month, pay to the Market Administrator, for the Producer Settlement Fu "the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the pool milk of such handler by the uniform price." Applied to flu milk, under this provision, each handler is required to pay to th Producer Settlement Fund, for all milk so utilized, the differen between $2.45 per cwt. and the uniform price for all Class I milk.

(Granted.) 26. Handlers selling milk received from producers i the production area, but marketed outside of the marketing area, a under no requirement to pay the uniform price for such milk, n do they pay into the Producer Settlement Fund for the differen between the uniform price and the actual market value of suc milk, or otherwise. Such handlers are permitted to blend prices pai or purported to have been paid for such milk sold in other market with the uniform price announced by the Administrator for mil sold in the area, thereby reducing the actual price paid by suc handlers for milk sold in the Metropolitan Area in competition wit milk sold by the defendants.

The construction placed upon said provisions of Order No 285 27 by the Secretary, is set forth in a pamphlet issued by th United States Department of Agriculture, Dairy Section, i October 1938, on the cover of which is printed "Market Adminis trator, New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, 95 Madiso Avenue, New York, N. Y." Page 14 of said pamphlet states:

"Uniform Pool Prices for Producers

"Handlers are required to pay the uniform pool, or blended price calculated by the Market Administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class 1 milk outside of the Marketing Area. In such instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable. For the remainder of each producer's milk, the handler may pay such prices as he sees fit, but is required to furnish the producer with a statement of the percentage of the producer's milk paid for the uniform price."

Thus, the handler may multiply the total pounds of milk sold by it in the area by the uniform price; multiply the total pounds of milk sold in other markets and which is called "unpriced milk," by "such prices as it sees fit"; add the totals, and divide by the total pounds of milk, to obtain the average or "blended" price paid producers for all milk. If the price figured by the handler for unpriced milk is lower than its actual market value, the handler, by blending, is thereby permitted to pay producers for all milk at less than the Order price, and less than the actual value thereof.

(Granted.) 27. While cooperative corporations are exempted from any requirement to pay either the uniform price to its producers, or any stated proportion thereof, and are permitted to blend prices of milk received in the production area in accordance with their sales or portions thereof in the marketing area, and portions in other markets, in addition, said cooperatives are, by the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c (5) (F), U. S. Code, permitted to "blend" any prices actually paid, with prices obtained or charged for unpriced milk produced outside of the production area.

(Granted.) 28. The principal health authority in the Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, as described by the Order, is the Department of Health of the City of New York, which inspects country receiving plants, farms, dairies, and other facilities of milk producers, as well as bottling and distributing facilities covering all milk sold within the City of New York.

286 Some of the milk receiving stations in the production area which are approved by the Department of Health of the City of New York, are also approved by the Health authorities of the City of Newark, State of New Jersey, and by the State of New Jersey for delivery to Newark and other cities and communities in said State.

(Granted.) 29. The Official records of the Department of Health of the City of New York, as of August, 1938, disclosed that there were 54,111 milk producers whose dairies had been inspected and approved for the production of Grade B milk for shipment to and sale in the City of New York; 6,109 milk producers, whose dairies had been approved for the production of Grade A milk for shipment to, and sale in the City of New York, making in all 60,220 milk producers. Said producers were located in the States of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Vermont, herein referred to as the "production area." Included therein, are the producers delivering to defendant's plants.

(Granted.) 30. Approximately 420 country receiving plants have been approved for the receiving and shipping of Grade B milk, and approximately 86 milk receiving plants have been approved for receiving and shipping Grade A milk, making a total of approximately 506 milk receiving stations in all, in said production area. Included therein, are defendants' receiving stations.

(Granted.) 31. At all the times hereinafter mentioned, defendant Jetter Dairy Company, hereinafter referred to as "Jetter," was a competitor of, and has sold milk in its business, in competition with dealers operating the country milk receiving stations in the New York Milk Shed above referred to, and who shipped milk received at said stations to the Metropolitan Area and sold the same in competition with milk sold by said defendant. The defendants Rock Royal Co-operative, and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, at all the times herein mentioned, have been and now are, selling milk to independent deal-

Defendant Jetter is an independent dealer.

The defendant Jetter, the dealers purchasing the milk supply of defendants Rock Royal and Schuyler Junction, and said competit fluid consumption in the City of New York are all "milk dealers" defined by Section 253 of the New York Agriculture and Mark of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

(Granted.) 34. Dairymen's League was in August, 1938, operatin 109 approved milk receiving plants in the New York Milk She receiving milk from 11,391 producers.

(Granted.) 35. The records of the Department of Health of th
City of New York, show that as of August 1938, Bordens operate 65 approved milk receiving stations, receiving milk from 8,404 pr ducers. All of said producers were and are members of Dairymen League; milk of said producers is delivered to Bordens and paymen therefor, is made by Bordens to said Dairymen's League, which i turn pays said producers, and also pays producers delivering mil to its own plants.

(Granted as modified by insertion of the words "by all handlers."
36. The number of approved producers included in Dairymen League membership was in August 1938, upwards of 19,500.

(Granted.) 38. The Milk Control Board of the State of New Jersey, fixed a base price of $2.76 per cwt. to producers for 3.5 milk F.O.B. country milk plants, which price was in effect in New Jersey from September 1st and still continues.

Said Milk Control Board of the State of New Jersey fixed the wholesale price from dealers to stores, at 11¢ per quart of milk bottled in glass in two rural districts, and at 12¢ per quart of milk in glass from dealers to stores in the three more heavily populated districts in the State, and fixed a minimum price to consumers out of stores in the two rural districts, of 12¢ per quart, and in the three heavily populated districts, of 13¢ per quart.

The fair market value of "unpriced" Class 1 milk produced in the production area and sold by handlers in New Jersey (based on producers and resale prices fixed by Control Board), in September, October, and November 1938, was $2.76 per cwt.

(Granted.) 39. The uniform price for 3.5 milk in the 200-mile zone fixed by the Administrator was as follows: September, $1.87; October, $1.91; November, $2.10.

The Dairymen's League paid its producers a base price for 3.5 milk in the 200-mile zone, in cash and certificates of indebtedness (considered as cash), as follows: September, $1.75 per cwt.; October, $1.81 per cwt.; November $2.01 per cwt.

289 The difference between the value of Class 1 milk sold by the Dairymen's League in New Jersey (as fixed by the New Jersey Control Board), and the prices paid for the same to produce[illegible] per cwt., was as follows: September, $1.01 per cwt.; October, 95¢ p[illegible] cwt.; and November 75¢ per cwt.

(Granted.) 40. The amount by which the price actually paid for Class 1 milk sold in the marketing area was reduced by "blending" proceeds of New Jersey milk with proceeds of New York milk, as applied generally to the Dairymen's League, was as follows:

The Dairymen's League, as a distributor, was engaged only in the wholesale or dealer-to-store and dealer-to-institutions trade. Total sales reported by the Dairymen's League of Class 1 milk sold in the marketing area, included its own wholesale business and amounts of Class 1 milk furnished to the Borden Company, delivered to its own stations and milk sold to other distributors. The following is a statement of the total amounts of milk utilized by the League in its own wholesale trade; the total amount of milk sold by it in Class 1, including amounts handled by Bordens, other dealers, and the League in its own distributing business, and a statement by which the Class 1 price would be reduced by applying the difference between the actual value of milk sold in New Jersey and the total actual price paid therefor to producers by the league:

Summarizing the total competitive advantage to the Dairymen's League from sales in New Jersey, payments under Article VII, Sections 5 and 6, Producer Settlement Fund, and by payment to producers for milk at less than the uniform price, the Dairymen's League had the following competitive advantages, as shown by the preceding tables:

(Granted.). 46. Sheffield Farms Company, a subsidiary of National airy, in September utilized 40,083,075 pounds of Class 1 milk in ew York State, and 6,426,443 pounds of milk in New Jersey, as well milk in other markets. For out-of-market milk, on September 24, 38, the Company negotiated with its producers, to pay the uniform ice in full payment for such out-of-market milk. The base price id by Sheffield Farms, was accordingly $1.87, or 89¢ per cwt. less e price fixed by the New Jersey Control Board. This amounted to 7,194.96. Applied to Class 1 milk used in the area (40,083,075 unds), this amounted to $.1427 per cwt. on said milk, and the Class 1 ice paid by the Sheffield Farms Company, was thereby reduced in t amount. The Sheffield Company received payments under Ar- le VII, Section 6, from the Producer Settlement Fund for market vice payments, $38,224.57, which, when applied to Class 1 milk, ounted to $.0936 per cwt., and was equivalent to a discount thereon.

Combining the two figures, the Sheffield Company, has a competitive advantage of $.2363 arising out of said two items for September milk.

n October, the Sheffield Company sold 6,737,848 pounds of milk in r Jersey, for which it paid $1.88 per cwt. The difference between New Jersey Control price fo $2.76 and said price, was 88¢, and illed $59,292.64. The Sheffield Company paid its producers for all k used in the area, at a base price of $1.87 per cwt., or 4¢ under the uniform price, on 67,306,590 pounds of milk, amounting to $25,322.63. The Company also received a market service payment of $26,430.96. The three concessions aggregate $91,656.23, which, when applied to 43,662,117 pounds of Class 1 milk, amounted to a concession or reduction of $.2099 per cwt.

(Granted.) 47. No evidence was received, showing the actual operations of the Borden Company, either quantity or utilization of milk purchased through the Dairymen's League, nor was any evidence received as to quantity of milk purchased by Sheffield Farms Company from cooperatives, or the prices paid by either Bordens or Sheffields for milk purchased from cooperative sources.

(Granted.) 48. By the provisions of the Order, proprietary handlers are required to pay producers the minimum prices stated therein, and are obliged to pay their own plant receiving costs. Dealers buying from cooperatives, are required by the Order, to pay cooperatives only the minimum prices without any necessity upon such handlers to pay, or upon such cooperatives, to charge, any sum as a handling charge to be applied on the cost of operating the milk-receiving station.

(Granted.) 49. The average daily fluid shipments of milk to New York City for the months of August and September 1938 were approximately as follows:

	Quarts
By rail, in tank cars	1,380,000
By rail, in 40-quart cans	140,000
By automobile tank trucks	1,568,000

Fluid milk shipments to New York, are approximately 50% by rail, and 50% by tank truck.

The allowances for trucking milk which are provided in Article VII, Section 6, Subsection 1, of Order No. 27, and Official Order No. 126, represent the approximate cost of shipping milk by tank trucks.

The standard rate, approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, for shipments of milk by rail in tank cars from points 201–210 miles from New York City, is 2.7 cents per gallon equivalent to 294 31.2 cents per hundredweight. The freight differentials in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, are approximate to the nearest half-cent of the differences per hundredweight between this standard tank car rate for the 201–210 mile zone and such rate for each other ten-mile zone. These standard tank car rates are 70% of the standard rate for the shipment of milk in 40-quart cans in less than carload lots. Truck competitive rates have been established at certain points which are somewhat lower than the approved standard tank car rates for those points.

Where shipment is made by rail in tank cars or in cans to a city plant not on railroad tracks, there is an additional cost for transportation between the rail terminal and the city plant. Where shipment by tank truck is from country receiving plants to city plants the tank truck delivers the milk to the city plant and the trucker's charge or truck operating cost covers such delivery to the city plant.

The truck rates for the first 25 miles are 9¢ per cwt., and beyond that zone, 1/10 of 1¢ per cwt. for each additional mile, amounting to 1¢ for each 10 miles.

50. Establishment of freight differentials was designed to make the base delivered cost of all milk to New York City the same.

(Granted.) Milk delivered to New York by truck, in the various zones, costs the handler, according to zones, the actual freight, plus or minus freight differentials, according to whether the point of origin is less or more than 200 miles. Without reducing the schedules to each 10-mile unit, the net freight cost, after applying the differentials, in various typical zones, is as follows:

50 "	.115	+.105	.225
100 "	.165	+.07	.235
150 "	.215	+.035	.25
200 "	.265	.00	.265
240 "	.305	−.02	.285
250 "	.315	−.02	.295
300 "	.365	−.045	.32
350 "	.415	−.08	.335
400 "	.465	−.09	.375
500 "	.565	−.14	.425

The Jetter Dairy Company, being in the 231–240 mile zone (actually 250 miles by highway), its total freight cost is 6½¢ more per cwt. than milk in the 25-mile zone. It is also higher than in any intermediate zone. Defendant, Schuyler Junction Cooperative's plant is at Schuyler Junction, N. Y., in the same zone; the plant of defendant, Rock Royal Cooperative is in the 176–180 mile zone, and the plants of the defendant Central Cooperative are principally beyond the 200-mile zone, so that the total delivered cost of said milk is greater than the delivered cost of upwards of % of all milk sold in the area.

Milk by volume within various zones is as follows:

(Granted.) 51. By the provisions of Article VI, Section 8, handlers receiving milk in 18 counties therein enumerated, in making return to the Administrator, are permitted to deduct 20¢ per cwt. for all net pool milk received from producers at plants in said counties. Producers in said counties are paid 20¢ per cwt. more for all milk than producers in other localities, including all producers delivering to the several defendants herein.

Accordingly, the price received by producers delivering to the three Cooperative defendants, is reduced by the increased amount of payments to producers in said 18 preferred counties, and in effect, moneys paid by handlers for milk of said defendent cooperatives, are in part expropriated to make such preferential payment to producers in the counties receiving such preferential payments.

(Granted.) 52. In effect, the uniform price return directed to be paid to producers delivering to the Jetter Dairy Company, is 296 reduced by payment to producers in the 18 preferential counties, and moneys of said producers delivering to defendant Jetter and other proprietary handlers, outside of said preferred counties are expropriated to make payment to producers therein of payment of 20¢ per cwt. in excess of the uniform price.

(Granted.) 53. All producers do not receive the same base price for milk. By the terms of the Order, and by its application in practice, there is a differentiation between producers, in payments made as follows:

a. Cooperative corporations are not required to pay the uniform price.

b. Cooperative handlers, which are also distributors, may sell milk direct to storekeepers and consumers at less than prices fixed by the Order, plus processing and delivery charges, and reduce payments to producers, to the extent of such underselling.

c. Cooperative corporations may charge back to their producers losses in operations as milk distributors whereas proprietary handlers cannot do so.

d. Producers in the 18 counties enumerated in Article VII, Section 8, receive 20¢ per cwt., preferential payment, on all their milk.

e. Payment to producers outside of the 18 counties above referred to, is reduced below the true uniform or average price for all milk, by the amounts deducted from them to make up the 20¢ plus paid to producers in said 18 counties.

f. Prices paid to producers delivering to handlers, whether cooperative or proprietary, which sell fluid milk in the Metropolitan Area, and also in the State of New Jersey and other markets, are paid less than the actual value of milk delivered by them, by the process of "blending" arbitrary prices for milk sold outside of the market, which bear no true relations to the actual value thereof, with prices charged for milk sold in the area.

g. Prices received by all producers delivering to either proprietary or cooperative handlers which do not receive the cooperative payments provided for by Article VII, Section 5 of the Order (the greater part of which is paid to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association), are reduced by the amounts deducted from the uniform price, and paid from the Producer Settlement Fund to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, and such other cooperatives as receive such payments.

(Granted.) 55. Handlers receiving milk containing more than 3.5 butterfat content, are at a disadvantage in finding markets, by reason to be paid to producers by the provisions of Article VII, Sec-97 tion 3 of the Order. Said handlers are, in effect, required to pay a greater base price for said milk by utilization, than is aid by handlers purchasing lower testing milk, and must either sell a loss or lose their customers.

(Granted.) 56. Handlers whose milk-receiving stations are beyond e nearby freight zones are at a disadvantage in selling milk, in that e base price of said milk delivered in New York, is increasingly gh, as the handlers' receiving stations are at increasing distances om New York.

(Granted.) 57. By the terms and application of the Order, there a differentiation between handlers who sell milk at wholesale and tail in the marketing area, and the prices required to be paid by id handlers for fluid milk, in the following particulars:

a. Cooperative handlers, who are also distributors, are under no quirement to pay any stated price for milk sold to stores and con-mers.

b. The price accounted by cooperative handlers to the Producer ttlement Fund is reduced by payments to them out of said Fund, rsuant to Article VII, Section 5.

c. The large handlers, both cooperative and proprietary, being ncipally National Dairy subsidiaries, Bordens and subsidiaries, irymen's League and several smaller companies, including Queens-o Farms Products, Inc., and the several companies operated by ron J. Rubenfeld, which are engaged in manufacturing milk into k products, receive so-called "market service payments" under icle VII, Section 6, which are not and cannot be received by small dlers, who combine fluid milk operations with manufacturing on nall scale in their own plants, thereby in effect, substantially re-ing the prices paid by such large handlers for milk utilized in d form.

. Proprietary handlers purchasing direct from producers are ged to pay for the cost of maintenance and operation of milk-re-ing stations, and the cost of receiving milk, whereas handlers chasing from cooperative associations are required to pay only the e price for such milk. Such receiving station or plant handling s are from 15¢ to 30¢ per cwt.

By the terms and application of the Order, the same large han-s referred to in the next preceding paragraph, both proprietary cooperative, in making payment for all milk purchased in the duction area, are permitted to pay a blended price, which price is puted upon the prices fixed in the Order for milk sold in the keting area, and with arbitrary prices fixed by such handlers as see fit, for milk sold outside of the area, which milk is known unpriced milk," thereby, in effect, reducing the price paid by such dlers for fluid milk sold in the marketing area.

one of the defendants are engaged in the manufacture of milk ducts. None of said defendants are engaged in marketing milk

298 f. National Dairy subsidiaries, including Sheffield Farms and the Borden Company, purchase milk from cooperatives. The Dairymen's League, which is also a distributor, is a cooperative. Said companies, by the reports filed with the Administrator, handle more than 50% of the fluid milk sold in the area, and the greater part of milk sold out of the area.

g. Handlers purchasing milk in areas producing milk of high butterfat content pay a higher price for milk utilized in fluid form than handlers purchasing milk of less butterfat content, although the re-sale price of such milk in New York City is neither greater nor lessor by reason of butterfat content.

h. Handlers purchasing milk beyond the 25-mile zone, in each succeeding zone, pay a greater delivered cost for milk delivered to the marketing area, for the reason that the freight differentials established by the provisions of Article IV, Section 3, are not comparable to the actual difference in freight costs, said unfavorable difference increasing from ½¢ per cwt. in the 50-mile zone to 22½¢ per cwt. in the 500 mile zone.

i. Defendant Rock Royal's plant is in the 176–180-mile zone; the plants of the defendant Jetter and Schuyler Junction Cooperative are in the 231–240-mile zone, and the several plants of the defendant Central Cooperative are beyond the 200-mile zone.

(Refused.) 58. Handlers operating manufacturing plants may and do utilize milk for manufacture of storage fluid cream at prices substantially less than those charged under the Order for milk utilized as fresh fluid cream, such handlers on the same day place in the same warehouse fresh cream for storage and remove cream already stored; such handlers also have permits to ship fresh skim milk to the City of New York. Fresh skim milk and fresh cream may be placed together, be agitated and the same becomes "whole milk."

(Granted.) The Market Administrator has no facilities for checking the actual disposition of milk reported by various handlers nor for checking whether cream withdrawn from storage is cream which was already in storage or is cream delivered to the storage plant and immediately withdrawn. The size and complicated nature of utilization of milk by the large companies, their plant-to-plant transactions within their own business, and their in-market and out-of-market sales make it impractical for the Administrator to check the accuracy of reported utilization and disposition except from the books of such large handlers.

(Granted.) 59. In the fierce competition for fluid milk business in the Metropolitan Area, hereinafter referred to, there is a strong incentive to manipulate milk between plants and in and out of the market by the large companies, having facilities so to do, for the purpose of obtaining a competitive advantage. Such large companies have made full use of such competitive advantage in application of the Order of their business.

99 (Granted.) 60. Prices fixed by the Administrator pursuant to the formulas contained in the Order for approved milk tilized in the manufacture of cheese for the months of September nd October 1938 were less than the prices paid by cheese factories urchasing unapproved milk which was not subject to regulation of ny health authority to the extent of 20¢ per cwt. The cost of pro-ucing unapproved milk is less than the cost of producing approved ilk. Bordens, National Dairy, and the League were able to and id purchase approved milk for such cheese purposes, since they are so engaged in such business, and thereby enjoy discriminatory dvantage.

(Refused in this form.) 61. Prices paid by butter factories for eam from unapproved sources on the basis of 3.5 milk was less an the value of such cream plus the value of skim milk after the me was separated to the extent of upwards of 20¢ per cwt. in the onths of September and October 1938. Approved production of ilk is not required for butter. Borden, National Dairy, and ueensboro were able to and did purchase approved milk for such itter purposes, since they are also engaged in said business, and ereby enjoy discriminatory advantage.

(Granted.) 62. The Dairymen's League News for May 17, 1938, xhibit 24 in evidence, states "Today, more than half of all milk sold the Metropolitan district is handled through stores."

The average minimum delivered cost per quart of fluid milk deliv-ed to stores in New York City by handlers, based on the prices ed in the Order, has been since September 1st, 1938, and now is ¼¢ per quart.

(Granted.) 63. On September 1, 1938, a majority of the handlers lling Grade B milk in the dealer-to-store trade raised the price of ch milk to 9¾¢ per quart.

(Granted.) 64. On September 1, 1938, the Jetter Dairy Company d been selling to one Weintraub 30 cases of milk daily at 9¾¢ per art. On September 4, 1938, intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's ague solicited said account, and by selling at 9¢ per quart, acquired cases of said trade. Gold Medal Farms, Inc., by same price cut-g as the League on same day also acquired 10 cases of said trade. order to retain the balance of 10 cases of such trade, Jetter Dairy mpany was compelled to and did reduce its price to 9¢ per quart on ptember 5, 1938.

(Granted.) 65. Within two weeks after September 1st) milk was being sold generally in the dealer to store trade in the City of New York at from 8¢ to 9¢ per quart. The Shef-d Farms Company, in order to capture the trade of Herman vender, furnished said Lavender milk at 9¾¢ per quart; rebated said Lavender ¾¢ per quart on all purchases, and in addition reto delivered 13 quarts per case, the extra quart of milk further ucing the price ¾¢ per quart, making the net cost to said Laven-8¼¢ per quart.

The Sheffield Company sold milk to one Rose Paley; gave her 35 cases of milk free, in order to induce her to buy "Breakstone" milk." Prior to that time the Dairymen's League had given the same witness 35 cases of free milk to procure her to buy Dairymen's League milk. The Grandview Dairy Company refused to give Mrs. Paley any free milk, and she discontinued buying from them, obtaining her requirements from Sheffields and Dairymen's League, which made the concessions above referred to. Sheffields billed milk to Mrs. Paley at 9¾¢ per quart, collected that amount, and rebated to her in cash at the rate of ¾¢ per quart. The Dairymen's League charged her 9¢ per quart.

(Granted.) 66. The practices above referred to were general throughout the milk industry and the capture of trade by price cutting is known as "chiseling."

(Granted.) 67. Certain producer dealers, with large numbers of cows, are not subject to the Order. The Balsam Dairy Company selling milk in Brooklyn, sold milk to Israel Hock, storekeeper at 8½¢ per quart in September 1938.

(Granted.) 68. It is common practice in the marketing area for storekeepers to buy milk from several dealers, varying the quantities purchased from each in accordance with the price concessions, free milk, or other concessions, which such storekeepers can obtain from one dealer as against another.

(Granted.) 69. From September 1st, 1938, to January 1st, 1939, the Jetter Dairy Company lost 240 cases of daily trade to competitors by reason of concessions. It recaptured upwards of 200 cases of this trade, but in doing so, was obliged to give in free milk, cream and cash, several hundreds of dollars. In addition, said defendant sustained a loss on each quart of milk sold by it through the Jetter Dairy Company or the Triboro Milk & Cream Co., which sold milk received from producers delivering to the Jetter Dairy Company. In order to stop further losses of trade captured by competitors who undersold the Jetter Dairy Company and Triboro Milk & Cream Company, the said defendant was obliged to reduce 301 the price of milk charged to al customers to prices ranging from 8¢ to 9¢ per quart, in order to meet such competition. The principal stockholders of Jetter Dairy Company and Triboro Milk & Cream Co., are identical.

(Granted.) 70. The Order contains no provision prohibiting unfair methods of competition and unfair trade practices, as permitted by Title 7, Section 608c (7) (A).

(Granted.) 71. Intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League is a member of a so-called "Farm Conference Board," being the only member of the Board engaged in the purchase and sale of milk. Said Farm Conference Board proposed, and the Dairymen's League actively sponsored and supported in the New York State Legislature a proposed Act known as the "Rogers-Allen Bill," which was enacted as Chapter 383 of the 1937 Laws of the State of New York. Pursuant to the provisions or purported provisions of said Act, hereafter referred to as the "Rogers-Allen Law," the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, was formed. Several directors of the Dairymen's League acted as incorporators of said corporation, and were active in the creation and organization thereof.

(Refused.) The general counsel for the Dairymen's League was the counsel for the Bargaining Agency in the preparation and filing of the Certificate of Incorporation of said Bargaining Agency.

(Granted.) 72. Following incorporation of the Bargaining Agency, its officers, directors and employees procured producers selling milk to proprietary handlers, to form many cooperative corporations for the purpose of joining the Bargaining Agency. Cooperatives were formed around the three plants operated by the defendant Jetter, which were known at the Solsville Milk Producers Cooperative Inc.; the Oriskany Falls Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc., and the Bridgewater Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc. Only the Bridgewater Cooperative joined the Bargaining Agency. The Bargaining Agency, in some instances, advanced the fees for filing certificates of incorporation.

(Granted, except as to words in parenthesis.) 73. In July 1937, E. M. Harmon addressed a meeting of the Bargaining Agency with regard to "government aid" in a marketing program. On October 5, 1937, a committee of attorneys was appointed by the Bargaining Agency to prepare a surplus program or plan. In November 1937, Allan Miller, attorney for the Dairymen's League, presented to said committee, a proposed milk marketing agreement. E. M. Harmon, employee of the Dairy Section of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, spent three days monthly commencing with November, 1937, with representatives of the Bargaining Agency (in consultation about such program).

Conferences continued through January and February 1938 and on February 20, 1938, a directors' meeting of the Bargaining Agency was held in Syracuse, N. Y., in which the program, which ended in the adoption of the Federal and State marketing orders, was formally launched. An account thereof is contained in Exhibit 23–C to the stipulation in evidence, which quotes Edmund F. Cooke, counsel for the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency in this action, as saying "in the long run, the Producers' Bargaining Agency will prove to the milk industry of the State that their program is the right one."

In the Market News issued by the Bargaining Agency for April 1938 reference was made to said Marketing Order program. Said news stated "just as soon as this plan has met the approval of the Federal Officials, he will present it to our readers complete, and Chairman Rolfe, with the assistance of Executive Secretary Baldwin and fieldmen, have arranged many meetings among the members, at which the plan will be discussed in detail."

(Granted.) 74. Thereafter, the Bargaining Agency presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and to the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, the proposed marketing order, referred to in the 6th Finding of Fact herein. The (Granted.) 75. Prior to the referendum there were sent to each producer as to whom available information indicated that he might be eligible to vote in said referendum (a) a copy of the Order as issued August 5, 1938, by the Secretary; (b) a schedule of polling places (Exhibit 7 to stipulation); (c) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture entitled "Questions and Answers on the Federal-State Milk Program for New York" (a copy of which pamphlet is Exhibit 8 to stipulation); and (d) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "New York Milk, Explanation of the Federal-State Marketing Plan Contained in Order No. 27" (a copy of which pamphlet is Exhibit 9 to stipulation). Approximately 70,000 copies of the said Order, the said schedule of polling places, and the said pamphlets were sent through Federal-State Agencies to such producers. A copy of letter accompanying such material sent to producers in New York State is Exhibit 10 to stipulation.

(Granted.) 76. Prior to said referendum and poll the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, in furtherance of the 303 scheme, carried on an elaborate campaign of false and misleading propaganda through the medium of newspapers, radio speeches, letters, pamphlets and otherwise, calculated to influence milk producers entitled to vote therein, or whose votes were entitled to be cast on their behalf by cooperatives.

On April 29, 1938, the Secretary signed a notice of hearing on the proposed Marketing Order and published said notice to the producers in the New York Milk Shed, accompanied by a proposed Order, stating, however:

"The provisions proposed by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., are set forth below as possible provisions of a marketing agreement and of an order. Their publication in this form is for the convenience of interested parties and is not to be considered as in any way signifying their approval by the Secretary of Agriculture."

Hearings on the proposed Federal and State Orders were held jointly thereafter. Coincident therewith, and on or about April 29, 1938, the Bargaining Agency, issued a 24-page booklet, on the cover of which was contained the following statement: "Mr. Dairyman * * * Save this Booklet. The Plan It Explains May Save your Farm." Said booklet contained statements which were grossly untrue, and in particular, stated on page 1:

"Principles Upon Which the Order Is Based

"The fundamental requirements of the industry which this Order seeks to establish are five in number, viz:

"1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.

"2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid market.

* * * * * * *

"Complete simplicity in the terms of the Order is impossible partly because of the complexity of the subject dealt with and partly because of the impossibility of giving the desired legal effect to certain provisions without employing the language of the Courts. It is confidently believed that the present Order can successfully withstand any assaults upon its legality."

Prior to the vote on said proposed Orders, widespread, innumerable statements and representations were made to all producers in the area, by both the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League, their members, agents, servants, and affiliates, to the effect that all handlers would be required to pay the uniform price to all producers, and that no handler had a competitive advantage over the other. Specifically, as an example, the Dairymen's League News, the official newspaper of the Dairymen's League, on August 16, 1938, contained the following statements on page 5:

"The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool, or blended price, calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class 1 milk outside of the marketing area. In such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable.

* * * * * * *

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk sold in the marketing area, and assures for that milk payments to all producers at a uniform rate except for the transportation and zone differentials provided."

Thereafter, the Department of Agriculture in August, 1938, issued a printed pamphlet under the seal of the Department, stating on pages 12 and 13:

"The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool, or blended price, calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as class 1 milk outside of the marketing area.

* * * * * * *

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk sold in the marketing area, and for that milk assures payments to all producers at a uniform rate except for the transportation and zone differentials provided."

The foregoing statements were and are untrue. Identical provisions of Article 1 of said Orders, provide:

"5. 'Producer' means any person who produces milk which is delivered to a handler at a plant which is approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

"6. 'Handler' means any person who engages in the handling of milk, or cream therefrom, which was received at a plant approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

* * * * * * *

"This definition shall be deemed to include a cooperative association of producers with respect to any milk received from producers at any plant operated by such association or with respect to any milk which it causes to be delivered from producers to any other handler for the account of such association and for which such association collects payment."

"SECTION 1. Time of Payment.—On or before the 25th day of each month, each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers shall make payment to each producer for all milk delivered by such producer at any plant during the preceding month at not less than the uniform price, subject to differentials set forth in sections 2 and 3 of this article."

305 (Granted except as to last sentence.) 77. Said representations as to the text and effect of said proposed marketing Order, were untrue. There was no provision requiring payment of a uniform price to all producers, or any requirement that any stated price or any price bearing relation to the prices by the Order, be paid to producers of cooperatives including the Dairymen's League. By reason of the differentiation between various producers as to locality, and otherwise, stated in Finding No. 53 herein, there was no general equality of payments to producers. Moneys were expropriated from various groups of producers according to location, the particular type of handler to which producers delivered and otherwise, as therein stated.

(Granted.) 78. The statement to the effect that all handlers pay the same cost for milk in the marketing area was also untrue for the reasons stated in paragraphs 55 through 59, inclusive.

(Granted if changed to many of the producers instead of the producers.) 79. The producers who votes in the referendum and poll, expressed only their favor or disfavor with regard to a marketing order which assured equal treatment and equal payments to all producers, and an equal price to be paid for milk by all handlers.

(Granted same as plaintiffs no. 22.) 80. The results of the aforesaid referendum were as follows: 45,644 votes cast, of which 7,017 were rejected as invalid. Of the 38,627 votes counted as valid, 33,663 votes, or 87.1 percent were in favor of the issuance of the Order, and 4,964 votes, or 12.9 percent were opposed thereto. Of the 7,017 votes which were rejected, 6,547 votes were rejected either because the voters were members of cooperative associations which had cast ballots for all of their members, or because the voters were not qualified to vote, not having delivered milk to an approved plant during the month of May 1938. Of the votes rejected for this season, 5,110 votes were in favor of the issuance of the Order, and 1,437 votes were opposed thereto, 470 votes were rejected because the voter had failed to mark his ballot either for or against the Order, or because it was not possible to determine whether the ballot was marked for or against the Order.

(Granted if the word "substantial" is inserted before "evidence" in the 3rd line, and if the words "many of the producers" be substituted for "the producers" in the 3 and 4 lines). 81. The finding that the order "was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who * * * voted in the above mentioned referendum," was unsupported by any evidence, and said referendum determined only that the producers voting therein "favored an order which required equal payments to all producers, and payment of the same price for milk by all handlers." The inference to be drawn from such vote, was that such producers did not favor or approve 306 an order which exempted large handlers from payment of the uniform price to their producers, and which did not require equal prices to be paid by all handlers, but on the contrary, permitted certain large handlers to pay reduced prices for their milk supply.

(Granted.) 82. The Dairymen's League actively sponsored the proposed Federal and State Marketing Orders, and, as disclosed by the hearing, Exhibit A-3 to the stipulation, by its attorneys, attended all hearings, examined various witnesses and introduced elaborately prepared evidence in book form. The Dairymen's League News, its official organ, actively advocated adoption of the Order and attacked persons, newspapers, and others, who were either actually against adoption of the Order or who were claimed to be against the same.

(Granted.) 83. The Bargaining Agency, of which the Dairymen's League was the largest member, expended between December 1st, 1937, and June 1st, 1938, $63,338.76 for salaries of employees and directors, publicity, printing, radio ($4,405.51), and other expenses while carrying on the Federal-State Order program; from June 1st to September 1st, a three-month period, the Agency spent $45,299.15; radio expenditures increased to $7,029.05, and advertising and publications (exclusive of "Market News"), $7,979.79. From September 1st, 1938, to December 1st, 1938, the Agency expended $31,348.98; there were no expenditures for radio and advertising and publications dropped to $2,871.91.

(Granted.) 84. The activities of the Bargaining Agency are partly reviewed in Exhibit 59. E. C. Bardin, in his report printed therein stated (Dec. 5, 1938):

"With field men and other directors, I have travelled approximately 20,000 miles spreading the gospel of cooperation. I have not tried to discuss the details of the Order, but have dealt with the broad general program."

Homer S. Rolfe, in the President's address at the same time, said (see Defendants' Exhibit 59):

"Last year at the first annual meeting of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, I said that the occasion marked a new forward step in cooperative effort. I was referring to the fact that producers had been given the right to work together cooperatively by the enactment of the Rogers-Allen Law and now had an opportunity to solve their marketing problems.

"The Bargaining Agency is generally credited as being the form by which and the medium through which this plan was prepared and accepted by producers and with their support made effective. History will record that the long sought permanent marketing program to control surplus was established in 1938 on a solid foundation, backed by Federal-State assistance, and put into operation with a united producer support.

* * * * * * *

307 "On February 7, several representatives of the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture met with the Board of Directors. Work was started on drafting a marketing agreement to incorporate the principles that had been agreed upon.

* * * * * * *

"The first hearing was held at Albany on May 16th and the final one was held on June 4th. At hearings, members of Bargaining Agency appeared as proponents of order.

"It was not until August 18, 19, and 20 that voting took place. This gave the Bargaining Agency sufficient time to comply with requests for information and with the assistance of State and Federal officials, extension departments, and many volunteers, it was possible to acquaint producers generally with the provisions of the Order.

"In doing this, many meetings were held, the mail brought every producer copy of Order and official explanation, the American Agriculturist, dairy papers and newspapers brought out the facts and objectives, advertisements by newspapers and by radio, all combining brought forth a well informed and united producer sentiment for adoption of a surplus control plan as provided for in the Federal State Marketing Order.

"On August 25th, the result of the vote was announced and producers were delighted to find that the Order had been approved by approximately 87% of the qualified producers voting.

"The magnitude of the vote and the speed and determination with which it was put into effect were impressive."

(Granted.) 85. The Dairymen's League cast 22,287 votes in favor of Order No. 27, and 17,361 votes in favor of Official Order No. 126. Defendant Jetter, as a distributor, was permitted no vote. The producers under contract with the Dairymen's League, or who were members thereof, were permitted no vote.

(Granted.) 86. The Dairymen's League, having been accredited the privilege of casting 22,287 votes out of a total of 60,220 milk producers, the remaining milk producers in the production area together, if all voted, could not cast the two-thirds vote necessary to promulgate a marketing order agreeable to them. The Dairymen's League cast approximately two-thirds of the total number of 33,663 votes counted in favor of the issuance of the Order.

(Granted.) 87. The Orders were issued as a result of the program of the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League, begun with sponsoring of the Rogers-Allen Law and continued through the formation of the Bargaining Agency formulation and proposal by the Bargaining Agency, of the proposed Federal Order, and finally adoption of the same by the casting of 33,663 votes in favor of the Order, or which 22,287 were cast by the Dairymen's League.

308 (Granted.) 88. The purpose and effect of said program and Order was to give to the Dairymen's League a competitive advantage over its competitors, including the defendants, and to create in said Dairymen's League and the Bargaining Agency, and in handlers buying milk from them, to the exclusion of the defendants and all others, the control of fluid milk business in the marketing area. To that end, the Dairymen's League, Bargaining Agency, and E. Manning Gaynor (herein referred to as Gaynor), who was personal representative of intervening plaintiff Noyes, entered into a conspiracy to establish in said Dairymen's League, Bargaining Agency, and dealers purchasing milk from Bargaining Agency members, including Dairymen's League, an illegal monopoly in the purchase and sale of milk in said marketing area.

(Granted.) 89. One Charles H. Baldwin, acting individually and as Executive Secretary of the Bargaining Agency (herein called "Baldwin"); one Homer Rolfe and one Jay C. Treat, acting individually and as President and Secretary, respectively, of the intervening plaintiff Bargaining Agency, and intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League, uttered and published certain letters, pamphlets, official newspapers, to wit: The Bargaining Agency News and the Dairymen's League News, which said letters and other printed statements contained threats against any dealer who might appeal to the Courts for any adjudication of its rights, and entered upon a campaign to compel distributors and dealers of milk in the same position as defendants to sign contracts which surrendered their rights to due process. Said printed utterances were circulated among producers.

(Granted.) 90. Gaynor procured one Faulkner, a producer delivering milk to defendant Jetter, to visit said Gaynor at Leonardsville,

N. Y., and there requested Faulkner to arrange for withholding m of the defendant Jetter unless it signed a marketing agreement; a Gaynor requested one Dake to withhold delivery of substantial qua tities of milk from Eisenberg Farms, Inc. Said Dake withheld s milk until said Eisenberg signed, and then released the milk. Ga nor told Eisenberg that his milk would be released when he sign a marketing agreement in the Administrator's office. Eisenber signed at the Administrator's office, and his milk was released.

Baldwin, executive secretary of the Bargaining Agency, solicit one Dumont, who had been active in a milk strike during 1937, apply to the Market Administrator for a "job," which was 309 include visiting localities where dealers "refused to go alon with the Order" and "drying up" the milk stations of suc dealers by withholding milk until they complied.

(Granted.) 91. Said Gaynor, in public speeches and privately ove the telephone, threatened and caused to be threatened all dealers wit summary withholding of their milk supplies unless they signed mar keting agreements.

(Granted.) 92. On August 29th, 1938, C. H. Baldwin, acting ind vidually and as executive secretary of defendant Bargaining Agency, caused to be issued and distributed to producers delivering milk to defendant Jetter and to other producers in the marketing area letter, which letter contained the following:

"DEAR PRODUCER:

"Before you receive this letter a Federal-State Milk Marketing Order covering the Metropolitan New York Milk Market will hav been signed by the President. This Order will, no doubt, become effective September 1st.

"To the casual observer a wonderful battle has been won, but we who have known the opposition, realize that the real battle is ahead.

* * * * * * * *

"As you know, the dealers in Boston Took the Boston Order into Court and have held up its full operation for over a year. Over two million of the farmers' money has been held up by the dealers.

* * * * * * * *

"This, producers can stop by inducing dealers to consent, to the operation of the Order as an agreement. Your dealer, by such consent, voluntarily refrains from using the Courts to block the Order. * * * We want results through compliance with the Order, not law suits.

* * * * * * * *

"You will be contributing greatly towards that end if you singly or collectively with other producers insist that your dealer cooperate with others in signing this Order at once. If you have not already done this, won't you please take care of it immediately?

"Won't you also cooperate with me by giving your advice on questions that you will find on the enclosed page?"

Attached to said letter was purported questionnaire, which in part contained the following:

Questionnaire to be Returned to C. H Baldwin, Ex. Sec., Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., Room 118, Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, N. Y.

"1. Can you stand continued low prices while dealers argue this matter out in the courts?

"3. In your opinion, are farmers in your community ready for a movement to compel the buyers to sign the Order, pay the price, and live up to its terms?

"6. Will you support the Bargaining Agency in that move if others will?

"7. In Boston the dealers tied up over two million dollars of the farmers' money in the courts. Do you think farmers will work together to prevent dealers here from doing this?"

(Granted.) 93. On September 21st, 1938, Jay C. Treat, individually and as an Officer of the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, issued a letter which was circulated throughout the New York Milk Shed, and among producers delivering milk to defendant Jetter. This letter stated in part:

"almost every dealer in the Metropolitan Market has signed the agreement. In some instances, it has been necessary to exert producer pressure and the willingness of producers to cooperate in withholding or offering to withhold their milk until their dealer signed, has been encouraging and gratifying."

(Granted.) 94. During the early part of September 1938, Gaynor was principally engaged in directing producers and cooperative associations in a program of withholding milk from dealers who refused to sign the proposed agreement, or who did not make reports and comply with the order. Milk which was so withheld, was chiefly diverted to the intervening plaintiff Dairymen's League, which acted in concert and in cooperative with said Gaynor.

In the weekly newspaper of the plaintiff Dairymen's League, known as the "Dairymen's League News," and particularly in the copy thereof dated September 6th, 1938, on the first page thereof, was contained the following statement:

"Dealers Sign Up

"Fred H. Sexauer, president of the Dairymen's League, estimated the new program would raise League members' September returns $1,000,000 over what they receive for August milk.

"More than 75 per cent of New York's milk supply was under voluntary agreement when the plan began operating. Included were distributors buying from the Dairymen's League. They handle 40 per cent—approximately 50,000 cans daily—of the market's supply."

On page 14 of said issue, was the following statement:

"'NO FOOLIN', Say Sub-District 17–A Members

"At the August meeting of sub-district 17–A, held in the Congregational Church at Kiantone, as guests of Kiantone and Fresburg locals, delegates and associate delegates informed Director Grout in no uncertain terms that the membership of the sub-district will not allow dealers to nullify the benefits of the new marketing Order, by passing unanimously the following resolution:

* * * * * * *

"Whereas, in Boston with a similar order dealers have tied 311 up the cream of the milk check in court litigation, and threats of similar actions are circulated in this area, therefore be it

"Resolved, that sub-district 17–A in regular meeting ask and demand that our Association and officers insist on our full rights from the start of the State and Federal Marketing Order, and be it further

"Resolved, that all dealers be required to give satisfactory proof of the acceptance of the terms of the order, or no milk be sold them, and in carrying out this plan, we pledge our officers our cooperation and support in agreeing to any diversion necessary to accomplish their purposes."

On page 15 of said issue, the Market Administrator Harmon was quoted as saying:

"It is my duty to administer the rules and regulations that have been formulated and approved by producers. It is my purpose to do just that, and to do it to the best of my ability. This may at times not be to the liking of some people, some may be made unhappy."

(Granted.) 95. In the issue of the Dairymen's League News of September 20, 1938, the following item appeared on the front page:

"Producers Ready to Divert Milk From Non-Complying Dealers

"League Gets Vote of Thanks from Bargaining Agency for Its Offer of Marketing Facilities.

"Volunteer enforcement agents—100 strong—were riding the roads last week explaining to farmers how they could convince recalcitrant metropolitan milk handlers of the advantages of complying with the law by obeying the rules and regulations of the new federal-state marketing program.

"This action followed a meeting of delegates of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency in Syracuse, September 10. The delegates voted to have 100 farmers go out as volunteer enforcement agents to 'crack down' on dealers who have not signed the marketing agreement. They were to explain to producers delivering to such dealers that they could divert their milk and not ose money. Such diversion it was believed would quickly bring the ew New York holdouts into line."

The same article on pages 1 and 2 quoted Gaynor as follows:

"In a spirited speech M. Gaynor told the dairymen that they need not think about dealers for two minutes.' He explained the provisions for diverting milk from dealers who fail to comply with the regulations. 'The Dairymen's League plants are open—and others, too," said Mr. Gaynor. "Call me up; I'll tell you where to put the milk. You won't have to divert very long before these dealers will be ready to sign up."

The Dairymen's League News of September 27th, 1938, on the front page thereof, contained the following statements:

"J. C. Treat, secretary of the New York Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, made the prediction in Syracuse that all the larger dealers would be signed up by the end of last week. Except for a few small handlers, Mr. Treat predicted the sign-up would be almost 100 per cent. None of these smaller dealers handle more than 50 or 75 cans a day and practically all of them are in the 'spot buyers' class, he said.

312 "Mr. Treat also reiterated a former statement made by the Bargaining Agency to the effect that the squad of 100 producer volunteers were still on duty in the milk shed and that shipments of milk would be diverted from those buyers who declined to pay full prices as called for by the order or who might attempt through court action to obstruct administration of the order."

(Granted.) 97. In the October 11th issue of the Dairymen's League News, on the first page thereof, was contained the following:

"Producers Stop Dealer's Milk—He Signs Up

"Buffalo Milk 70% Under New State Order—Bargaining Agency Puts Pressure on Procrastinators.

* * * * * * *

"Producers Prepared for Non-Compliers—N. Y. C. Marketing Order Calls for Dealers—Reports Oct. 10

"Preparations to apply 'farmer pressure' to any milk handlers who fail to comply with requirements of the federal-state milk marketing agreement were being formulated last week by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency."

On page 2 of said issue was contained the following statement:

"The farmer's opportunity lies in mass action through business cooperative organization. Farmers today depend more and more on their own responsible leaders for information. Elected cooperative leaders must know reasons for low prices and be prepared with constructive plans."

(Granted.) 98. In the "Milk Producers' Market News," the o ficial newspaper of the plaintiff Bargaining Agency, for the mo of October 1938, published prior to October 15th of said month, a copies of which were distributed generally to the producers delive ing milk to defendant's (Jetter's) plants, were contained amo others, the following statements:

"Please bear in mind that our able Secretary, J. C. Treat, who is i charge of the 'Minute Men,' is doing a fine job and these men, wh are distributed throughout the milk shed, are on the watch at a times for disturbances, chiseling, and other items that are not f the best interests of your producers."

"Remember that in the last issue of the Market News, on the fro minority of trouble makers and see to it that they are kept i them sticking their nose in the picture and trying to disru what you have approved, then a good idea is to swat the nose an talk afterwards."

"Homer S. Rolfe, president of the Metropolitan Co-operative Mil will pay the difference between the cheese plant price and the pric they would have received from the dealer.

"We farmers are like the tramp who stopped at a lady's door and ked for something to eat. She gave him some bread and said: low, I don't give you this bread for your sake, but for the Lord's ke.' The farmer looked to the dry bread and turning to the oman, said: 'Then, for Christ's sake, put some butter on it.' Now, the dealers won't give us a living price for milk for our sake, rhaps they will for Christ's sake. NOT BAD!"

(Granted.) 99. Sub-district president of plaintiff Dairymens ague (Dist. No. 11), has canvassed producers delivering to defendt Jetter, since September 1st, 1938, and represented to such proers, that payments for their milk were in danger; that said proers should leave Jetter and deliver milk to the plaintiff Dairyen's League before such producers sustained loss of payment for ilk delivered.

Plaintiff Dairymen's League, with knowledge that the defendant tter and others similarly situated, could not survive continued forcement of the Federal Order when accompanied by the deructive competition of the League, the National Dairy and Borden bsidiaries and affiliates, in the October 11th issue of the Dairyen's League News, printed the following statement:

"How Can the 'Cheap Milk' Dealer Pay?

"Apprehension was felt in some quarters that some producers may eive something of a shock when they get paid for their milk. "This uneasiness was due to the fact that it is well known that ot of milk is being sold to stores in New York City at less than t. There is a considerable question as to whether some of the ns selling this milk cheap will have money with which to pay proers at the rates established by the market administrator."

(Granted.) 100. The Market News issued by the Bargaining ency for December 1938 (Exhibit 23 to stipulation), states on e 30:

Syracuse, Nov. 21.—There will be no let up in activities of the tropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency to ob a full compliance with the Federal-State milk marketing program, lared Charles H. Baldwin, Executive Secretary, today.

Mr. Baldwin made this statement following a conference with attorney, Edmund F. Cooke, and other lawyers who argued inst an application by Jetter Dairy Company to restrain Mr. dwin, the Bargaining Agency, and the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association before United States Judge Frank Cooper in Albany Saturday.

"The Jetter Dairy sought to restrain these defendants and Metropolitan Market administrator E. M. Harmon and officials of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets from enforcing the marketing program which was instituted September 1 under The Rogers-Allen law and the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

"The Jetter case marks a new milestone in the progress of New York Milk Shed dairy farmers. Never before have dealers sought to enjoin farmers, although there have been cases where dairymen have had to seek protection of the courts from the acts of dealers. Starting of this case seems to indicate the desperate desire of dealers to wreck this program and frighten producers into acceptance of less money for their milk.

316 (Granted if the word "procured" in the 8th line is changed to "aided in procuring.") 100-a. Intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League, by its acts in procuring the passage of the Rogers-Allen Law, the formation of the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, and through its own activities and those of the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, has conspired to convert the provisions of Title 7, Section 608c U. S. Code, as amended, and of the Rogers-Allen Law. (Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 as amended), as instruments of coercion, restraint of trade and monopoly. In furtherance of such conspiracy, said intervening plaintiffs procured the promulgation or issuance of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, and, by specific acts referred to in Findings Nos. 92 to 100, inclusive hereof, have practiced coercion and intimidation upon the defendants and others in a like situation, to compel defendants and others to comply with said Orders, regardless of their legality. At the time of the trial the intervening plaintiffs were continuing such coercive measures.

315 "The effect, however, will be the opposite. Indignation is running high among farmers all through the State, and I believe they will now be more insistent that before that every dealer comply in every respect with this marketing program, which has already added more than $2,500,000 to dairymen's income."

October	1.90	2.00	1.8

NOTE.—The actual cash return, including certificates of indebtedness, considered as cash, was less than the prices stated. In 1938 the September net cash price, including certificates of indebtedness, was $1.75 per cwt. and for October, $1.81 per cwt. (Exhibits 11, 12).

Sheffield Farms Company, in corresponding years, paid its producers net as follows:

September	$1.96	$2.20	$1.87
October	1.90	2.20	1.87

The statement that "this marketing program * * * has already added more than $2,500,000 to dairymen's income" is contrary to the statistics in evidence as part of Exhibit A–3.

(Granted.) 101. In August 1938 the Dairymen's League caused to be transferred all of the fluid milk business theretofore carried on by its several wholly owned subsidiary stock corporations, to itself, and since September 1st, 1938, said distributing business has been conducted by said intervening plaintiff, wholly in its own name.

(Granted.) 102. Since September 1st, 1938, Bordens and the Dairymen's League have withdrawn from approval by the health authority in the marketing area a number of milk receiving stations, which are listed on defendants' exhibit 53.

(Granted.) 103. The Dairymen's League utilized the same facilities owned and operated by it, and owned and operated by the Borden Company prior to September 1, 1938, that it has utilized since said date, and the services performed by it prior to September 1, 1938, were substantially the same as those performed since said date, except for withdrawal of certain plants from approval within the marketing area.

(Granted.) 104. The intervening plaintiff, Plaintiff Dairymen's League, is engaged in business as a distributor of milk in the Newark, New Jersey, district.

Conclusions of fact (All these refused as including in the findings of fact).

Conclusions of law

(Granted.) 1. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against the defendant Jetter Dairy Company and so-called proprietary handlers, in that they are required to pay producers, the uniform price fixed in the Order, for all milk sold in the marketing area, whereas cooperative corporations which are milk dealers of the same class engaged in the sale of milk to stores and consumers in direct competition with defendant Jetter, and other proprietary handlers, are under no requirement to pay the uniform price or any stated price to producers for such milk.

(Granted.) 2. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as against the Jetter Dairy Company and other proprietary handlers, in that said handlers are required to account to the Producer Settlement Fund for the difference between the uniform price and the prices stated in the Order, whereas the price accounted into said Fund by cooperative handlers, is reduced by payments to them out of said Fund, pursuant to Article VII, Section 5 of the Order.

(Granted.) 3. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against all of the defendants and against other cooperative and proprietary handlers which are not engaged in the manufacture and sale of milk products in that the large handlers, both cooperative and proprietary, being principally National Dairy subsidiaries, Bordens and subsidiaries, Dairymen's League and several smaller companies, including Queensboro Farms Products, Inc., and the several companies operated by Aaron J. Rubenfeld, which are engaged in manufacturing milk into milk products, receive so-called market service payments under Article VII, Section 6, which are not and cannot be received by small handlers, who combine fluid milk operations with manufacturing on a small scale in their own plants, thereby in effect, substantially reducing the prices paid by such large handlers for milk utilized in fluid form.

(Granted.) 4. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against certain handlers, including all the defendants, in that the same regulates all of the businesses of handlers dealing only in the marketing area, while regulating only part of the business of the larger handlers, whose businesses extended to adjacent markets outside of the area.

By the terms and application of the Order, the same large handlers referred to in the next preceding paragraph, both proprietary and cooperative, in making payment for all milk purchased in the production area, are permitted to pay a blended price, which price is computed upon the prices fixed in the Order for milk sold in the marketing area, and with arbitrary prices fixed by such handlers as they see fit, for milk sold outside of the area, which milk is known as "unpriced milk," thereby, in effect reducing the price paid by such handlers for fluid milk sold in the marketing area.

None of the defendants are engaged in the manufacture of milk products. None of said defendants are engaged in marketing milk outside of the marketing area.

319 (Granted.) 6. Application of the provisions of Order No. 27 to handlers, coupled with competitive practices of handlers in the marketing area, has resulted in a loss to all dealers selling wholesale fluid milk in the area, and has confiscated capital of proprietary handlers engaged principally in sales of fluid milk at wholesale to stores. The order is discriminatory as to such handlers ncluding the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, and in favor of ther handlers, both cooperative and proprietary, whose operations nclude other markets; who are engaged in the manufacture of milk nd milk products, and who receive payments from the Producer ettlement Fund, under the provision of Article VII, Sections 5 nd 6.

(Refused.) 8. Order No. 27 is discriminatory against handlers urchasing milk at plants beyond the 25 mile zone, the discrimina-ion being greater in each succeeding zone, in that such handlers re required to pay a greater delivered cost for milk delivered to he marketing area, for the reason that the freight differentials estabished by Article IV, Section 3 of the Order, are not comparable or quivalent to the actual established differences in freight costs, such nfavorable differences increasing from ½¢ per cwt. in the 50 mile one, to 22½¢ per cwt. in the 500 mile zone.

(Granted.) 9. The provisions of Order No. 27 are discriminatory s to the defendants, Rock Royal Cooperative and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, and in favor of the Dairymen's League and other large andlers, which receive payments under the provisions of Article II, Sections 5 and 6, and which blend "unpriced" milk with milk old in the market, in that such larger handlers are able to undersell aid defendants.

(Granted.) 10. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to the defendnts who are engaged principally in the fluid milk business and opating wholly within the marketing area, in that moneys of said efendants are expropriated to be paid to competitors of said deendants, and in effect to give to such competitors, consisting princially of the Dairymen's League, Bordens and Sheffields, a subsidy om the capital account of the defendants and others in a like situaon, whereby monoply may be created in said large competitors and e several defendants be forced out of business by exhaustion of apital and by inability to meet competitive prices of said preferred ompanies.

(Granted.) 11. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as between proucers, in that there is no requirement that cooperative associations e required to pay the uniform price or any price to producers deivering to such associations.

Cooperative handlers, which are also distributors, may sell milk irect to store keepers and consumers at less than the minimum elivered cost thereof, based on prices contained in the Order and deduct the losses occasioned by such price cutting from the pri paid to producers.

Cooperative handlers may sell milk to other dealers without ma ing any charge for handling or receiving costs, thereby in 320 effect, reducing prices charged for milk, and deduct the am so rebated to such handlers, from payments made t producers.

(Granted.) 12. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as between pr ducers, in that producers in 18 counties, enumerated in Article VII Section 8, receive 20¢ per cwt., preferential payment on all of the milk.

(Refused.) The uniform price to producers delivering to pr prietary handlers, is reduced by such preferential payment to pr ducers in the preferred 18 counties.

(Granted.) Prices paid by cooperatives to producers outside sai preferred counties, are also reduced by such preferential payme to producers in the 18 preferred counties, in the adjustments mad with the Producer Settlement Fund.

(Granted.) 13. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to produce delivering to handlers, whether cooperative or proprietary, whos businesses are only partly regulated by the Order, which sell fluid milk in the Metropolitan Area, and also in the State of New Jersey and other markets, in that the producers are paid less than the actual value of milk delivered by them, accomplished by "blending" arbitrary prices for milk sold outside of the area, which bear no true relation to the actual value thereof, with prices charged for milk sold in the area.

(Granted.) 14. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to all produce delivering to handlers, whether cooperative or proprietary, which producers do not receive the cooperative payments provided for by Article VII, Section 5 of the Order (the greater part of which is paid to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc.), and whose prices are reduced by the amounts deducted from the uniform price under Art. VII, Sec. 5, and which are paid from the Producer Settlement Fund to the Dairymen's League Cooperative, and such other cooperatives as receive such payments.

(Granted.) 15. Order No. 27 is discriminatory as to all producers delivering to either proprietary or cooperative handlers, which handlers do not have facilities to receive payments under the provisions of Article VII, Section 6, and payments made to such producers are reduced by the amounts deducted and paid from the Producer Settlement Fund under the provisions of said Article VII, Section 6.

(Granted as to Federal Order 27 only.) 16. The Act as applied in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, denies to the several defendants, equal protection of the law and tend to confiscate the property of the defendants without due process of law, and are vio-tive of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States and to Article I, Subdivision 6 of the New York State Constitution.

(Refused.) 17. The provisions of Title 7, Section 608c of the U. S. Code, and Order No. 27 are violative of the Constitution of the United States, in that they attempt an unlawful delegation of legislative powers to producers and cooperative associations.

(Granted.) 18. The provisions of Title 7, Section 608c (5) (A) (B) (ii), and Order No. 27 are violative of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States on the ground that they are discriminatory as between proprietary handlers purchasing milk from producers and proprietary handlers of milk of the same class, purchasing milk from cooperative associations.

321 (Granted.) 19. The provisions of Title 7, 608c (E) and Order No. 27 are violative of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that the same provide for payments to cooperative handlers of milk which are denied to proprietary handlers, for identical services, said handlers all being milk dealers of the same class. Thereby proprietary handlers are denied the right to purchase milk on the same terms and conditions, no more and no less, as those applied to cooperative handlers.

(Granted.) 20. The provisions of Title 7, 608c (B) (ii) U. S. Code, are violative of the Fifth Amendent ot the Constitution of of the United States, in that they expropriate money from dealers and producers for the benefit of competing dealers and of producers selling to said dealers, without due process of law.

(Granted.) 21. The provisions of Title 7, 608c (B) (ii) U. S. Code, are invalid and are unauthorized by the Constitution, or the Commerce Clause thereof. The equalization payments authorized therein, constitute a subsidy to be paid by dealers and producers, having well established fluid milk markets, to competing dealers and producers.

(Refused.) 22. Title 7, 608c, U. S. Code, known as the "Agricultural Adjustment Act," as a whole, is invalid because it delegates legislative powers to an administrative officer (the Secretary of Agriculture).

(Refused.) 23. Title 7, 608c, U. S. Code, as a whole, is unconstitutional, in that it delegates legislative powers to a limited group of private citizens.

(Granted.) 24. The Finding by the Secretary that Order No. 27 is approved or favored by two-thirds of the producers producing milk in the production area, is invalid; is unsupported by any substantial probative evidence and amounts merely to an expression of opinion by the Secretary.

(Granted except as Noyes.) 25. The intervening plaintiff Dairy-League, the intervening plaintiff, Bargaining Agency, and E. Manning Gaynor, personal representative of the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, have been and now are, engaged in a conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce against the defendants Jetter, Rock Royal Cooperative, Schuyler Junction Cooperative; handlers buying from said cooperatives, and other handlers, for the purpose of controlling the purchase and sale of milk, and destroying competitors of the Dairymen's League and its customers, including said defendants, in violation of the provisions of Title 15, U. S. Code, Sections 1 to 7. Said intervening plaintiffs and others have been and now are engaged in a scheme or conspiracy to discriminate in price between purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, which discrimination is against the defendants Jetter, Rock Royal Cooperative and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, and is violative of the provisions of Title 15, U. S. Code, Sections 12–14, inclusive.

(Granted.) 26. The provisions of Order No. 27 are violative of the provisions of Title 15, U. S. Code, Sections 1–7, 12–14, and the intervening plaintiffs, Dairymen's League and Bargaining Agency, in violation of the provisions of said Title 15, U. S. Code, which are known as the Federal Anti Trust Laws, are now engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy and are now threatening, by coercion, intimidation and the other unlawful acts stated in the Findings and Conclusions of Fact therein, to impose upon the defendants Jetter, Schuyler Junction Cooperative and the Rock Royal Cooperative, compliance with the illegal and unlawful terms of Order No. 27; and to restrain them from exercising their legal right of engaging in the purchase and sale of milk, free from any constraint or discrimination, after the decision of this case and regardless of any decision rendered herein.

322 (Granted.) 27. The complaint of the plaintiff, United States of America should be dismissed as to each defendant.

(Granted.) 28. The complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, should be dismissed as to each defendant, with costs.

(Granted with one bill of costs against both plaintiffs jointly.) 29. The complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., should be dismissed as to each defendant, with costs, and an allowance for attorneys' fees.

30. The complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., should be dismissed as to each defendant, with costs and an allowance for attorneys' fees.

[Title omitted.]

Statement of plaintiff's objections to the proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law submitted on behalf of the defendants Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., Rock Royal Cooperative, Inc., and Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Cooperative, Inc.

Filed March 9, 1939

STATEMENT

Plaintiff objects to proposed findings 7, 11 to 18, inclusive, 21 to 27, inclusive, 36 to 62, inclusive, 64 to 79, inclusive, and 81 to 104, inclusive, all of the so-called proposed conclusions of fact and all of the proposed conclusions of law, for the reasons hereinafter stated.

Detailed Statement of Objections and Reasons therefor

Findings Nos. 1–4: No objection is made to these findings except that the number of producers given in the first three findings are the numbers delivering milk as of August 1, 1938, and not the numbers delivering milk during August. The number of producers given in the first finding should be 82 instead of 65 (Defendants' 324 exhibit 18). These findings are substantially covered by plaintiff's proposed findings 1–4. Plaintiff would not object to the substitution of these findings in corrected form for its proposed findings Nos. 1–4.

Findings No. 5: This finding is partly covered by plaintiff's proposed finding No. 39.

Finding No. 6: The substance of this finding is included in plaintiff's proposed finding No. 41.

Finding No. 7: The facts included in this finding are more completely covered in plaintiff's proposed finding No. 36.

Findings Nos. 8, 9, and 10: These findings are identical with plaintiff's proposed findings 5, 6, and 7, except that the citation in the second line of Defendants' finding No. 8 should be "Public, No. 137."

Finding No. 11: This finding is identical with plaintiff's proposed finding No. 8 except for the phrase "said order containing the terms and conditions held by the Secretary to be authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act and no others." The plaintiff's proposed finding eliminates the underscored words. It is submitted that there is no evidence in the record that Order No. 27 contains any unauthorized terms and conditions. Plaintiff is therefore entitled to its proposed finding No. 8 in lieu of defendant's proposed finding No. 11.

Finding No. 12: This finding is identical with plaintiff's proposed finding No. 9 except for the inclusion of the phrase "held by the Commissioner." For the reasons set forth in the preceding paragraph it is submitted that plaintiff is entitled to its proposed finding No. 9 in lieu of defendants' proposed finding No. 12.

Finding No. 13: This finding is identical with the first sentence of plaintiff's proposed finding No. 15. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed finding No. 15 is more complete and that plaintiff is entitled to such finding. If the Court adopts plaintiff's proposed finding No. 15, defendants' finding No. 13 will be unnecessary.

Finding No. 14: This finding is identical with the first part of plaintiff's proposed finding No. 16. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed finding No. 16 is more complete and that plaintiff is entitled to such finding. If the Court adopts plaintiff's proposed finding No. 16, defendants' finding No. 14 will be unnecessary.

Finding No. 15: This finding is identical with the first part of plaintiff's proposed finding No. 23. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed finding No. 23 is more complete and that plaintiff is entitled to such finding. If the Court adopts plaintiff's proposed finding No. 23, defendants' finding No. 15 will be unnecessary.

Finding No. 16: This finding is almost identical with plaintiff's proposed finding No. 25.

Finding No. 17: This finding is identical with plaintiff's proposed finding No. 26, except for the addition of the last sentence, "Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 hereinafter referred to as the Order." Plaintiff believes that confusion may result from failure to differentiate between Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

Finding No. 18: This finding is inaccurate in that it says that the prices for Class I and Class II-A milk are arbitrarily fixed. The relation of these prices to the butter price is not arbitrary and is fully described in the Order so that no finding of fact is necessary. The second paragraph of this finding is likewise inaccurate. A complete and accurate description of the basis for the Class III-A, IV-A, and IV-B prices is contained in Paragraph 13 (A) of plaintiff's proposed findings of fact. There is no objection to a finding that the Class I price has been $2.45 per cwt. for the months of September, October, November, and December, 1938.

Findings Nos. 19 and 20: No objection.

Findings Nos. 21-25: These are not properly findings of fact but are an inaccurate description of certain provisions of Order No. 27.

Finding No. 26: The first paragraph of this finding is an inaccurate description of some of the provisions of Order No. 27 and is not properly a finding of fact. The conclusion in the last sentence of the first paragraph of this finding that the blending of the price paid for milk sold in other markets reduces the actual price paid for milk sold in the metropolitan area is not supported by any evidence in the record and is based on two erroneous assumptions: First, that the price paid for milk sold in other markets will be lower than the reasonable value of such milk, and secondly, that the profits made on the milk ld outside of the metropolitan area will be used for the purpose of derselling in the metropolitan area. Neither of these assumptions is supported by the evidence.

27 The second paragraph of proposed finding No. 26 is evidentiary only and entirely irrelevant. The booklet to which eference is made should be considered by the Court in its entirety, f at all.

The third paragraph of finding No. 26 is not a finding of fact ut pure argument.

See plaintiff's proposed findings 13 (F) and 14, together with ecord references thereto. See also comment on defendants' proosed findings Nos. 40–45.

Finding No. 27: This is an inaccurate and confusing description of certain provisions of Order No. 27 and of the Act and is not properly a finding of fact.

Findings Nos. 28–35: No objection.

Finding No. 36: This finding should be clarified to show that the "total utilization of milk in the marketing area" means utilization of Class I milk by all handlers and not utilization only by the Dairymen's League.

Finding No. 37: This finding is accurate except that it paints an incomplete picture by reason of failure to state that the total utilization of Class I milk by the Dairymen's League includes sales to other handlers. See plaintiff's proposed finding No. 31. See also R. 2349 "From September 1st to November 25th, 1938, the sales of the Association [the Dairymen's League] through its branches in New York City of glass-bottled milk in quarts suffered a loss of approximately fourteen per cent in volume."

328 The headings of the columns with reference to unpriced milk are also incorrect. "Unpriced milk" means approved milk for which a handler does not account to the pool. The figures given in the first two columns include both approved and unapproved milk. The figures in the third column include only approved milk. (Defendants' Exhibit No. 49.)

Finding No. 38: The first paragraph of this finding is inaccurate because it fails to state that the $2.76 price applies only to milk purchased in the State of New Jersey from New Jersey producers and for the further reason that the New Jersey price is not fixed at country milk plants but is fixed at the plant to which the milk is delivered in the State of New Jersey, which may be either a country plant or a city plant.

The evidence does not support the statement in the fourth paragraph of this finding that $2.76 is the fair market value of milk delivered to an approved plant for sale in the State of New Jersey. The $2.76 price makes no allowance for transportation costs from approved plants located outside of the State of New Jersey to the New Jersey market and represents, in any event, the price paid for only a part of the milk which supplies the market. Unpriced Class I milk which is sold in the New Jersey market comes into direct competition with milk which is not approved for the metropolitan marketing area and which is produced outside of the State of New Jersey for sale in the State of New Jersey. The market value of unpriced Class I milk which is sold in the New Jersey market is directly affected by the prices paid for such unapproved milk. There is no evidence in the record as to the prices paid for such unapproved milk.

329 Finding No. 39: The first paragraph is inaccurate in that it states that the uniform prices were "fixed" by the Administrator. They were simply computed and announced by the Administrator.

The second paragraph of this finding is inaccurate by reason of failure to explain the meaning of the phrase "base price." There is not sufficient evidence in the record to explain the meaning of "base price," but from Exhibits 11, 12, and 54, it does appear that in accounting to its own producers the Dairymen's League employs differentials over and above those required by Order No. 27. The total of such differentials must, of course, be deducted in computing its "base price." The base price is not the average price paid to producers in the 201–210 mile zone, which alone could be compared with the uniform price. The average price paid to producers by the Dairymen's League in the 201–210 mile zone was $1.83, $1.87 and $2.07 for the months of September, October, and November, 1938 respectively (Defendants' Exhibits 11, 12, and 54).

The third paragraph of this finding is based on two erroneous assumptions, namely, that the "base price" paid by the Dairymen's League is comparable to the uniform price and, secondly, that the price fixed by the New Jersey Control Board for milk produced and sold in the State of New Jersey is the reasonable value of milk delivered to a plant outside the State of New Jersey in the 201–210 mile zone for shipment to the New Jersey market. It should be noted that the value of Class I milk delivered at New York City is approximately $3.00. This includes the Class I price of $2.45 in the 201–210 mile zone, 32¢ freight (Defendants' Exhibits 78 and 79), and 23¢ representing the cost of handling at the country plant (R. 2369).

330 Findings Nos. 40 to 45: These findings are not properly findings of fact but are simply arguments based on erroneous premises. These premises are six in number.

A. That $2.76 is the reasonable value of Class I milk delivered to an approved plant in the 201–210 mile zone for sale in the State of New Jersey. See discussion of defendants' proposed findings Nos. 38 and 39.

B. That the payments to cooperatives pursuant to Section 5 of Article VII of Order No. 27 are not only not reasonable but that the cooperative performs no services involving either cost to itself or value to the market in return for these payments. Section 5 of Article VII is presumed to be valid and the defendants have introduced no evidence whatsoever impeaching the reasonableness of these payments. The reasonableness of these payments is amply supported by the evidence. See plaintiff's proposed finding No. 13 (D) together with record references.

C. That the payments made to the Dairymen's League pursuant to Section 6 of Article VII are mere gratuities; that the Dairymen's League incurred no expense in earning these payments and that the services performed by the Dairymen's League in return for these payments are of no value to the market. Article VII, Section 6, is presumed to be valid and the defendants have introduced no evidence tending to show that such payments are not reasonable. The reasonableness of such payments is amply supported by the evidence. See plaintiff's proposed finding No. 13 (E) together with record references.

D. That the "base price" paid by the Dairymen's League in the 201-210 mile zone is a figure comparable to the uniform price. See discussion of defendants' proposed finding No. 39.

331 E. That all unpriced milk sold should be considered Class I milk. Article IV, Section 1 (second paragraph, p. 6), of Order No. 27 specifically provides that when a handler sells Class I milk outside of the marketing area a portion of his Class III-A, III-B, III-C, III-D, IV-A, and IV-B milk shall likewise be unpriced. The operation of this section of the Order is illustrated by the report of the Middletown Milk and Cream Company for the month of November 1938 covering its Slate Hill plant (Defendants' Exhibit 27-A). Columns 10, 12, 13, and 14 of this exhibit show 421,627 pounds of unpriced Class I milk (milk sold outside the marketing area) and 84,939 pounds of unpriced Class II-A milk. Columns 12, 13, and 14 further show that of 243,184 pounds of Class III-D milk handled the handler could claim credit in the pool for only 168,762 pounds, leaving 74,422 pounds unpriced. Defendants' Exhibit 36 shows that the Middletown Milk and Cream Company paid its producers at the rate of $2.38 per cwt. for 3.5 milk at the Slate Hill plant, which is five cents less than the uniform price plus freight and nearby differentials. In figuring the cost to this handler of his Class I unpriced milk it must be borne in mind that the price paid included 74,722 pounds of unpriced Class III-D milk on which the class price for the month of November was only $1.052 (Defendants' Exhibit 41), as well as 84,939 pounds of Class II-A milk for which the uniform price was $1.90 per cwt. If the value of unpriced Class II-A and III-D milk is figured at the class prices the net cost to this handler of his Class I unpriced milk in the 81-90 mile zone was approximately $2.60 per cwt.

F. That the Dairymen's League would make use of the aforesaid alleged advantages for the purpose of underselling proprietary handlers in the metropolitan marketing area instead of pass-332 ing on the benefits to its producers in the form of increased returns. The evidence shows that the Dairymen's League did where necessary to preserve its business. See plaintiff's proposed finding 31 and record references. The Dairymen's League has actually lost a part of its wholesale business in the metropolitan marketing area since September 1, 1938. The fact that it has lost business and still has not been able to return the uniform price to its producers would seem effectually to demonstrate that the alleged advantages upon which these findings are based do not exist.

In finding No. 40 the first column is misleading because the figures include unapproved as well as approved milk.

The statement in finding No. 41 that the defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., applied for qualification to receive payments pursuant to Article VII, Section 5, is not supported by any evidence in the record and no record citation is offered by defendants.

Finding No. 46: See comment as on Findings 40–45.

Finding No. 47: This is not a finding of fact.

Finding No. 49: The last paragraph of this finding is incorrect of certain provisions of Order No. 27 with an argument thereon.

Finding No. 49: The last paragraph of this finding is incorrect. There are no established truck rates (Defendants' Exhibits 78 and 79). The figures given would be correct if stated to be the approximate cost of transporting milk by tank truck.

The subject matter of the first four paragraphs of this finding is adequately covered by plaintiff's proposed finding 13 (B).

333 Finding No. 50: This finding is simply argument and is based on an erroneous premise. The freight differentials in Order No. 27 are based on actual tank car rates approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The I. C. C. rates are the only definite, ascertainable "actual freight" rates in existence in the production area. There are no uniform rates for transportation by tank truck (Defendants' Exhibits 78 and 79).

Finding 51: This finding contains an incorrect and inaccurate statement of certain provisions of Order No. 27 plus an argument based thereon. It is not a proper finding of fact. The defendants have introduced no evidence whatsoever tending to show that these differentials are not reasonable. The reasonableness of these differentials is amply supported by the evidence before the Secretary. (Exhibit A–3–8, pp. 102–104, Exhibit A–3, pp. 968, 969, 1013.)

Findings Nos. 52 and 53: These findings contain nothing but argument.

Finding No. 54: This finding is not supported by the evidence. The evidence is that there is only one grade of Grade B milk irrespective of butterfat content (R. 2376) but there is no evidence that Grade B milk having a consistently high butterfat content does not command a higher price or sell more readily than milk having a consistently lower butterfat content.

Finding No. 55: This finding is not supported by the weight of the evidence. Nelson All testified (R. 760) that the Worcester Cooperative Association was able to divert milk to a manufacturing plant when a New York dealer had refused to accept it. Further-334 more, there is no allegation in the answers of any of the defendants that the butterfat differentials are not reasonable. The reasonableness of the butterfat differentials is amply supported by the evidence. See plaintiff's proposed finding No. 13 (C) together with record references.

Finding No. 56: See comment with reference to findings Nos. 49 and 50.

Finding No. 57: With the exception of paragraphs (f) and (i) this finding contains nothing but argument based upon erroneous assumptions and inaccurate descriptions of certain provisions of Order No. 27, all of which have been discussed in connection with earlier findings. The only objection to paragraph (f) is to the last phrase "and the greater part of milk sold outside of the area" which is entirely without support in the evidence.

Finding No. 58: Not a single statement in this finding is supported by the evidence. The storage of cream is an expensive operation (Exhibit A-3-8, p. 24). Storage cream is worth less than fresh cream (R. 817, 818, Exhibit A-3, pp. 1863, 1864). Cold storage cream when sold in New York City must be clearly labeled as such (Exhibit A-3-36, p. 68) and is used principally in the manufacture of ice cream (Exhibit A, p. 1863). It is sometimes reprocessed to make sour cream (R. 817). The unexplained statement of the witness Samuel Miller (R. 869) that he put cream into storage and also took cream out of storage during October 1938 certainly does not support this proposed finding. A mixture of skim milk and cream cannot legally be sold as whole milk in the marketing area (Exhibit A-3-36, p. 1, Exhibit A-3-41, p. 7).

The second paragraph of this finding is based on two assumptions—that large handlers will file false reports and that the Market Administrator will be derelict in his duty.

335 Finding No. 59: This finding is entirely unsupported by the evidence. There is no evidence that milk could be manipulated for the purpose of obtaining a competitive advantage and there is no evidence that any such manipulation has occurred.

Finding No. 60: The first sentence is based on one isolated instance (R. 636), which is not sufficient to support a general finding. Furthermore, the witness Mills testified that he manufactured other types of cheese as well as American (R. 660). The second sentence is true but entirely immaterial. There is no evidence that approved milk makes better cheese than unapproved milk. The Dairymen's League manufactured no milk into cheese during the months of September and October 1938 (Defendants' Exhibit 13). Bordens and National Dairy manufactured only a small amount of milk into cheese during these months (Defendants' Exhibits 45 and 43). The reasonableness of the Class IV-B prices is amply supported by the evidence. See plaintiffs' proposed finding 13 (A) and record references.

Finding No. 61: The first sentence of this finding is not supported by the evidence. The witness Barbour testified (R. 568) that he paid less than the order prices for cream which he manufactured into butter. There is evidence of one isolated instance in which 20¢ per cwt. (of skim milk—not for the skim from a cwt. of whole milk) was paid for skim milk for a special limited purpose by a manufacturer of Italian cheeses (Bullock R. 1579, 1584). This price was paid only during the short season. Surplus milk is manufactured into butter principally during the flush season (Exhibit A–3–26, p. 97). There is no evidence that skim milk has any value during the flush season.

336 Samuel Miller testified (R. 820) that skim milk has very little value. The second sentence is true but immaterial. There is no evidence that approved milk makes better butter than unapproved milk. The third sentence is a conclusion from the first and second and is unsupported by the evidence. The reasonableness of the Class IV–A prices is amply supported by the evidence. See plaintiff's proposed finding 13 (A) and record references.

Finding No. 62: The second paragraph of this finding is not supported by the weight of the evidence. It is submitted that the weight of the evidence supports plaintiff's proposed finding No. 50 and that such finding should be adopted in lieu of defendants' proposed finding No. 62.

Finding No. 63: No objection.

Finding No. 64: This finding consists of an incorrect statement of some of the evidence. The witness Samuel Rootstein testified that prior to July 1, 1938, the Lincoln Milk and Cream Company delivered eight cases of milk a day to Weintraub (R. 2246). On July 1, 1938, this business was purchased by the Dairymen's League. Between July 1, 1938, and September 1, 1938, the sales of the Dairymen's League decreased from eight to three cases per day, while the sales of the Triboro Milk and Cream Company increased. The witness testified simply that on September 4, 1938, he saw ten cases of Dairymen's League milk and ten cases of Gold Medal Farms, Inc., milk in the Weintraub store. There is no evidence that either the Dairymen's League or Gold Medal Farms, Inc., acquired this business by price-cutting. The reason for the shift does not appear in the record and it is just as reasonable to suppose that it was caused by dissatisfaction 337 with the service given by the Triboro Milk and Cream Company as that it was caused by price concessions offered by the other two companies.

Finding No. 65: The first sentence of this finding is a correct statement of fact. The balance of the finding is an incorrect statement of certain evidence. The record does not disclose the purpose of the Sheffield Farms Company in making a rebate to Lavender. Furthermore, this witness testified that he stopped buying milk from the Sheffield Farms Company and Breakstone, so the concessions made by these companies were evidently insufficient to enable Sheffield to retain the business. The rebate referred to occurred in November 1938, after price cutting had become general.

The free milk given to Rose Paley by the Dairymen's League occurred prior to September 1, 1938 (R. 498, 504). The inference from the record is not that free milk was given by Sheffield and the Dairymen's League to induce the witness to buy their milk, but because of a threat on her part to discontinue purchasing milk unless such concessions were made. She discontinued buying milk from Grandview Dairy after Grandview Dairy refused to give her free milk. She buys no more milk from the Dairymen's League now than formerly (R. 504). Glendale also gave her free milk (R. 500).

Finding No. 66: This finding is based upon the facts stated in finding No. 65 and is objected to for the same reasons.

Finding No. 67: There is no allegation in the answers of any of the defendants to which this finding could be relevant under any theory. Furthermore, the first statement is not a statement of fact, but an inaccurate description of certain provisions of Order No. 27. The second sentence is simply a statement of a part of the evidence and is only one isolated instance.

338 Finding No. 68: This finding is only a half truth. It implies that the only elements which have a bearing on the competitive situation are concessions made by dealers. It overlooks such elements as quality of service, consumer preferences, etc.

Finding No. 69: The record does not disclose the loss of any business by the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc. It discloses the loss of a substantial amount of business by the Triboro Milk and Cream Company (Plaintiff's Exhibit G, R. 2270) but the reasons for such loss do not appear in the record.

Finding No. 70: This finding is not a proper finding of fact and in any event is irrelevant and immaterial.

Finding No. 71: The statement that the Farm Conference Board "proposed" the Rogers-Allen Law is not supported by the evidence (R. 1887). The reference to the "purported provisions" of said law is argumentative. With reference to the second paragraph of this finding the record merely discloses that the name of the General Attorney for the Dairymen's League appeared on the certificate of incorporation.

The substance of this finding is adequately covered in plaintiff's proposed findings Nos. 38 and 39.

Finding No. 72: Defendants' proposed finding No. 5 covers all the evidence in the record with reference to the statements contained in this finding. The additional statements herein contained are not supported by the evidence.

Finding No. 73: This finding is not a proper finding of fact but merely an incorrect recital of fragments of evidence. The statement 339 that E. M. Harmon spent three days a month, beginning in November 1937, in consultation with representatives of the Bargaining Agency is incorrect. E. M. Harmon testified that he spent three days a month in Syracuse from November 1937 to February 1938 (R. 1022) and that it was his duty to consult with state agencies, handlers, producers, and producer groups (R. 1024). It cannot be inferred that all or most of the time spent in Syracuse was devoted to consultations with the Bargaining Agency. The subject matter of this finding is adequately covered by plaintiff's proposed finding No. 40.

Finding No. 74: This finding is repetitious and unnecessary.

Finding No. 75: This finding is substantially identical with the first part of plaintiff's proposed finding No. 17. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed finding No. 17 is more complete and that plaintiff is entitled to such finding. If the Court adopts plaintiff's proposed finding No. 17, defendants' finding No. 75 will be unnecessary.

Finding No. 76: The conclusions set forth in this finding are not supported by the evidence. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed findings Nos. 17 and 18 correctly state the facts established by the evidence with reference to this issue.

Findings Nos. 77, 78, and 79: The first sentence in finding No. 77 is not supported by the evidence. The remainder of these three proposed findings contain nothing but argument.

Finding No. 80: This finding is identical with plaintiff's proposed finding No. 22.

340 Finding No. 81: This finding is not a finding of fact but only argument.

Finding No. 82: This finding should be rejected because of the inference, which is not supported by the evidence, that the Dairymen's League attacked anyone whom it believed to be opposed to the adoption of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

Finding No. 83: This finding is not a finding of fact but simply a recital of fragments of evidence. It is objected to on the further ground that it seeks to create an inference that the sums mentioned were all spent in connection with the proposed Federal-State program.

Finding No. 84: This finding is not a finding of fact but simply a recital of fragments of evidence.

Finding No. 85: No objection is made to the first paragraph of this finding. The second paragraph is objected to because it appears on the face of the Act that distributors are not permitted to vote in a producer referendum. The third paragraph is inaccurate. Such producers were permitted to vote through their duly elected representatives.

Finding No. 87: This finding is not supported by the evidence. The record shows that the Dairymen's League was only one member of the Bargaining Agency. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed finding No. 45 correctly states the facts established by the evidence with reference to this issue.

341 Finding No. 88: This finding is unsupported by the evidence. It is submitted that plaintiff's proposed findings Nos. 42, 51, and 52 correctly state the facts established by the evidence with reference to this issue.

Finding No. 89: This finding is argumentative and the description of the letters and statements as containing "threats against any dealer who might appeal to the courts" is not an accurate characterization of such letters and statements. Nor is the description of the market ng agreement as a "contract which surrendered their rights to due rocess" a fair description of such contract. The evidence does ot support a finding that the persons herein named entered upon campaign to "compel" distributors to sign a marketing agreement.

Findings Nos. 90 and 91: These findings are not supported by the eight of the evidence. The subject matter of these findings is lly treated in the brief filed by the intervening plaintiff, the Bar-aining Agency.

Findings Nos. 92 and 93: These findings are not findings of fact, ut simply recitals of fragments of evidence.

Finding No. 94: The first paragraph of this finding is not sup-orted by the weight of the evidence. See the brief filed by the ntervening plaintiff, the Bargaining Agency.

The second paragraph is at most a recital of fragments of evi-ence, but plaintiff has been unable to find that the issue of the Dairymen's League News dated October 11, 1938, was ever offered or received in evidence.

342 Finding No. 95: This finding is simply a recital of fragments of evidence. The last paragraph of this finding is simply rgument.

There is no finding No. 96.

Finding No. 97: This finding is at most a recital of fragments of vidence, but plaintiff has been unable to find that the issue of the Dairymen's League News dated October 11, 1938, was ever offered or received in evidence.

Finding No. 98: The quotations in this finding are simply a recital of fragments of evidence. There is no evidence in the record sup-porting the first and last paragraphs of this finding.

Finding No. 99: This finding is not supported by the evidence. The evidence is that two producers delivering milk to the plants of the defendant Jetter, one of whom had previously delivered his milk to a plant of the Dairymen's League, were canvassed by Washbon. With reference to the alleged representations, the only evidence was the testimony of the witness Wilson that Washbon had told him that he had been told that Jetter had held back two weeks' payments from a certain producer (R. 394, 395). This falls far short of a representation that payments for milk were in danger.

The first part of the second paragraph of this finding is simply argument based upon alleged facts which have not been established. The excerpt from the Dairymen's League News is a statement of evidence which does not appear to be in the record.

343 Finding No. 100: The first paragraph of this finding is simply a recital of fragments of evidence. The second and third paragraphs are likewise a recital of fragments of evidence which, taken by themselves, present an entirely erroneous picture. In the fall of 1936 and the fall of 1937 the general level of dairy prices was substantially higher than in the fall of 1938. Compare, for example, the Class IV-B price of $.832 announced by the Market

Administrator for the month of September 1938 (Defendants' Exhibit 39), with the price of $1.44 computed pursuant to the same formula under State milk control in 1936 (Exhibit A–3–13, p. 6), and the price of $1.34 computed pursuant to the same formula which was used by the Dairymen's League in computing its September 1938 pool (Exhibit A–3–13, p. 5f). See also plaintiff's proposed finding 13 (A) together with record references.

A fair comparison would be one showing the relation between the prices paid in August and September in the years 1936, 1937, and 1938. Such a comparison follows:

	1936		1937		1938
	Sheffield	League	Sheffield	League	Sheffield	League
August	$2.10	$2.02	$1.905	$1.76	.....	1.3
September	1.96	1.95	2.20	1.90	.....	1.8

[Ex. A–3–13, pp. 3f, 3a and 4; Ex. A–24 (Dairymen's League News dated September 20, 1938); and Defendants' Ex. 11.]

The record does not disclose the prices paid by Sheffield in August and September 1938. The production of milk in September 1938 was abnormally high for that time of year (R. 846). Despite this fact, the Dairymen's League increased its net pool return to producers 56¢ over the month of August, as compared with an increase of 14¢ in 1937 and a decrease of 7¢ in 1936. The above facts demonstrate that the statement in the last paragraph of this finding is not supported by the evidence.

344 Finding No. 100–a: This finding is unsupported by the evidence. See comment with reference to finding No. 88.

Findings Nos. 101–102: These findings are supported by the evidence. They are, however, statements of isolated facts which are unexplained in the evidence. The reasons for these actions do not appear and no inference relevant to the issues can be drawn therefrom.

Finding No. 103: The evidence is not sufficient to support any comparison between the operations of the Dairymen's League prior to and since September 1, 1938. The references cited by defendants' counsel relate to the operations of the Dairymen's League prior to May 1, 1938.

Finding No. 104: There is no objection to this finding if corrected to read "The intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League."

CONCLUSIONS OF FACT

Conclusion No. 1: There is no evidence that Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York was prepared by the Dairymen's League, nor that the Dairymen's League was instrumental in procuring the enactment of the said statute. This so-called conclusion

Conclusion No. 2: This conclusion is covered by previous findings.

Conclusions Nos. 3–8: These conclusions are repetitious and 345 are not supported by the evidence. See comments with reference to previous findings dealing with the same subjects.

Conclusion No. 9: This conclusion is simply an inaccurate description of certain provisions of Order No. 27.

Conclusions Nos. 10, 11, and 12: These conclusions are argumentative and are not supported by the evidence. The defendants are required to account for the milk utilized by them at the class prices. The payments referred to are made out of money due producers and in no way affect the prices which defendants are required to pay for their milk. The statement that the defendant Jetter operates its stations in the same manner as the Dairymen's League has no support in the evidence.

Conclusions Nos. 13 and 14: These conclusions are not statements of fact but only argument.

Conclusions Nos. 15 and 16: These conclusions are repetitious and are entirely unsupported by the evidence. See comments with reference to previous findings dealing with the same subjects.

of the State of New York, and each of the defendants; the intervening plaintiffs, Dairymen's League and Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., having been permitted to intervene subject to the stipulation; and the aforesaid stipulation was marked Exhibit A for identification. This stipulation reads as follows:

Stipulation of facts and evidence

AGREED FACTS

It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties to the above entitled cause, by their attorneys of record, that upon the trial
351 of this cause for final decree the facts hereinafter stated may be taken by the Court as true. The exhibits hereinafter referred to are attached hereto and are hereby made a part hereof.

1. The defendant Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., is a co-operative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal office and place of business at Rock Royal, in the County of Delaware, State of New York.

2. The defendant Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business in the City of Cortland, County of Cortland, State of New York.

3. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Co-operative, Inc., is a cooperative corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business at Schuyler Junction, County of Herkimer, State of New York.

4. The defendant Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office and place of business at Oriskany Falls, Oneida County, State of New York.

5. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 8b and 8c of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (Public No. 137, 75th Congress; 50 Stat. 246; 7 U. S. C. 601 et seq.) (hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary"), on April 29, 1938, gave notice of public hearings on a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the area which includes the territory within the boundary lines of the City of New York and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and West-352 chester, all in the State of New York, the said area being hereinafter referred to as the "Marketing Area." On April 29, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws

f 1937 of New York gave notice of public hearings to be held at the me times and places on an order substantially identical with the foresaid order.

6. Pursuant to the terms of the said notices, and upon the request f the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of ew York, pursuant to Section 10 (i) of the Act, and Chapter 383 f the laws of 1937 of New York, joint public hearings were conucted by Glen J. Gifford, an employee of the Department of Agriulture, who was designated by the Secretary to conduct such hearngs, and also designated by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to conduct such hearings on behalf f the State. In accordance with the terms of said notice, the aforeaid public hearings were conducted at Albany, New York, on May 16, 938; at Malone, New York, on May 17, 1938; at Syracuse, New York, n May 18, 1938; at Elmira, New York, on May 19, 1938; and at New ork, New York, on May 20, 1938. The hearings were then reessed until May 24, 1938 and were continued at New York, New ork, on May 24, 25, and 26, 1938, and at Albany, New York, on June 3, 4, 5, and 7, 1938. At the times and places aforesaid all interested arties were afforded an opportunity to be heard concerning the rovisions of the proposed marketing agreement and the proposed rder. The said hearings were attended by producers, representatives of producers, handlers, and consumers of milk sold in the marketing area. All of the defendants knew of said hearings but none f the defendants appeared or was represented at any hearing.

7. On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary, pursuant to the provisions of Section 8c of the Act, made a finding and 333 proclaimed that, as to the milk produced for sale in the marketing area, the purchasing power of such milk during the ase period, August 1909 to July 1914, could not be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture, but that the purchasing power of such milk could be satisfactorily determined from available statistics of the Department of Agriculture for that portion of the post-war period between August 1927 and July 1929, inclusive.

8. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of, or in opposition to, the findings and provisions, or any of them, of the proposed order (which notice was published in the Federal Register on July 23, 1938), the Secretary, on August 5, 1938, issued Order No. 27, regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area in the manner provided in the Act, said order containing the terms and conditions held by the Secretary to be authorized by the applicable provisions of the Act, and no others, and regulating the handling of milk in the same manner as, and made applicable only to persons in the respective classes of industrial or commercial activity specified in the marketing agreement upon which hearings were held as aforesaid. Said Order also contains the findings by the Secretary, required by the applicable provisions of the Act, to be made by him. A copy of the Federal Register of Aug. 9, 1938, containing a true, correct, and complete copy of said Order No. 27 is attached hereto as Exhibit I to this stipulation.

9. Upon the evidence introduced at the said hearings and after giving opportunity to interested parties to file written arguments in support of or in opposition to the findings and provisions, or any of them, of the proposed order, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, on August 5, 1938, made the findings required by Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, and issued proposed
354 Official Order No. 126 which order is substantially identical with Order No. 27 and contains the terms and conditions held by the Commissioner to be authorized by the applicable provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York and no others. A true, correct, and complete copy of Official Order No. 126 is hereto attached as Exhibit 2 to this stipulation.

10. A true, correct, and complete stenographic transcript of the evidence introduced at said hearing with exhibits attached thereto is hereto attached as Exhibit 3 to this stipulation. Included in this transcript are the briefs and arguments submitted to the Secretary and to the Commissioner of the evidence introduced at the said hearing. The briefs filed in support of and in opposition to the findings and provisions of the proposed order pursuant to the notice published in the Federal Register on July 23, 1938, as aforesaid, are not included in this transcript. A true, correct, and complete list of such briefs is attached hereto as Exhibit 4 to this stipulation.

11. On the 5th day of August 1938, the Secretary tentatively approved a marketing agreement regulating the handling of milk in the marketing area, and on or about August 6, 1938, delivered copies thereof to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the order, but prior to the issuance of said order, handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed within the marketing area failed or refused to sign said marketing agreement. A true, correct and complete copy of said marketing agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 5 to this stipulation. Subsequent to the issuance of Order No. 27 a marketing agreement was signed by handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by Order No. 27. A true, correct, and complete copy of the marketing agreement signed by said handlers with a list of the signatories thereto is attached thereto as Exhibit 6 to this stipulation.

355 12. Under authority of the provisions of Section 8c (19) of the Act, the Secretary conducted a referendum of producers in order to assist him in determining whether the issuance of the Order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938 (said month having, on the 25th day of July 1938, been determined by the Secretary to be a representative period), were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area. The referendum was held at the times and places set forth in a schedule of polling places issued by the Department of Agriculture prior to said referendum, a true, correct, and complete copy of which is hereto attached as Exhibit 7 to this stipulation.

13. Prior to the referendum there were sent to each producer as to whom available information indicated that he might be eligible to vote in said referendum (a) a copy of the order as issued August 5, 1938 by the Secretary; (b) a schedule of polling places (Exhibit 7 to this stipulation); (c) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "Questions and Answers on the Federal-State Milk Program for New York" (a copy of which pamphlet is attached hereto as Exhibit 8 to this stipulation); and (d) a pamphlet prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "New York Milk, Explanation of the Federal-State Marketing Plan Contained in Order No. 27" (a copy of which pamphlet is attached hereto as Exhibit 9 to this stipulation). Approximately 70,000 copies of the said order, the said schedule of polling places, and the said pamphlets were sent through Federal-State Agencies to such producers. A copy of letter accompanying such material sent to producers in New York State is attached hereto as Exhibit 10.

14. The results of the aforesaid referendum were as follows: 45,644 votes cast of which 7,017 were rejected as invalid. Of the 38,627 votes counted as valid, 33,663 votes, or 87.1 per cent were in favor of the issuance of the order, and 4,964 votes, or 12.9 per cent were opposed thereto. Of the 7,017 votes which were rejected, 6,547 votes were rejected either because the voters were members of cooperative associations which had cast ballots for all of their members or because the voters were not qualified to vote, not having delivered milk to an approved plan during the month of May 1938. Of the votes rejected for this reason, 5,110 votes were in favor of the issuance of the order, and 1,437 votes were opposed thereto. 470 votes were rejected because the voter had failed to mark his ballot either for or against the order or because it was not possible to determine whether the ballot was marked for or against the order.

15. After conducting said referendum and after the refusal or failure of handlers of more than 50 per cent of the volume of milk covered by said order which was marketed within the marketing area to sign the tentatively approved marketing agreement relating to milk, the Secretary on the 24th day of August, 1938, made a determination which determination was approved by the President:

(a) That the refusal or failure of said handlers to sign such marketing agreement tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy of the Act;

(b) That the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of producers of milk pursuant to such declared policy; and

(c) That the issuance of the order was approved or favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who, during the month of May 1938 were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area, and who voted in the above-mentioned referendum.

Said findings and determination were published by the Secretary in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit 11 to this stipulation.

16. The following paragraphs numbered 17 to 25 inclusive are adopted from an affidavit of E. W. Gaumnitz, chief of the 357 Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, United States Department of Agriculture. The statements of specific facts therein are to be taken by the Court as true; the reasons assigned by said E. W. Gaumnitz are to be taken by the Court as the basis of his and/or the Secretary's acts to which they pertain.

17. On July 25, 1938, Wellington J. Griffith, Assistant Marketing Specialist, Dairy Section, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, was designated by Acting Secretary of Agriculture M. L. Wilson as agent of the Secretary of Agriculture to conduct a referendum among producers, who during the month of May 1938, said month being determined by the Acting Secretary of Agriculture to be a representative period, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, to aid the Secretary of Agriculture in determining whether such producers favored or approved the issuance of an order regulating the handling of milk in said area. This designation was amended on August 15, 1938. Copies of the order, designating Mr. Griffith as referendum agent, and the amendment thereto are attached hereto as Exhibits 12 and 13 to this stipulation.

18. Prior to this time, exhaustive and painstaking efforts were made to secure a complete and accurate list of all cooperative associations who might be qualified to vote in the referendum. Such efforts included consultations with county agents, extension workers from various universities in the Northeastern States, and officials of local departments of health throughout the area, examination of the corporation records in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of New York, conferences with leaders of producer groups and of handlers organizations, with officials of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets and with other informed sources. After weeks of work, a list of 193 cooperative associations was secured which was, as far as could be ascertained, a complete list of 358 cooperative associations whose producers delivered milk to plants approved by health authorities in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area.

19. On July 8, 1938, a letter was sent to the last known address of each of said cooperative associations over the signature of said E. W. Gaumnitz and that of Mr. Kenneth F. Dee, Director, Division of Milk Control, Department of Agriculture and Markets, State of New York. This letter advised the cooperative associations of the steps which must be taken by them in order that they might be determined to be qualified to express the approval or disapproval of producers belonging to such associations. A copy of this letter is attached hereto as "Exhibit 14" to this stipulation.

20. Copies of the letter mentioned above were sent to the Central New York Cooperative Associations, Inc., at Cortland, New York, and to the Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Cooperative, Inc., at Schuyler Junction, New York. These letters were never returned as unclaimed, but no reply was received from either of these associations. The defendant Rock Royal Cooperatives Association, Inc., did not start receiving milk from producers until August 6, 1938, and its name did not appear on any list as having been a cooperative association receiving milk from producers during the month of May 1938.

21. Replies were received from 54 cooperatives to whom the letters mentioned above were sent and 17 letters were returned unclaimed. Of the 54 cooperatives replying, 13 indicated that they did not desire to vote for their producers, 8 stated that they were not eligible to vote, 11 were not qualified, primarily because the information submitted was insufficient on which to make a determination, and 22 were determined to be qualified to vote for their members.

22. Attached hereto and marked Exhibit 15 to this stipulation is a list showing the 22 cooperatives determined to be eligible to 359 vote for their producers; the 17 cooperatives as to which letters were returned unclaimed; the 13 cooperatives, which indicated they did not desire to vote for their producers; the 8 cooperatives who declared they were not eligible to vote; and the 11 cooperatives determined not to be qualified to vote.

23. On August 15, 1938, M. L. Wilson, Acting Secretary of Agriculture, sent a memorandum to said Griffith, Referendum Agent, to which was attached a list of the 22 cooperatives qualified to vote for their members. This memorandum directed the said Griffith to notify these cooperatives of such determination by registered mail and to prepare voting lists of all producers eligible to vote in the referendum who were members of, stockholders in, or under contract with such associations. In addition, said Griffith was specifically instructed to emphasize to each qualified association the importance of taking special and practical steps to convass the true sentiment of its producers before exercising the privilege of representing them as accorded by law.

360 24. Pursuant to such instructions, said Griffith directed auditors to check the membership and contract lists of the 22 cooperatives approved by the Acting Secretary of Agriculture in order to determine the correct number of producers who were members of, stockholders in, or under contract with such associations during the month of May, 1938. In addition, each of such cooperative associations was given a ballot. A copy of such ballot is attached hereto as "Exhibit 16" to this stipulations.

25. By reason of the fact that a special ballot was provided for cooperatives, the polling officers at the various polling places were instructed to accept only ballots cast by individual producers and not to accept ballots cast on behalf of cooperative associations.

26. The defendant Rock Royal Cooperative, Inc. made no application to the United States Department of Agriculture or to the Department of Agriculture and Markets for qualification to vote as a cooperative, nor did it apply to the aforesaid Griffith for a cooperative ballot, and when its representative appeared at a polling place established for producers and sought to vote on behalf of said defendant as a cooperative association, for all of its members, said representative was informed that such a ballot could not be accepted at said polling place.

27. The defendant Schuyler Junction New York Milk Shed Cooperative, Inc. made no application to the United States Department of Agriculture or to the Department of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York for its members as a cooperative association and did not apply to the aforesaid Griffith for a cooperative ballot. The president of the said defendant, David Doolen, appeared at a voting place established for producers, to wit at Ferguson Coal 361 Office, at Schuyler Junction, New York, on August 19, 1938, between 7:00 A. M. and 8:00 P. M. of said day, said time and place being the designated time and polling place stated in Exhibit 7 to this stipulation, and there attempted to cast the votes of the members of the said defendant. Said Doolen was told by the person in charge of the voting that he could not cast such votes on behalf of said corporation. When said Doolen insisted, he was allowed to make out a ballot, but was told that the votes would not be counted.

28. The Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, pursuant to the provisions of Chap. 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York, conducted a poll to assist him in determining whether the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least 75 percent of the producers of milk produced in the production area. Laurence L. Clough was designated by the Commissioner to conduct said poll. This poll was conducted at the same times and places as the referendum conducted by the Secretary of Agriculture. All producers located within the State of New York who had delivered milk to approved plants at any time after January 1, 1936, were permitted to vote in said poll and cooperative associations of producers were permitted to vote for their members in the same manner in which they voted in the referendum on Order No. 27. The results of such poll were as follows: 29,883 votes counted as valid were cast, of which 25,935 votes or 86.8 percent were in favor of the issuance of the order and 3,948 votes or 13.2 percent were opposed thereto. Attached hereto and marked Exhibit 17 to this stipulation is a list showing the cooperatives which were qualified by the Commissioner to vote in said poll, and a list of the cooperatives which were determined not to be qualified.

29. On August 25, 1938, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of New York found, on the basis of such poll, that the issuance of Official Order No. 126 was favored by at least 75 per cent. of the producers of milk produced in the production area for the marketing area and declared Official Order No. 126 to be effective on September 1, 1938. Said order has not been terminated.

30. On August 26, 1938, the Secretary issued an order which was published in the Federal Register on August 27, 1938, said order providing that Order No. 27 should become effective on September 1, 1938. Order No. 27 has not been terminated.

31. The following paragraphs number 32 to 38, inclusive, are adapted from the affidavit of E. W. Gaumnitz, Chief of the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, United States Department of Agriculture. The statements of specific facts therein are to be taken by the Court as true; the reasons assigned by said E. W. Gaumnitz are to be taken by the Court as the basis of his and/or the Secretary's acts to which they pertain, and the conclusions are those of E. W. Gaumnitz, whose qualifications are as follows: He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, B. S. 1921. He also holds the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy from the same institution. Since 1921 he has occupied the following positions: 1921 to 1925, Instructor and Assistant Professor of Agricultural Economics, University of Minnesota; 1925 to 1928, Agricultural Economist, Dairy Production, Iowa State College; 1928 to 1930, Agricultural Economist, California State Department of Agriculture; 1930 to 1933, Agricultural Economist, Market Research and Dairy Products, Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture; 1933 to July 1, 1935, Economic Advisor to the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; July 1, 1935 to date, Chief of the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He is the author of numerous articles, bulletins, and studies pertaining to the marketing of milk and dairy products.

32. Article VII of Order No. 27 provides that on or before the 15th day of each month each handler which is not a cooperative association of producers shall make payment to each producer for all milk delivered by such producer at any plant during the preceding month at not less than the uniform price, subject to butterfat, transportation, and location differentials. There is no similar provision with reference to payments by cooperatives.

33. In formulating Order No. 27, serious consideration was given to the advisability of including a provision requiring cooperative associations of producers to pay the uniform price, but such a provision was not included because the Secretary and Chief of the Dairy Section were advised by counsel that such provision could not be legally inserted because of the provisions of Section 8C (5) (F) of the Act which provides that "Nothing contained in this subsection (5) is intended or shall be construed to prevent a cooperative marketing association qualified under the provisions of the act of Congress of February 18, 1922, as amended, known as the 'Capper-

Volstead Act,' engaged in making collective sales or marketing of milk or its products for the producers thereof, from blending the net proceeds of all its sales in all markets, in all use classifications and making distribution thereof to its producers in accordance with the contract between the association and its producers. Provided, that it shall not sell milk or its products to any handler for use or consumption in any market at prices less than the prices fixed pursuant to paragraph (A) of this subsection (5) for such milk."

34. Moreover, it was felt that such a provision was not necessary to place the cooperative on an equal footing with other handlers, and that such a provision might result in substantial prejudice to the interest of cooperatives and place them at such a disadvantage that they could not compete with other handlers.

35. A cooperative association of producers is a handler in competition with other handlers to the extent that it operates a country receiving plant or engages in the wholesaling of milk. However, the primary interest of the cooperative is in securing for its 364 members the highest possible return from the sale of their milk. In formulating Order No. 27, it was recognized that a cooperative association which engages in the handling of milk must be treated as a handler and required to participate in the market wide pool, as otherwise the pool would not represent the market wide utilization of milk and a cooperative whose market was largely a fluid milk market would not be bearing its fair proportionate share of the burden of surplus milk and would receive an unconscionable advantage over other handlers. It was also recognized, however, that it would not be feasible to require a cooperative to return to its producers the exact uniform price each month because of the nature of the cooperative association and its relationship to its producer members.

36. A cooperative association of producers is under constant pressure from its producer members to secure the highest possible return for the milk which it handles and is also required to find some means of utilization for all the milk produced by its members. In the absence of a market-wide pool, a cooperative association would be under the same economic compulsion as other handlers to compete for the fluid milk market and might be under constant temptation to cut prices in order to secure a larger proportionate share of the market. With a market-wide pool in operation, the same compulsion does not exist and the interests of the producer members of cooperatives can be better served by disposing of the surplus milk in the form of manufactured products than in selling fluid milk at a price which will not reimburse the cooperative association for the expenses which it has incurred in handling such milk. If a cooperative association sells milk for fluid purposes at a price which will not compensate it for the handling, it is unable to return to its producers the uniform price. Instead of selling its milk at such a price 365 the cooperative can cause this milk to be made into manufac-

sold at a price which will compensate the cooperative for the cost of handling, the cooperative can return to its producer members the full uniform price. The cooperative is therefore relieved of the incentive which formerly compelled it to meet the competition of the proprietary handlers in the fluid milk market.

37. Cooperative associations may have as producer members anywhere from a few to several thousand farmers. These farmers are loosely held together by reason of membership in the cooperative, but if the cooperative returns to them month after month a price substantially lower than the uniform price, these members will cease to do business with the cooperatives. The possibility that cooperative associations might be able to undersell other handlers by paying their producers less than the uniform price was carefully considered during the time that Order No. 27 was in process of formulation, but it was realized by all concerned that the interest of the producers in securing the highest possible return for their milk would make such a result not only improbable but impossible. To assume that a cooperative association would set out deliberately to capture the fluid milk market by underselling proprietary handlers would require the assumption that the thousands of producers involved would deliberately make a sacrifice of thousands or hundreds of thousands of dollars per month in the hope of ultimately securing domination of the fluid milk market. Experience has shown that such a hope would be futile. Long experience in dealing with agricultural problems has also demonstrated that such a concerted long range program could never be successfully carried on by thousands of scattered farmers even when joined together through a cooperative association.

366 38. The cooperative association must dispose of all the milk of its producer members whereas a proprietary handler is subject to no such compulsion. A proprietary handler, by closing plants or selection of producers, can limit its purchases to its business needs but a cooperative association must find an outlet for all the milk of all its producers even though the finding of such an outlet may result in substantial extra expense. The expenses necessarily incurred in performing this service may cause its expenses for a period to exceed its income from its handling operations and if the cooperative were forced to return each month to its producers the uniform price without deducting such expenses, it might be forced either to go out of business or to cease performing these services. It has long been the policy both of Congress and of the State of New York to foster the development of cooperative associations. Since it is only through cooperation that the producers are enabled to meet handlers on anything approaching even terms, it was felt that any provision in the order which might make it impossible for cooperatives to exist would be an unwarranted discrimination against them.

39. The Metropolitan Marketing Area, as defined by Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126, includes the City of Greater New York, and territory adjacent thereto, wholly within the territorial boundaries of the State of New York.

40. Milk dealers, licensed as such, under the provisions of Sections 253 and 257 of the Agriculture and Markets Law, of the State of New York, alone, have the right to engage in the purchase and sale of milk in said Marketing Area, and the term "milk dealer" includes

367 "Any person who purchases or handles or sells milk, including * * * cooperative corporations and unincorporated cooperative associations."

A "dealer" who handles milk received at an approved plant is a handler within the meaning of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126. All of the defendants are handlers as defined in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126. (Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., does not join in the last sentence of this paragraph.)

41. The principal health authority in the Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, as described by Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126 is the Department of Health of the City of New York, which inspects country receiving plants, farms, dairies, and other facilities of milk producers, as well as bottling and distributing facilities covering all milk sold within the City of New York. The inspected and approved country receiving plants, farms, dairies, and other facilities of milk producers above referred to, also supply a large part of the milk sold in the Counties of Westchester, Nassau, and Suffolk, but the exact proportion of said milk which is included under New York City inspection is not exactly known.

The producers entitled to vote or whose votes were entitled to be cast by cooperative associations in said referendum were those producers delivering milk in the month of May 1938 to plants approved by the New York City Department of Health and all those producers delivering during May 1938 to plants approved by any other health authority in the marketing area. Attached hereto, and marked Exhibit 18, is a list of milk receiving stations approved by the Department of Health of the City of New York, dated August 1, 1938, listing the stations in the production area, with location, ownership, and number of producers (dairies) delivering to each, as of said date.

368 Some of the milk-receiving stations in the production area which were approved by the Department of Health of the City of New York were also approved by the health authorities of the City of Newark, State of New Jersey, and by the State of New Jersey for delivery to Newark and other cities and communities in said State. Attached hereto and marked Exhibit 19 is a list of milk-receiving stations approved by the health authority of the City of Newark, New Jersey, dated April 1, 1938, giving the location and ownership as of said date. Exhibit 20, attached hereto, is a list of milk-receiving stations approved by the health authority of the State of New Jersey dated July 30, 1938, giving the location and ownership as of said date.

42. The official records of the Department of Health of the City of

New York, as of August 1938 disclosed that there were 54,111 milk producers whose dairies had been inspected and approved for the production of Grade B milk for shipment to and sale in the City of New York; 6,109 milk producers whose dairies had been approved for the production of Grade A milk for shipment to, and sale in the City of New York, making in all 60,220 milk producers. Said producers were located in the States of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Vermont, hereinafter referred to as the "New York Milk Shed." Included therein are the producers delivering to defendants' plants. The minimum production of milk delivered to the defendant Jetter's plants is upwards of 40,000 quarts of milk daily.

43. Approximately one-third of the milk produced for sale in the marketing area is produced in States other than the State of New York. Approximately one-third of the milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area passes 369 through other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area; a large part of the milk produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area which does not pass through other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area is physically and inextricably intermingled with that milk which is produced outside of the State of New York for sale in the marketing area of which is produced in the State of New York for sale in the marketing area but which passes through other States on its way to be sold in the marketing area. Unless all milk which is produced for sale in the marketing area is subject to the same regulation the result will be discrimination against the milk which is regulated.

44. Approximately 420 country receiving plants have been approved for the receiving and shipping of Grade B milk, and approximately 86 milk-receiving plants have been approved for receiving and shipping Grade A milk, making a total of approximately 506 milk-receiving stations in all in said New York Milk Shed. Included therein are defendants' receiving stations.

45. At all the times hereinafter mentioned, defendant Jetter Dairy Company, hereinafter referred to as "Jetter," was a competitor of, and has sold milk in its business, in competition with dealers operating the country milk-receiving stations in the New York Milk Shed above referred to, and who shipped milk received at said stations to the Metropolitan Area and sold the same in competition with milk sold by said defendant. The defendants Rock Royal Cooperative, and Schuyler Junction Cooperative, at all the times herein mentioned, have been and now are, selling milk to independent dealers for re-sale in competition with milk received at the country receiving plants described in the next preceding paragraph.

370 46. Defendants' principal competitors are as follows:

a. The Borden Company and various corporations subsidiary thereto, hereinafter referred to as "Bordens."

b. Various subsidiaries of National Dairy Products Corporation, hereinafter referred to as "National Dairy."

c. Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "Dairymen's League."

d. Other dealers, known in the industry as "independent dealers." Defendant Jetter is an independent dealer.

The defendant Jetter, the dealers purchasing the milk supply of the defendants Rock Royal and Schuyler Junction, and said competitors above enumerated, insofar as they are engaged in the sale of milk for fluid consumption in the City of New York are all "milk dealers" as defined by Section 253 of the New York Agriculture and Markets Law, and are all "handlers" as defined by Article I, Subdivision 6 of Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

47. Defendant Jetter, customers of defendants Rock Royal and Schuyler Junction and their competitors are also known in the industry as distributors. The Dairymen's League occupies a dual capacity as a cooperative agent of producers and as a distributor. The Dairymen's League as a distributor sells milk in competition with the defendant Jetter and other distributors including distributors purchasing their supplies from it, and is a factor in the price which defendant Jetter and their competing dealers can demand and procure for fluid milk.

48. The average quantities of fluid milk sold in the marketing area handled daily by Dairymen's League, including milk distributed by Dairymen's League and milk sold by Dairymen's League to distributors, during the months of September, October, and 371 November 1938, was approximately 26,000 40-quart cans daily or about 34% of the fluid milk sold in the marketing area.

49. The records of the Department of Health of the City of New York show that as of August 1938, the Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and Sheffield Condensed Milk Company, operated and now operate, 87 approved milk receiving stations in said New York Milk Shed, receiving milk from 10,334 producers. The greater part of said producers deliver milk to Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and are organized in a membership cooperative corporation, known as Sheffield Producers' Cooperative Association, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "Sheffield Cooperative."

50. Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and some National Dairy subsidiaries, also purchase supplies of milk from other cooperative associations operating approved milk receiving stations in the said New York Milk Shed.

51. Dairymen's League was in August 1938, operating 109 approved receiving plants in the New York Milk Shed, receiving milk from 11,391 producers.

52. The records of the Department of Health of the City of New York show that as of August 1938, Bordens operated 65 approved milk receiving stations, receiving milk from 8,404 producers. All of said producers were and are members of Dairymen's League; milk of said producers is delivered to Bordens and payment therefor is made by Bordens to said Dairymen's League, which in turn pays and producers, and also pays producers delivering milk to its own plants.

53. The number of approved producers included in Dairymen's League membership was in August 1938 upwards of 19,500.

54. Subsidiaries of Borden purchase milk from producers who are not members of Dairymen's League at other approved milk receiving stations in the New York Milk Shed.

55. On June 7th, 1937, a Certificate of Incorporation of "Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc.," 573 hereinafter referred to as "Bargaining Agency," was filed in the Office of the Secretary of State of the State of New York whereby there was created a membership corporation. Said Certificate provided in part:

"10. The membership of the corporation shall be limited to cooperative associations organized under or subject to the provisions of the Cooperative Corporations Law of the New York State, or of similar laws of any other State, and organized and controlled by milk producers."

Shortly thereafter the Dairymen's League and Sheffield Cooperative became members of said new corporation or Bargaining Agency. Other cooperatives, operating country receiving plants, were solicited to become members of the Bargaining Agency, and some did so. The officers, members, agents, and servants of the Bargaining Agency, assisted in the formation of cooperative corporations among the milk producers delivering milk to plants owned by independent dealers, including defendant Jetter.

56. The Bargaining Agency presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and to the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, a proposed marketing agreement and Order, regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, and requested a hearing thereon under the authority of the Act, and under the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York. A true, correct, and complete copy of such proposed marketing agreement and order, together with the notice of hearing thereon, is attached hereto as Exhibit 21 to this stipulation.

57. Prior to the joint hearings on the proposed Federal and State Orders referred to in Paragraph 5 hereof and on or about April 28, 1938, the Bagaining Agency issued a 24-page booklet, on the cover of which was contained the following statement: "Mr. Dairyman * * * Save this Booklet. The Plan It Explains May Save Your Farm." A true, correct, and complete copy of said booklet is attached hereto as Exhibit 22 to this stipulation.

58. Printed statements and radio broadcasts issued by the 573 Bargaining Agency and its officers are attached hereto and marked Exhibits 23A to J and 23AA to II inclusive: attached hereto and marked Exhibits 24 to 24H inclusive are the printed statements issued by the Dairymen's League through its official newspaper the "Dairymen's League News"; Exhibits 25 a 25A contain the published statements by the Sheffield Producers their official newspaper, the "Sheffield Producer." Exhibits 26 26S inclusive are official statements and official news releases a other printed matter, relating to the Federal and State Orders, issu by the Commissioner of Agriculture, Department of Agriculture a Markets, the Cooperative Extension Department of Agriculture a Home Economics of the State of New York. Exhibit 27 contai printed statements published by the Dairy Farmers Union. E hibit 28 contains handbills in opposition to Order No. 27 and Offi Order No. 126 which were passed out to all persons attending t hearings held on said Order and at meetings of producers he elsewhere.

59. The evaporated milk plants named in Article 4, Section paragraph 4 of the Orders, are owned as follows:

a. Mount Pleasant, Mich.; Greenville, Wisc.; Black Creek, Wis Orfordville, Wisc.; and Belleville, Wisc.; by the Borden Compan

b. Sparta, Mich.; Chilton, Wisc.; Berlin, Wisc.; Richland Cent
Wisc.; Oconomowoc, Wisc.; and Jefferson, Wisc., by the Carnati Company.

c. Hudson, Mich.; Wayland, Mich.; Cooperville, Mich.; Ne Glarus, Wisc.; Belleville, Wis.; Cold Water, Ohio, and Delta, Ohi by the Pet Company.

60. Pursuant to Article II of Order No. 27, the Secretary August 27, 1938, designated E. M. Harmon as Market Administrat under said Order, and pursuant to Article II of Official Order N 126, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State
New York designated said E. M. Harmon as Market Administrat under Official Order No. 126. Said E. M. Harmon, in t 374 execution of his duties as Market Administrator under s Orders, has supplied all handlers, including the defendan with forms prescribed in accordance with the provisions of t Orders upon which to report purchases, sales and use of milk, a said E. M. Harmon has been and now is acting as Administrat under said Orders.

61. Each of the defendants have filed the reports which were d on October 10, November 10, and December 10. True, correct, a complete copies of each of such reports are attached hereto as E hibits 29 to 40, inclusive, to this stipulation. Matter appearing said reports in red pencil constitutes notations made by the Mark Administrator's office.

62. If the order is valid, and if the defendants are subject there the amounts due from such defendants to the Market Administra for payment to producers through the Producer Settlement Fund are as follows:

	September	October	November
Acme Dairy Co.	Paid	14,516.05	9,030.77
Rock Royal	3,618.56	3,668.24	1,808.74
Lafayette Junction	1,808.00	1,337.40	737.64
Central New York	20,115.56	19,581.60	11,068.13

63. The members of Central New York Cooperative Association at all times have been and are dairy farmers producing milk upon their own farms. The farms of all members of Central New York co-operative Association are in New York State. Central New York Cooperative Associations, Inc. does not own any farms. A copy of the standard membership contract executed by a producer with Central New York Cooperative Association is attached hereto as Exhibit 41.

64. Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., was organized June 12, 1934, pursuant to the Co-operative Corporations Law of the State of New York. Shortly thereafter it entered 375 into a contract with a corporate body known as Hegton Corporation, by the terms of which the Hegton Milk Corporation leased to the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. all of the country milk receiving plants and the city distributing plants and all of the equipment used in the receiving, handling and distribution of milk, which plants, equipment, etc. were then owned by the Hegton Milk Corporation. Copy of the said lease is attached hereto as Exhibit 42 to this stipulation.

65. The Hegton Milk Corporation was organized on or about June 1934, for the purpose of acquiring all of the physical assets owned by Hegeman Farms Corporation and the Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. Inc. and shortly after its organization it did acquire said assets. Said assets are the physical properties referred to in the preceding paragraph as being leased by the Hegton Milk Corporation to Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc.

66. Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. was organized for the purpose of marketing milk received from producers at four milk plants located respectively at Sheds, Youngs Crossing, Maybury Mills and Kortright, all in the State of New York, and the principal activity of the said Central New York Co-operative Association at all times has been and is to act on behalf of its members in the marketing of the milk produced by the members upon their own farms.

67. Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. owns no physical assets, except the interest of the lease as herein mentioned. Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. owns all the issued and outstanding stock of the following business corporations: Hegeman Farms Corporation, Hamilton Milk and Cream Co. Inc. and Cato Milk Company, Inc., the ownership of which corporate stock is authorized by Section 19 of the New York Cooperative Corporation Law. The Milk of its members is received by Central Ne 376 York Co-operative Association, Inc. at the aforesaid receiving plants and from said plants shipped to the New York Ci depot located at 1624 Center Avenue, Ridgewood, Long Island, Ne York City, which depot is also owned by Hegton Milk Corporati and under lease to Central New York Co-operative Association, In as aforesaid. The milk is thence distributed and sold in the Ne York Metropolitan Marketing Area to retail stores and consume through three corporations known respectively as Hegeman Farm Corporation, Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. Inc. and Cato Milk C

Inc., all wholly owned subsidiary companies of the Central Ne York Co-operative Association, Inc.

68. The said three subsidiaries utilize in the sale and distributio of such milk the physical assets owned by the Hegton Milk Co poration and under lease as aforesaid to the Central New York Co operative Association, Inc.

69. The directors of Central New York Co-operative Associatio
Inc. are all producers.

70. There is no written contract between Central New York Co operative Association, Inc. and any one of its three subsidiarie aforesaid, but the aforesaid arrangements whereby the milk of th members of Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. i distributed and sold in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketin Area through the aforesaid three subsidiaries have been made b the officers of Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. an the officers of its subsidiaries.

71. Each of the aforesaid subsidiaries in the operation of th physical assets leased as aforesaid from Hegton Milk Corporatio by Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., hires an pays the necessary labor and collects the money received fro stores and other customers to whom the milk is sold and afte deducting the expenses of operation, remits the balance t 377 Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc.

72. On or about July 1, 1934, Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., applied to the Division of Milk Control of the Department of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, for a milk dealer's license.

73. The exhibits referred to in paragraphs "63" and "64" above together with all other instruments referring to the organizatio of the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. and of i ownership, control and utilization of the subsidiary companies we exhibited to the Director of the Division of Milk Control at the tim that the said application was being considered. A full hearing o the same was held by the said Director and by the Commissioner Agriculture and Markets, and thereafter the license applied for w issued to the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., whic said license permitted the marketing of the said milk through th Hegeman Farms Corporation and Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. Inc two subsidiaries owned by the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. Thereafter the said Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. and the said Hegeman Farms Corporation and Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. Inc. continued to conduct business and licenses were thereafter issued permitting the conduct of such business by the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. and the Hegeman Farms Corporation and Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. Inc. Thereafter all of the capital stock of the Cato Milk Co. Inc. was acquired by Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. and at all times the Cato Milk Co. Inc. was licensed under the said State Law to engage in the milk business. From the date of the commencement of business by the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. the monthly reports required by the Division of Milk Control were filed by the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc., and at all times one monthly report was filed by the Central 378 New York Co-operative Association, Inc. which indicated the receipt of the milk by the Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. and the sales through the subsidiary companies, Hegeman Farms Corporation and Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. Inc. and, later, Cato Milk Co. Inc.

74. Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. also markets the milk of approximately 75 producers, who have their farms in New York State, and who are not members and do not have any written contract with Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. The milk of said producers is marketed and the proceeds thereof remitted to them by Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. in the manner as though the said producers were members of said Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc.

75. The milk received by Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. at its receiving plants is shipped to its New York City Depot by tank trucks, which since October 1, 1937, have usually followed a route entirely within the State of New York. Prior to October 1, 1938, such trucks often passed through the State of New Jersey en route to New York City. When tank trucks are not available, milk is shipped to New York City via Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad and via Lehigh Valley Railroad through the State of New Jersey.

76. Central New York Co-operative Association, Inc. is holding in its treasury a sum of money in excess of $5000, which represents the difference between the aggregate distributions to its members for the month of September, 1938, at the uniform price announced by the Market Administrator, and the total amount available at that time for distribution, and which would otherwise have been distributed to said producers.

77. The minimum wholesale cost per quart of milk delivered to stores and other customers in the wholesale trade in the marketing 379 area, including efficient operation of country receiving plants, freight, processing, bottling, delivery, taxes, license fees, and minimum overhead expenses which are incident thereto, have been the subject of wide investigations based on audits of operati distributors or handlers, including an audit made by Dr. Lel Spencer, an audit by Ernst & Ernst, public accountants, an investig tion made by the Attorney General of the State of New York in 1 and by independent accountants employed by various distributo

78. For the purpose of this action, it is stipulated that the Dai men's League, in its official newspaper, the Dairymen's League Ne dated November 15, 1938, makes the following statement:

"To pay established prices, pay for full butterfat content a handlers can sell milk to stores and make full payment to producer

The "established prices" referred to in said item, mean the pri contained in Order No. 27 and Official Order No. 126.

79. The foregoing statement by the Dairymen's League News

380 milk dealers distributing milk to the wholesale trade in t metropolitan area to the minimum delivered wholesale c of milk bottled in glass per quart.

80. It is stipulated that the affidavit of Paul Grossman verif November 25th, 1938, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit # may be considered as the evidence of said Paul Grossman, with same force and effect as if said Grossman had testified to the matt herein stated.

81. If the Court rules that the number of producers accredi is not privileged or confidential and is competent in evidence, plaintiffs will supply such information in Exhibit #15 stating names of each Co-operative which was so qualified; which vo in said referendum and in said poll.

82. If the Court rules that such information is not confiden and privileged, the plaintiffs will also furnish a statement of the to number of votes cast by Co-operatives on behalf of producers, b for and against said Orders in both the referendum and poll.

83. If the Court rules that such information is not confiden or privileged the plaintiffs will furnish a statement of the num of votes cast by Co-operatives on behalf of producers and wh were rejected, stating in detail the names of the Co-operatives wh attempted to cast said votes and the number of votes rejected as each such Co-operative.

84. As to any document published by or on behalf of the Se

Agencies, the Dairymen's League, the Bargaining Agency, The D
Farmers Union, the Rural New Yorker, each side waives formal p of identification and will limit any objection thereto to Plaintiff introduced in evidence the following parts of the aforesaid ipulation:

The preamble and paragraphs, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 30, 39, 40, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 60, 61, 62, 63, 66, 75, and 85, together with the exhibits referred to in the aforesaid paragraphs. These exhibits were received in evidence and marked "Exhibits Numbers 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, and 41" to the stipulation.

The intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, as Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, introduced in evidence the following parts of the aforesaid stipulation:

Paragraphs 9, 28, and 29, together with the exhibits referred to in the aforesaid paragraphs. These exhibits were received in evidence and marked "Exhibits Numbers 2 and 17" to the stipulation. The intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, also adopted the paragraphs of the stipulation previously offered by the plaintiff.

The plaintiff and the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, rested. With consent of defendants the intervening plaintiffs, The Dairymen's League and the Bargaining Agency, reserved the right to introduce evidence at a later date.

Defendants' motion for nonsuit

At the close of plaintiff's case the defendants moved for a non-suit and dismissal of the several complaints in the consolidated action on the following grounds:

First: That the plaintiffs have failed to prove the causes of action alleged in the complaint against the defendants, or any cause of causes of action against any of said defendants.

Second: That the provisions of title 7, section 608–C, known as the Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, re-enacting, amending, and supplementing the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is unconstitutional and void on the following grounds:

a. On the ground that the same authorizes and permits the issuance of marketing orders, having the effect of law, fixing the prices to be paid by business or proprietary handlers of milk, while, by the provisions of sections 8c (5) (B) and (F), exempting other 383 persons of the same class, engaged in the same business, to wit: Cooperative corporations, from compliance therewith, and from payment of said prices so fixed, in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

b. In that the same delegates to cooperative handlers, the right to enact or legislate such price fixing orders, by casting one vote for each producer delivering to such handler, and at the same time, denies to the defendant Jetter Dairy Company, and other proprietary handlers, who are all handlers and dealers of a like class, the right to vote thereon, or to be considered in the legislating of such order, in violation of the due process clause.

c. In that it delegates to cooperative handlers, the power to regulate the affairs of competing handlers of the same class, the same delegation being clearly arbitrary and a denial of the rights safeguarded by the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment.

d. In that the delegation of such powers to legislate said order, is unwarranted by the Constitution and the Congress was without power to grant such delegation.

Third: That the provisions of Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York, are also invalid for the same reason and on the further ground that they are violative of the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment and of Article 3, Section 1, of the New York State Constitution, providing that the legislative power of the State shall be vested in the Senate and Assembly.

Fourth: That it now affirmatively appears that Order No. 27 was promulgated or issued in accordance with the provisions of the agriculture marketing agreement act of 1937 in the following particulars: In that the same was predicated on a referendum of producers; that prior to the voting on said referendum, the Secretary Agriculture issued a pamphlet Exhibit 8 in evidence, which was delivered to all producers believed to be entitled to vote on said orders, in which it was stated in substance that the proposed order established "uniform prices for milk sold by producers to handlers in the Metropolitan Market:" and that the same required "uniform return to producers for milk sold in the marketing area, regardless of the handler to whom the milk was sold," whereas, in truth and in fact, cooperative handlers of milk were not required pay a uniform price for milk, nor were such cooperative handlers required to return uniform returns, or, indeed, any returns to producers for milk sold in the marketing area. So far as the order provided, such referendum, therefore, established only that the persons voting therein favored a marketing order which provided for uniform payments to producers and uniform charges to handlers, established by inference that such voters were not in favor of order as issued whereby uniform payment to producers were not required and uniform prices were not charged to all handlers.

Fifth: That the said order fails to contain a provision required by section 608–c (5), (F) which reads as follows: "Provided that it [a cooperative handler] shall not sell milk or its products to any handler use or consumption in any market at prices less than the prices established pursuant to paragraph (A) of this sub-section (5) for such milk," but on the contrary, said Order No. 27, by the provisions of Article VII, Section 1, permitted handlers, cooperative or otherwise, to pay for milk produced in the production area and sold in other markets, at any price such handler designated.

Sixth: That said order is confiscatory and violative of the Fifth Amendment by permitting the taking of money or property of cooperative handlers selling solely in the marketing area, the money and property of producers delivering to certain cooperatives, and money and property of proprietary handlers, for the purpose of paying the same to competing cooperative handlers, and money and property of producers delivering to proprietary handlers, and thereby discriminating against said classes of persons whose money is thus expropriated. (The motion was denied on all grounds except constitutional grounds, and the variance of the order with the statute as to which the Court reserved decision.)

Defendants' case offers in evidence

The defendants, Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., Schuyler Junction of York Milk Shed Co-operative, Inc., and Rock Royal Co-op-

Paragraphs 16 and 17, together with the exhibits referred t the aforesaid paragraphs. These exhibits were received in evid and marked Exhibits Numbers 12, 13, and 14 to the stipulation.

The said defe ants asked for a ruling on the questions presented by paragraph Plaintiff objected to furnishing the information described the on the ground that the Secretary of Agriculture had issued structions that such information be kept confidential, but plai offered to furnish a statement showing the total number of v cast by all cooperatives, the total number of votes cast by co eratives in favor of the order, and the total number of votes by cooperatives in opposition to the order. The Court ruled t the Government must furnish the names of the cooperatives wh voted for their members in the referendum and the total numbe votes cast by cooperatives, but that it need not disclose the num of votes cast by the individual cooperatives, with the exception the Dairymen's League, as to which question decision was reserv It was stipulated that the Dairymen's League cast 22,287 votes the poll on Order No. 27, and 17,361 votes in the poll on Offi Order No. 126.

The first sentence of paragraph 31, and the second sentence of s paragraph, down to and including the phrase "the conclusions those of E. W. Gaumnitz." (At this point plaintiff introduced evidence the remainder of paragraph 31.)

Paragraphs 32, 33, and 34.

The last three sentences of paragraph 36. (At this point plai tiff introduced in evidence the remainder of paragraph 36.)

The third sentence of paragraph 37. (At this point plaintiff i troduced the remainder of paragraph 37 and the whole of par graph 38.)

Paragraph 41, together with the exhibits referred to in the afor said paragraph. These exhibits were received in evidence and mark Exhibits Numbers 18, 19, and 20 to the stipulation. The last thr sentences of paragraph 41 and Exhibits 19 and 20 were received evidence over plaintiff's objection, on the ground that such eviden is irrelevant and immaterial, that the question of what milk recei ing stations were approved for the City of Newark or for the Sta the order, the question of whether the order was validly issued, on any issues involved in the case.

Paragraph 47.

Paragraph 48, over the objection of the plaintiff and the Dairymen's League, on the ground that evidence as to the operations of the Dairymen's League is irrelevant and immaterial, because the operations of the Dairymen's league have no bearing on the validity of the order involved in this case.

87 Paragraphs 49 and 50, over the objection of the plaintiff, on the ground that evidence as to the operations of the Sheffield Farms Company, Sheffield Condensed Milk Company, and other National Dairy subsidiaries, is irrelevant and immaterial, because such operations have no bearing on the issues involved in the case.

Paragraph 51, over the objection of the plaintiff, on the ground that evidence as to the operations of the Dairymen's League is irrelevant and immaterial, because the operations of the Dairymen's League have no bearing on any of the issues in this case. (The Dairymen's League joined in this objection and asked that it be deemed to have joined in every objection made by the Government, and the Court held, in compliance with this request, that all objections made by the Government would be deemed also to be made by the Dairymen's League.)

Paragraphs 52, 53, and 54, over the objection of the plaintiff, on the ground that evidence as to the operations of the Borden Company and the Dairymen's League is irrelevant and immaterial, because the operations of the Borden Company and the Dairymen's League have no bearing on the issues involved in the case.

Paragraph 55, over the following objection made by the plaintiff: "We object to that, Your Honor, on the ground that it is irrelevant and immaterial. The question of whether or not there was such a corporation as the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., has no relation to the constitutionality of the act or the validity of the order, or any of the issues properly in this case. If it goes to anything, it goes to the motive of the Secretary of Agriculture in issuing the order, and we submit those are not in issue in this case." The Bargaining Agency joined in this objection.

Paragraph 56, together with the exhibit referred to in said paragraph. This exhibit was received in evidence and marked "Exhibit Number 21" to the stipulation.

88 Paragraph 57, together with the exhibit referred to in said paragraph, which exhibit was received in evidence and marked "Exhibit Number 22" to the stipulation. Plaintiff objected on the ground that said evidence is irrelevant and immaterial, and on the further ground that the Bargaining Agency is not shown to have had any authority to bind either the United States or the Secretary of Agriculture. The intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, joined in this objection.

390 ALEX EISENBERG, called as a witness in behalf of the defen ants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I am President and the active General Manager of Eisenbe Farms, Inc., a New York corporation. I reside at 2022 Avenue Brooklyn, N. Y. I am also identified with Eisenberg Farm Produ in Pennsylvania and Sunnydale Farms.

The principal office of Eisenberg Farms, Inc., is 290 Junius Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. It is licensed as a milk dealer by the Department of Agriculture and Markets of the state of New York and has been since that Department started issuing licenses. We have had a New York City Health Department license since I started in business, about twelve years ago, under the name of Alex Eisenberg. Then when the corporation was formed, about nine or ten years ago—Eisenberg Farms, Inc., it obtained a Control Board license as soon as the control board went into effect, in 1932 I think it was. Eisenberg Farms, Inc., has been licensed for six or seven years as a New York corporation.

I am President of Eisenberg Farm Products Corporation, which is incorporated in Pennsylvania, and have been President for about two years now. This corporation was formed in 1930. It is licensed to do business in the City of New York by the City Health Department. It does not have any state license issued by the Department of Agriculture and Markets as I have never made any application for it.

Eisenberg Farms, Inc., operates no milk receiving stations in the State of New York. Eisenberg Farm Products Corporation does operate milk receiving stations in Pennsylvania only. These stations are approved by the Department of Health of the City of New York. They are not approved by the State of New Jersey.

I signed a milk marketing agreement after the issuance of Order No. 27 by the Secretary of Agriculture. I don't recall on behalf of which corporation I signed it for the reason that I have so many corporations. A few more are Rugby Farms and Oxford Products of New York.

Oxford Products Corporation operates a milk receiving station at Galeton, Pennsylvania. I don't recall whether I signed a marketing agreement for it. I signed the agreement for one of the corporations.

(It was stipulated that Eisenberg Farms, Inc., signed a marketing agreement subsequent to September 1, 1938.)

I was the officer of Eisenberg Farms, Inc., which signed that agreement. I signed one agreement: I don't remember the name. If they say it is Farms, then it must be that name. I signed the agreement at the office of the Market Administrator. I don't recall the date in September that it was signed. (All of the following testimony was given over objection by plaintiff and all intervenors on the ground that such testimony is irrelevant and immaterial, having no bearing on the constitutionality of the act, the validity of the order, the question of whether the order has been violated or any issues involved in the case. The court ruled that the objection would run to the entire line of testimony.)

Prior to signing the marketing agreement I had been purchasing milk from the Red Rock Dairy Corporation at De Kalb Junction, New York, and transporting it from De Kalb Junction to Junius Street, Brooklyn. The milk we bought in De Kalb Junction we sold also to other dealers. In the Junius Street depot we have a bottling plant where milk is pasteurized, processed, and bottled.

arate processing company, whose name I don't know offhand m

The milk which I am purchasing from Red Rock Dair was getting daily shipments from Red Rock, receiving about cans. A can holds about 40 quarts of milk. The first time Red ceased delivering milk to us was just for a day or two in Nove 1938, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Did you write on the agreement that it was signed under test?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you write in words or in substance on the agreement statement that it was signed under protest.

A. I don't recall if that was written on the agreement or not.
It was made out at the Market Administrator's office. The Ad istrator's girl made it out. I delivered it to Bert Miller. I t

Mr. Harmon, the Administrator.

I have known Mr. Miller for a number of years through the trol Board.

Q. Did you know him as an employee of the Dairymen's Le before the milk control?

A. I don't know that.

Prior to my going to the Administrator's office to sign this ag ment there was some interruption to my milk deliveries from Rock. That milk was suspended about two days, amounting to cans a day. Milk from Andover, New York, was also interrup

I had a contract for the purchase of milk from Andover and the purchase of Red Rock milk.

three days at Canajoharie, New York. The concern which

There were in all about 850 cans daily withheld.

I had a talk with a representative of Commissioner Noyes ab signing this contract and having my milk released. The name of person to whom I talked was Mr. Gaynor. He called me on the te phone, I think, from his home at Leonardsville, New York. I w my office in Brooklyn when I talked with him. I had talked to Mr. Gaynor before just over the telephone a few times. I have met him once before.

Q. Did you recognize his voice as that of E. Manning Gaynor?

A. I would not say I recognized his voice. I was at his home. He asked me to come to his home one day.

I discussed the conversation which I had had over the telephone at his home and more than that. The trip to his home was after the telephone conversation. I mentioned something about this talk that I had with him over the telephone at that time. We had some other talks. There was one shut-off I didn't mention. That was from Saratoga Cooperative, 300 cans of milk a day coming in from Platts-burg, New York.

The man who called me on the telephone said he was Mr. Gaynor. When I went to Mr. Gaynor's office afterwards I referred to the conversation I had over the telephone.

I was told in the conversation over the telephone that if I don't sign the agreement I won't get any milk.

(At this point the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, interposed the further objection that there was no proof as to Gaynor's authority, which objection was overruled.)

Mr. Gaynor told me that if I came up to the Market Administrator's office and signed the marketing agreement, he would release the milk so that we could get the milk. After I signed, the milk was released. We got the milk until we stopped some of the shipments and made other arrangements. I stopped the shipments from Red Rock Dairy Corporation myself. We couldn't agree on the price; that was later on.

The contract in writing which one of my corporations has with Red Rock provided the price to be paid. I took the milk from the Red Rock Dairy Corporation until either September 30 or October 30, I am not sure which date.

Q. And at the end of that time the Red Rock Dairy Corporation billed you for milk in accordance with the prices stated in this federal marketing agreement; is that so?

A. No. There is no such price to be added in the federal marketing agreement. There is no price for handling. There is no price for freight. It says nothing about it in the marketing agreement. You can buy milk at $2.47 a hundred and don't have to pay any handling or freight rate.

That is my construction of the federal marketing order. That is what it says, unless it is different. I have read the order and found no provision for payment to the cooperative or to anyone, not only a cooperative, of a handling charge. I had an invoice sent to me from Red Rock Corporation.

Q. Do you remember the base price which was charged you for that milk by the Red Rock Corporation?

A. We had an arrangement, a full delivery price to our plant.

I don't remember what prices were charged in that last invoi and if more than one charge was made, what the charges were, a the respective amounts. (An agreement signed by the witness Eise berg was marked defendant's Exhibit 1 for identification.) I don remember where the agreement marked Defendant's Exhib 395 1 for identification was signed or who was present when signed it.

I was buying milk from Dairymen's League Cooperative Assoc tion before I ceased buying milk at Red Rock. I first commenc buying milk from the Dairymen's League over a year ago.

I recall that on April 1, 1937, milk control expired in New Yo State. At that time I had about the same number of corporatio selling milk in New York City.

I don't think I was buying milk from the Dairymen's League
April 1, 1937. If we bought any our books would show it.

I am acquainted with a concern known as the Moss Milk Compa
Inc. I do not own that company. I furnish it with milk. I w furnishing milk to this company on November 11, 1938. This mi was furnished by Oxford Products or Eisenberg Farm Produc one of the two. It was delivered in bottles to the Moss Milk Compa in New York City.

Q. And do you know in what quantities you or your corporati furnished milk to that company?

A. As I said, I wouldn't want to answer the question how mu milk or what he paid for the milk it would be unfair.

Q. I didn't ask what he paid. Approximately how many case day did you furnish the Moss Milk Company?

A. I wouldn't want to answer how much milk, the amounts boug it is unfair.

Moss Milk Company is a small company. It delivers to sto only in New York City in competition with every wholesale dea in New York, including Eisenberg Farms, Inc., and Jetter Da Company, Inc. It is in competition with the Dairymen's League. sell the Moss Milk Company all of its requirements.

I wouldn't care to answer how much milk we were buying in N vember 1938, from the Dairymen's League, if I did know offha
I had stopped buying milk from Red Rock on October 31, 19 but was not replacing part of that milk with additional purcha from the Dairymen's League.

396 In September when milk was withheld from me to m me sign this marketing agreement the Dairymen's Lea withheld some milk too, whatever we were purchasing. I do know offhand the amount we were purchasing. It was about or 500 cans a day.

Q. Now when you made a settlement with the Red Rock you not pay anything for handling charge?

A. I wouldn't say that. We certainly did.

Q. How much handling charge did you pay them for that m in September and October over and above the $2.45 base price?

A. I don't know about the $2.45. We paid more than the contract called for, and you have the contract.

The contract was not superseded by the federal order. There is nothing in the contract that supersedes it. It was based on the Sheffield Farms price and it is still the Sheffield Farms price going to the farmers today.

(A photostatic copy of a contract between one of witness' companies and Red Rock Dairy was marked defendant's Exhibit 2 for identification. Witness identified his signature but could not identify the agreement.)

Q. Now when you discontinued purchasing milk from Red Rock and commenced purchasing more milk from the Dairymen's League, will you tell us whether you paid the Dairymen's League as much as you were then paying Red Rock?

A. I didn't purchase more milk from the Dairymen's League.

Q. Whom did you buy milk from to take the place of this Red Rock milk in November?

A. I cannot tell you.

I am positive the milk wasn't purchased from Dairymen's League. I also purchased about the same amount of milk from the Dairymen's League on October 31, four or five hundred cans daily. On November 1 I was buying about the same amount. I am buying nothing from the League today. I discontinued buying from them on December 30, 1938.

I sold one of my companies, Lincoln Farms Co., to the Dairymen's League in June 1938. I don't own the Lincoln Farms business now. I sold it. I don't know offhand how much milk Lincoln Farms Company was handling a day at the time of its sale to the Dairymen's League.

Four or five hundred cans of milk purchased a day from the Dairymen's League would make as to 500 cans approximately 1,500 cases and as to 400 cans approximately 1,250 cases. During September, October, and November 1938, when I was selling milk to the Moss Milk Company, I was handling about 1,500 cases of milk a day from Dairymen's League sources.

Q. Since September 1, have you lost trade to competitors, that is, have competitors taken business from you?

A. They take and we take.

I don't take business. I haven't taken business by cutting prices against competitors. Competitors have taken business from me by cutting prices. There are several of them as far as I am concerned. I can name about twenty dealers. I mean everyone cut prices. I say we didn't take any customers by cutting prices. We may cut prices on our old customers to hold them, but we do not cut prices to take any. We didn't take customers from other dealers. There are dealers that take from one another. We are holding our own business as much as we possibly could. I didn't take any business from anybody else that I knew of. With all those companies it is possible that some of my many drivers may take some business that di come to my personal attention but it wasn't probable, because t do not cut prices. They do not go out soliciting trade. I would say that business taken by cutting prices is known in the indus as chiseled business. I have heard of that and the term is u commonly in the industry but I don't mean to say cutting price chiseled business.

Q. Tell me do you chisel business? Explain that to the Court.

A. There is Kingsborough Dairy Bottling Milk for retail busine that has no wholesale business——

Q. (Interrupting.) Never mind the name. How do y chisel?

398 A. I am explaining. He has no wholesale business He se to peddlers only. A peddler is a fellow that delivers to t home and he goes to them and solicits trade and then he tries to s that trade.

I don't know as a wholesaler how I would chisel trade if I wa going to. I don't know any wholesalers that do that. There Hegeman, Jetter, and the League. I don't think they call themselv chiselers. The man who does the chiseling is the one that goes t and solicits business, cuts prices and then tries to sell their trade.

If a new store opens up we give free goods and put in an expensi
box. We may pay him fifty or one hundred to paint signs on th window, or for free circulars, electric boxes, etc. I would not s that we never got any business by price cutting since we have be in business, as that is years ago. Probably we did. We never o tained 5,000 cases of trade in that way. We never had 5,000 ca of trade in one company. We never had 5,000 cases in my variou companies. I don't know whether we had 3,500 cases.

We weren't serving twelve or fifteen hundred cases from the Dair men's League milk. We could bottle that milk. We sell tank mi to dealers. We sell Dairymen's League milk to Hegeman Farm Jetter, and other dealers and through them.

I haven't any idea how many cases of milk we were selling in Se tember, October, and November 1938.

We didn't lose any trade to Dairymen's League in Septembe October, and November 1938 or to Borden's or to Borden Subsid aries. We lost quite a lot of trade to Sheffield Farms Company those months. We lost it by them cutting prices. That was Breakstone Milk. We lost that milk when they went out with pap containers for nine and one-half cents; when they came out with t name "Breakstone" and right along the line until toda

399 During September, October, November, and in the beginni of December 1938 they came out with twelve cent half pi of cream and we lost some business again on that. It costs more f a bottle of milk delivered in paper than glass, one and one-half ce more.

Q. So if your cost price of milk in glass was nine and one-h cents in paper it would be about eleven cents?

A. Well, glass is not nine and one-half cents, the paper should be d for ten and one-half.
Q. I didn't ask what it was sold for:
The independent glass is sold for nine cents. The paper should be sold for ten and one-half. Milk in glass containers is now being sold mostly at nine cents by all independents. Some milk in glass containers is sold for eight in the Bronx. Sheffield selling Breakstone milk in paper for nine and one-half cents. In ss they go as low as eight and one-half. I lost some trade at ces of eight and one-half on glass and nine and one-half with per but I have no idea how much trade I lost in that regard.
In connection with the milk being shut off from my company until igned this milk marketing agreement I had some talks with ex-missioner Baldwin. I knew him long prior to 1938. He was merly Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.
Q. Do you know him to be the Executive Secretary of the Metrolitan Bargaining Agency?
A. I don't know what he is. He is something in the Agency.
r. Baldwin called me personally on the telephone. I recognized his ice. It was a day or two before the milk was shut off each time.
just said if I signed up I would get my milk, that is all. I s told if I didn't sign up I wouldn't get milk. That is what hap-ed. No one else talked with me personally. I received a few grams from the Bargaining Agency. I think they were sent from racuse. They referred to my signing up if I wanted to continue get milk.
The following motion to strike was then made and denied:
Mr. McCarthy. I move to strike out all the testimony of the wits Alex Eisenberg on the ground that the same is irrelevant and aterial. He has discussed the circumstances leading up to the ning of the marketing agreement. There is no question of the ning of the marketing agreement in this case. The order is based on the failure of handlers to sign. The fact that he may have ned under protest, or may not have signed, appears to be immarial. The question of whether he has bought milk from the Dairyn's League and the prices at which milk has been sold by other panies in New York City has no bearing on the issues in the case.
The court denied the motion.
Mr. Wallach. Your Honor: In joining in this motion I also wish to add that there is not a word in the answer that talks out the marketing agreement, and by this witness's own testimony without attempting to concede that he did sign the marketing reement under protest, or duress, that was done after both orders nt into effect, and had absolutely nothing to do with the order at ll. Now it may be argued that it would be relevant had the mar-ting agreement been signed before the order went into effect, but cededly this marketing agreement was signed by Eisenberg after ptember 1st, and after the order went into effect.
The court denied the motion.

Cross examination by Mr. McCarthy:

I have three receiving plants in Pennsylvania located at Gale Elizabethville, and Oxford, Pennsylvania. The Galeton plan is erated by Oxford Products Company, a New York corporation, the other two plants are operated by Eisenberg Farm Produc Pennsylvania corporation.

I first began purchasing milk from the Dairymen's League June 1937 but have purchased no milk from them before that d that I remember.

Offhand I cannot give the names of the twenty or more deal to whom I have lost milk business as a result of price cutting. Th are about 125 in New York and it would be unfair to mention names, I not knowing exactly which ones I lost trade to, except do know one, and that is Breakstone, a branch of National Da We lost trade to some of the independents. I couldn't say offha about how many we lost trade to. We lost some to the Kin borough Company, not much. We may have lost some to Jett I don't recall that offhand.

I remember specifically that we lost trade to Manchester Milk Co pany in the Bronx, an independent handler. He is selling m today for nine cents in paper containers. Trinity Dairy Co 402 pany is selling for nine cents in bottles. It is one of t independents.

Q. Is there at all times sharp competition among the independe in the New York market?

A. Not at all times. There are fights that break out every o in a while. One dealer may get into a battle with another deal but generally one dealer may be friendly with 50 other dealers a not touch their trade or try to solicit their trade.

At the present time I would say that conditions are pretty friend We are not scrapping with anyone, none of our companies are, t I know of. We have lost trade to about twenty some independen but now, right now, we are only losing trade to three or four a I have mentioned Breakstone, Trinity Dairy, and Manchester three, offhand. There may be one or two more.

I first lost trade to Breakstone when it first came out with t bottled milk. They are only out about six months with bottled mi in containers. They are only out a shorter period than that—abo a month or so prior to September 1, 1938.

The Oxford Products Company of Pennsylvania is not one of companies. It operates the plant at Andover, New York.

Cross examination by Mr. Wallach:

Kingsborough Dairy Company gets its milk I think from Fre man's Dairy, or Jetter Dairy Co., one of the two. Freeman's Dai gets its milk from the Dairymen's League, Jetter Dairy and vario others. I don't know whether Mr. Jetter has an interest in Fre man's Dairy or who owns it. I wouldn't say I know who owns an one's business. I would not say I knew Freeman's Dairy purcha lk from Jetter. I know Jetter tanks probably go there. I think bottles milk for Jetter. I think that, because my man goes over there once in a while, and they come to our plant, and we sell milk once in a while to Freeman Dairy. Eisenberg Farm Products sell Freeman Milk once in a while. It is delivered in k trucks.

Cross examination by Mr. COOKE:

Lincoln Farms isn't the only part of my business that I have ever d. We sold several businesses during the last couple of years. re were some transactions with the League and some with Hege- n Farms. I sold the Cato business to Hegeman Farms about a r ago.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

In the sale of business such as Lincoln Farms, or the Cato Milk mpany, or any milk companies in New York City, the goodwill ue is considered in connection with the number of cases of trade. at is, the goods in trade have a certain value. I couldn't answer at was the fair market value in September 1938, of goodwill of wholesale business such as that in which the Jetter Dairy Co. was gaged.

There is no such thing as recognized value of a case, or goodwill. e may give it away for $10.00; another for $100.00; another for 00. I don't remember any sales made since September 1 of this ar on milk alone where the goodwill value was figured at a set ce. There is no such thing as value of goodwill at the present e per case. One company may ask $75.00 a case, another $25.00 case. If someone wanted to buy it, some business might be sold at 5.00 and some at $25.00 a case. So far I don't know of any. I n't know of any business being sold lately on the basis of $50.00 case. That is since January 1, 1938.

In the sale of the Lincoln business I don't remember what was sidered, whether goodwill was considered in the purchase price. don't have any idea whether I was paid anything for goodwill or t.

GEORGE WILSON called as a witness on behalf of the defendants testified as follows:

I live in Solsville, Madison County, New York. I have been a rmer for the past twenty years. I own a herd of cows. I sell ilk to the Solsville plant of the Jetter Dairy Company. The airymen's League has a plant across the highway from the Jetter ant at Solsville.

I was on of incorporators of the Solsville Milk Producers, Inc. r. Charles H. Baldwin and Mr. Cooper, another employee of the rgaining Agency, came to that vicinity to form this cooperative rporation. They held about three meetings before the coopera- ve was formed. I am Secretary and Director of the cooperative.

I have been delivering milk to the Jetter Dairy Company f the last twenty years except for two or three years when I delivered the plant at Bouckville, New York, which is a little further from farm than the Jetter plant. This plant has been operated at dif ent times by Muller Dairies, a subsidiary of the National Da Company, Keystone, and Mr. Stuhring. It is twelve or fourteen ye since I last delivered milk to the Bouckville plant. During that ti I have delivered milk to Jetter.

On the Friday before November 28, 1938, I sent out notices of meeting of milk producers delivering to Solsville, to be held at Ka Hall in the town of Madison on November 28, 1938.

Q. And who asked you to send those notices out, Mr. Wilso (Plaintiff objected to this question and to this entire line of tes mony on the ground that it is wholly irrelevant and immaterial the issues of the case. Objection was overruled.)

Mr. Carl Ford, President of the Solsville Cooperative, authori me to send out the notices. (The witness identified Defendan Exhibit No. 3 for identification as a copy of the post card sent o to different members of the cooperative.)

405 Exhibit No. 3 for identification was offered in evidence.

I sent cards having the same wording as Exhibit No. 3 f identification to all producers delivering milk to the Solsville pla About the time I sent this card out I was visited by a Mr. Washbo an employee of the Dairymen's League. (Plaintiff moved to stri out the evidence of this witness. Motion was denied.)

GEORGE WILSON, recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendant testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

It was about six weeks ago that Mr. Washbon called on me, some time in November.

I learned that the Jetter Dairy Company brought an action to re strain the Bargaining Agency and some other people from certai things. Mr. Washbon called on me, I believe, after that action wa brought, but I am not positive on that point. He drove up in my yard.

One part of the conversation was that he asked me where I wa drawing my milk and I told him that I was drawing it to the Jette Dairy Company. He said, "Wouldn't you prefer drawing your mil to the Dairymen's League where you would be sure of getting you check every month?" I told him I always got my check from Mr. Jetter, and he said, "Well, that is not what your neighbors just told me." I asked him what the neighbors said and he said how he hadn't received two weeks' check, he had kept back two week on him. "Well," I said, "I don't hardly think that unless he wa under some obligation to Mr. Jetter. I have never known but what Mr. Jetter has always paid." Well, he said, that is what the neigh bors said and I told him what I thought and he said that might be Plaintiff moved to strike all the testimony of the aforesaid witness.

Cross-examination by Mr. COOKE:

I am Secretary of the Solsville Cooperative. It is not a member of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency. It has not been a member at any time to my knowledge. Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Cooper (representatives of the Bargaining Agency) came to see us on two or three occasions before we were organized. We were organized probably a year ago. They came there two or three times at the time we were organized and incorporated.

I think it was both Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Cooper who gave us the idea for the meeting of November 28th. I know Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Cooper met us on two or three occasions about a year ago. On one occasion it was in Oriskany Falls and on another occasion it was in the schoolhouse. I last met Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Cooper at a neighboring farmer's house but I cannot think of his name. I think it was last November, I cannot tell you whether it was in October. Neither Mr. Cooper nor Mr. Baldwin said anything to me about having a meeting in Kanes' Hall on November 28th. I don't know whether they said it to any officer of my cooperative. Outside of material that they have sent me through the post I have not had any communication with Mr. Baldwin or Mr. Cooper during the past three months. I don't know whether Mr. Ford has had any communication with them. I don't know whether any members of the Cooperative have had any communication with the Bargaining Agency or any officer or employee of the Bargaining Agency during the past three months. I don't know of any such communication as late as that.

I went to the meeting at Kane's Hall on November 28th. A number of farmers were there. Felix Piseck was not there. Stanley Piseck was not there.

One of the Directors, Mr. Thomas Kane, told me that the Bargaining Agency was going to send one of the Piseck boys to this meeting at Kane's Hall on November 28th. That is the only authority for claiming that the Bargaining Agency was going to send a speaker there that night. I cannot just remember whether we received any letters. We didn't hold the meeting as we were going to. There was nobody from the Bargaining Agency at that meeting that I know of. There was no speaker at the meeting, we practically didn't hold the meeting.

Q. You didn't hold the meeting?

A. No.

I was told to get out the notice for this meeting by Mr. Ford. At that time Mr. Ford did not say anything about the Bargaining Agency, I don't remember that he did.

My mind is backward on the dates, but Mr. Cooper did drive me home one night but I cannot remember the date. He drove me home from one meeting held at Kane's Hall. I cannot think what the meeting was for. It was in 1938, not so long ago, but I cannot remember just when. I cannot remember whether it was within three months or six months.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

That this meeting didn't materialize is due to the fact that the United States Marshal came down and served some restraining order. I was at every meeting at Kane's Hall. I cannot tell whether I was there in August or not. My mind is backward on dates.

HOWARD B. RICHMOND was called as a witness on behalf of 408 the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live at Waterville, Town of Sangerfield. I am a farmer and deliver milk to the Jetter Dairy Company. I have been delivering to that company for two years the 1st of January. I have met Mr. Baldwin and I have met Mr. Cooper of the Bargaining Agency. I am a member of the Oriskany Falls Milk Producers Cooperative Inc. I am secretary and treasurer of that corporation which was formed in either August or September 1937, I think.

Carl Ford asked me to join with them in connection with this proposed meeting to be held at Kane's Hall, November 28, 1938. He asked me to call up Bridgewater. I was to call one of the Directors of the Bridgewater Cooperative. I tried to call him on the phone and I failed to get him; and that was all there was. I didn't get in touch with anybody. I did not send out the notices.

(All of the following testimony was received in evidence over the objection of plaintiff and all intervenors on the ground that it is irrelevant and outside of the issues in the case.)

In the month of August 1938 I was visited by a man who said he was a representative of the Bargaining Agency, but I don't know his name. He had a typewritten paper which he asked me to sign. It is the same as Def. Ex. 5 for identification. I signed it after I requested him to see the other Directors of our Local and he saw, I think only one and he was the vice-president and came back, and he gave me permission, or told him to give me permission and said it was all right, and I signed it. I did not mail it to the Jetter Dairy Company. He did. He took it away with him. (Def. Ex. 5 for identification offered in evidence. Copy of a letter dated August 4, 1938 recommending that the Jetter Dairy Company become a member of the Distributors Bargaining Agency was received in 409 evidence, subject to being connected with the identity of the person who approached the witness. Decision was reserved as to whether or not such connection was proved. My cooperative corporation was formed in either August or September. It was stipulated that the Oriskany Falls Milk Producers Cooperative Inc. was incorporated in August 1937.)

Prior to the formation of this corporation I was not personally visited by Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Cooper. I saw them at a meeting in Oriskany Falls. The proposed corporation was explained at the meeting. I am not sure who provided the form to fill out in order to incorporate this cooperative. I was at the meeting at which Mr. Baldwin was present.

Q. Did this Cooperative, the Oriskany Cooperative, ever join the Bargaining Agency?

A. There was never any dues paid; no.

We signed up, but no dues were paid after we signed up. We have received mail from the Bargaining Agency right along. I get the Bargaining Agency News. I have received various letters from Mr. Baldwin signed "Charles Baldwin, Executive Secre-410 tary." I don't recall whether I received a letter from him dated August 29th about the time this federal marketing order went into effect. I received letters every little while, but I wouldn't be able to recall.

Since September 1st, 1938, I was visited by a man who represented himself as an employee of the Dairymen's League. His name was Mr. Washbon. He lives in the vicinity of Nelson, I think. I am not acquainted with him, only as I met him that day. I had heard of him, but I did not know him. He made himself known and as to whom he represented, and wanted to know where I drew my milk and if I had ever drawn milk to the Dairymen's League and I told him I had, and he also wanted to know if I wouldn't like to return, and I told him "no." After that I don't remember as there was anything in particular said about the milk business. He could see from what I said I was not interested. He asked me if I wouldn't like to deal where I would get my exact weights and test and I told him I had always been satisfied where I was and had no fault to find.

There was no cross examination on behalf of the plaintiff or intervening plaintiffs. Plaintiff and the Dairymen's League moved to strike.

Mr. Pratt resumed his examination as follows:

Mr. Washbon visited me in November, but I couldn't say the exact date. I couldn't say whether it was before or after the action was brought by the Jetter Dairy Company concerning the Federal milk marketing order because I do not remember the exact date.

LEONARD FAULKNER was called as witness on behalf of the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I am a milk producer residing at Oriskany Falls. I deliver to the Jetter Dairy Company and have been for about thirteen years.
411 I met Mr. E. Manning Gaynor, of Leonardsville, New York, about September 15, 1938. Charles Fox, a milk peddler in Oriskany Falls, asked me to come and see Mr. Gaynor. It is about twenty miles from where I live to Leonardsville. I should say I drove over there to see Mr. Gaynor, and had some talk with him about the Jetter Dairy Company.

The following testimony was received over the objection of plaintiff and the Dairymen's League on the ground that the evidence is wholly irrelevant and immaterial to the issues of the case and not binding upon either of such parties.

He asked if I understood Jetter hadn't signed the final order, and I told him I supposed he had, and he said "no," that he hasn't, and if we farmers didn't get busy and compel him to sign it at the end of the month we would get a big gypping on our September milk. Maybe he didn't say just those exact words, but it meant the same thing. That was the substance of it. And I told him that I thought the contract had been signed. I told him that I had seen a notice to the effect posted on the Jetter plant. I saw such a notice. I told when I had seen such a notice. He told me that he would advise me to go home and see the farmers and get them together for the purpose of withholding the milk if Jetter didn't sign the Federal order.

I received the Bargaining Agency News and have received letters signed "Charles H. Baldwin" for a long period of time. We were a member of the Bargaining Agency. I signed the contract with the Oriskany Falls Cooperative and heard some mention made of the Bargaining Agency. Lately I haven't received this literature from the Bargaining Agency.

(There was no cross-examination.)

Mr. Pratt resumed as follows:

Since September 1st I have not been visited by anyone representing himself to be with the Dairymen's League.

412 Stipulation

It was stipulated that Floyd Washbon, Cazenovia, New York, is one of 31 subdistrict presidents of the Dairymen's League. He receives no salary but occasionally does work on a per-diem basis. Among his duties is the duty of soliciting membership contracts for the Dairymen's League.

MAX BRONFELD, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live at 408 Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, New York. I run a grocery and dairy store at 409 Saratoga Avenue. I buy milk from the wholesale milk dealers in New York City. We buy from Ferndale Farms. I buy from Caldwell Dairy, which is owned by Jake Beyer. I buy from Breakstone. I buy Breakstone milk from Sheffield Farms; that is, the Sheffield Farms Company truck delivers Breakstone milk to me. I have bought milk from Ferndale for about five and one-half years; since I had the store. I have bought milk from Jake Beyer for five and one-half years at the same time.

I started to buy Breakstone milk in the summer of 1938, a couple of weeks after it was first put on the market.

I buy ten to eleven cases of milk a day from Breakstone Brothers. Altogether I buy from fifteen to twenty cases. Some days the people use more milk. On the average I buy from fifteen to twenty cases a day, except Saturday, when the store is closed.

Just before September 1st, 1938, I was buying five or six cases of milk from Breakstone. I buy nine or ten cases from Breakstone. I started buying nine or ten cases from Breakstone a couple of weeks or two months ago, maybe more.

Q. About two weeks, maybe?

413 A. A couple of weeks; a couple of weeks; five or six weeks; I cannot remember how long this is.

I buy two cases of milk a day from Ferndale now.

Q. Two cases a day. Now for the five years that you bought from Ferndale up to six months ago, how much did you buy a day from Ferndale?

Plaintiff objected to this question and this entire line of testimony. Objection overruled.

A. Not all the times the same. Sometimes more; sometimes less. The average was about 50 or 60 cases a week.

I only buy 12 to 14 cases a week now. Before I started buying from Breakstone I bought about three or four cases a day from Jake Beyer. I buy the same amount now from him.

I have paid Breakstone, or Sheffield Farms Company, for this Breakstone milk since the first of September until now nine and three-quarters cents.

A man came to the store and paid me back three-quarters of a cent a quart at the end of the month on the Breakstone milk. I did not sign a receipt for the money he paid me back and my wife did not sign one. Maybe my wife does the figuring for me as to how much I have got coming, since I don't. I cannot tell you.

I have paid Ferndale nine cents a quart for milk since September 1st, 1938. I have paid Jake Beyer nine cents a quart for milk since September 1st. Sometimes I paid Beyer a little less than that; sometimes I take off one dollar or two dollars—a couple of times. I did not do this with Ferndale at this time.

Q. And some of the times the Sheffield man gives you an extra dollar or two, doesn't he?

A. No.

Q. Now, are there other stores in your neighborhood that sell milk?

414 A. Nine cents.

Q. I didn't ask what for. Are there other stores in competition with you?

A. Nine cents they sell for milk.

I charge ten cents for milk. I have a one-cent profit and these other stores undersell me. Since they have started to sell at nine cents a quart I have lost about four or five cases of business in the last couple of [illegible]

Plaintiff moved to strike on the ground that the prices at wh the named dealers sell milk has no relevancy to the issues involved i the case. Motion denied.

Cross examination by Mr. WALLACH:

I never personally got any rebates from the Sheffield man.

Q. How do you know that your wife got any?

A. He say that he give back.

I cannot remember being present at any time when he came in a paid any money to my wife. I know that my neighbors are sellin for nine cents because the customers tell me so. I get them to a Three houses from my store is a split market.

Motion made by the intervening plaintiff, Holton V. Noyes, t strike the testimony of the witness as hearsay. Motion denied.

Redirect examination:

The Sheffield driver told us he would give a rebate of three-quarter of a cent. I don't know the name of the driver. I pay the drive for the milk every day.

415 ROSE PALEY was called as a witness on behalf of the de fendants.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live at 255 Van Buren Street, Brooklyn, New York, and keep a store near Lafayette Avenue and Van Buren Streets, Brooklyn. Th address of the store is 157 Lewis Avenue. I sell milk in the store. I sell about thirteen cases a day. I buy that milk from Glendale Farms, Breakstone, and Dairymen's League.

Breakstone and Sheffield's together have a wholesale truck that delivers the Breakstone milk to my store. The name "Sheffield Farms" is on that truck.

The following testimony was given over plaintiff's objection.

I pay nine and three-quarters cents for Breakstone milk. I pa nine and three-quarters cents for a while until I get my rebate. I get a rebate from Breakstone. Somebody from Sheffield's comes an pays me every month. I just don't remember how much rebate I get because I don't get the same every day. Sometimes I get les or more. It comes out to nine cents a quart. That is, I get three quarters of a cent rebate. I have gotten a rebate about twice, t little after the first, about the third, or fourth day after the first o the month.

Q. Did you get a rebate in September right after the first?

A. Yes.

Q. That was for what month's milk?

A. I am supposed to get it now this month. That will be the thir time.

Each payment is for a month's milk and the money was paid to m personally. I started buying Breakstone milk a month after the came out with the milk. It is about a couple of months, abou three months, I guess. I bought from Glendale Farms and Dairy League before I started buying Breakstone milk. I also 416 bought from Grand View Dairy. I quit buying from Grand View Dairy when I found out I had too much milk. I saw I had too much so I sent away Grand View. I bought three cases a day from Dairymen's League. I have been buying three cases from the Dairymen's League right along for seven months. I used to buy two, and I raised it to three.

I started buying three cases from the Dairymen's League in the summertime, in the hot weather. It was before September 1st. I pay the Dairymen's League nine cents for milk now. I just cannot remember how long I have paid them nine cents. I paid nine and three-quarters and then they came down to nine. I never got any rebate from the Dairymen's League, but I did get free milk from them. I cannot remember what month that was. I got thirty-five cases of free milk. That was when I started buying three cases.

Q. When did you quit buying from Grand View Dairy?

A. I didn't like them very much.

I stopped buying from Grand View Dairy right after the summer; I cannot remember what month. Breakstone gave me thirty-five cases of free milk. I am buying three cases from Breakstone now and I buy four cases from Glendale. I pay Glendale nine cents for milk.

Q. How long have you paid that?

A. I just cannot remember how long it is. They all came down at the same time.

All three dairies came down in price at the same time. Glendale gave me some free milk about three months ago. I don't like Grand View. Grand View did not give me any free milk.

Plaintiff moved to strike all the evidence of the witness as irrelevant. Motion denied.

Cross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

I have been in the grocery business sixteen years. I have 417 a small store. There is one clerk in the store besides myself.

I carry a general line of groceries, everything, groceries and dairy, including flour, canned goods, and things of that sort. I do my own buying.

I have plenty of competition, with the big A. & P. stores, and stores of that kind. There is a constant change in the price of all groceries and a constant attempt on my part to buy the various types of groceries cheaper. I have to meet the competition of the neighboring grocery stores. If they lower their prices on canned goods I have to lower mine.

The Breakstone people began selling me milk sometime last summer. I told them I would buy some milk from them if I would get something free.

Breakstone gave me the thirty-five cases of milk about a month after I asked for it.

Q. About a month later. And then when they gave you the thir five cases of milk, you told the Dairymen's League man about th didn't you?

A. That was first, the Dairymen's League and then I told Brea stone. I got from the Dairymen's League before.

Q. When was that?

A. About five months ago.

Q. About five months ago?

A. Something like that.

Q. That was before the federal and state orders were issued?

A. That is right.

I am buying three cases of milk from Breakstone now and I ha been buying three cases from them for about two month 418 Before that I bought a case, only one. I am buying thr cases from the Dairymen's League now and was buying thr cases from them all summer. I am not buying any more milk fro them now than I have been during the last year.

This free milk that I get from the Dairymen's League last summ was the first free milk that I had ever gotten from milk distributor I asked the driver of the Dairymen's League for the free milk. was paying nine cents for milk at the time I got the free milk a I am paying nine cents for milk now. I pay all the companies t same price.

I was dealing with four dealers at one time and now I am deali with three dealers. I discontinued dealing with Grand View Dai about three or four months ago; I just don't remember exactly.

Q. It was before the federal order came down?

A. Yes.

I was paying nine and three-quarters cents last summer and I a paying nine cents now. I don't remember who reduced the pri first. We heard—I heard that somebody else gets it for nine cen so I started to kick. I don't remember who did it first. I kicked all of them and they came down to nine cents. I heard that somebo else was buying their milk cheaper than me.

Cross examination by Mr. WALLACH:

Q. Mrs. Paley, isn't it a fact you haven't paid nine and thr quarters cents to Glendale for at least a year?

A. I cannot remember. I did pay nine and three-quarters, but how long I cannot remember.

I have been in business sixteen years and remember when we h price fixing in the city of New York for milk. I remember a time when the Board of Control was in existence that you could sell the bottled Grade B milk for less than eleven cents. I can recall whether I paid Glendale at the rate of nine and thi 419 quarters cents after the law expired. The law expired almo two years ago. I did pay nine and three-quarters cents in last two years. It is very hard to remember when I reduced the pr paid to Glendale. I don't think it was reduced more than a y ago; I think it is less than a year. I would say it is something like about eight months ago. I cannot remember for sure.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

Q. Did you pay less to the Dairymen's League at that time too?
A. No I paid them all the same. When I got it cheaper, they all came down to the same price.

I paid Dairymen's League nine and three-quarters cents and I paid Grand View and everybody else the same. During the strike in November and December of last year I paid nine and three-quarters cents for a short time.

HERMAN LAVENDER was called as a witness on behalf of the defendant.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live at 780 Beck Street in the Bronx, New York City, and have a store at 694 Dawson Street in the Bronx. I have been in 420 the grocery business about three years or so. I buy milk from Sunnydale Farms, Queensboro, Meadowbrook and Samuel Adler. During November 1938, I bought milk from Sheffield Farms Company. I received from the Sheffield Farms Company the paper marked Def. Ex. No. 6 for identification.

At the time I received that receipt I received a sum of money, exactly how much I don't know. At that particular time I received the money I was quite busy, but I know it was more than one dollar; exactly how much I don't know. I couldn't remember just exactly how much I received.

(Witness was shown Def. Ex. No. 6 for identification and testified that he received $1.48.)

All the following evidence was given over plaintiff's objection that such evidence is immaterial.

During November 1938, I received twelve quarts of milk to the case from Sheffield Farms Company. I also received more than twelve quarts to the case during that month but paid the driver for twelve quarts. When I got more than twelve quarts I received thirteen to the case. That is, I got one quart free.

I was charged nine and three-quarters cents for Breakstone milk delivered to me during November 1938.

It was not the driver that gave me the money; it was the salesman, or the representative. He gave me Def. Ex. No. 6 when he paid me the money.

(The receipt previously marked for identification was received in evidence as Def. Ex. No. 6.)

I started buying milk from Samuel Adler about February of 1938 when I purchased the store. I average two cases a day in purchases from Mr. Adler and averaged that about September first. I have paid Mr. Adler or his company nine cents for milk since Sep-421 tember first. I have not at any time received an extra bottle of milk per case from him. I buy on the average two cases of milk from Queensboro and have paid them nine cents. I am paying them eight and a half cents now. I am paying Adler nine cents. I never got any extra milk from Queensboro. Until three days ago I paid Sunnydale nine cents; now eight and a half cents. I bought six cases a day from Sunnydale. I buy two cases a day from Meadowbrook and pay them eight and a half cents. Since September 1st I have not had any free milk from any of these corporations other than Sheffield Farms Company. I buy Breakstone milk from the Sheffield Farms Company.

Plaintiffs moved to strike all the evidence of the witness on the ground that it is irrelevant. Motion denied.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCarthy:

At present I am not buying any Sheffield or Breakstone milk. I formerly bought both Sheffield and Breakstone but not at the same price. I paid fourteen and one-half cents a quart for Sheffield Grade A milk; I think it was more than that. One case a day is all I have ever purchased of Breakstone milk.

Cross-examination by Mr. Wallach:

I got thirteen quarts of Breakstone milk for a case of twelve but not of Sheffield milk. And this Def. Ex. 6 is a receipt for the Breakstone milk that was purchased, not the Sheffield milk. I really got it from Breakstone.

Cross-examination by Mr. Schoeneck:

422 I am not buying any Breakstone milk now. I discontinued buying from Breakstone about two weeks ago. I am not buying any milk from Sheffield. I was buying one case of milk from Breakstone at the time I discontinued. When I discontinued, that business had fallen off. At present I pay Mr. Adler nine cents a quart for milk. I pay eight and one-half cents to Sunnydale, Meadowbrook, and Queensboro. I am buying milk from three of these companies at eight and one-half cents and I pay nine cents to the other. I don't buy any milk from the Dairymen's League.

Redirect examination by Mr. Pratt:

I didn't quit Sheffield's because of any personal controversy with the driver. I buy my Grade A milk now from Borden's.

Q. And that is a small quantity?

A. Grade B. Four bottles.

The Court. Just a minute. Are you now paying one or two prices for milk? Is he paying all the same, all one price for one, and another price to others?

The Witness. That is billed for nine, but it is understood that after this week is up I will get paid back for as many cases so many half pennies on every bottle from Samuel Adler.

By Mr. Pratt:

Q. So that the price to Samuel Adler will really be eight and one-half cents to you?

A. That is right.

ISAAC HOCH was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live at 86 Bay 26th Street, Bensonhurst, Brooklyn, New York. I have a dairy store at 8406 20th Avenue. I buy milk from Ferndale and Balsom. I also buy from Borden's and Sheffield's. I have been buying about five cases a day of milk from Ferndale for about a year. I have been buying an average of nine cases from Balsom for about two months, since September 1st, 1938. Mr. Balsome has a dairy of some several hundred cows himself. I started buying from Balsom because I was getting a better price. Before I started buying from Balsom I was buying from 15 to 20 cases a day from Ferndale.

At the time that I started buying from Balsom I had been paying Ferndale nine cents a quart. Mr. Balsom charged me eight and one-half cents. That must have been in September 1938.

Q. When did you start buying from Sheffield?

A. Sheffield, I buy all the time Sheffield milk.

RAYMOND J. BARBER was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live in Norwood, New York. I am manager of the Norwood Creamery Company. I am a graduate of Clarkson Tech, and Harvard Business School.

The creamery is situated in Norwood, St. Lawrence County, between Malone and Ogdensburg. That is about 380 or 385 miles distant from New York City by rail mileage.

The name of the corporation is Norwood Creamery Company, Inc. It is a stock corporation and not a cooperative. It is privately owned. The corporation is engaged principally in the manufacture of butter from cream bought from farmers. There are about 25 farmers within a radius of 10 or 15 miles of the plant who furnish us with cream. Cream is also purchased from farmers living some further than that.

The skimmed milk from the whole milk from which the cream is derived remains on the farms. We do not receive the skimmed milk, at any rate and we do not know whether the farmers retain it or sell it or what they do with it.

We pay for the cream and the cream contains the butter fat which is part of the milk content. We manufacture the cream into butter; we pasteurize it first. We manufactured cream into butter in the month of September 1938. We also manufactured cream into butter in October 1938.

At this point the following objection was interposed to this line of testimony and overruled.

Mr. MCCARTHY. The Government objects to any evidence along that line, Your Honor. It is nowhere alleged that the price of milk to be manufactured into butter is not the same for all handlers. It is nowhere alleged that the Jetter Dairy Company manufactures 425 butter. If the price for butter is the same to everybody who manufactures butter, it is difficult for me to see how the company which does not manufacture butter can complain as to those prices.

There are not, to my knowledge, any other butter factories within the state of New York engaged wholly in the manufacture of butter; that is, any other company than mine. The butter from my factory is sold mostly in the northern part of the State. If we draw a circle through Watertown and around to Burlington, Vermont, that would account for a good 75 per cent of our sales. We sell some in the city of New York when we have an especially large volume of cream, as we sometimes do in the summertime; as a seasonal matter, we do sell some butter outside of that area which would mean New York or Boston.

I have been engaged in this particular business since March of 1934. We always comput the value of cream every month as a routine matter.

The price paid in September 1938, for the cream equivalent of 100 pounds of 3.5 milk averaged to farmers 88.4¢ in Norwood. That is delivered in Norwood. In October we paid 90.1¢. That is the average. We pay every day.

Cross examination by Mr. McCARTHY:

It is hard to say the average amount of butter per month which we produced during the past year; the average varies so widely. I can give you the year's figure. I can give you the figures say for September and October 1938. I have it here in terms of butter fat.

'Butter fat bought from farmers in September 1938—38,499½ 426 pounds of fat, and in October—30,616.1, for November—19,008.6.

I haven't the figures for last spring with me. This is just for three months. I can state approximately that for April, May, and June of 1938 it was on an average of 50,000 pounds for those months; that is it would be less than that in April; it would probably be 30,000 in April; 40,000 in May and 50,000 in June. My average was too high. It is within 10,000 pounds one way or the other.

I don't know what the prices fixed in the Federal Order were for the months of September and October. I don't know whether they were more or less than the prices we paid. We buy all kinds of cream from the farmers, both high and low content. It will be anywhere from 15 per cent fat to 60 per cent fat; and it will be in varying degrees of sourness and cleanliness. It is separated on the farm and it is necessarily subject to all sorts of variations, separator speeds, milk temperature. No two farmers have the same kind of cream as to butter fat content.

I don't know whether any of our farmers are qualified for the New York Market or not. We sell our butter both in tubs and in packages. Much of it is sold under our own trade name, "Norwood Brand." Another part is sold under private handlers' brand names. Some of it is sold without any brand at all; that is in tubs sold in bulk. We sell substantially all of that butter in the upstate New York market except in those times when there is an especially large quantity, more than our local market up there can absorb, and we have to ship some outside in order to avoid building up a heavy inventory.

Our principal competitors in the sale of butter in that section are other manufacturers, the local manufacturers up there. They are St. Lawrence Creamery Company, Potsdam, New York; De Puyster Creamery, De Puyster, New York; Chateaugay Creamery, Chateaugay; Parishville Creamery, Parishville, and then besides the local butter makers there is always competition from western butter which is shipped in—Armour and Swift, I mean those butters.

Q. That is a substantial competition from the western creameries?

427 A. Oh, yes.

I wouldn't dare say whether our butter commands a higher or lower price than the nationally advertised brands. Some of the nationally advertised brands are very fine butter, and to say that our butter commands a premium price over that would be outside of what I know. I cannot answer that. There are recognized brands that are good and that are bad. Our butter generally gets more money than all the bad brands, and as good a price as the good brands. There is a certain preference up around our section for Norwood butter.

Q. Could you furnish us with figures as to the actual amount of butter that you made during the months of September and October?

A. I can give you butter fat. Now butter can be computed from this by simply adding one-quarter of this figure on to it. In other words, our butter contains 80 per cent butter fat. Therefore when I say we churned a total of 108,900 pounds of butter fat in September, that would mean therefore about 135,000 pounds of butter.

The COURT. I thought you said 38,000 pounds in September.

A. That was cream purchased from farmers. That is the question as I have understood it.

For commercial sweet cream purchased from other places we paid an average in September of 94.7¢, that is, cream that we buy from such companies as the Dairymen's League and Sheffield when they have more cream than they need for door-step use. That is 3.5 milk equivalent. That comes to 27.05¢ per pound of butter fat. We have an over-run of 20 per cent of the butter weight.

For October, 1938 on commercial sweet cream we paid 94.5¢, that is for 3.5 milk equivalent, and for November we paid 98.6¢.

Cross-examination by Mr. WALLACH:

I am treasurer and manager of the Norwood Creamery Company. I get my figures from our own company records. It is a small company and we all have a hand in doing the figuring. I took the figures from the books. Entries are made in the books by three different people. There are entries as to writing checks; as to receiving cash; and as to invoicing customers and they are done by three different persons for the purposes of internal check. In the compilation of these figures that I bring with me I took them off the books, I took these figures from the record of the corporation personally.

Cross-examination resumed by Mr. McCarthy:

The actual prices that my company paid the farmers per pound of butter fat was for the month of September 25.27¢ and for the month of October, 1938 25.74¢. The figure for the price paid to farmers for butter fat averaged in November 26.38¢.

Cross-examination by Mr. Schoeneck:

The farmers from the surrounding territory separate the milk on the farm and bring it to the creamery in the form of cream. The butter fat content as it comes to us varies between the farmers and as between the trips of the same farmer. When it is brought to the creamery, we weigh it and test it and then pay for it strictly on the basis of the butter fat. We don't take into consideration the number of pounds of milk that is required to produce a given amount of butter fat; we do not know that.

Butter is all that we manufacture. I don't know whether we have what you call a low-cost producing plant. I don't know what other people's costs are. I don't know whether or not if you are manufacturing butter in a shipping plant it would cost more to produce it than it does according to the methods employed in my plant. I haven't made any study of it.

With the exceptions I have mentioned our market for butter is the market up in the north country section. In addition to the local butter we are in competition with butter which comes from the west. When I speak of Swift's and the "Land-o-Lakes" and that type of butter I am talking about the butter that has a country-wide distribution. I don't know whether Swift's butter is sold in New York City but I think you can assume that it is.

When we have got a surplus of cream that is brought to our plant and haven't a local market for it, we sometimes dump it into New York City. This does not occur every June. It sometimes occurs in September and October. We ship sometimes to New York and sometimes to Boston.

I don't know how many times a year we ship to New York, that is highly variable, sometimes not at all. We shipped some last year but I don't know how much we shipped last year. To my best recollection we shipped about 40,000 pounds to New York in June and October of this year. In June we shipped 30,000 pounds and in October 10,000. We dispose of it in the market in New York by sending it to a firm that buys butter and then sells it again. They do not sell as an agency. They take title to the butter and pay us immediately for it at the time when they receive it.

I cannot answer whether or not this Western butter is shipped into New York City and sold in competition with our butter but I have my ideas on it.

The production of my plant varies widely throughout the year. It is operating every day in the year, excluding Sundays and holidays.

I know that there exist shipping plants which manufacture butter and send some of their milk to New York as fluid milk but I am not familiar with the operations of such plants.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

The commercial cream which I buy from the Dairymen's 430 League must all be cream from approved sources. It must be because all Dairymen's League farms are approved, if I am not mistaken. Milk from approved sources is no more valuable so far as the products that I get from such cream. It is necessary to have sweet cream to make butter which brings a premium. There are grades in the quality of butter and to make a good quality of butter you must have good sweet cream. Sweetness is one factor, although there can be very good butter made from sour cream if it has a good clean flavor. I would say that milk which was approved under the New York City Health Inspection would have a better flavor ordinarily than cream that was not produced under the conditions required by that Department.

Q. So that you pay a little higher price for this commercial sweet cream, is that right?

A. Not for that reason. We do pay a little higher price, but it comes in large quantities and that accounts for it.

I don't know what becomes of the skimmed milk with reference to this cream we buy from the Dairymen's League. It is not delivered to us.

We paid for the butter fat content of 100 pounds of milk the sum of 94.7 cents for instance, in the months of September, and 94.5 in October; and 98.6 in November. All we get is the cream. Whether or not the Dairymen's League sold the skimmed milk I do not know.

There are 3.5 pounds of butter fat contained in 100 pounds of milk of 3.5 per cent butter fat content. To determine the price of 100 pounds of milk equivalent you multiply the price per pound of butter fat by 3.5.

ISRAEL HOCH was recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

At this point defendant Jetter Dairy Company moved to amend the 31st paragraph of its amended answer by inserting after the words "Bargaining Agency" in the 6th line the words "and other competing dealers and handlers." Plaintiff made the following objection which was joined in by all the intervenors:

431 Mr. MCCARTHY. That amendment, Your Honor, is rather vague, but if it is intended to allege that the order is unconstitutional because it exempts producer distributors from paying into the producer-settlement fund, as I assume that it is intended, we object to it on the ground that that is no defense whatsoever to this action.

The court overruled the objection and granted the motion.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I am buying two bottles a day of grade B and four bottles a day of grade A milk from Borden's. I buy two cases a day of the milk produced by Borden's subsidiary, Reid's Union Dairy Milk Company. They refused me a rebate unless I would take more than two cases of milk. I do not buy any milk of the Sussex Milk and Cream Company.

Q. Did you have a talk with any agent of Borden's as to the rebate on this Reid Union Dairy milk if you took more than two cases?

A. Yes.

I don't know the name of the man that came down to talk with me. I talked to an employee. I had a talk with the driver about the discount, I paid the driver every day for the milk purchased from Borden's Company—for this Reid's Union Dairy milk.

I also buy milk from Sheffield's. I pay the driver for that milk. I also pay the driver of the Ferndale Company for its milk and the driver of the Balsom Company for its milk. I discussed with the driver the question of price to be paid for milk in the purchases that I made from Ferndale of milk since September. The Balsom price was fixed right from the office. I called up the office. Sheffield's had a representative down there from their place who fixed the price.

"Q. And with Borden's who fixed the price?

432 A. Also a representative.

Q. Was it the man whom you say the driver sent down with whom you talked about the price?

A. Yes, that is the same man.

Q. Did you pay for milk on the terms that you talked with the man?

A. I paid 9¾ cents, but I was promised to get a rebate, but never got it so far. The Borden man promised to give me a rebate of ¾ of a cent. I have been buying Borden's milk since I was there, about nine months.

Q. When was it he told you he would give you a rebate of of a cent? What month was that?

A. That was since the September raise when they fixed the price of all at 9¾ cents.

After they all gave me 9 cents I asked him to give me the same rebate. He promised to, but I never got it. I buy four cases a day of Breakstone Milk from Sheffield's and I buy two cases of Reid milk from Borden's.

I paid Ferndale 9 cents and paid Blasom 8½ cents. I never got any free milk from Breakstone, only from Ferndale. I paid 9¾ cents for the Breakstone milk and got a rebate on that of ¾ of a cent. That was paid every month in cash. I signed a receipt for the amount of cash that I got, a receipt on a form similar to Def's. Ex. No. 6. A man from Sheffield comes down and brings me that rebate.

The intervening plaintiff moved to strike as follows:

Mr. McCauley. On behalf of the Intervening Plaintiff Dairymen's League I move to strike the entire testimony first upon the ground that it is immaterial to the issues in this case; and 433 second, on the ground that insofar as it relates to rebate payments it is either hearsay in its nature, or is testimony which is not binding upon any of the parties in this case.

Plaintiff and the intervening plaintiff Holton V. Noyes joined in this motion.

Cross examination by Mr. McCauley:

I have been in the dairy business fifteen years. My place is located at 8406-20th Avenue in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn. I am engaged in competition with other stores located somewhat near to my store. I have to meet their prices.

Q. Well now the truth of the matter is that whenever you hear from any of your customers that they are getting milk at a price lower than that which you have been paying that you immediately ask those from whom you have been purchasing milk to give you the same price, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Cross examination by Mr. McCarthy:

I cannot remember exactly what I was paying for milk during the months of July and August, 1938. I think it was 9 cents. On the first of September all the companies delivering milk to me went up to 9¾ cents. That condition remained only a couple of days.

Q. When was it that Ferndale came down below the 9¾ cent figure?

A. Well, I believe I got that from the first day on." I mean they went up to 9¾ cents, but I got back my rebate to 9 cents from the first day on from Ferndale.

Redirect examination by Mr. Pratt:

Q. Who was the first company that dropped the price?
434 A. They all dropped the price.
Q. On the same day?

A. Yes.

Earl R. Mills was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. Pratt:

I reside at Watertown, New York. I am a manufacturer of cheese and have been engaged in that business ten years. My factories are ville, R. F. D. The factory is called Eagle Four Corners. I ha operated the South Rutland factory during the entire time I have be in the business. I acquired that April 1, 1929, and the others a varying, some of them have been acquired since. All of these factor are within the production area from which some milk is shipped the Metropolitan area of New York City. There are near my seven cheese factories, milk receiving stations which have been approved f shipment of milk to New York City.

Prior to September 1, 1938 I received milk in those five factor from approximately 250 or 300 producers. Since September 1, 19 some of those producers from whom I formerly received milk co plied with the requirements of the Board of Health in the City New York so as to deliver milk to approved stations.

In these plants I manufacture American cheese primarily. T majority is American cheese.

Q. And with whom is that cheese sold in competition?

A. The world markets, I suppose, with everyone.

In New York State some of my competitors are Miller Richards Company, a subsidiary of Kraft-Phoenix, a subsidiary of the Na tional Dairy; and then there is an independent cheese company, Shef ford Cheese Company, and the McAdam Cheese Company in Heuve ton; and Leslie Virkler in Syracuse.

435 The Borden Company is engaged in the cheese busines through a subsidiary. There is a plant operated by the Borden Company or one of its subsidiaries which makes cheese in the terri tory where I operate, at Antwerp. It is about 40 or 45 miles from my nearest plant.

My cheese is sold in competition with cheese made by the National Dairy and Borden's and other people from milk which is approved for New York City fluid consumption. I am in direct competition with that cheese. I manufactured cheese at my five plants in the month of September 1938.

We paid twice: we separate the months into two halves, the first to the fifteenth, and then from the sixteenth to the end. For 3.5 milk the first half of September we paid 94 cents, and the second half $1.07.

By dividing the two to strike the average, the average price was $1.005. That would vary a little bit because the amount of milk would vary a little from the first half to the last half.

I believe the class IV–B price under Order No. 27 was 83.2 cents in September.

The milk which I purchased ran higher than 3.5 butter fat content in September. The September average butter fat content was 3.712. The average base price I paid for milk of that butter fat content for September was $1.09 a hundred.

I have computed the price of milk of 3.712 butter fat content under Order No. 27. I arrived at a price of 87.45 cents.

I considered this price of $1.09, which was paid, the fair and reasonable market value of the milk in the zone where my plants are

ted. I think we have been able to manufacture cheese and make reasonable margin of profit after paying that price. I haven't the figure so I could be sure, but that is my best judgment. My nearest plant is in the neighborhood of 240 miles, I think, or 250 miles distant from New York. That is the plant at Lowville.

My plant is within four miles of Lowville, probably west. It is off from the railroad.

My next factory is located about 10 miles from Watertown towards Copenhagen, towards Lowville. It would be about 35 or 40 miles from Lowville by railroad. My other plants are also beyond the 200-mile zone.

Since September 1, 1938, some of my producers who formerly delivered to me have left my plants, and milk is now going to various approved plants for New York City. Some of those plants are the United Milk Products, at Adams Center, and the Northern Milk Corporation, at Adams, and Hygienic Dairy Company, in Watertown, and the North Eastern Dairy Corporation, at Ogdensburg, and Philadelphia Milk Producers, at Philadelphia. Mr. C. A. Brown is the head or the manager of Hygienic Dairy at present. I understand he is also head of the Adams plant and of the North Eastern plant. Philadelphia Milk Producers is Mr. Maynard's Company. The United Milk Products at Adams Center is not operated by Mr. Brown. The three companies managed by Mr. Brown are not also engaged in the manufacture of cheese that I know of. Of course, they handle milk and produce cream. I don't know just what their products are, what their output is.

I am not able to state whether or not skimmed milk had any value in the months of September, October, and November, 1938. Various types of cheese are made from skimmed milk, as are also milk powder and casein.

Q. Casein?

A. Yes.

By the Court: I would like to ask this witness if he makes any of those products he mentioned just now.

A. The various types of skimmed cheese we do; that is, part skimmed cheese; we make some of those products.

Part of the milk used in making this cheese is skimmed and the cream sold elsewhere. I am not able to state the value of the skimmed milk which I utilized in making part skimmed cheese, that has not any definite price. It would vary in price from day to day and time to time. I would have to confine myself to any range within which it would vary from day to day, the low and the high.

I have made part skimmed cheese all during the greater part of the ten years I have been in the cheese business.

I sell my cheese in practically every state East of the Mississippi. I sell in competition with National Dairy and Borden's in the cheese market.

The plaintiff moved to strike all the testimony of this witness on t ground it is irrelevant and immaterial and not covered by any ple ings in this case and not germane to any of the issues in this ca All the intervenors joined in this motion. Motion denied.

Cross examination by Mr. MATHERS:

Besides American cheese and part skimmed cheese I manufactu or process at my five plants Munster, Limberger, and some types Italian curd cheese. I believe I am familiar with the Marketi Area as defined in Order No. 27. None of my plants are approv by any of the Health Authorities in that Marketing Area for t sale of milk in that Marketing Area. I would estimate about percent of the milk received in my five plants is manufactured in American cheese. During the month of September the average pri per pound received by me for American cheese manufactured at t five plants was approximately from 12¼ cents to 12¾ cents p pound f. o. b. the plants.

Of the remaining 10 percent of the milk received at my five plan probably a little over half would go into the Munster and then may one-quarter or so would be in Limburger. It is rather indefini It depends on the market. The Munster cheese price received follow the American cheese market very closely. The price is about t same.

I do not think we made any part skimmed cheese in the mont 438 of September. I do not think we made any in October. I so, it was a very small amount. In November we manufa tured some part skimmed cheese. We manufacture various type that is 3–1; three part skimmed and one part whole. I am not sur what price we got for that. That changes, of course. There reall isn't a market for that. You get the amount you can for that. I believe it went around 7 cents per pound. The proportion of th other type is 2–1. I think for that we received around 8 cents These are the Italian cheeses.

During the month of September we shipped whey cream fro our plants. That is sold on a butter fat basis, so much per pound butter fat. The rate per pound is determined by the New Yor Market.

439 I cannot give you any idea of the volume of cream sold ou of my five plants during September but per 1,000 pounds o whey it will vary from 2 to 2½ pounds of whey butterfat.

During September we received at our five plants in the neighbor hood of 35 or 40,000 pounds of milk a day. That is an estimate. I haven't lately purchased milk from any source other than directl from producers. I didn't during September. In the past we hav occasionally received from from other sources than producers.

Cross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

I would say that the cheese which I manufactured is in a country wide competition. My cheese is shipped into almost every state Eas tion with cheese manufactured in the cheese plants in the State of Pennsylvania and in the State of Wisconsin and all the Western States. Wisconsin is a very large producer of milk and a large manufacturer of butter and cheese. Their products come to the New York Market.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

Referring to 3.5 butter fat content in October, the first half I paid $1.12; the second half $1.12. It averaged $1.12 for 3.5 milk. The Administrator's price for that period was 92.2 cents. For November we paid $1.03 the first half; and $1.13 the last half, an average of $1.08. The Administrator's price for that period was 87.5 cents, I believe.

NELSON ALL was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

440 Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside at Westford, New York. I am a milk producer and an secretary of the Worcester Cooperative Association, Inc. That cooperative was organized about the 24th of May 1938. After its organization it built a milk-receiving plant located in the town of Worcester, county of Otsego, New York state. That plant is approved for the sale of milk shipped to the Metropolitan Area. I believe at present 68 producers belong to the cooperative. It is a solely farmer-owned cooperative, a stock corporation with the stock all held by milk producers.

That station was approved by New York City, I believe, the first of September 1938. The corporation has a license. I don't remember the exact date that they got it. The license was issued by the Department of Agriculture of the State of New York. The corporation started shipping milk to New York on the first of September 1938.

On behalf of my corporation, with the help of an assistant, I made application to Mr. Harmon as Administrator, for qualification for cooperative payments which are provided for in Order Number 27. The assistant was Mr. Cruickshank of Utica, and accountant employed by the cooperative. He made out some form that was provided by the Administrator's office which I delivered to the Administrator. It was sent to us from the New York office of the Administrator and I mailed it back. (The plaintiff moved to strike all testimony of the witness relative to application for qualification to receive cooperative payments. Motion denied.)

Our milk plant receives all of the milk of its members. The cooperative of which I am secretary collects the money for milk received at the plant. We have a plant capacity with the equipment which we now have up to 1,000 40-quart cans daily. About 100 cans are being received at that plant daily. We take all the milk of the 441 producers who are members.

The corporation first sold its milk September 1 to the Eastern Farm Products Company, Brooklyn. We delivered to that company

It is a distributor in New York City and is engaged in the whol saling of milk to stores.

(The following testimony was given over objection interposed Dairymen's League that it is irrelevant, incompetent, and not bindi upon it.)

I had some talk with one of the officials of Eastern Farms, Nath Sacks. I believe he is president of Eastern Farms. Mr. Sacks s that under present conditions he was unable to accept this milk the butterfat content was too high; that he, under the present orde was unable to compete with the market and pay the butterfat price The butterfat content of such milk was running at an average 4.1 percent. That called for a payment of a premium of 24 cent over the base price.

I had a telephone conversation with Mr. E. Manning Gaynor the about disposing of our milk. I was referred to him by someone, believe Mr. Sacks.

I went to the Administrator's office in that connection and w talked with Mr. Harmon at the Administrator's office. By "we," mean Mr. Barnes, the president of the cooperative, and myself. Mr. Harmon told us that Mr. Gaynor was in a position to place this milk for us. We then talked to Mr. Gaynor. He told us if we wanted to divert our milk that they would accept that milk at the Queensboro Farms at Canastota. We then shipped the milk to Queensboro a Canastota.

Our plant is equipped simply as a receiving plant. We diverted our milk to the Queensboro plant at Canastota until about the twenty-sixth of October, I believe. Supbsequent to the time that our milk was diverted and delivered to Canastota we sent into the Market Administrator a statement of the amounts of money 442 which we made claim for. That was for milk delivered dur- ing September and October. An auditor from the Adminis- trator's office came to check with our auditor, in November sometime. They checked our records. The names of the auditors from the Administrator's office are Mr. Lambert and Mr. Murrary. They came together. Our auditor, Mr. Cruickshank was there. There was agreement between the Administrator's auditors as to the amount found to be due to my corporation. The amount agreed upon was $1,797. That amount was not paid to the cooperative. $145 was paid, I believe it was the twentieth of December. I did not receive a copy of the alleged audit on which that payment was based. That amount was arrived at upon the alleged audit of Mr. Aex. That payment was withheld until we made additional payments to the fund. I am not quite sure how much we paid into the fund before we received that check but I believe it was around $900.

Our plant is in the 200-mile freight zone.

We have not received any decision as to our application for payment under the provisions of Article seven, Subsection five, of the Order. (Plaintiff moved to strike the testimony of the foregoing

...ness on the ground that it is irrelevant to any of the issued in the ... Motion denied.)

Cross examination by Mr. McCarthy:

We made our application on or about the tenth of October. I ...n't the exact date. I believe we filed our report for the month of ...tember on or about the tenth of October. I don't know the exact ...te. I am not just sure on what date we filed our October report ...d I believe that it was filed on or about the tenth of November. ...e filed our November report in December. When these auditors were up at my plant we did not sign any written statement 443 or contract agreeing to the amounts of these payments. This was simply an oral agreement that I had with the auditors, Mr. Lambert and Mr. Murray. They told me that their examination of our records indicated that the amount of $1,797 was due us from the pool.

Q. You don't know that these auditors had any authority to bind the Market Administrator as to the correctness of the figures which were arrived at on that date?

A. Not to my knowledge.

We got the $140 on or about the twentieth of December. The payment of $900 into the pool was the payment of our obligation to the Producer Settlement Fund for the month of November. We claimed these payments due us from September and October milk. We did not owe money to the Producer Settlement Fund for the month of October but did owe some money to that fund for the month of November. I couldn't be certain as to the exact amount. I believe it was around $800 and some odd dollars. We were obliged to pay that to the Administrator before we had any kind of settlement.

Q. The Market Administrator then refused to pay you the money which was due you for market service payments until you paid your obligation to the pool?

A. That is right.

Cross examination by Mr. Wallach:

I testified on direct examination that we had a conference with Mr. Harmon after Eastern Farms refused to purchase our milk. He told us to go and see Mr. Gaynor. I telephoned Mr. Gaynor. I did not know him and I had not met him before. With reference to the milk, I explained to him that we were asked to divert our milk by Mr. Harmon.

444 The fact was we had asked Mr. Harmon where we could divert our milk. We happened to go to see Mr. Harmon because we did not have a market for our milk after this Order. Mr. Sacks of the Eastern Company told us to go to see Mr. Harmon. Mr. Harmon told us to speak to Mr. Gaynor. Mr. Gaynor said he would help us and find a market for milk and he did but we weren't satisfied with the price we received.

Q. He didn't force you to deliver your milk to Queensboro did he
A. He did not.

He said that would be a good place. He offered us the facilities of the Dairymen's League but we wouldn't put our milk in there. He did not offer us the facilities of Sheffield. He asked us if we wanted to sell our milk to the Dairymen's League and we refused. He gave us the opportunity of the facilities of Queensboro and we accepted. After we delivered milk to Queensboro for some time we stopped selling milk to Queensboro and went back to Eastern Farms for one day. We then went back to Queensboro and are now selling to them. We stopped selling milk to Eastern Farms the second time for the reason that Eastern Farms thought they might be able to use that milk with this percentage of butter fat but found out they could not and we then went back to Queensboro.

I was present at the conversation between the auditors of the administrator and Mr. Cruickshank, my auditor. The paper that Mr. Pratt showed me was typewritten by Mr. Cruikshank at his office after the audit. I am not certain how long after the audit this paper was typewritten. It was not the same day. The 445 auditors from the Administrator's office possibly never saw that paper at all, that exact paper.

The auditors received their figures from our books. I don't know where Mr. Pratt got that paper. I would have to have my books to be exactly sure, but the amounts here stated on the paper that Mr. Pratt showed me are the exact amounts, to the best of my knowledge that are on the books.

Cross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

I have been in the milk business since the beginning of this co-operative. Prior to that time I have been farming. I had twenty-five cows. When I became an officer of the cooperative I sold my milk to Eastern Farms, a large concern in New York. I imagine that they buy milk from other cooperatives, I am not certain. I have seen their plant in New York City. I do not have any idea how much milk they handle. I do know they handle a considerably greater amount of milk than they buy from me. They are handlers, I believe. My cooperative is also a handler. I do not know of anything in these orders which fixed the price of milk in a transaction between a handler and a handler. I have read the orders several times.

The representative of Eastern Farms told me that he was unable to take my milk. He didn't take our milk from that time on. There was some discussion with him with reference to the high butter fat content of our milk. He said he couldn't use it in that form at that time because of the high butter fat test. This man, Mr. Sacks, suggested that we get in touch with Mr. Harmon.

The President of my company and I visited Mr. Harmon at the Hotel Commodore. We talked of diversions. Mr. Harmon is the man who mentioned the diversions. He said there were several which would take this milk and he said that was what his tment was set up for. I did not ask him to tell me what to do with the milk. He volunteered that information.

Our plant is in the town of Worcester. The next receiving plant is, I believe, five miles either side of us. They are both the same distance. We eventually took this milk to Queens-at Canastota, which is around one hundred five miles away.
field and the Dairymen's League own these plants that are n five miles of us. Mr. Harmon suggested that we could take milk to the Dairymen's League plant which is five miles from plant and we refused to take it there. We preferred to deliver Canastota.
that conversation with Mr. Harmon he said we could arrange that the milk would be taken by the Dairymen's League. We ed it. We preferred to take it one hundred and five miles. I not certain whether that plant is a butter factory or not, I have r been there. At all events they took the cream with the high er fat content. I do not know whether that cream was used for purpose of making butter.
We were entitled to a uniform price on that milk, subject to the ter fat differential, and that is exactly what we would have been tled to if we had sold the milk to the Eastern Farms. We were erned by the uniform price in either event.
am not certain when we took this milk to Canastota but I believe was the 26th of September. We were entitled to a payment from settlement fund at the end of that month and we made a claim it. I am not certain as to the amount of the claim. We based claim on the milk diversion, the milk that went to Canastota, d on our cooperative handling charge. The claim represented difference between the net pool price and the price we received r our milk.
We based our claim on the milk that was used for manufacturing rposes. I do not know whether this Canastota plant was a butter factory but we learned that the milk went into butter. The basis of our claim was that the milk which we sent to Can-astota was used for the manufacture of butter. I am not rtain as to the amount. I would be unable to make a statement to how much we claimed for that month of September.
We made a like claim in October. We did not make a claim in ovember. During the month of November we sold our milk to the consumer farmer cooperative for use in fluid form.
48 For that we did receive or will receive the uniform price.
We owed the Administrator some money in November and December. We owed him, I would say, around nine hundred dol-ars in November as a pool obligation. That was a pool obligation according to the price we received for our milk. That was for the November milk. The Administrator notified us of the amount which we owed the pool somewhere near the 10th of December. We paid it on the 20th of December.

I am not certain of the date when these auditors came to look at books but it was along the latter part of November, I believe. owed the pool around eight or nine hundred dollars for Novem milk. We do not owe them anything for the month of October.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

The nine hundred dollar payment for November milk was a p ment that was due in December.

Q. Now I call your attention to the provision of the order co tained in section 6 of Article 7 which provides that the administ tor shall pay out of the producers settlement fund to any handl immediately after audit of claims for such payment made on for supplied by the Market Administrator. Payments including th twenty-three cents plant handling charge, and I ask you wheth your company had any reserve from which to pay the Admini trator a payment due after December 15th of nine hundred dolla when the Administrator was withholding one thousand seven hu dred ninety-seven dollars of money due your corporation from th producers settlement fund?

A. It did not.

449 MR. SCHOENECK. That is objected to as incompetent, irrel vant, and immaterial.

The COURT. The fact remains it did pay it.

SAMUEL MILLER was called as a witness on behalf of the defendant

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live at 3001 148th Street, Flushing, New York. I am in the mi business and am president of Queensboro Farm Products Company That corporation is licensed as a milk dealer by the Department o Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York and is a handl as defined by the provisions of Order No. 27 which is known as th Federal Marketing Order. I have been in the milk business twenty- nine years. Queensboro owns some country receiving plants in th New York production area. It owns plants at Canastota, Clinto in Madison County, Blossvale, Indian Castle in Herkimer County, and we have a lease from Van Hornesville. We leased that plant. We never had a plant at Taberg. We own part of the machinery in the Van Hornesville plant. We have a leased plant at Steamberg which is in the New York production area. We own part of the machinery in that plant. We take the output from the Canton plant. We do not lease that plant because it belongs to the Canton Co- operative. The machinery in that plant belongs to them. We bought and put in the machinery but they are paying us back. We sold them the machinery on conditional sale. Canton is in St. Lawrence County. We also receive the output of the co-opera- tive at Cannonsville, Delaware County, New York. I am not sure that it is a co-operative, I think it is. On September 1, 1938, we were operating all those plants except Cannonsville. We started getting milk from Cannonsville in October. All of the eight plants mentioned are approved for shipment of milk to the City of New ork except Canastota. There is a new law which provides acture of butter since September 1, 1938, which is when the l order went into effect. We get the cream out of which we facture butter right from the Canastota building. We sepa-e milk on the premises and take the cream and manufacture with it. We sometimes manufacture cream for storage pur-price of sour cream and sweet cream. A can of cream that is

m. I suppose you could make it from frozen cream, but we n't try it; I don't know. We have never tried to make butter from either sour or frozen cream. I haven't sold any frozen cr to any butter factories. We never sold any cream to the Nor plant.

The first time I ever engaged in the butter business was the f of October 1938. I presume we received some milk from the p down at Worcester on the twenty-sixth of September. Most of milk that we receive from different milk stations is made into cr and we put it in storage. I believe that the milk we received f Worcester went into storage as Class III–B. We separated that and used the cream in Class III–B. We make the skimmed milk powdered or skimmed condensed. One hundred pounds of skim milk delivered at the Canastota plant in September 1938 was w very little. We usually get what the casein factories are paying fo
I didn't buy skimmed milk. You ask what it is worth. I said i worth very little. I didn't buy any skimmed milk. I buy all wh milk. I made some of this skimmed milk into powdered. I s say that you get about six and one-half pounds or so of powder fr one hundred pounds of skimmed milk. I should say the value milk powder per pound in September 1938 was about three 452 three and one-half cents a pound. That was about the hig price we sold it for. I don't think that in September we s it for less than three cents. It usually takes about from three one-half cans to four cans of skimmed milk to make a can of skim condensed milk. We did not quite get from twenty-five to thi pounds of skimmed condensed out of one hundred pounds of skim milk. You can figure about twenty-five pounds. Skimmed c densed was worth as low as One dollar and seventy-five cents a c delivered to the city in September 1938. It will go up close to t dollars, but from one dollar and seventy-five cents up to two doll delivered to the city of New York. It weighs about ninety pou or a little over that. So that we got at least two cents a pou for it during that period. Skimmed condensed delivered in N York City brought about two cents a pound or about fifty ce a hundred for skimmed milk. You get twenty-five pounds skimmed condensed out of one hundred pounds of skimmed mi
The freight from Canastota to New York for one ninety-pound c of skimmed condensed in September 1938 was about thirty-eig cents if I am not mistaken. That is about one-third of a cen pound in round figures.

We had facilities for manufacturing in September 1938 in t plants at Canton and Steamberg. At Canton we make powdered s condensed milk and cream. We do not yet ship any skimmed mi in fluid form from Canastota to New York City. I do not deli any skimmed milk in the city and have not bought any in the ci
I do not know the price of skimmed milk in the city at the pres price. So far I didn't get any calls for it. I don't know whether there is any market for skimmed milk in New York City. I don't have any calls for it. I got the permit to ship skimmed milk from Canastota because if I wanted to take skimmed milk to another plant, I am not allowed to take it in for I have no permit. The main thing is to get in skimmed milk from other plants to the Canastota plant.

Last year I shipped some skimmed milk to the Canastota plant. I bought some skimmed milk last year from the Eastern Farms plant at High Bridge for shipment to Canastota. High Bridge is just a short distance from Canastota. I have not bought any skimmed milk from anywhere since September first, 1938. At the Canastota plant we have facilities for cooling fresh milk. In a plant which ships milk for fluid purposes to New York City it is necessary to have a cooler and a weigh can. You weigh the milk from the farmers in any plant. You must have a weigh can and a receiving or cooling tank and a storage tank. I have all those things in Canastota. Notwithstanding this permit I could cool milk at Canastota so that it could be shipped to New York City and be received there in sweet form.

I cannot ship fluid milk from Canastota to the City of New York now because if we receive skimmed milk from the outside we are not allowed to ship any fluid milk from the Canastota plant. That is a new law. I have not shipped any fluid milk from Canastota to New York City since September first, 1938. We shipped it in tanks to Boston during the flood. That milk was approved for the New York City Marketing Area and I presume it was also approved for the Boston Area. I reported that milk into the pool. I would not attempt to answer now whether I paid any assessment on that milk into the pool. I don't know whether that was reported as unpriced milk. I am the general manager of the company and the one who personally made the sale of that milk over the telephone. I received ten cents per quart for that milk. That is four dollars a can. When I paid for my September milk I really don't know whether I paid my patrons a blended price which covered the blending of milk within the pool or within Order 27 and unpriced milk.

I am acquainted with Mr. Erskine Harmon; I saw him a few times. I think I heard him explain the provisions of this order down at the Hotel Pennsylvania once. I was present at the Hotel Pennsylvania meeting when dealers were invited to come there and have the Order explained to them by Mr. Harmon. I don't remember whether Mr. Harmon at that time made an explanation that you could pay whatever you pleased for unpriced milk. I never talked with Mr. Harmon about that. I never talked with Mr. Griffith at that office. Harvey Miller takes care of these things. Possibly he talked with Mr. Harmon; I don't know. After this Order went into effect I installed this butter-making machinery in Canastota. Prior stalling that machinery in Canastota I had been processing running my storage cream that was kept in Syracuse with ma at the Canastota plant, only for sour cream. I had custo rerun my storage cream at my New York City plant. Prior t tember first I had not rerun that storage cream for the purp making sour cream in New York City. I had made sour cr

I have ever tried to make butter out of storage cream. I don't whether butter can be made from storage cream or no.

Since October first, when we got this butter machinery in Cana we have been engaged in the manufacture of butter there. I we made butter for a few weeks in October 1938. I really c tell you how much.

In the Canton plant we have separators, condensing 455 powder roll, facilities for making milk powder, conde milk, and cream. That plant is approved for shipmen whole milk to New York City in fluid form. It was approved s time in the early part of May 1938 by the New York City He Department and we have been shipping fluid milk from Canto New York City. We shipped our entier intake there during tember, October, and November. We manufacture at that plan the flush period. Those months are May, June, July, part of Aug
The flush is May and June. That is the main flush. There w flush period of milk in September of this year. That is we plenty of milk, more than the average run.

At Steamburg we have separators for cream, powder roll, and c densed pan. We really have three condensed plants. We rec close to five hundred cans, or a little less, daily, in the the sh season at Steamburg. Now is the shortest time. In September were possibly receiving a few hundred cans more there, I sho say pretty near seven or eight hundred. At our high point, production there we take in around twelve or thirteen hundred ca
Our low point is a little less than five hundred.

That plant is not now approved for shipment of milk to the St of New Jersey. Since September, I took it out of New Jersey. I shipped no milk from there to any market other than New Yo City. I do not now have any other plant approved for New Jers

I am not taking care of it.

In all of these plants the intake would be around thirty-fi lers besides the amount of milk received at those plants. Now I ly buy at Cannonsville.

There are a few nearby plants that sent milk to our Canastota t. Mr. Gaynor called me up about Worcester, if I could use k that was diverted, and I said, "Send it over." I visited Mr. ynor in Leonardsville, sometime at the end of September. I don't mber what date it was. I told him we had room to take some milk in. I didn't actually go up there to talk to him about , diverting milk or purchasing diverted milk. I told him we had room to take in diverted milk. That was the only time had ever visited there. Before that I had seen him once when he was ith the Commissioner of Agriculture in the Canton plant. I called m up and asked if I could see him and he said I could come over. wasn't so familiar with these new regulations and I told him we ve got a plant right in Canastota where we can handle quite a t of diverted milk. I suppose he explained these new regulations me, I don't remember every word I spoke to him. I don't remem- r what he told me I could and could not do under Order No. 27 ith diverted milk. I went over there just to get familiar with ese new regulations. It happened I was in the country and Leon- dsville wasn't far. That is why I went there. I don't remember here I called Mr. Gaynor from about this diverted milk. It was ssibly either Utica or Canastota. I presume Leonardsville is bout thirty miles from Utica. I went there by automobile. One of ur men took me there I suppose, in one of my own cars. I talked ith Mr. Gaynor possibly twenty minutes or so. He told me I could ivert milk if I manufactured; I could put it in any class I wanted; t was what I used it for. If I froze it, it could be for frozen eam—if I froze the cream I paid for III–B. If I shipped it as uid cream I would have to pay the fluid price. It is according to hat I do with it. If I shipped cream to New York I would have o pay Class II–A, and if I sent it to storage it would be III–B. presume he told me that it must be over seven days in storage. I eally don't know. I did not have any talk with him about dealers ho had not signed the Milk Marketing Agreement. I don't think e mentioned it to me. We had signed the Milk Marketing Agree- ment the first of September. I did not sign anything myself. My rother must have signed it at that time. I know we were the irst ones to sign. That is what I heard.

I did not call from New York to make the appointment with Mr. Gaynor. I never talked with Mr. Gaynor about milk com-457 ing from certain dealers who wouldn't sign this milk market- ing agreement. After I talked with Mr. Gaynor I took diverted milk from other plants. I got it from the plant at Holland Patent, the plant of the Holland Patent Milk Producers, a cooperative The manager of that plant is Mr. Humphrey. He used to be one of our patrons. I have known of that plant for many years but never had it myself. They only sent us the surplus milk, whatever he had over. I believe he is selling his milk which is not surplus to the Queens Farms. I really don't know. I know Mr. Dan Ketch the proprietor of Queens Farms. Mr. Gaynor never told me anyth about that milk being diverted. I think Joe McGinley must h called up in Jim Lombard's office about taking the Holland Pa milk. Jim Lombard is a broker. I don't know whether Jim La bard is formerly a Dairymen's League employee. We did not ceive the entire milk output from the Holland Patent for seve days. We did not receive the entire output for any day. I am receiving milk from Holland Patent now. We received milk fr there about a week or so, off and on. Some days he would s and some days not. It was not the entire intake of the plant bec he was sending as little as two hundred cans or so, and that plant t in much more.

We received milk from other plants besides Holland Patent, f Onatavia which is operated by Cooperdale. We did not receive entire output of that plant. We received a few tanks off and on.
was not a steady shipment. I never asked Cooperdale whe

I got some milk from the P. & K. That plant is at Oneida.
wasn't from a regular plant of that company. One day they w

P. & K. have four plants. One is at Oneida, one at Clock whether the La Fargeville plant belongs to a different poration. I don't remember whether I got any milk from th Fargeville plant. It wasn't steady. It was just changed ar every day from a different plant.

I got milk from Boonville. The name of the co-operative there is Boonville Co-operative I think. I think we just got o was the end of September or October; I don't remember the day was not the early part of September, it was the latter part. I know what Boonville takes or what it ships to. I presume ester Farms is getting some of that milk. Manchester has one his own plants, too. We get milk from Worcester, too.

In September we didn't make any butter. In October we made me butter and put quite a lot of cream in storage, but I don't remember how many cans. We stored it at Syracuse Cold Storage. the same time that we were putting in storage cream we also took rage cream out. I don't remember how much we took out but we ve books to show.

I have not sold milk in any other area than the Metropolitan New rk area since September 1st, with the exception of Boston, if that s after. Just this month we sold a little for Italian cheese right r Canton, possibly a few hundred cans, that is all. That was hole milk. It was sold in Canton, New York, to some little factory r Canton, for Italian cheese.

I operate a processing or bottling plant in New York City. The pacity of that plant varies according to the time of the year. Now, e are processing possibly a couple thousand cans of milk a day. hat is, cans and bottles. We bottle possibly fifteen hundred cans glass and I should say a couple of hundred cans in paper conners. It will be, say, about thirteen or fourteen hundred cans in glass and two or three hundred cans in paper. I presume that would be about five thousand cases in glass and about seven hundred fifty cases in paper, in round figures; maybe a uple hundred cases more.

We sell possibly a couple of thousand cases of milk to stores per y. I don't know whether my company is about the fourth largest erating company in New York City. I never looked the other mpanies up and I don't know whether we are one of the eight rgest companies. I just mind my own business. I presume the rden Company is larger and I suppose Sheffield is larger.

On the first of September I asked a retail price of nine and threearters cents a quart for milk in glass containers in New York City. think I got that price for a few weeks. I shouldn't say that I got hat on all of my milk for that period because a lot of these small stomers which agreed to pay, when the price weakened, they took down.

After the price from the store trade dropped from nine and threearters the next price I got for my milk was nine cents. Then it ent lower than that. The average price from stores on milk now is ight, eight and a half, nine cents. If you have a customer at nine nd three-quarters you are afraid he will kick you out. That is also ue in many places if you ask nine cents. Competing dealers didn't top chiseling after September 1 and neither did I. When they ake my customers I take theirs. That is the way for me to keep he business. About three weeks we didn't change the price and the rade just flitted away, and then we had to go and get the trade ack.

Q. You laid low on chiseling for three weeks, is that right?

A. That is right.

During that three weeks I was receiving diverted milk from these several companies. We received it for quite a long time, pos-461 sibly a month or more. We received some in October. We received it right along. I started taking this diverted milk when they called me up in the early part of September. It wasn't just on the first. Canastota was the only plant at which I handled diverted milk.

I manufactured condensed milk at Steamberg during September and October. I did not ship any fluid milk from that plant during September and October. We shipped only fluid milk from there in November and December. We are shipping fluid from there now. That is two months.

I transported milk from some of my own plants to others of my plants for the purpose of manufacture. We will take some milk from Indian Castle and some from Van Hornesville or Blossvale; it is according to the demand. We transported that milk to Canastota and manufactured it into c. am and buttermilk. From the skim you make buttermilk. From the milk you make cream. We made some whole condensed in Canastota. But at this time of the year it was not a large volume. We do not now make whole condensed milk for the Gordon Baking Company. We stopped making condensed milk for them since the strike a year ago. We do not lease part of our plant to the Gordon Baking Company to make condensed milk and it does not receive condensed milk from any plants that I operate. I do not sell sweetened condensed but do sell some unsweetened condensed which is made at Canastota.

I was allowed a handling charge of 23¢ a hundred pounds in my manufacturing plants in my accounting of the pool on the milk I diverted from my own plant, from Indian Castle and elsewhere. I was allowed a hauling charge but I don't know how much. I do not take those amounts out of my settlement. I pay them separately.

Indian Castle is possibly forty or fifty miles from Canastota.

I don't know whether in transporting my milk from Indian 462 Castle to Canastota I pass a manufacturing plant of the Dairymen's League. There is a manufacturing plant of the Dairymen's League at Vernon, New York. The milk from Indian Castle passes that plant in going to Canastota.

We diverted milk from our northern plants to other plants for manufacture after September 1st, 1938, but we didn't get paid for it. We diverted milk from our manufacturing plant at Canton that we didn't receive pay for. In moving milk from one plant where we had manufacturing machinery to another plant, we were allowed no trucking or transportation; they didn't pay me for it. Canton is about a hundred and twenty-five miles from Canastota. I transported possibly ten or fifteen tanks in the month of September from Canton to Canastota for manufacturing purposes. That is about two to three hundred cans per tank, whatever the tank is. It runs from two to three hundred thousand cans of milk altogether.

When we made settlement in the pool with the Administrator we ettled at manufacturing price for that which we used for manu- acture. I don't know whether we settled for the milk that we trans- orted from Canton to Canastota on a manufactured price. We idn't make any claim for transporting and for station charges. Ve saw that we made a mistake so we didn't ask for it. We made mistake doing it because that wasn't allowed from one manufac- iring plant to another, so what is the use of making claims. We ust let the transportation go and reported the milk in whatever class e used it for. I don't know just what we used it for. As I say, e made cream. Some we stored and some we shipped. We didn't ake any butter in the early part. We started making it in October. We accounted for that. We are making butter now; not much.

Cross-examination by Mr. SCHULZ:

I am the President and General Manager of Queensboro arms Company.

I should say roughly possibly sixty per cent of our milk would fluid during the short season of production. During the surplus ason of production, it is actually two-thirds manufactured and e-third fluid.

As General Manager of my Company I am acquainted with the umber of routes that I operate in the Metropolitan Milk Market ea. My company operates about thirty-six routes selling fluid ilk to stores. I should say we serve an average of fifty to sixty tops." or stores to a route.

Before the Federal Order went into effect, during the months of ly and August we were receiving wholesale from our customers nerally prices per quart of from six cents up. When the Federal rder went into effect every party raised the wholesale price to nine d three-quarters. The price of nine and three-quarters cents ob- ined generally throughout the market for a period of two or three eeks because we got the price. If it did not obtain we couldn't t the price, but, as I say, it weakened in about two weeks.

In the Metropolitan Milk Marketing area some regions have more mpetition than others in the wholesale business. It usually starts the Bronx and finishes in Brooklyn. The Bronx is the hot-spot. he lower east side is the same. It is pretty near all over the same. he trouble is you have got four or five milk men in each store. hat is where the trouble is. The temperature is up and down. very day there are different prices. Each store patronizes four or e different companies. That is the general rule throughout the Metropolitan Milk Marketing area.

After the general stabilization of prices in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing area following the adoption of e Federal Order, the price broke generally throughout that area thin two or three weeks.

Q. Mr. Miller, do you know which company started cutting prices st after September 1, 1938?

Mr. PRATT. That is objected to as calling for a conclusion. (Objection overruled.)

A. The first one to start cutting prices was Manchester Farms. It is a handler. It is much smaller than our company. I really cannot tell you whether there were any other companies that began at the same time as Manchester. I know it started with Manchester and then it broke down. Our company is in active competition with Manchester, along side of him, throughout all the routes that we operate. It is not true of everyone of our thirty-six wholesale routes, but there are two in the Bronx and some in Queens, where we cover. We do not cover lower Manhattan or Brooklyn, and I should say possibly eight or ten routes.

Manchester Farms initiated the price cut in the Bronx. I can only tell the Court what happened about our own business after the price cut was started by Manchester Farms. We gradually came down to his price. We had to cut because we would lose the trade. Our competitors followed suit. There have been successive declines in prices generally throughout the marketing area since the Manchester Company initiated the price cut. Those declines in prices were caused by taking trade one from another. Where there are four or five dealers in a store, where the storekeeper is trying to break the price, one day he was starting with me and the next day starting with another one until they get that price down. What actually happened was that the storekeepers, having gotten 465 a lower price from one dealer, then went to other dealers and demanded the same lower price.

In New York City now the competitive situation is a bad situation, very bad in the milk business. By bad in the milk business I mean the price just broke in selling stuff at low prices.

Storage cream costs a little bit more than fresh cream because we have to put it in tins and take it to storage and then we have to pay for storage, trucking and the other expenses of taking it out.

The cost of making powdered milk per pound, figuring the box and liners and other expenses I think will be close to three-quarters of a cent a pound. In computing that cost, that includes actually the freight, there is about twenty-five cents freight, and you figure the box and liners and I should say one-half cent, and one-quarter cent freight, and it is actually about three-quarters of a cent a pound including the freight. I think condensed milk per forty-quart can will cost a little more than the powder. Including freight it may stand around seventy-five cents for a can of forty quarts. That includes freight to New York City. I really cannot tell you just what operations are involved in arriving at the cost just stated. I cannot tell you just the right figures. I said I presume. There are numerous operations in arriving at the cost for just one can of condensed milk. We figure our cost about seventy-five cents per can. That cost includes coal and freight, cleaning cans. The freight is about thirty-eight cents or so.

Before the Federal Order was entered I appeared at the hearings. I think I was there once. The distributors were opposed to the entry of the order. After the Federal Order was adopted and promulgated my company signed a voluntary marketing agreement. My 466 reason for signing it was to stabilize the market. After the order was entered we desired to show our voluntary compliance with the order and for that reason signed this agreement.

Cross examination by Mr. WALLACH:

There has been chiseling in the milk business before September 1st and as long as I can remember. I remember 1929 chiseling. Before September 1st and during the year 1938 I would get reports from our outside men that milk was sold by milk dealers to grocery stores at as low as two for seven cents a quart, sometimes lower than that. Since September 1st, 1938, the lowest price that I know of milk being sold to stores is around eight to eight and one-half cents per quart. That is about the lowest.

I saw Mr. Gaynor once before the middle of September. As I say, he was with the Commissioner at our plant at Canton. That was some time in July. I saw him after September 1st. It was possibly in the middle of September or so.

The first time that I purchased any milk from this Worcester plant of which Mr. All was the Secretary was, I think, about the end of September. There was no conversation between me and Mr. Gaynor at his home in the middle of September in connection with the purchase of any milk from Worcester. I didn't know the location of the Worcester plant before the time that I purchased milk from it at the end of September and had never purchased any milk from it prior to the end of September.

Mr. Gaynor called us up one day and asked me if I could handle the milk of the Worcester plant and I told him yes. Mr. Gaynor called me up, I think, just the day before he shipped milk from there.

467 My company has made payments into the pool in the months of October, November, and December. We paid for September I think about thirty-two thousand dollars besides these administrative fees. And then we paid in November for October milk, I think, twenty odd thousand and we paid in December for November milk around twelve thousand dollars. I really cannot tell you the dates, but I know we paid every month.

Cross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

I took milk from Holland Patent in July. That was surplus milk. I presume Queens Farms was getting the balance of his milk. We are called up and if he has too much milk I buy it. I have mentioned quite a few other plants from which we take surplus milk of that sort. Clinton is our own plant. All the plants I gave the names of are our own plants. I suppose the milk of the Onativia plant was surplus, as he called me up to ask if I could use it. The milk from the Poland Cooperative is the milk that remains in these cooperatives after they fill their contracts with other dealers.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

Distress milk is a tank of milk that arrives in New York City and finds no home.

My company bought surplus milk in the country every day last summer. You may call it distress milk. When the milk goes to the city and comes back to the country you cannot use it any more. You cannot use it in the city if you have no room for it; we are not manufacturing anything in the city. I think you are wrong in stating that my company had tanks lined up outside of its doors waiting to get on its platform and sell it at distress prices during the summer of 1938. I bought surplus milk as low as one dollar 468 a hundred if they had no room for it, and if I could buy for my price I would buy it. I always bought it at my price if they wanted to sell it to me. I am not forcing them. We have a plant in New York to take care of milk.

I do not think we sold any bottle milk at less than eight cents in New York since September 1st. We do not have any contracts for the sale of milk in New York City as low as six and one-half cents. We have a low priced contract with the state for fluid milk but they are in doubt about the price when the Federal Order came in. We demanded a higher price. It will be settled, but there is no six and one-half cents. Before the Federal Order came in we sold at any price. There was no price fixed. So far as I know we pay the price under the Federal Order. At the time we signed this order we understood that this Federal Order would stablize prices in the country. As to the price in New York City, we thought the milkmen would have enough brains to get a price for the milk.

Q. And you say you laid low on chiseling in your concern for a few days, is that right?

A. A few weeks.

We don't know where this nine and three-quarters cents retail price was fixed. We followed what others started to charge.

I attended a meeting in the Hotel Pennsylvania, but I don't remember the dealers talking any prices. I don't think I was present at a meeting where Mr. Harmon was present. I was to so many meetings. I was at the Hotel Pennsylvania meeting before we signed the contract. I was there at that meeting. It was in the evening. There were quite a few federal men there. I really don't know their names. I saw Mr. Mather and he spoke there that evening. I saw Mr. E. Manning Gaynor and he spoke there. I think Mr. Sadler was there. I saw Mr. Kenneth F. Fee and Mr. Wellington 469 Griffith, the referendum agent.

I really don't remember what Mr. Mather was talking about. I know there was reference to buying milk, but I don't remember. We were not told what price we would have to obtain from storekeepers and I don't think that was discussed that night.

don't think I attended a meeting where the nine and three-quarter t price was discussed: I don't remember what was said at that ting in the Pennsylvania Hotel that night. The federal men e there and they were talking about this order. They were not ing about the retail price of milk in the wholesale trade in New rk City. There was no time to talk price of milk. They laid the down and they went away and we went away. I don't remember o first told me the price had gone up to nine and three-quarters ts. I heard from our drivers on the routes that Manchester was one that initiated this price-cutting drive. They told me Man-ster was the first dealer in Brooklyn and Queens and the Bronx t started price cutting. It was the drivers from the Bronx that me Manchester was the first. I could send you over their names.
I can't tell you now the names of anyone. I would have to look up.

presume our drivers reported to me that we were losing business Dover Farms. I could give you all the information from our ks. Mr. Louis Berman takes care of the routes and the drivers he could give you all the information you want. I personally ed to some of the drivers about Manchester Farms. We have e a few routes in the Bronx. I know them only by number. Mr. man takes care of them. We have records of everyone that took ice and what price they took.

s soon as the prices lowered we went back and took some of the le back. It will show in the book when we started taking somebody else's trade. It was the latter part of September, about two or three weeks after the order went into effect.

Q. Did Berman report how many cases of trade had been eled by you?

. I believe so.

. How many cases did you chisel?

. We have got them marked down.

do not recall any particular date on which the price of milk broke ew York City to two quarts for seven cents in glass, but it may happened.

The following evidence was given over objection that it is irreleand too remote.)

was at a meeting at the Pennsylvania Hotel in 1937 when the ers and milk producers representatives met to discuss operating r the Rogers-Allen law. I don't remember whether the sale of quarts of milk for seven cents by Eisenberg and his various panies were discussed. I know he was selling cheap milk.

heard of the sale of milk at two quarts for seven cents in glass t after the control board went out. The control board went out he 31st day of March, 1937. It was just fighting one with anr, and I don't say this price just happened in the month of April; bly it happened in June. I didn't see it myself, two quarts even, but I just heard the rumor.

I was present at a general meeting when all these dealers, Borden's, Sheffield, Dairymen's League, and the independent dealers met at the Commodore Hotel to form a bargaining agency under the Rogers-Allen law.

The cost of a quart of milk to a handler, such as the Queensboro Company, assuming that the first cost of milk is two dollars and forty-five cents per hundred pounds, the price fixed under the order, is over nine cents a quart on 3.5 butterfat milk when delivered to a store in New York City. I cannot give you a figure on the fraction.

471 Assuming the butter fat content to be four percent, the cost may jump up close to nine and a half cents or so. (Objection to the foregoing on the ground that it is irrelevant because the Order does not fix resale prices was overruled.)

In delivering milk to stores in the wholesale trade in New York, I employ union drivers. There has been a union rule in force among the milk drivers in New York City, since September 1st, 1938, which limits the number of cases which can be delivered by one driver. The rule is 95 cases for a route man, and if it is over 95 cases he has got to have a helper. With a helper you are allowed to sell as high as 135, but for anything over 95 you must have a helper. The majority of market deliveries in the wholesale business in New York City are made by union drivers. As far as I know, Borden's employs union drivers. Assuming that I deliver more than two cases to a customer, then my route would have as many as 50 or 60 stops. In the industry a delivery is called a stop. Instead of speaking of so many customers we say so many stops.

After September 1, 1938, the market was only stablized a few weeks. It is not any better than it was a year ago, when there was no order, and I think it is worse lately. The last week or so, it got still worse.

It costs more to deliver a quart of milk in a paper container than it does in glass. It actually costs about one cent more. The paper costs more than one cent, but the loss of the glass offsets it. Milk which is sold in paper containers must bring an additional cent if it is to compete with glass, from the standpoint of the cost to the handler.

Recross examination by Mr. SCHILZ:

I have been a handler in the milk business for twenty-nine years.

I operate about thirty-six wholesale routes in New York City.

472 When the Federal Order went into effect on September first, prices were stabilized generally throughout the market in the wholesale business for a period of two or three weeks. Conditions in the market just now are worse than they were a year ago. The cost of milk is high, and the selling prices cheap. There is no present stabilization in the market.

In my judgment the principal cause of that lack of stabilization is this trial. Most of the milkmen feel that they won't have to pay any money to the Administrator.

Recross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

elieve we make from eight and one-half to nine pounds of ered milk out of a hundred pounds of skim milk.

e difference in cost between fluid milk in glass containers and in paper containers is about one cent a quart. That figure l change according to the quantity of paper containers that used. It would not change according to the quality of paper vas used because this paper is controlled by one concern which he paper containers, and with a bigger quantity you may get a cheaper, but I should say the lowest you could work on was ent, and the quality is about the same.

n not familiar with the operations of the Norwood Creameries. here when their representative testified on the stand the other ut I don't know who he is. I heard it testified that they operate utter factory all the year around. I have operated my butter y very little. We make it just as we need it, we may work a week or twice a week, or twice a month; just the amount of we need. A plant engaged in making butter the year round lower cost per pound than one that is having these occasional operations.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

I sell in competition with Sam Adler, Adler's Creamery. k he operates under the name of Samuel Adler Milk Company. so operates the Philco Milk Company. I don't know whether dler sold milk at less than nine and three-quarter cents. I know Number 10 East 112th Street is in New York City. Possibly milk around that territory in September. I did not see signs windows of stores in that vicinity about the middle of Sep- r advertising milk for retail at nine cents a quart. I do not or those signs. You see, I don't go out to see the trade. Pos- my drivers reported to me that milk was being sold in stores ne cents a quart in the month of September, but I cannot ber.

Re-cross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

retail grocery trade has used "leaders". They do it is a new opening. They may sell some things lower. It may help in tores to bring people into the store in anticipation that they uy other things. The storekeeper's profit on milk is too big m to do this. The milk keeps them up today. Milk may be s a leader on different occasions. I really cannot tell you.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

se storekeepers, in buying from three or four different dealers, the dealers one against another to get kick-backs, and conces- such as free ice and other things.

ERSKINE M. HARMON was called as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside in Washington, D. C. I have a home there. I have 474 stayed at different hotels in New York. The last night that I stayed in New York I stayed at the Victoria Hotel. During my stay in New York my time has been about evenly placed between the Commodore and the Victoria.

My appointment as Administrator of Order Number 27 was made in writing by Secretary Wallace. I was also appointed Administrator of Official Order Number 126 issued by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York. That appointment is in writing and on file. I took up my duties as Administrator on September first, 1938.

I opened an office for the carrying out of my agency for the Federal Government and for the Commissioner of Agriculture of New York. We were in the Commodore Hotel for about ten days or two weeks and after that at number 95 Madison Avenue. That period of ten days or two weeks was from September first to September twelfth or thirteenth, I cannot give you the exact date. I had no official accommodations at the Commodore on the thirty-first of August. I was registered there as an individual on the thirty-first of August. I think I had Room No. 538, but I cannot be sure. I think Mr. Wellington J. Griffith was in room 1900, but I cannot be sure of that. I set up a temporary office there on September first, I think it was in room 1900. Mr. Wellington J. Griffith was there at the Commodore Hotel part of the time and I was there part of the time on that day.

Mr. Wellington J. Griffith was not associated with me in connection with Administering these two orders. He was not present in that office every day. He answered none of the correspondence addressed to me, except that there may have been correspondence directed to me regarding the Marketing Agreement which may have been turned over to him to sign, because I was not a party to the Marketing Agreement. Mr. Griffith does not still have an office in the office maintained by me as Administrator. He never was 475 permanently located in New York. On September first he was there at my office at the Commodore Hotel. He was working there part of the time but he is not working in my office now. I do not remember him being in the office for the last couple of months. He may have been there a few times after October first, in fact I think he was. I think he is now located in the Dairy Section, Washington, D. C.

In September 1938 I made a public speech in Syracuse, New York, concerning Order No. 27. I do not remember speaking at any other place that month. In October I spoke upstate in the School of Agriculture, Canton, New York. I do not remember other places now, but there may have been. Since that time I have spoken in other places upstate, at the last Farm Bureau meeting in Buffalo and at a Farm Bureau meeting in Cattaraugus County and at a Farm Bureau meeting in Norwich and at a meeting in Canastota. I don't remember the name of the man who sponsored the meeting in Canastota. At those meetings I did not discuss the question of withholding milk from dealers who declined to sign the marketing contract. With reference to the signing of these agreements by dealers I simply answered questions that people asked me as to whom they should see to sign the agreement. I told them. Some of these queries were over the telephone. I do not remember any questions being asked at meetings about signing the marketing agreements. I have no recollection of saying anything at Canton, New York, in words or substance to the effect that certain dealers were reluctant to sign these marketing agreements. I am very sure I said nothing of that sort.

I did not send Wellington J. Griffith up to Edward, which is near Canton, and did not know of his going up there. I never called the head of Edwards Company, the Edwards man, on the long distance telephone with reference to the Marketing Agreement. I am very sure of that. To my knowledge Mr. Griffith never called from 476 my office on that subject. I never consciously permitted Mr. Griffith to use my office telephone in connection with obtaining signatures from dealers or advising the withholding, or threatening to withhold, milk from those dealers. Telephone calls between my office and the Metropolitan Producers Bargaining Agency were made on that telephone. If the calls were initiated in our office they were paid for by me as Administrator. I made some of those calls myself. I remember one or two conversations with Mr. Baldwin, at the Bargaining Agency. Only when they called up and asked who had complied with the order, and who had not, was there anything in connection with the receiving of moneys paid in or out of the producer settlement fund which required my talking with Mr. Baldwin. By "complied" I mean where they made reports and made the payments called for in the Order. I don't know of any calls to the Bargaining Agency initiated in my office before the tenth of October 1938 when the first reports were to be filed. I have no recollection of advising the Metropolitan Producers Bargaining Agency between the first and tenth of September of the names of dealers who had not signed this proposed marketing agreement. I am very sure that I did not. I don't know whether Mr. Griffith used the telephone at my office for that purpose or not. I do not think he made any such calls from our office. I don't remember any calls to the Bargaining Agency between September first and October ten, 1938.

Before September first, 1938, I worked in the Dairy Section, Washington, D. C., and had since the latter part of May 1934. I was never assigned to work with the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency. I did work with that organization in the formation or drawing up of a proposed marketing agreement and order. It was over a period of time extending from efforts to get together on a voluntary marketing agreement, beginning a year

477 ago last fall. I was associated with this matter throughout the fall months of 1937 starting with I think November. (The following evidence was given over objection on the ground of irrelevancy.) I think it is about right to say that altogether I spent about nine days in Syracuse between November, 1937 and February, 1938. Part of that time I stayed at the Onondaga Hotel; I am not sure whether I ever stayed at the Syracuse Hotel or not but I think I did, part of the time. The office of the Metropolitan Co-operative Bargaining Agency was also at the Hotel Onondaga at that time. Mr. Baldwin, the executive secretary, had his office there.

I had some part in the preparation of the proposed marketing agreement and order which was first filed with the Secretary. I did not draft that proposed agreement or any part of it. I furnished part of the information from which it was drafted. My job was that of field man for the Dairy Section, or Marketing Specialist, in the northeastern states, and this, as one of the proposed marketing agreements and orders, was one on which it was my duty to consult with various state agencies, handlers, producers, and producer groups, to learn as much as I could about the situation in the market, in order to be able to convey that information to the economists and the attorneys in charge of the work of preparing the agreement.
478 I carried out my duties in this connection to the best of my ability. With reference to the formulation of the proposed agreement and order, I consulted with all of the various agencies involved, including people connected with the State Department at Albany. I was in constant touch with the Department at Albany from May 1934 right on up till now.

When I was in Syracuse in November 1937, in connection with a proposed voluntary agreement, all I did was answer questions as to how the pooling plan could be carried out and how the order and plan could be drafted to be workable. I cannot give you the names of all the persons to whom I gave such explanation. Among them was Mr. Bardon, president of the Saquoit Valley Cooperative, who I think is also treasurer of the Bargaining Agency, and Mr. Childs of the Amsterdam Cooperative. Mr. Childs expressed himself as interested in obtaining a pool plan and was one of the group to which my explanations were addressed. I also met Mr. Frank Lent, one of the attorneys for the Dairymen's League at Syracuse, and I explained some of the details of a pooling plan to him. (At this point the plaintiff objected to the entire line of testimony as irrelevant to the issues in the case. Objection overruled.)

Mr. Lent did not prepare the proposed voluntary marketing agreement. It is my understanding that Mr. Lloyd Anderson, an attorney at Binghamton, New York, did most of the work. Mr. Anderson told me this himself.

I do not think I was in the offices of the Dairymen's League during November and December 1937. I first went to the League's office about 1928 or 1929, and I have been there possibly half a dozen times since. It is part of my duty as a government marketing expert to keep in touch with the cooperatives in the northeastern 479 states, both large and small. The United Farmers of New England considers itself a large cooperative.

Q. Is that similar to the Dairymen's League in that it is both a producer's agent in the country and a distributor selling in competition with its customers, in the City?

A. It is, yes.

Their country headquarters are at Morrisville, Vermont, and their city headquarters, Boston, Massachusettes. That cooperative has a membership of approximately 2,000 producers. It is the largest milk distributing cooperative that I know of other than the Dairymen's League, and it has been actively engaged as a distributor or handler of milk in the city, in competition with other distributors and dealers, at least since 1934, and I think since about 1918.

It is a distinct organization from the New England Milk Producers Association, but they work closely together in their pooling plan, that is, under the federal order.

There was a federal order adopted for the Boston area. I worked in the Boston area in connection with the promulgation of that order. I worked in the Boston area along with the rest of the Northeast from the summer of 1934 until I became Market Administrator for New York. I cannot say how long I worked in connection with the promulgation of the order for the Boston marketing area.

There are two or three plants which are approved for both the New York and Boston markets. These plants are the Milton Co-Operative and the Richmond Co-Operative in Vermont. Milk from these plants can go to either market but I do not know to whom it is sold. Cream is regularly shipped from the New York production area to Boston. Large quantities of cream have been shipped to Boston from this area since September 1, 1938. So far as I know, all the milk from which that cream was made was reported to me as administrator of Order No. 27.

480 So far as I know I received reports during the month of September 1938 from all handlers, showing the total amount of milk handled out of the marketing area as well as in the marketing area. I required handlers to furnish that information for September milk. The manner of reporting milk for the months of October and November was not changed. There was a change in the type of report form on December first, but there was no change in the requirements so far as the use of the milk and receipts were concerned.

I do not have a separate list of the approved plants of the various handlers who signed the marketing agreements. On September first I had a list of all the approved plants in the area, and I still have that list. Since September first there have been some withdrawals, but I do not know how many. We get a list of withdrawals every month from the health authorities. I don't remember who withdrew plants. I have no records prior to September first.

In administering Order No. 27 I have received reports from substantially all handlers in the marketing area. The handler himself computes his net pool obligation on the report form and it is verified by our accountants. In verifying, we compute the handler's net pool obligation by checking his figures and seeing whether or not they are right. If we find that he has made a mistake we take our figures so that the amount ultimately is based on the computation that we make. In making that computation in the case of dealers who sell milk in other marketing areas we use the figures concerning the milk sold outside in arriving at the net pool obligation as required by the terms of the order. Assuming that a handler reports 1,000 pounds of milk, all of which is fluid, and 13% goes to New 481 Jersey and 87% to New York City, such handler would be obliged to account to the market administrator at the Class I price for 87% of the milk. The handler would account to its producers for the other 13% at whatever price they agreed on with their producer.

As market administrator I have mailed out a pamphlet identical with defendants' Exhibit No. 9 for identification, a pamphlet issued by the Department of Agriculture, Dairy Section, bearing the words, "Market Administrator, Metropolitan Marketing Area, 95 Madison Avenue, New York." It was published by the Dairy Section and was mailed from our office. (Defendants' Exhibit No. 9 for Identification was offered and received in evidence.)

Q. I call your attention to a statement on page 14 of that pamphlet which states, "Handlers are required to pay the uniform pool or blended price calculated by the market administrator to all producers delivering milk during any one month, unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class I milk outside the marketing area; in such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to the producer for that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which the minimum prices are applicable"—that is, in our case of this "X Company" where 87% of the milk was used in the metropolitan area he would pay the uniform price; is that the way you construe the order and administer it?

A. That is right.

Q. Then I call your attention to the remainder of the statement: "For the remainder of that producer's milk the handler may pay such price as he sees fit, but is required to furnish the producer with a statement of the percentage of the producer's milk paid for 482 at the uniform price"—is that the way you administered the order; that is, that you allow the dealer to pay such price as he sees fit, but he must tell the producer how much of his milk was under the order and how much he paid for as he sees fit; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the manner in which you administer that order; is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Well, let us put the rest of it; I will re-read it: "Handlers are required to pay the uniform pool or blended price calculated by the market administrator to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class 1 milk outside the marketing area. In such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer for that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable." I now ask you if as market administrator you have required cooperative handlers to pay to producers delivering to such cooperative handlers the uniform price as to the portion of their milk which was sold within the marketing area?

A. No; and the Order itself does not require it.

Q. And have you required proprietary handlers to pay their producers this full uniform price as to the quantities of milk bought by those handlers and sold within the marketing area?

A. We have attempted to do so.

For the month of September, I billed the Jetter Dairy Company for whatever sum was due to the producer settlement fund. The Jetter Dairy Company paid the amount of its obligation. We billed them for the difference between their utilization value and the average utilization value for the entire market. The Jetter Dairy 483 Company was billed at the base rate fixed in the Order for their Class I milk and Class II milk, credited with the uniform price required to be paid to producers, and requested to pay the difference to the Market Administrator. The endorsement on the back of defendants' Exhibit No. 10 for Identification, which is a photostatic copy of a check issued by the Jetter Dairy Company, is our endorsement. (Defendants' Exhibit No. 10 for Identification was then received in evidence.)

Q. Mr. Harmon, the reports of these quantities of milk sold out of the market give the names of the markets in which the milk was sold, other than the metropolitan area, and the amount sold in each market?

A. They do.

Q. And you have those reports filed by the Dairymen's League showing the total amount of milk reported, classifying the milk in other markets?

A. No; not as to—you mean the total for all markets?

Q. I mean reports they filed showing the amounts of milk in each class sold in each market including the marketing area.

A. No.

I am not familiar with Exhibit No. 11 for identification. (Defendants' Exhibits 11 and 12 for identification purporting to be a statement of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, dated October 25, 1938, signed Fred H. Sexauer, President, were received in evidence.)

I don't know whether the figure stated in Exhibit 11 as the amount of milk handled by the League in the Marketing Area conforms to the amount stated in Exhibit 11 for the month of September 1938. I have my figures here.

484 I have a statement here of the total amount of milk reported by the Dairymen's League as having been used in Class I in the Marketing Area in the month of September 1938. (Mr. Schoeneck objected to the use of the document unless it was offered in evidence. The entire sheets showing amount of Class I fluid milk reported by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association as having been used in Class I in the Marketing Area during the month of September 1938, was received in evidence and marked defendants' Exhibit No. 13.)

I supervised the preparation of the figures contained in Exhibit 13, which were compared with the original reports filed with me by the Dairymen's League.

The reports as to the markets which I received only covered New York approved plants. I have reports from all of Dairymen's League Cooperative approved plants. I understand that Dairymen's League Cooperative Association own quite a lot of other plants that are not approved for New York City. I was not able overnight to obtain the list of plants which were withdrawn from New York City approval from and after September 1, 1938, but I will be glad to get those just as quickly as possible and submit them to you.

I have no information in my report which would explain the discrepancy or difference in the figures in Exhibit No. 11 which is a statement of the Dairymen's League, and which statement in Exhibit 11 states that milk used in II-A fluid cream, in the Marketing Area, aggregated 21,556,562 pounds, and the figures in my statement, Exhibit 13, which shows that the Dairymen's League reported in II-A fluid cream, 20,681,381 pounds.

485 I have no reports in my possession from the Dairymen's League showing the disposition of the nine million pounds of Class II-A milk, the difference between the figures in Exhibit 11, which shows 4,806,923 pounds unpriced Class II-A and the figures in Exhibit 13 which shows 13 million odd pounds of fluid cream sold outside the Marketing Area. The only answer that I could have there is that a lot of their plants, or at least I understand that a lot of their plants are not New York approved. I cannot answer where I got this information because there are so many sources of information, but I have heard it all over the milk shed for the last ten years. I have been in the milk shed ten years, more or less.

As to Exhibit 13, the second item which is Class I unpriced milk for September, 11,594,755 pounds, we should have, and I think we have, market reports showing a statement of the market in which the unpriced milk was sold by the Dairymen's League.

(The witness was asked to furnish a statement of the market in which the unpriced milk was sold by the Dairymen's League, but there was objection to the question on the ground that it called for confidential information and the ruling thereon was reserved.)

WALTER KOHN, called as a witness in behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I am an attorney and counselor at law, and have been admitted to practice in New York State since 1903. I have a law office in the City of New York, and represent one or more handlers of milk who come within the provisions of Order No. 27.

I am acquainted with Mr. Erskine Harmon, the Administrator of that Order, and have seen him at his offices in New York City.

486 On November 15, 1938, I went to Mr. Harmon's office in New York City, and had a conversation with him. In the conversation with Mr. Harmon, I told him that one of the concerns I represented wanted to test out the question of the legality of Order No. 27 and he stated that it would have to be taken up with his counsel; that his counsel was not in New York at the time, but as soon as he returned to New York, he would call me and an appointment could be arranged with him.

Subsequent to that conversation, I had a conversation with Mr. Mather who sits at the counsel table for the Government. He called me on the phone and told me he could see me the following day, that is November 17, 1938, at his office. I went to Mr. Mather's office on that day. Mr. Mather's office was one of the offices of the Administrator, but was diagonally opposite Mr. Harmon's office. The offices of the Administrator are at 95 Madison Avenue, New York City. I had with me Mr. Lieberman and a Mr. Blum, and Mr. Treat was there. Mr. Blum, whose first name was Joseph, was connected with the handler known as Cooperdale, which is a fairly large wholesale distributor in Brooklyn. All these men with me were connected with Cooperdale which is a proprietory handler.

I saw the same Mr. Treat there that is sitting in the court room here, but I do not know his first name. At the meeting, I was told that he was Secretary to the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency, and he was introduced to me in that capacity. I would rather not testify to the conversation because when I came in, I had met Mr. Mather for the first time, and I told him that I wasn't coming down there to get any admission from him, and that anything that was said between us would be without prejudice to either, and would not be used by either one of us against the other. Mr. Mather stated that that was perfectly satisfactory, and under these circumstances 487 I feel that I am not at liberty to state the conversation. I did not ask my clients if they objected to me disclosing what was said. I do not know whether they would object, or not. There was nothing said between Mr. Mather and myself about disclosing the conversation in anybody else's law suit.

I have not asked Mr. Mather today if he would consent that I might testify as to what was said at that time, but I told him today that I intended, if asked, to make that statement as to the conversation that we had had.

(When the witness was asked as to what Mr. Mather replied to that, there was an objection as to the relevancy of this line of evidence. The court ruled that it would hear the evidence and reserve decision on the relevancy.)

This was the conversation. I said, "Mr. Mather, I represent these gentlemen, the Cooperdale, and we would like to test out the question—I would like to test it out as they did in Boston. I have my petition ready for filing with the Secretary of Agriculture, and following the precedent set down in Boston, I would like to know if you will begin the action, because I can't begin the action until after there is a hearing on my petition." He replied that the Department of Justice took care of that, "but I can tell you now that that won't be for quite some time." Then Mr. Treat said, "It won't take very long you will get no milk." I said, "Well, Mr. Mather, that was one of the things that I wanted to speak to you about because we received word from the Cooperative that was supplying us with milk that if we tested out this question or went to court, they would stop giving us milk." Mr. Treat said, "That's right." Then I said, "Mr. Mather, would you stand by and permit a thing like this to be done, merely because we wanted to test out the question to see whether we had—whether legally it was good, or not." He said, "Not only would I stand by, but I would stand up and cheer." Mr. Mather said that, and that is practically all that was said at that 488 conversation. We were there for about half an hour, and there was quite a lot of conversation, but I am only giving you the substance of it. Yes, there was a great deal that was spoken on the subject of the ability of my client to pay, or discrimination under the Order.

(At this point objection was made to the witness stating what was said on that subject, and the court ordered the evidence received and reserved ruling on the objection.)

We said that we understood that the Dairymen's League had been paying the producers right around our own producers approximately 30 cents less than we were compelled to pay, and that eventually it would force us out of business, that the Dairymen's League had a tremendous advantage. They stated they had a perfect right to do that because the payment was made to the Cooperative, and if the Dairymen's League could arrange that the Market Administrator had nothing to do with that particular phase of the situation. We asked for permission to consult further, that is myself and the two clients. We went out, discussed the matter, and came back and told Mr. Mather that we would pay the Market Administrator for that month. I said to Mr. Mather that I would like to do what had been done up in Boston, to pay the amount of the difference that the Market Administrator wanted, to pay that into court, or to pay it to the Market Administrator in escrow. Mr. Mather said that they would allow no escrow, and that there was no action that could be brought for quite a time and that it couldn't be paid in court, and that it would have to be paid to the Market Administrator. When I came back, I said that we would pay it, but would pay it under a written protest, and we served a written protest with the Chairman.

Mr. Treat said something about having one hundred Minute Men up there that could go around, and that would dry up the milk of anybody that was going to interfere with the Order.

(The witness was asked if he believed Mr. Treat had one 488 hundred Men up there, and the court sustained an objection.
The witness was also asked what prompted him to make the payment under protest that day, and the court sustained an objection to that question.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WALLACH:

I represent a number of milk handlers in the Metropolitan Area. But so far as this Order No. 27 and 126, I represent only Cooperdale. Mr. Blum asked me to go to see Mr. Harmon or his representative. I was subpoenaed here today, and received a subpoena fee. I received $15.50. I have testified to my conversation with Mr. Mather. It is true. I told Mr. Pratt before he subpoenaed me what I was going to say here today. I may say I spoke to Mr. Mather and told Mr. Mather that I didn't want to testify and Mr. Mather told me that I might say it. Before I came here, I had an agreement with Mr. Mather that anything we said was to be a secret. I told you just what was said. I said, "Let us be gentlemen, let us talk openly, as anything you say will be without prejudice, anything that I say will be without prejudice, and neither of us will use anything that is said against the other." And I said, "Do you want to put that in writing?" And he said, "No, I will take your word." I did not consider that to mean that the agreement we had only applied to a court room. I thought it would apply as broad as the language in which it was couched. Mr. Pratt wrote and asked me whether I would wire him if I would come to court, and I wrote him back and told him that I couldn't because of this stipulation that we had made. I told Mr. Pratt here in the court room what I said to Mr. Mather, and what Mr. Mather said to me. I told him that before I testified.

Q. Now, did you violate that confidence or didn't you?

A. I thought I was doing just what was right. When I came into the court room, I walked over to Mr. Mather and told him that I would like to have a word with him. He said he was busy then, and would see me later.

490 I waited until he got through, and then I spoke to him.

I don't think I would like to see the order declared unconstitutional. I remember when price-fixing was in effect. At that time, I wanted to see price-fixing declared unconstitutional. When it wasn't declared unconstitutional, I always worked toward having the law repealed. I wouldn't go so far as saying that I don't like any law that regulates the milk industry.

At the outset, and after I had been in to see Mr. Harmon, I was opposed to the Order, and I knew that Mr. Pratt was litigating up here, and I wrote Mr. Pratt asking for a copy of this complaint and received it from him. I would like to see this Order worked out. Mr. Pratt had learned that I had a conversation with Mr. Mather on November 17, because I wrote it to him.

Q. And did you tell him the substance of the conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, then, you did violate the confidence that you had with Mr. Mather right after you spoke with him?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you just said yes, didn't you, Mr. Kohn? Now you just said after you spoke to Mr. Mather you communicated that fact to Mr. Pratt, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct. Here in the court room.

Q. Now, did you tell Mr. Pratt the substance of that conversation?

A. I did.

Q. Then you did violate that confidence that you had with Mr. Mather about anything that was said on that day, is that correct?

A. I still don't think I violated any confidence, because I wasn't used——

I have the petition with me that I prepared which I spoke about in my conversation with Mr. Mather, and will show it to you.

I said that I wrote a letter to Mr. Pratt after I had a conversation with Mr. Mather. I have the letter here, and can refresh my recollection from it. I would not like to see this Order declared unconstitutional at this time, but when I wrote this letter to 491 Mr. Pratt on November 19, I wanted to see it declared unconstitutional. (There was an objection to the witness, stating why he had changed his mind, and the objection was overruled.

Q. What caused you to change your mind between November 19 and today, Mr. Kohn?

A. My clients have always been law-abiding people and they like to see if this law is constitutional and will be carried out and can—and the thing can be made effective. They would have no objection to it being tried out.

My clients were law abiding on November 19, as well as now, and went to try to get permission to have the question ruled upon, but the consequences were too serious for them.

As a lawyer who has been in the practice for thirty-five odd years, I believed that I needed permission from Mr. Mather or Mr. Harmon to test out this Order, and in the way in which the thing is worked out, I still believe that. Under the Order we filed our petition for a review. We could not begin an action until there had been a hearing, and a decision on that petition, except on the possible theory that the delay in having the hearing had been dragged out so long as to preclude us from having the hearing. Having read very carefully the entire Boston case, I had hoped that the Market Administrator could be induced to begin the same kind of an action as had been brought in Boston and that in that action the matter could be determined.

I brought up with Mr. Mather the matter of a petition before the Secretary, and the reason for that was to prevent any penalties from being enforced, pending the failure to make the payment. I did not believe at that time that Mr. Mather or Mr. Harmon could have held up the hearing before the Secretary of Agriculture as long as they pleased, but we had to make the payment of the 25th, and if we didn't make the payment there would be penalties, so I filed a petition and hoped that they would begin the action immediately. I filed the petition in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture, and also in the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture of New York, and also with Mr. Harmon.

492 I did not have a conversation with Mr. Harmon on the same day I did with Mr. Mather. I talked with Mr. Harmon two days before that.

In the conversation with Mr. Harmon I told him that my people, Cooperdale, could not continue to make the payments because the Dairymen's League was paying approximately 30 cents. Present at that conversation were Mr. Harmon, Mr. Blum, Mr. Lieberman and myself. Mr. Mather was not present. When I wrote to Mr. Pratt on November 19 and stated that I had a long conversation with the Market Administrator here in New York and with his attorney, Mr. Mather, the statement was true because I had a conversation with each one. In the letter which I wrote to Mr. Pratt, I stated that "while this conversation was going on, a representative of the Bargaining Agency went to the Cooperative, which had been supplying milk, told him of the proceedings w[illegible]re taking." I meant that that was a separate conversation bet[illegible] Mr. Mather and myself on one occasion and Mr. Harmon and myself on another. I took it that the various conversations we had constituted really a conference because it had been carried on over a period of at least two days. I spoke to other people down there, and included these other conversations as part of this general conference.

(Plaintiff moved to exclude the evidence of the witness pertaining to his conversations with Mr. Mather as being irrelevant. The court denied the motion.)

Cross-examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

I read the record of the Boston milk litigation on appeal. I did not follow the case as it went along—only after the decision. I followed it at least that close. From what I read in the record, I reached the conclusion that in Boston the handlers were paying into court the difference between the uniform price and the pool obligation.

When the interests of my clients came to my attention, I felt it would be better to have the money paid in the court, rather 493 than to have it paid over to the Market Administrator. The reason for that was because if I paid it into court I would be able to recover it back if the law was declared unconstitutional. The petition was the first step in order to avoid penalties. I made that petition because of the principle in the law that allowed any person who was dissatisfied with the Order to appeal to the Secretary for a review and a modification of the Order.

I was familiar with the provisions of the Marketing Act which provided that a dissatisfied handler could appeal to the Secretary of Agriculture. (The witness was asked if there was a remedy provided in the Act for anybody who felt aggrieved. There was an objection to the question, but the court overruled the objection.)

There was not entirely a remedy. It only covered one phase of it. The Act left uncovered the phase that if we paid the money to the Administrator and then the law was declared unconstitutional, we might face a situation in which, it spite of the fact that the law was unconstitutional, we couldn't get it back.

I said that my clients would like to see how this Order might work out. (Over objection, the witness was permitted to testify that he would like to see the order tried out now.)

This petition was filed about the 20th day of November, and since that time my clients have continued business and have been doing business under the Orders and regulations of the Department, that is, under Order 27 and under Order 126. My clients have instructed me that at this particular time they have no interest in the prosecution of this petition or any form of litigation which tests either the constitutionality of the Act, or the validity of the Order, but that is without giving up any of their rights. I would like to have it understood because the payments which have been made were under the same protests. They stand on their legal rights.

There was nothing in the Act that said anything about escrow. I was still trying to find some method by which I could make it 494 easier for my client to get his money back in the event the law was held unconstitutional, and still show that my client wanted to do the right thing.

When I read the reports I reached the conclusion that, generally speaking, the New York Order and the Boston Order were very much alike. I don't think the Boston Order provided that payments could be made into court or into escrow. "By Boston Order," I mean the Secretary of Agriculture's Order.

I don't know anything about the size of the plant at Cooperdale, or the amount of milk handled. It is set forth in the petition. I don't know whether during this period the Dairymen's League took some of our milk to help us out of an undue surplus condition.

Cross examination by Mr. MATHER:

On the fifteenth, I told Mr. Harmon that I had a plant for testing the Order, and he said that he preferred that I talk with his attorneys from Washington. On the day in question, you called me and said you were the attorney from Washington.

I told you I had a plan for testing the constitutionality and you invited me to come down. Mr. Blum and Mr. Lieberman came with me to the office of the Market Administrator. Mr. Treat was already there. Mr. Blum and Mr. Lieberman may have conversed with Mr. Treat before I came in and introduced myself, but I didn't. I don't recall you specifically inviting Mr. Treat to sit in the conference.

We all went into the office together, and I told you I had my check, but didn't want to pay it, and I said I wondered if suit might not be brought along the same lines as the Boston suit, and the money paid in escrow in court. You told me you had no authority to consent to such an agreement, but that the matter would have to be referred to the Department of Justice. We conversed further about the constitutionality of the Act and Order and the litigation in 495 Boston, and about the provisions of the Order and the milk supply of Cooperdale Dairy.

I told you I had gotten word from our Cooperative that if we tried to test the question that the milk would be dried up, and we wouldn't get any milk. You said that you would stand up and cheer. I don't remember you telling me that, in your opinion as an attorney, if a milk producer didn't desire to take his milk to a dealer because a dealer was not complying with the Order, that he had a perfect right to take his milk to any dealer he wanted to.

I recall in substance that after considerable discussion I turned to you and said that we could probably settle this matter, and you said there was nothing you could do about it. You left the office and Mr. Lieberman, Mr. Treat, and myself stayed in there and talked, and when you returned to the office I stated that we had agreed to pay under the same protest that had been filed the month before.

Mr. Lieberman never informed me of any other conversations that you two had had concerning the Order and the steps that it would be necessary for Mr. Lieberman's various corporations to take in order to comply with the Order.

Cross-examination by Mr. Cook:

I went to the administrator's office on the 15th of November, and talked with Mr. Harmon. I did not notify him that my company would not comply with the provisions of the Order. The conversation was whether we couldn't arrange to deposit the differential with him in some way. That was on the 17th. He advised me that he couldn't pass on that, and that the matter would have to be passed on by counsel, by Mr. Mather, and possibly another. I never said that we were not going to pay into the fund for the month of November. I said that we were going to pay, but that we would like to pay in some way to protect our interests.

496 Cooperdale got its supply of milk from Lafayette Co-operative, located at Lafayette-Onativia. It was between the 15th and 17th that we got word from the Co-operative that unless we paid into the fund they would withhold the milk. The word came by telegram from Lafayette Co-operative, and signed by an officer of the Corporation. In substance, the telegram stated that if we proceeded to test the Order or didn't live up to the Order that they would stop delivering milk to us. I don't know how they knew we were contemplating testing the Order. We had no communication with Lafayette at all. We were not in default at the time and have never been. We had paid in September and October.

The milk wasn't withheld. We paid in December, too. No milk had been withheld.

In my conversation with Mr. Treat he said that the one hundred Minute Men would see that we didn't get any milk if we didn't live up to the Order. He didn't say how or in what manner they would see to it that we didn't get any milk.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

The Cooperdale Milk Company has its own milk receiving plant, and owns the stock of the Onativia plant where this milk comes from.

(At this point counsel introduced in evidence the correspondence between Mr. Kohn and himself, consisting of four letters which were marked defendants' Exhibits 14–A to 14–D, inclusive. When the witness was asked if a statement which he had detailed concerning drying up the milk of the Cooperdale Milk Company had any connection with his payment into the pool, an objection was sustained.)

497 AARON H. RUBENFELD, called as a witness in behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live in New Rochelle, New York, and have been engaged in the milk business since 1920. I am connected with and am the largest stockholder in the following named proprietary milk dealer and handler corporations: Dellwood Dairy Company, Slate Hill Milk and Cream Co., Middletown Milk & Cream Company, and Public Farms Products, Inc. Some of these companies are processing companies.

The Dellwood Company has a receiving plant at Fort Edward, N. Y., and at Kyserike, N. Y. The Middletown Milk & Cream Company has one plant at Slate Hill, N. Y. The Slate Hill Milk & Cream Co. has one plant at Slate Hill, N. Y. The Public Farms Company has no plant but is engaged in business in New York City as a wholesale distributor of milk.

The Dellwood Company sells some milk at wholesale but doesn't operate any wholesale routes. It operates retail routes in New York City and sells some wholesale milk off its retail routes. It has over 100 retail routes. I don't know whether or not the Dellwood Company is one of the largest companies in New York outside of Borden and Sheffield but perhaps it is one of the five largest retailers.

I signed an affidavit in this particular case against Jetter Dairy Company and I assume that I am familiar with the milk business in New York City but being familiar with the milk business in New York City doesn't mean that I have to know what other businesses are. I don't have the slightest idea about how many retail routes the Evans Dairy Company has. I know nothing about anybody else's business except my own.

Public Farms Products has seven wholesale routes and sells in the County of Bronx, New York City. Middletown and Slate 498 Hill Cream Company operate and sell their milk in New Jersey and are approved for that State.

In paying our patrons of these three operating companies which have three milk receiving stations we do not pay the same price or the same base price to all patrons of those three companies. For instance, in the Slate Hill Company case we pay a different base price than we do at Fort Edward. Approximately all of the milk at the Fort Edward plant is sold in the marketing area as defined by the order and we pay substantially the uniform price.

Middletown Milk & Cream Company sells approximately 40% of its milk in the marketing area and 60% outside of the marketing area. For the milk sold in the marketing area we have paid pursuant to Order No. 27. For milk sold outside of the marketing area we negotiated with producers and paid accordingly. The 60% referred to as outside was sold in New Jersey. There is no marketing order in New Jersey.

The amount we pay for milk in this marketing area consists of two payments, one to our producers and one to the pool, if our pool obligation is larger than the uniform price. As to the other 60% of our milk which is sold in New Jersey we pay only once, the amount we pay the producers.

In paying off at the Middletown plant in September, October, and November, 1938, we paid one blended price, that is, a price arrived at by blending the uniform price for 40% with the negotiated price for the other 60%. In September the blended price was $2.15 for milk testing 3.5 butterfat. Not all of that milk was used in Class I. I couldn't tell you without consulting our records whether, assuming that we paid for it at the prices fixed by Order No. 27, our price would have been more than $2.15.

We negotiated a flat price regardless of whether it was used as Class I or not for milk which went from the Middletown plant 499 to New Jersey. After we knew the price that we had to pay into the pool we took that into consideration and arrived at a flat price for all the milk.

We negotiated this flat price of $2.15 with the committee of our producers. The negotiations were had at Slate Hill. Not all the milk which went to New Jersey was shipped in fluid form but some of it was cream.

I am familiar with the milk control price fixed by the State of New Jersey for fluid milk sold there. The price is not set at the 200-mile zone on the same basis as the order price but is set f. o. b. plant. That plant can be in the city. There are no freight differentials set in connection with New Jersey prices. I know of plants where milk is delivered direct to the city by producers in Jersey and the price at the plant in New Jersey is $2.76 per cwt. for milk testing 3.5. There are no freight differentials. There are no plants located in New Jersey, which are as much as 150 miles from the city. Middletown is located about 90 miles from Newark but we are not transporting any milk in tank trucks from Middletown.

In New Jersey we sell all of our milk to other handlers and we sell it f. o. b. our plant at Middletown. We allow the handler the cost of transportation for such milk and the cost of such transportation runs anywhere from ¾ to 1 cent a quart. Practically none of our milk is sold in cans; it is sold in bottles. It is bottled at Slate Hill and Middletown. The milk we sell is processed. The bulk of this milk goes to various localities in the State of New Jersey, such as Newark, Jersey City, Hackensack. Hackensack is about 70 miles from Middletown and Jersey City is about 80 miles therefrom.

I am not familiar with the reports made by our company to the Administrator. I think we shipped some milk and I know we shipped some cream from Fort Edward to New Jersey during September, October and November.

500 I assume that paper you show me is the statement delivered by the Dellwood Dairy Company to its patrons when payment was made for August milk in September 1938, which purports to show the amount of milk handled in various markets, for August. I also assume that the statement dated October 24 which you have shown me is the statement that was issued by the Dellwood Dairy Company showing the utilization of milk at the Fort Edward plant in September 1938.

We didn't make any changes in the manner of handling our milk ... these various milk receiving stations commencing September 1, 1938. Our operation as far as marketing milk is concerned has been going on for many years.

The milk which was receiv[illegible] at Fort Edward in August was marketed in New York; some of it up-State and I think some of it outside of the State. I think some of it was marketed in Connecticut and in New Jersey. I think there was some milk—some cream sold in Connecticut during the month of September and in New Jersey. Without consulting my records I could not say how many pounds of milk were sold up-State and out of the State in all since 1938 from the Dellwood plant at Fort Edward.

It has been the custom of the Dellwood Dairy Company for a period dating back prior to August 1938, to issue a statement every month. When producers are paid for milk, a statement goes along with the check. (An objection was made to this testimony on the ground of irrelevancy but it was overruled.)

I am President of the Dellwood Dairy Company. We have no General Manager. I think these statements were accurate statements showing the utilization of milk by the Dellwood Dairy Company. I didn't make them myself but the office made them. I have seen the statements occasionally. The statements issued prior to September 1

1938, were sent to producers with their checks to show the 501 amount of milk sold in different markets and the amount of milk manufactured into by-products. The price paid was a competitive price. Beginning with September 1, 1938, the statements are prepared from the records of the company in accordance with the utilization of the milk in the different classes under Order No. 27.

We have some of the reports that are sent out each month. I don't think that we give out statements to all producers of other companies except Dellwood. I think we have statements beginning with September 1, milk delivered beginning September 1, payments made on October 25th. I don't know exactly what the report will show.

In our transaction since September 1, I think we have shipped a small amount of milk from Fort Edward to Slate Hill and that milk was then re-shipped to New Jersey. We made no claim to the Market Administrator for a 23-cent handling allowance on that milk. We shipped milk from Kyserike to Slate Hill for separation into cream and were allowed 23 cents by the Administrator for the trucking for the months of September and October but not for the months of November and December. We made no claim during the month of November because the provisions of Order 27 do not permit that during November and December.

I think that in August, September, and October 1938, we bought milk from the Dairymen's League. This milk was bought for use in the New York market and we received the milk from various plants. We had no stated contract as to the amount of milk we purchased from the Dairymen's League.

We paid the Dairymen's League for Class I milk purchased in September, the price based on Order No. 27 plus the handling and delivery charges and plus butter fat. I don't remember what we paid in September, but for November and December we paid $3.10 cwt. delivered at Yonkers. The butter fat for that milk varied from 3.8 to 4%. We paid on butter fat content between 3.8 and 4.

I do not inspect the detailed statements that come in from the Dairymen's League. I think we can produce the statements 502 received from the Dairymen's League for milk for the months of September, October, and November and will have them sent up.

I don't know how much milk we were buying each day from the Dairymen's League in August. In September it varied from day to day. We would get one tank of milk one day with approximately 200 40-quart cans in a tank and the next day we may order two tanks; the third day we may not want any. Dellwood Dairy is the only one of our companies which buys from Dairymen's League and the milk so purchased is delivered to us at Yonkers and New York City. Our milk from Fort Edward also goes to Yonkers.

Since September 1 we did not increase our sales in wholesale delivered trade in New York City. Our business decreased. We lost business to other companies since September 1st. I do not know any particular company that we lost to.

I do not remember that I signed any affidavit in which I accused anyone in particular of starting chiseling. I did sign an affidavit in the office of Mr. Schilz. Mr. Schilz asked me to come down and make the affidavit if I had anything to state. I met him at the office of the Administrator at 95 Madison Avenue. He asked me to come down and to talk with him. I met Mr. Schilz at the Administrator's office a day or two before I made the affidavit. We had a conference about some other matters pertaining to the milk industry.

Mr. Sklar is the attorney for the Dellwood Dairy Company (objection was made to the question calling for this information on the ground of irrelevancy but the same was overruled). He is also attorney for the other companies of which I am the principal stockholder. I am the President of these other companies also. Our companies are managed by different department heads.

Dellwood Dairy Company is a member of the Distributors Bargaining Agency. There are about twenty members altogether but I do not know all of them. As a matter of fact, the Borden subsidiaries and National Dairy subsidiaries are not members.
503 Sheffield Farms Co. is a member and the Borden Farm Products Company is a member. Laudington Milk Company is a member but I don't know where it buys its supplies. Gold Medal Farms is a member and was a member when we first organized under the Rogers-Allen law, resigned, and then became a member again. I don't know whether they became members the second time after a meeting of the producers was called up North.

It is my experience in the milk business that certain periods of the year provide more milk than other periods. There is a period during the year known as the flush period when there is a great surplus of milk. May and June are the two greatest production months. July is usually not a short month. July production depends a great deal on weather conditions. Some years it is more than enough and other years production shrinks rapidly and may be just enough to get around.

There is some shrinkage in August. I would say that November and December are the two shortest months of the year. August is not quite as short as November and December. I think the production in August is as much as the production in October or approximately so. Production in August 1938 was about normal, probably a little bit above normal. I don't think there was any great deal of difference in August and September 1938, but my recollection is that September was slightly above August. I don't remember offhand whether the production in October was higher than in August. I don't know whether the milk we shipped from the Dellwood Dairy Company to the Middletown plant was sold in fluid form or not. Dellwood Dairy sold it to the Slate Hill Milk & Cream Co. and I don't think the milk went out in fluid form. When we ship milk from Fort Edward to Slate Hill it is shipped by glass-lined tank ucks. These tank trucks held from 150 40-qt. cans to 350 40-qt.

ans. It is customary to ship four trucks to avoid shifting the load.
When the milk arrives at Slate Hill from Fort Edward we empty it into a storage tank. We have four storage tanks and they 04 have a capacity of 3,000 gallons or 300 40-qt. cans. Those tanks are thermos-type stainless steel tanks and they are of a ype which hold the milk at the temperature at which it is received the tank. The milk which is chilled down to 33 or 35 degrees an be kept for several days but we have never practiced holding that long.

We were received approximately 500 40-qt. cans daily from proucers who delivered to the Slate Hill plant in September 1938.
We have storage facilities to carry 700 additional cans of milk daily that plant. I don't actually operate the plant myself and am not ntirely familiar with the manner of operation. There are no health estrictions which prevent the mingling of milk from Fort Edward ith milk from Slate Hill. I don't know what was our custom in eptember when we were processing and bottling milk for the New ersey fluid market, to differentiate between the Fort Edward milk nd Slate Hill milk.

We have a plant manager who has charge of directing when the ipments of milk shall be made each day. He executes the orders they come from the customers. It is not our custom to call the reamery at Slate Hill, N. Y., on the telephone every day. I call em at times. I do not call them to determine the amount of milk storage there from Fort Edward and other places. I call them to nd out things pertaining to business in general. I do not do it any specific intervals.

I make inquiry as to the amount of milk on hand and the amount f milk which customers are ordering to be shipped out of Slate Hill.
ur plant manager is not under instructions to call me at different mes. I don't necessarily find out when it is necessary to ship milk rom Fort Edward to Slate Hill. Others in the corporation handle me of these mattters. I don't regularly have anything to do with e shifting of milk supplies but when I do find out that milk should e sent from Fort Edward down to Middletown or Slate Hill I call p and find out or the manager calls me and we send supplies from Fort Edward or from some other source.

05 I call Fort Edwards at times to find out how much milk there is there, but the amount of milk that was shipped from ort Edward to Slate Hill during the months of September and ctober was insignificant.

We ship from Middletown to Slate Hill and vice versa. We manu-acture milk at Slate Hill but we do not manufacture it at Middle-own. During September, October, and November we shipped milk rom Middletown to Slate Hill for manufacturing and some of the ilk shipped from Middletown to Slate Hill was reshipped to New ersey for fluid consumption.

I do not have the figure available and cannot tell you the approximate amount of milk shipped daily during the month of September from Middletown to Slate Hill.

We received approximately 600 cans in September from patrons delivering to Middletown.

We sell Grade A and Grade B milk and Vitamin D ..ade B milk. Approximately 65% of our business in New York City is in the retail trade. It is what we call house-to-house delivery in the industry. In September 1938, we sold our milk at retail to consumers in New York, that is Grade B milk, at 13¾ per quart (there was an objection on the ground of irrelevancy to the witness testifying as to the prices at which he sold the milk at retail but the court overruled the objection). The Grade B milk is the substantial sale.

We sell hundreds of cases of Grade A milk daily. We received 16¾¢ per quart for such milk. (There was an objection on the ground of irrelevancy to the witness stating what price his company received for this milk but the court overruled the objection.)

We do not sell any retail milk at all in New Jersey. All milk sold in New Jersey is sold to other dealers and subdealers.

There is a particular kind of cap which goes on the milk bottled at our plants at Slate Hill for the New Jersey trade. All milk is labeled in accordance with the regulations of different health 506 departments and different municipalities. The caps are made in accordance with regulations. It has a designation of Grade B or Grade A but it varies and the wording of the cap varies.

We purchase some milk from producers in New Jersey. The milk is delivered to Slate Hill. It is bought at Slate Hill.

The plants of the Middletown and Slate Hill Companies are both at Slate Hill. These two plants are about a city block from each other. Middletown is a Grade A plant and Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company is a Grade B plant. The milk shipped from the Middletown plant to the Slate Hill plant is sold to the Slate Hill plant as Grade B milk. That is surplus milk that we have in the Grade A plant and is sold as Grade B milk. The Middletown Company pays its producers for Grade A milk for the amount that is actually sold as Grade A milk. Middletown Milk & Cream Co. pays for the Grade B milk. There is some Grade B milk that is transferred from Middletown Milk & Cream Co. to the Slate Hill Company plant for separating purposes. It is separated and the cream is sent back to the Middletown Company.

You cannot handle Grade A milk or Grade A cream in Grade B plants. Wherefore, it has to become Grade B milk or cream after it is transferred to the Slate Hill plant. It is processed and bottled at the Grade B plant for Middletown and is shipped physically to the customers in New Jersey. All municipalities have regulations against the handling of Grade A and Grade B milk in one plant.

The State of New Jersey Milk Control Board does not fix the prices to be paid to producers for milk bought at a New York plant—I mean bought and delivered to a New York plant. The milk which e purchase from producers residing in New Jersey is subject to rder No. 27 if the milk is sold within the marketing area. If it n't it is not subject.

The milk bought in New Jersey is about 2% of the total milk ceived at the Slate Hill plant. I wouldn't say only 8 or 10 cans day. I think you will find our daily receipts at the Slate Hill plant during September, October, and November in the reports.

07 (At this point a paper dated September 15 was marked Defendants' Exhibit 15 for identification.)

(Defendants' Exhibit 15 for identification entitled "Utilization of ilk at the Dellwood Dairy Company for August 1938" was received evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 15.)

I have an original statement of which copies were delivered to roducers of the Dellwood Dairy Co., and which statement was dated ctober 24, 1938.

(This statement produced by the witness was offered in evidence Exhibit 16. The court received the statement which concerned eptember milk over an objection as to relevancy. The said paper entitled "Statement to producers, Dellwood Dairy Company," ted October 24, 1938—"September milk.")

(A copy of a statement of the Dellwood Dairy Company to its trons dated November 25, 1938, was received in evidence and arked Defendants' Exhibit 17. A copy of a statement of the Dellood Dairy Company to its patrons dated December 23, 1938, was ceived in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 18.)

I have with me copies of the reports which my several companies ndered to the market administrator for purchases of milk in September, October, and November 1938. (The witness produced the pers.)

At this point Yonkers report was marked Defendants' Exhibit 19 r identification; Kyserike report was marked Defendants' Exhibit -A for identification; Fort Edward report was marked Defendants' xhibit 19–B for identification. Exhibits 19, 19–A, and 19–B for entification were received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 19, 19–A, and 19–B over objection of plaintiffs.

8 Three papers were marked, respectively, Defendants' Exhibits 20, 20–A, and 20–B for identification. Thereupon Exhibits 20, -A, and 20–B for identification, over objection of plaintiffs, were ceived in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits number 20 (being for e month of October, other description same as Exhibit 19), number -A (being reports of Dellwood Dairy for the month of October, her description same as Exhibit 19–A), and Exhibit 20–B (being r the month of October, other description same as Exhibit 19–B).

At this point Defendant offered in evidence and the court, over jection of plaintiffs, received in evidence Defendants' Exhibits 21, -A, and 21–B, being reports of the Dellwood Dairy Company to e market administrator covering the month of November 1938.

Two papers were marked Defendants' Exhibits 22 and 22–A, respecvely, for identification. The court then received in evidence, over objection of plaintiffs, Defendants' Exhibits 22 and 22–A for identification as Defendants' Exhibits 22 and 22–A, which purport to be reports of Slate Hill Milk & Cream Co., Inc., for September 1938 to the market administrator.

Two papers were marked Defendants' Exhibits 23 and 23–A. The court, over objection of plaintiffs, received in evidence said Exhibits so marked for identification as Defendants' Exhibits 23 and 23–A which Exhibits purport to be reports of Slate Hill Co. for the month of October.

Two papers were marked Defendants' Exhibits 24 and 24–A for identification. Over objection of plaintiffs, the papers, purporting to be reports of the Slate Hill Company for November 1938, were received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits 24 and 24–A.

Reports of the Middletown Milk & Cream Co., Inc., were marked for identification, September Nos. 25 and 25–A, October Nos. 26 and 26–A, and November Nos. 27 and 27–A. Over objection said reports were received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits 25 and 25–A, 26 and 26–A, 27 and 27–A.

509. Copy of claim of Dellwood, October, was marked Defendants' Exhibit 28 for identification. Copies of claims of Middletown Company, September and October, were marked Defendants' Exhibits 29 and 30 for identification. The copy of the Dellwood Company claim for the month of October 1938, was offered, and over objection of plaintiffs, was received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit No. 28. Exhibits 29 and 30 for identification, being copies of claims of Middletown Company filed with administrator for September and October were, over objection of plaintiffs, received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits 29 and 30.

Copies of statements furnished to producers who delivered milk to the Slate Hill Milk & Cream Co. for the months of September, October and November 1938, were marked Defendants' Exhibits 31, 32 and 33 for identification. Over objection of plaintiffs the papers were received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits 31, 32 and 33.

Similar statements for Middletown, same months, were marked Defendants' Exhibits 34, 35, and 36 for identification. Over objection of plaintiffs, the statements were received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits 34, 35, and 36.

My attention has been called to Exhibit 22–A which is our report for September covering the Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company and which shows total receipts of milk from producers, 1,203,862 pounds. Test 3.707. That was milk we received from producers delivering to our plant.

My attention has been called to the statement of 1,167,773 lbs. of milk received from other plants. I thing that 480,165 pounds of that milk was received from Dairyland Milk Company, Fraser, N. Y., and 687,608 pounds of it was received from Grover Farms, Grover, Pa. The Grover Farms milk and the Dairyland Milk Company milk was approved for New Jersey. We wouldn't handle it unless it was.

510 The Class I unpriced milk, 1,144,803 pounds—is less than the intake from our producers. The base price that we paid for this 1,144,803 pounds of unpriced milk is stated on the reports which go out to the farmers with the checks which I turned over to you. (There was objection to this line of testimony on the ground of irrelevancy but the court overruled the objection.) The price was $2.38 per cwt. for milk testing 3.5 butterfat. That is the price which we paid our producers for milk which we purchased from them. Only a very small fraction of this milk was used in the New York Metropolitan Area. I cannot tell you whether this particular milk was intermingled in the tanks in which we handled our milk at Slate Hill.

I gave no instructions to our foreman in charge of the Slate Hill plant that milk received from Fraser, N. Y., should be separated or sent to New Jersey or to New York or to any particular place.

With reference to the 480,165 pounds of milk reported on Exhibit 22-A as having been purchased from the Dairyland Milk Company of Fraser, N. Y., in September, 1938, the price that we paid Fraser is the price that we negotiated. (There was an objection to this line of testimony but the court overruled the objection.)

We did not report any of that milk as having been used in the marketing area. It was not used in the marketing area.

With reference to the 687,608 pounds of milk from Grover Farms, Pa., we did not report that milk to the administrator. We don't pay to the administrator for milk that we buy from another handler. It is up to the other handler to report to the market administrator. It is easy to determine where that milk was sold. Ninety-nine and a fraction percent of that milk went to New Jersey and only less than one-half of 1 percent went into the marketing area. I do not care to disclose the price we paid for this Grover Farms milk. Come to think of it and with reference to the milk from the Slate Hill plant we are using milk that goes to the marketing area from this particular company only to the extent of a small amount of milk that 511 is used for the manufacture of chocolate drink. That is the only milk used for the marketing area. There is no milk as fluid going into the marketing area from this particular company.

I didn't say that we were manufacturing all the milk purchased from our producers. Milk coming in from producers is received in the early morning hours. Milk coming from far away is received at a different time of the day. Milk that was received in the morning from producers is cooled by passing it through a cooler. It is not necessarily piped into a storage tank and it doesn't necessarily go through a cooler. We can let such milk go immediately to the pasteurizer in our plant and then cool it and bottle it. We hold all milk sometimes. We don't ship any fluid milk from this plant (Slate Hill) to New York City. We do not ship any fluid milk into the marketing area at all except just small amounts for chocolate drink.

In this report for September I reported the milk purchased from producers as having been sold outside the marketing area or practically all of it. The report itself shows.

Since adjournment of court last evening I talked to one of my associates and am informed, with reference to the milk received at Slate Hill from producers and other dealers, that the operation varied from day to day. Sometimes the milk is intermingled and other times it is kept separate. The source from which the milk comes does not enter into it except as to the freshness of it. If we had milk held over in a tank for 36 hours we would not mix fresh milk with it. You can still mix it and cool it.

My attention has been called to Exhibit 28, Schedule A, a statement that between Oct. 21 and Oct. 31, 1938, certain milk, 104,550 lbs., was shipped to Goshen, N. Y. To the best of my knowledge we made claim for 23¢ "receiving allowance" on that milk amounting to $240.47 and made claim for trucking that milk fifty miles, $20.93. To the best of my knowledge these claims were allowed and we received payment for them. The milk referred in this statement was classified as No. III-D and it was milk sold to the operator of the milk-receiving station to which it was shipped. This milk was used in the manufacture of cream cheese. It was not sold in the marketing area. (It was conceded that Goshen, N. Y., was not in the marketing area.)

We received a payment of approximately 34¢ in plant-receiv-512 ing charges and in freight on such milk.

I do not have the schedule prices announced by the administrator for III-D milk price for October. The plant to which that milk was shipped to the best of my knowledge is not approved by the New York City Health Department.

On Exhibit 28, there is a claim made for milk shipped to the Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company, Slate Hill, New York, October 1 to October 31, 1938, on the total of 522,325 pounds of milk. The claim amounts to $1,201.75. To the best of my knowledge, we received payment for that amount, and we received a payment of $558.89 for freight for a distance of 42 miles on that milk. That milk came from Kyserike, New York. The freight rate from Kyserike to Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company, Middletown, is based in accordance with the order. There are no railroad facilities from Kyserike to Slate Hill, it has to be trucked, and what we charged was for the actual mileage between the two points based on the order. I do not know the actual cost of transportation between those two points.

For the month of October, I think the McBride Trucking Company of Goshen drew that milk for us. I have never acquainted myself with the freight rate between Kyserike and Middletown, New York.

If you will refer to the reports filed with the market administrator, you will find the total intake at the Kyserike plant. I don't know to Goshen, some to Slate Hill for separating, from which cream was shipped to the ice-cream manufacturers, and also for powdered cream, and part of it was probably shipped in fluid form. I don't know offhand how much milk we took in there during the month. Referring to Exhibit 28 and the milk we purchased at the Kyserike plant in Class III, we did get 23 cents a cwt. I don't know whether it came back from the same money we paid in, or from some other fund. (There was objection to this testimony on the ground that it is irrelevant and that the order speaks for itself, but the court overruled the objection.)

513 Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company and Middletown Milk & Cream Company are two distinct operations. 99½% of the milk from Slate Hill is shipped out of the marketing area in fluid form and otherwise and for that milk, the price is not based on the marketing order at all. It was not identical with the uniform price. We paid for November 2.38 for 3.5 milk.

We have a freight differential of 8 cents at Middletown. We have no location differential outside the marketing area. Our plant at Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company is approved, and shipped milk to New York City, and as to any milk received at that plant sold within the marketing area, we have a plus differential of 8 cents allowed for freight, that is within the 81 to 90 mile zone, and because it is 110 miles nearer to New York than the 200-mile zone, we add 8 cents on to the price, and because it is in Middletown we give a location differential of 20 cents also on milk going into the marketing area.

Now as to the fraction of 1 per cent that we received in Slate Hill in November for which we were obligated to pay the market price, the location differential is 25 cents. We are not allowed 28 cents by the administrator when we make accounting into the pool. We add 8 cents for freight differential, and we add 25 cents, as I understand it, and we are allowed 20 cents by the administrator. When we make settlement for that milk, our base price is a uniform price—the price of whatever the milk was utilized for. The price we pay our producers for milk sold in the marketing area is the uniform price, subject to differentials. The uniform price was $2.10 for November.

In making a settlement to the pool for Slate Hill, we were allowed under the provisions of Article VI, Section 8, to deduct 20 cents per cwt. for all net pool milk received from producers at that plant. The allowance we got back from the pool was 20 cents. That was to be added to the 2.10 uniform price on milk shipped to marketing area. On account of the location differential, we paid 5 cents. In addition there was an 8-cent freight differential. Referring to the milk sold in the marketing area, the price paid to producers 514 by Slate Hill for December was the uniform price of $2.10, plus 25 cents, plus 8 cents.

I cannot answer "yes" or "no" to your question as to whether for the small fraction of milk we sold in the marketing area in the month of November, paid for in December, we paid the same price we paid for milk sold out of the marketing area, $2.38 per cwt. Exhibit No. 36 states the price of $2.38 as being paid to our patrons and $2.38 is correct for all the milk received, whether it was in the marketing area or out.

Referring to Exhibit 15, a statement to the producers of the Dellwood Dairy Company concerning the disposition of milk in August, and to Exhibit No. 16, I explain the change in our operations at Fort Edward in September, from August, in this way: During the spring and summer months, we sell a lot of cream, not fluid milk, but cream to ice cream manufacturers in Connecticut. Beginning with September, that contract is cancelled; it does not run beyond September and that is the reason for the drop-off in outside sales. The first answer I gave you about the cream sales out of Fort Edward is correct. There has been some change in the shipments of Kyserike milk. That milk, prior to September 1st, was shipped to Slate Hill. Since that date, part of it has been shipped to Yonkers in fluid form and part of it to Slate Hill for separating. We had no separator at Kyserike prior to September 1. All our operations as you see them now have been going on many years. There has been no change in the plant; part of it from Kyserike is going to Yonkers and part to Slate Hill, where before it all went to Slate Hill. I didn't say we installed anything at Kyserike since September 1.

Whatever is in the report, Exhibit No. 25-A, must be correct, although I did not prepare the report.

(Objection was made to the witness being asked about the reports but the court overruled the objection.)

The report does not state that more than a million and three-quarters pounds was transmitted from the Slate Hill Com-515 pany to the Middletown Company. My testimony yesterday was correct. We cannot take milk from the Slate Hill plant to the Middletown Company. This amount of milk which says receipts of handlers from plants of other handlers is milk that Middletown borrows from Slate Hill, and the Slate Hill plant processes, pasteurizes, and bottles it for the Middletown Company and the handling charge is paid for it. This particular volume of milk was received originally from producers or handlers, sold to the Middletown plant, and processed for the Middletown Company at a price and became the property of the Middletown Company. That milk you have just referred to is sold in New Jersey.

The milk that was reported as IV-A did not go to Goshen. The milk that went to Goshen as III-D was sold at the gross cost of III-D milk, plus 5 cents per cwt.—f. o. b. Goshen. For that particular month we received $1.061 at Goshen. The III-D price varies from month to month. For that month, we received in addition from the market administrator 33 cents more in round figures for handling and trucking—a gross turnover of 38 cents per cwt., approximately. I don't know exactly what amounts were paid for delivering that milk. I would think the trucking was paid at about what we received from the administrator.

When we paid the producers, we paid an average price that was esignated by these exhibits in evidence. As to your question whether e sold this milk in New Jersey in competition with milk in that tate which was under the New Jersey Price Control Laws, I cannot ive you a "yes" or "no" answer. There is more than one kind of ompetition in the state of New Jersey. There are many deals in lew Jersey under which handlers buy milk right in the state of lew Jersey where the price is fixed. I know of many deals made utside of the price that is set up. I would say that those deals are ade because of cheaper milk coming from all over the city. I ould not agree that it is because of milk coming from Slate Hill.
here is no base price for the milk we sold in New Jersey. We sell bottled milk there. We do not sell raw milk in New Jersey.
16 (At this point, the witness was asked to state what price per bottle he got for Grade B milk sold in New Jersey.
laintiffs objected to the question and the witness himself also obcted to answering the question because he believed it would be rejudicial to his interest to reveal that price. The court overruled bjection to the question.)
The price we sell milk at varies. We have all sorts of dealers.
depends on the volume and on conditions.
In the month of September, we were selling the quantity of milk our Slate Hill and Middletown plants for resale in New Jersey, own in the report there. That milk was being sold in bottles steurized, bottled and capped in one of our plants at Slate Hill.
he prices per bottle that we sold this milk for varied. I could not ll you off-hand the range of the prices.
I signed an affidavit verified November 30, 1938, to be used in this se. You have shown me that affidavit and called my attention to atements therein contained, and I made the statement contained in at affidavit that we were one of the largest independent dealers in is market doing business amounting to about $2,000,000 annually; at I was acquainted with the history of competition in the New ork City marketing area and that it is a market in which the keenest mpetition exists. The statements I made in the affidavit were true.
is also true that keen competition exists in the New Jersey market, here we operate on a large scale. I am not as well acquainted with e competition in New Jersey as I am with the competition in New ork.
You called my attention to the statement in the affidavit where I fer to certain small dealers buying on a preferred basis and where state that the small operators buying on a basis of such a blend price are able to undersell in the wholesale and retail market.
17 That relates to the New York market. As I understand, the Milk Control Law of New Jersey fixes prices to be paid to proicers for milk bought in the State of New Jersey. It has no juris-ction over milk bought outside of New Jersey.
(At this point, the witness was asked if it was not true that milk ught outside of New Jersey, free from restrictions of those price-fixing laws, could not undersell the dealers who have to pay those prices. To this question, there was an objection and the Court sustained the objection.)

We have not, since September 1, based the prices which we paid for milk and which milk was sold in New Jersey under any price fixing order anywhere. We accept prices agreed upon mutually between producers and our Company. I do not negotiate personally the price to producers, but one of the members of the firms has had meetings at Slate Hill with producers, at which it was discussed.

The average price which we paid to the Middletown producers of $2.38 for all the milk received at that plant was 5 cents less than the uniform price which I, a little while ago, agreed was the price we should have paid for the fraction of 1% of the milk sold in the marketing area.

I am acquainted with some of our customers in New Jersey. I know a great many of them by reputation.

These dealers in New Jersey are not known as peddlers but as licensed subdealers that may be called by other names but actually they are sublicensed to do business.

In our business in New Jersey, we do not exactly base the price which we ask for our milk on prices charged by our competitors in selling to subdealers. I do not keep in touch exactly with 518 prices asked by our competitors in supplying those subdealers.

The New Jersey representative of our company takes care of the Jersey business. This New Jersey representative fixes the price which our company sells for in New Jersey and our company receives the money. I do not handle the bills myself. I have no knowledge as to the range of prices that we get for bottled milk f. o. b. Slate Hill for New Jersey milk. There are various prices that milk is sold at to New Jersey dealers. I cannot tell you the price. I would have to refer to records. The prices do not change from month to month, prices prevailing in September probably prevail at the present time. There is a great deal of difference between the price at which we sell our Middletown milk to these New Jersey dealers and the price at which we sell storekeepers in New York in the same period of time but the price we charge to these New Jersey dealers is less because there is a great difference in selling milk to a dealer f. o. b. plant and to a storekeeper in New York.

There is a price-fixing order in effect in New Jersey fixing the price from dealer to subdealer, from subdealer and dealers to stores and consumers. There is no price-fixing order between dealer and dealer.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCarthy:

The companies with which I am associated are known in the trade as independents. My companies are not subsidiaries of either Borden's or the National Dairies.

On direct examination I spoke about diverting milk from Goshen, New York, and stated that I received $1.01 per cwt. for that milk and is the price we have to account to the producers for. All the money that comes to us for this milk is 23 cents handling charge, a payment for transportation and a 5-cent profit. I am familiar with the effect upon the market of diverting that milk to Goshen 519 and the effect of the diversion of that milk from Kyserike to Goshen is to keep that milk from the fluid-milk market in the marketing area. In other words, if there was no provision in the order that we could take this milk and sell it to a cream-cheese manufacturer, that milk would have to come into New York City and compete with the fluid-milk market in New York City and this cream-cheese manufacturer could buy milk or cream from some western source. More fluid milk thrown on the New York City market results in lowering the price to producers.

If there was no provision under the order to classify milk in the different classes in which it is utilized and having to pay $2.45 per cwt., only such milk as we could sell in the fluid form would be accepted from producers. We could not handle any milk beyond that.

You have shown me an affidavit that I excuted on November 30, 1938.

(The affidavit was marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit B" for identification. Without objection, the affidavit was received in evidence and marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit B." It was conceded that the witness would testify according to the affidavit. The following excerpt from the affidavit was then read to the witness:

"The larger distributors of the marketing area frequently carry substantial surplus milk, sometimes as much as 50%, in order not to deprive their producers of a regular and continuous market. Many of the smaller competing units make it a practice to buy their fluid milk requirements from day to day and are able in many instances to buy their requirements on the basis of the blend price, that is the average between the price for Class I and the prices for the lower classifications composed of the surplus paid for by the larger distributors. Consequently the smaller operators buying on the basis of such a blend price are able to underseli in the wholesale and retail market. This very rapidly reduces and depresses the prices which can be paid to the farmer. Many of these smaller units market substantially all of their milk fluid form and therefore carry no burden and make no allowance for surplus.

"On September 1, 1938, the order was put into effect. All handlers were required under the order to pay the Class I prices for all the fluid milk and the prices for all other classes of milk according to their uses. This, of course, tended to stabilize the market. This salutary condition continued for approximately three or four weeks after the promulgation of the order. However, beginning about October 1st, there was an indication that milk was being sold in 520 this market substantially below cost. In the last few weeks a downward spiral occurred in this market which was caused principally by milk going into channels where it is sold substantially below cost. This condition is necessarily resulting in loss to all handlers.

"Milk is now being sold to stores at prices as low as eight cents per quart. The results have developed a method of distribution known as the 'peddler type.' In this type of distribution an individual or group of individuals sometimes operating as a family proposition, simply hire a truck or trucks from day to day and solicit business at any price they can get. They do not have nor do they carry any of the burdens or obligations of the established milk distributor. This 'peddler type' of distribution does not meet the high standards established by the labor union and generally does not pay any Social Security taxes or compensation insurance. In the case of my company, all of these obligations must be met and under our contract with the labor union we are required to pay fixed minimum wages and to comply with high standards of working hours and conditions.

"The Dairymen's League and its subsidiaries distribute milk in the Metropolitan Marketing Area. I do not think that the Dairymen's League and its subsidiaries are responsible for the cause of the breakdown in this market. In this highly competitive market their competition is no different from the competition of other distributors. They are naturally attempting, as every other distributor is, to protect their own business."

By Mr. McCarthy:

Q. Is that still your opinion, Mr. Rubenfeld?

A. Absolutely.

Since the date of the affidavit there has been a further decline in prices in the New York metropolitan area. The chief reason for the decline is because of the court proceedings which are going on here, many of the distributors believing that they will not have to pay the order prices for milk, and therefore they are gambling on what the outcome will be and selling milk at a low cost.

Redirect examination by Mr. Pratt:

We only ship to the New York market the amount of milk we can market as fluid milk in our own business. We had contracts for ice cream manufacturers outside the state. When we came back in September, there was not fully 48% of our milk sold in the marketing area. The 48% shown in the report was up-state and out of the state and outside the metropolitan market. With reference to this 521 milk which was diverted to the cheese factory at Goshen, if I had to ship that milk from Kyserike, New York, and sold it in New York as fluid milk at a loss, the chances are I would not have shipped it to New York. I would have refused to take milk from the producer. I still agree with the statement that I made in the affidavit to the effect that in the last few weeks a downward spiral occurred in this market which was caused principally by milk going into channels where it is sold substantially below cost, and this condition necessarily results in loss to all handlers. We sell fluid milk in New York City at a loss now, and that loss is greater today than when the affidavit was made. I believe that this lawsuit is responsible for the present breakdown in prices, and that some dealers to a great extent are under the impression that after the lawsuit is over they will not have to pay into the pool and are therefore gambling on the future.

(The last sentence was stricken out as not being responsive.)

I would not know whether the dealers have capital in their banks or not.

I don't think we sustained a loss in the sale of our fluid milk in New York in the month of September. My best recollection is that we sustained a loss on our wholesale operations, store milk, in October. We sell approximately 1,000 cases of milk per day in the store trade. In October, I think our losses were approximately one-half cent per quart, about 6 cents a case, or about $60 a day. I haven't any figures for November, but I assume that the loss will be greater for November than it was in October. We operated our New Jersey business at a profit.

Our manufacturing operation is not a separate operation in our company. It is combined. In this combined operation, we also have our fluid business. We did not lose money as part of our combined operation. The company which distributes milk to stores is a separate company by itself—the Public Farms Products Company.

522 Including New Jersey operations, we made a profit on our combined operations, our company and company business outside of the Public Farms Product Company for those three months.

I would not know whether we made a profit on our manufacturing operations. There is no separate corporation for manufacturing. We usually try to sell all of our products at a profit and that includes manufactured products.

We did not refuse milk of any producers because we had a surplus prior to the operation of Order No. 27. My statement to the effect that but for this 23-cent handling charge rebate, we could not take that milk is correct because prior to September 1, 1938, we were not required to pay $2.45. I paid competitive prices for milk. We could still manufacture the milk in our own plants and had the manufacturing facilities over at Slate Hill but we did not have to pay $2.45. Since September 1, 1938, we did not pay $2.45 for any milk we manufactured at Slate Hill.

It is not any more difficult to ship milk from Kyserike to Slate Hill than it is to Goshen. I couldn't handle the milk and manufacture it if I had to pay $2.45 for it. I know of no milk under this Order #27 that calls for the payment of $2.45 in manufactured form.

I was buying milk from Gover, Pennsylvania, and from Frazer, New York, prior to September 1, 1938. We had surplus milk at all times. We always carried surplus milk. I do not think that the amount of the money I got under the order was a rebate. Unless we could sell the milk in the manufactured form so as to make a profit, we would have to discontinue buying from other dealers or producers. I did not say I always operated at a profit but that we tried to sell our products at a profit. At times, we were able 523 to sell at a profit and at other times, we were not able to.

The growth of the Dellwood Company does not exactly mean that we were always paying a profit on our operations.

I have stated that "I do not think that the Dairymen's League and its subsidiaries are responsible for the cause of the breakdown in this market," but I have not talked with the Dairymen's League about what part they had in the breakdown of the market. I do not take charge of our wholesale operations directly, but I do get reports frequently from the wholesale department and I am advised frequently what the market conditions are and the cause of the breakdown, and in this particular instance, I was informed that the Dairymen's League was not a contributor to the breakdown of the market since September 1st. Over a period of several years, we have increased our wholesale business by securing customers who formerly sold to our competitors.

It has not been our practice to instruct our men, when some other dealer buys the good will, to go out and take some of the business which is being transferred by underselling or giving free milk.

I did not learn last year that the Jetter Dairy Company purchased certain routes from the Highland Dairy. Mr. Arthur Jetter never called me up about any customers or anything pertaining to customers. He did not call me up and tell me that I had taken a fifteen-case customer from him or that he just bought that customer or bought the route from Highland Dairy. I never spoke to Mr. Jetter more than twice and that was not over the telephone. I never spoke to him about any customer which he said our company had taken.

I have not made any personal inquiry as to whether the League has given any free milk. I do not know that the Dairymen's League, from information we received from the wholesale department was not responsible for the breakdown of prices since September 1.
524 The head of our wholesale department told me that. His name is Mr. Popper and he is employed by Public Farms Products and is the General Manager of that corporation and Vice President. Mr. Popper informed me to that effect.

Recross examination by Mr. McCARTHY:

Assuming that we could sell this milk at Goshen at the III–D price of $1.01 and a few mills plus 5 cents, we could not handle this milk, transport it to the Goshen plant, and account for it in the pool at the III–D price without sustaining a loss on those operations if we did not receive market-service payments, because the transportation alone is more than 5 cents a hundred without taking into consideration the cost of operating the plant. We purchased at the Class I price of $2.45 to meet our fluid requirements. If we were not able to transport this milk to the Goshen plant or some other plant and receive payment from the pool to compensate us for the cost of doing that, we could not possibly handle it.

I testified that, prior to the time this order went into effect, we also diverted some milk from time to time. We bought milk mostly on a competitive price, on the blend price rather than the classified price and in that blend we included Class I milk and also this manufacturing milk. Prior to September 1, we did not ship or sell any milk to Goshen. We diverted it to other plants, sold the cream out of the marketing area and out of the state. I think our statement to producers for the Dellwood Company for the month of August would show our method of buying and selling.

If every handler in the New York City market would comply with the order and pay the required price for milk going into the various classes, my opinion is that the market would stabilize.

525 Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

I do not think that if one handler or a group of handlers had a competitive advantage over all other groups, that would stabilize the market.

ERSKINE M. HARMON, recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

I am the appointing power in my office as administrator with reference to employing auditors or other employees. I have personally employed various members of my staff and have about 85 or 87 on my staff. I have about 40 field auditors who are in the field practically all the time auditing the records of the plants. I have no one attached to my staff who physically inspects the disposition made of the milk at the plants. When the statements have been rendered in the form of reports to me, our field auditors go to plants and check both the shipping and the receiving plant records. Up until now, we have relied on the records kept by the plant owners for our information in this respect. I have no assistant working for me. Besides the auditors, I have a staff of about 12 or 15 accountants whose job it is to check the records, compute the pool and do other statistical work. We have a group of ten or 12 whose job is to help bookkeepers in making out their reports and be responsible for those collections. In addition to our secretarial and stenographic help, we have two young men who operate the printing machines and other machines in the office.

Mr. Bert Miller works for us. He is the chief of the field service division. I have known him about four years. I have no recollection of meeting Mr. Miller in the Bargaining Agency Office in the month of November 1937, when I was there in connection with the proposed marketing agreement.

528 I know that Mr. Miller was connected with the Bargaining Agency for a time. I don't know that he was in 1937. I knew Mr. Miller prior to the date of the New York State Milk Control. He was in charge of the New York office. I did not know him prior to the New York Control.

529 I testified the other day that Mr. Lloyd Anderson, of Binghamton, did the major part of drafting the first milk marketing agreement.

I know Mr. Allan Miller and in 1937 I think he was employed by the Dairymen's League but I am not sure. I have been told that Allan Miller is the son of the General Counsel for the Dairymen's League. I understand he is an attorney.

I don't recall Mr. Allan Miller as having been at the Bargaining Agency Directors' Meeting in Syracuse when I was in Syracuse. I would not say that he was not there. I am quite sure I never heard Allan Miller make any statement to those assembled at any such meeting that he had spent three months' time in the preparation of the proposed agreement. I do not remember of ever doing any work with Allan Miller on a proposed marketing agreement in the Dairymen's League offices or elsewhere.

Q. Did you ever do any work on a proposed marketing agreement with any attorney of the Dairymen's League either at its offices or elsewhere?

(This question was objected to and overruled.)

A. I testified last week, or the early part of this week, rather, that Mr. Frank Lent sat in at the meeting in Syracuse. I am quite sure that I never did any work on a proposed marketing agreement with the Dairymen's League at their offices or elsewhere when I was working just with those attorneys.

I estimate that I was present at meetings in Syracuse where Mr. Lloyd Anderson was present possibly four or five times. I have no recollection of him discussing any other marketing agreement than the one he worked on.

(There was no cross-examination.)

(At this point and during a discussion of the case between counsel for the parties in the presence of the Court, the defendants admitted the allegations of Paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, and 9 of the amended complaint of the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League and with the consent of all parties, Paragraph 5 of such complaint was stricken.)

530 LAURENCE L. CLOUGH, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside in Elsmere, New York. I am employed by the State of New York as a milk account examiner, Division of Milk Control, and Administrator of the Niagara Frontier Milk Marketing Area. A milk marketing order, numbered 127, was issued by H. V. Noyes, as Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York, covering the so-called Niagara Frontier Milk Marketing Area. I believe the order was signed September 19th and became effective October 1, 1938. Pursuant to that order I was appointed Marketing Administrator of the Niagara Frontier Milk Marketing Area and have acted as administrator since October 1, 1938. (Defendants offered in evidence a copy of Official Order No. 127, issued by the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New York. Plaintiffs object on grounds of immateriality to issues of this case and that there is a wide difference between the territories regulated under the different orders. Objection sustained with leave to reserve the right to change the ruling and receive the evidence later on if it seems desirable to do so.)

JAMES A. CONBOY, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside at 773 Fifth Avenue, Troy, New York. I am employed by the State of New York as Supervisor, Licensing Division of Milk Control. As supervisor I have custody of records of applications for licenses. I have applications for licenses for the several companies named in the subpoena. (Defendants offer in evidence 531 applications for milk dealer's license for 1938–39 from Dairymen's League Cooperative, Inc., Beakes Dairy Company, Cloverleaf Creamery Co., Delancey Milk and Cream Co., Inwood Farms, Inc., Miller's White Farms, Inc., Model Dairy Co., Inc., formerly Hauk & Schmidt, Ferndale-Nelson Creamery, Inc., and Sacks Dairy, Inc., the companies named after the first, claimed to be subsidiaries of the Dairymen's League. Plaintiffs object on grounds of irrelevancy and applications contain financial statements which are confidential, and there is no proof that the companies named are subsidiaries of the Dairymen's League. Objection sustained.) I have an application of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association for 1938–1939 bearing the date of February 21, 1938.

At this point, the following concession was offered by Mr. Lent.

"Mr. LENT. If your Honor please, the Dairymen's League offers this concession in reference to the testimony now being adduced by Mr. Conboy:

"The Dairymen's League Cooperative, Inc., and its subsidiaries, Model Dairy Company, Inc., Beakes Dairy Company and Delancey Milk and Cream Company, Inc., of which it owns all the stock, were, as of April 1, 1938, duly licensed by the Division of Milk Control of the Department of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York to distribute milk in the various parts of the City of New York, and, as to the Model Dairy Company, Inc., and Delancey Milk and Cream Company, Inc., in certain towns in Nassau County; that as of September 1, 1938, all the milk distributing operations of such subsidiaries were taken over by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc.; that the daily average volumes of such companies for the highest month of the twelve months preceding April 1, 1938, as stated in their applications to such department for said license, were as follows:

"Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., 2,529,747 pounds; Model Dairy Company, Inc., 298,285 pounds; Beakes Dairy Company, 71,969 pounds; Delancey Milk and Cream Company, Inc., 202,655 pounds; that the amount so stated for the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., covered its entire operations throughout the milk shed, of which its New York City distribution operations were a minor part.

"The reason for the transfer of the business was to save license fees, New York City taxes, State franchise taxes, which reasons had been contemplated for some time, and this was brought to a head as of September 1st by the additional reasons that by this transfer of business it enabled the League to make only one report to the Marketing Administrator instead of four covering the City operations, thus saving a great deal of bookkeeping expense."

532 (Defendants concede the above statement as evidence, but do not concede its accuracy.)

The license covers the period from April 1st to March 31st. There will be a new license year coming April 1, 1939. During the period of the milk control I had something to do with the licensing of stores or storekeepers in New York City. (Government moves testimony of this witness be stricken, together with stipulations relating to it, on the ground it is irrelevant. Motion denied.)

GLEN BULLOCK, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside in Edwards, St. Lawrence County. I am president of the Farm Milk Receiving Station located at Edwards. I have been president of that station for about three years and delivered milk to that station before I became president. The Edwards Dairy Co-operative runs this plant. The board of directors and I have had charge of the sales of milk since September 1, 1938. I believe our milk tested 4.025 for the last part of the year and has tested above 3.5 since September 1. We manufacture our milk into cream and sell the skim milk to an Italian cheese factory located at Heuvelton, New York. The skim milk is sold to Aelio Brothers. I know of only one plant owned by them. This fall we had an offer from Queensboro for our skim milk. I believe the offer was made by Sam Miller. We have received 25 cents per cwt. f. o. b. plant for skim milk;

they commenced taking it about the first of November 1938 and promised to pay 25 cents per cwt. until Easter. (Govern-533 ment objects to testimony on grounds that it is immaterial, irrelevant, incompetent, not binding, and not within the issues here. Overruled. Plaintiffs move to strike evidence on the grounds that it is immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent, after the order was issued circumstances were different. Motion denied.)

The Queensboro offer made by Mr. Miller was for twenty cents per cwt.; f. o. b. plant. They offered to take the skim milk from about October 1938 to April 1939. (Government objects on the ground that the price of skim milk is not a proper issue in this case; if it is, the price he may have received for skim milk in some isolated transaction, under some peculiar circumstances, without showing anything further, is no evidence whatever of the value of skim milk, and that even if price were material offers are not admissible. Objection overruled.)

In other years we have sold skim milk in Edwards.

Q. For how many years, to your knowledge?

A. Oh, we have sold it over the winter, butterfat tests run so high, we run cream, in the fall skim milk.

Cross examination by Mr. McCarthy:

An Italian cheese factory purchases the skim milk from us. They have some operations in New York too, their branch office. They take it down to sell down there. I believe they make kind of a part skim cheese. I do not know how many factories of that kind there are in the milk shed. I don't know just how many factories there are, but I think Mr. Wiseman makes up some of that stuff and there is one other, Rock Boutin, a cousin of Aeolio, has a plant that makes up part cheese, Tapiola, or some name like that. There is not much demand for skim milk for this particular type of cheese after Easter. They cater to this market—Italian trade—up to Easter time, then it drops off, in April. We have sold skim milk to skim milk dealers and to a plant in Utica at different times.

534 Cross examination by Mr. Schoeneck:

In August and October the milk fat went as fluid milk. Then the content of the milk improved from 3.45 to 4.44 at one time, and we figured we could get more money by selling it as cream and selling the skim the other part of the year. That is why we shifted from selling as fluid milk or cream.

(Statement dated December 21, 1938, of the Dairymen's League to its producers, was received in evidence and marked Defendants' Exhibit 54.)

Jay C. Treat was called as a witness in behalf of the defendants.

Direct examination by Mr. Pratt:

I reside in Honeoye Falls, New York. I am secretary, also a director, of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc. I signed defendants' Exhibit 4 for identification as the Commodore Hotel in New York City, where the Bargaining Agency had rooms. I do not remember whether the certificate of incorporation was given to some attorney for the Dairymen's League. (Defendants' Exhibit 4 for identification received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit No. 4. Objection on grounds of irrelevancy. Overruled.)

Defendants' Exhibit 55 for identification is a compilation of all the milk receiving stations in the New York milk shed, prepared by the State and Federal Agriculture Extension Service. (Defendants' Exhibit 55 for identification received over Government's objection on grounds of irrelevancy.)

(Defendants' Exhibit 56 for identification is the so-called Ernst & Ernst report. Received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit No. 56.)

Homer S. Rolfe is president of the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency. He is also a director of the Sheffield Producers Cooperative Association. I was made secretary of the Bargaining Agency at the same meeting at which Mr. Rolfe was made president, at a meeting in 1937.

535 Mr. George R. Fitts was one of the first directors of the Bargaining Agency. He was connected with the Dairymen's League. I do not know whether he is connected with the Dairymen's League now. He is not a director of the Bargaining Agency now.

Mr. L. A. Chapin is a director of the Dairymen's League, and he is a director of the Bargaining Agency.

Mr. Fred H. Sexauer is president of the Dairymen's League and is a director of the Bargaining Agency.

Mr. Coulter was elected as a director of the Bargaining Agency when Mr. Fitts ceased to be a director. He is a director of the Dairymen's League. (Government objects to entire line of testimony on the ground of irrelevancy. Overruled.)

Mr. Kenneth Shaul and Mr. Alfred J. Williams are directors of the Bargaining Agency and of the Sheffield Producers Cooperative. Mr. Shaul is secretary of the Sheffield Producers Cooperative and Mr. Williams is treasurer.

A meeting was held at the Hotel Martin in Utica, New York, prior to the formation of the Bargaining Agency. I have the minutes of that meeting though I was not secretary at that time. (Minutes of meeting in Hotel Martin and of organization meeting of Bargaining Agency offered in evidence. Received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits Nos. 60 and 61, with the understanding that purpose is to show concerted plan by Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League and other cooperatives coincident with Rogers-Allen bill and continuing down to and including the promulgation and adoption of the order. (Government objects on grounds of immaterially and irrelevancy. Objection overruled.)

A meeting of the directors of the Bargaining Agency was held at the Hotel Commodore, New York City, June 7, 1937. (Plaintiffs object on grounds of immateriality and irrelevancy. Objection overruled.) Officers were not elected at that meeting; they were elected at a meeting held at the Hotel Martin in Utica, New York, June 8, 1937. I was secretary of that meeting. I prepared the 536 minutes from the stenographer's notes.

During the summer and early fall of 1937 meetings were held by the board of directors and body of delegates to discuss prices to be charged for milk and action was taken by the board of directors and body of delegates relative to prices. (Government objects to entire line of questions relating to meetings of the Bargaining Agency on the ground that it is wholly irrelevant to the issues of the case. Objection overruled.) As secretary, I kept a record of those meetings.

I do not remember that any meetings were held in the fall of 1937 at which a proposed federal marketing agreement, under the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, was discussed. I do not remember that Mr. Harmon was present at any of those meetings. The first I remember of Mr. Harmon's attendance at our meetings was after the order was voted on.

During a part of the year 1937 I lived at the Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, New York, where the Bargaining Agency maintained offices. As far as I know they did not maintain other offices. I don't remember seeing Mr. Harmon in those offices in 1937. I did see Mr. Harmon in the hotel prior to the voting on the order in 1938. I do not remember seeing an employee of the Dairy Section of the Department of Agriculture at the Bargaining Agency offices in the City of Syracuse in 1937. I do not remember seeing a man who came to the Agency from Boston.

I have made entries in the minutes of meetings of the 537 Bargaining Agency relating to proposed equalization or pooling under a federal marketing agreement and order. I have the minute book of the Bargaining Agency containing the record of meetings of the Bargaining Agency from June 7, 1937, down to December 6, 1938, the date of the annual meeting of that year. The minutes of the meeting of December 6, 1938, include the president's address, the reports of the officers, the report of the Treasurer particularly, for the period ended December 6, 1938.

The minutes contain resolutions passed, from time to time, authorizing expenditures of money. I wrote up the minutes with the assistance of a stenographer; we had a stenographer take them at the meeting and then I directed the taking of the minutes and wrote them.

I have never seen defendants' Exhibit 58 for Identification before; it did not come to my attention. Defendants' Exhibit 59 for Identification, was issued by the Bargaining Agency. (Defdt.'s Exs. 58 and 59 offered in evidence. Government objected on grounds of irrelevancy and immateriality. Objections overruled. Received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibits Nos. 58 and 59.)

Mr. Charles H. Baldwin has charge of the printing of various pamphlets, statements, and publicity for the Bargaining Agency. He is the executive secretary of the Bargaining Agency.

(The witness J. C. Treat temporarily withdrawn.)

538 EDWARD MANNING GAYNOR, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside in Leonardsville, New York. I am assistant director of milk control of the Department of Agriculture of the State of New York. I have held that position since the first of the year. I was director of milk publicity in the same department from July 1, 1938. From August 17, 1937, to July 1, 1938, I was assistant to the Commissioner of Agriculture, State of New York. In that position I had some contact with the Metropolitan Milk Producers Bargaining Agency. I know some of the officers of the Bargaining Agency, but I am not sure that I know all the directors.

(Government objects to entire line of evidence on the ground it is irrelevant. Objection overruled. Exception.)

I received a copy of a tentative proposed marketing agreement from someone in the Bargaining Agency in October or November of 1937. I do not know whether I have a copy of it now. I don't remember whether I discussed such a proposed marketing agreement with individual directors of the Bargaining Agency. I did not attend any discussions with directors of the Bargaining Agency relative to a proposed milk marketing agreement. Prior to the meetings in Oneida, I did not have discussions with the officers of the Bargaining Agency relative to a proposed milk marketing agreement. I received the first draft of a proposed Federal Marketing Agreement either from the Bargaining Agency or from our own Department, I am not sure which. I did receive a proposed milk marketing agreement from someone connected with the Bargaining Agency. I believe it was sent to me sometime in November or December of 1937. I received a copy 539 of the proposed marketing agreement which was filed at Washington, D. C., and on which hearings were held. The copy was sent to me from our own department in Albany.

I attended the hearings on the proposed marketing agreement with the Commissioner of Agriculture. I did not assist in the promulgation or formulation of Order 126. I acted as contact man between the Commissioner and the Union and the producers in the North Country. I am well acquainted with many producers and dealers. When I speak of producers I mean all types of producers including cooperatives and non-cooperatives.

As contact man for the Commissioner I introduced him to a great many producers and I introduced [illegible] to some of the Union heads and some of the heads of the Dairymen's League whom he didn't know—local men in certain territories. I don't believe I did anything to bring about the promulgation of the Federal and State Marketing Order. I did not do anything in connection with the proposed referendum and poll on Order No. 27, issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, and Official Order No. 126, put in form by the Commissioner, after they had been put in form. After the order was adopted I did nothing to advocate its approval by producers.

After the vote was taken, I had no part in procuring milk marketing agreements to be signed. I never talked with any dealer or dealer's representative and asked that dealer or dealer's representative to sign the milk marketing agreement. I did not talk to any representative of Queens Farms concerning the milk marketing agreement, or the signing of it. I did not talk to Alex Eisenberg about signing a milk marketing agreement, and I did not talk to Mr. Sam Miller of Queensboro Farms, Incorporated, regarding the signing of a milk marketing agreement by that company. I discussed 540 the order with Mr. Sam Miller at my home in Leonardsville, but I did not interpret the order. Mr. Miller made the appointment with me.

I talked with the Bargaining Agency many times between September 1 and September 10. Those calls were usually made in connection with surplus milk. In many cases dealers would not accept milk because they had enough. The milk they would not accept would have gone to the New York market and been sold for whatever price would be given for it.

I talked with Mr. Ralph Norton concerning Manchester Dairy. A rumor was circulated that Manchesters' financial rating wasn't good. Mr. Norton and I thought it should be checked. Mr. Norton went to New York with a representative from our department, checked Manchester's financial records and found the rating to be perfect. As far as I know, Manchester milk was not withheld at any time.

I have never talked with anybody about withholding milk from Mr. Eisenberg. I did not tell Mr. Eisenberg that he would get his milk if he went over to the Administrator's office and signed up. No one ever told him that over my telephone.

Between September 1 and 15, 1938, I talked with Mr. Griffith at the Commodore Hotel in New York City. (It was stipulated that Mr. Griffith was referendum agent and after finishing that job he remained in New York City as an employee of the Dairy Section to endeavor to get handlers to sign the marketing agreement.) I talked with Mr. Griffith every three or four days during that period. I was never in Mr. Griffith's office at the Hotel Commodore.

I made a speech at a meeting of the Bargaining Agency in 541 Syracuse, in September of 1938.

Q. In that speech did you say in words or substance, "Don't think about your dealer for a minute; call me up and I will tell you where to take your milk and after you withhold your milk for several days, your dealer will sign"?

A. No.

A. Nothing about that, no. I said if you cannot find a market and your dealer doesn't have that market, let me know. You would be very, very foolish to give him the milk when you can divert the milk and get two dollars forty-five cents, plus twenty-three cents, plus two cents f. o. b. at the station, and if your dealer won't take it call me up and I will try to find a market for it.

There were some instances where I directed that milk be sent to some other source when the dealer wouldn't take it. I don't remember just how many instances there were like that, but in September there were over seven million nine hundred pounds. I am not sure of the dates, but I have notes at home that will show the dates. My principal activity between September 1 and September 20, 1938, had nothing to do with the signing of the marketing agreement (taking care of milk because the dealers had not signed the agreement), but I did take care of a lot of milk between the first and twentieth.

I know of one instance where a dealer signed an agreement to pay the price and the milk was no longer diverted. I did not discuss the question of Manchester milk with Ralph Norton in connection with the signing of this marketing agreement. I have never talked with Red Rock, New York. I have not talked with anyone connected with Queens Farms regarding the signing of any agreement. In the latter part of September and in October I was using the 542 telephone ten to fifteen hours a day in order to take care of the milk. Sometimes my telephone started ringing about four o'clock in the morning and has been going at twelve o'clock at night. I do not remember whether it was as busy as that during any time from September 1 to September 20, 1938, but I cannot remember all the telephone calls I place. I called Queens Farms but I do not recall having called Queens Farms to talk to Dan Kotcher. The only time I remember having talked with Dan Kotcher was when he came up to my house to see me within the last six weeks. I do not know whether he signed a marketing agreement.

Mr. Griffith has sent me lists of non-signers and free-thinkers who have finally signed the marketing agreement. I did not use such lists in connection with my activities as publicity director of the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

I have talked with Mr. Burt Miller of the Market Administrator's office. Any business I had with Mr. Miller was in connection with the order and it was about milk. I have studied the order and have requested opinions from various people as to whether it was fair and workable. I am familiar with the terms of the order. There is nothing connected with my work as milk publicity director that has to do with the administration of the order by Mr. Harmon and Mr. Miller or any other employee.

I have received some copies of the Bargaining Agency News.

Q. Did you see the article in Vol. 2, No. 2 which reads "An orchid to Eddie Gaynor of Leonardsville who is doing some mighty fine work in assisting the groups working for the success of the Federal Order"?

A. Yes. That is silly.

I read the article headed "Pressure is put on milk dealers. Syracuse, New York. October 13 * * *", in which it was stated that 1,300 hundred cans of milk had been diverted from a New York dealer who had failed to file his first monthly report of milk sales.

I had nothing to do with the diversion of that milk. I know 543 that the milk was diverted from the plant at Andover. Mr. Alex Eisenberg takes that milk. I have never talked on the telephone to the persons who operate the Andover Creamery. I don't know them. The plant is owned by Eisenberg and there is a cooperative which is a member of the Bargaining Agency that supplies the plant at Andover.

I have made arrangements between Sept. 1, 1938, and the present time with various companies about taking over milk which has been diverted from other dealers. I made arrangements with Queensboro to take diverted milk. I called them on the telephone and told them there were so many tanks of milk from such and such a place and asked if they would take it. In every case Queensboro said "yes." I made arrangements with the Dairymen's League to take diverted milk. The arrangements were made in the same way. Once I made arrangements with Sheffield to take diverted cream. I called Sheffield's and asked them to furnish their plants, plant facilities, to take diverted milk, and they told me the plant was closing that day and they couldn't handle it. That was the plant down in Delaware County, the condensed plant. It was the Worcester milk. That was the only time I ever asked Sheffield to furnish their plant facilities to take diverted milk.

Where milk was diverted, I made arrangements, from day to day, for temporary diversions from these different dealers. In the case of Hoffman and Dudo in the north, it has been going on for weeks. If you take Cannonsville, that has been diverting weeks and months. Breakstone got the Cannonsville milk before it was diverted, but they wouldn't pay the butterfat price because they didn't need that kind of milk. The butterfat content was too high. I never went into the freight differential at Cannonsville. The freight differential works out to leave milk without a market because it costs more to ship milk from certain places to the New York market, and the additional cost is greater than the amount of differential 544 allowed. That, combined with a high butterfat content, would operate to keep milk out of the New York market. (Plaintiffs object on the ground that it calls for a conclusion. Overruled.)

Milk at Edwards sometimes runs four percent but not generally. Where milk runs 3.7 or over that is a factor affecting the marketing of the milk.

Q. You know, do you not, that milk of Rock Royal, one of the defendants in this case, runs four percent, don't you?

I diverted milk for Hoffman and Dudo because they asked me to. As far as I know they had no market; the milk was just going into New York to "sell if you can."

Breakstone Company was buying the Cannonsville milk. The Breakstone Company is a subsidiary of National Dairy. They first entered the fluid milk market sometime in 1938. The advent of Breakstone Company as a wholesaler of fluid milk was discussed by almost every branch of the milk industry.

Q. You have heard that discussed in connection with the alleged break-down in milk prices in New York City during the summer, haven't you?

(Objected to as hearsay. Overruled.)

Q. What is your answer?

A. Had I heard?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes; everybody did.

The Department had an investigation of the prices at which milk was sold in New York City in the year 1938. The investigation was started sometime in the summer of 1938. I received the first reports from the investigators and started proceedings about November of 1938. I do not know whether reports were being made in July and August of 1938.

I met Charles H. Baldwin, executive secretary, of the Bargaining Agency in July or August of 1938. I did not talk with 545 him about milk dealers who did not sign the marketing agreement. When I called the Bargaining Agency I talked with Mr. Treat, if he was there, or with Mr. Rolfe. I did not discuss marketing agreements with Mr. Treat. Mr Treat told me about the hundred Minute Men and what he proposed to do with them, but I did not pay much attention.

NILS B. SWENSON, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside at Hacketstown, New Jersey. I am a farmer and secretary of the New Jersey Milk Control Board. I have charge of the administration of the office, keep a record of the meetings of the Board—practically executive secretary's duties.

The Board, as now constituted, was created July 1, 1935. It has exercised some jurisdiction over prices paid for milk in New Jersey and various parts of the business. I was a member of the original Board from May 23, 1933 until June 30, 1935, and I was a field man for the Control Board from April 1, 1936 to November 15, 1937. I was made secretary of the Board on May 16, 1938, and was not officially connected with the Board from November 16, 1937, until that time. As Secretary of the Board I have custody of the records showing the various orders that have been put in effect. I have had occasion to be familiar with the orders of the Board which have been in effect, from time to time, since 1935.

I produce milk and sell it to the Fort Murray Dairy Company, which sells milk in competition with dealers purchasing from the Middletown Milk & Cream Company and Slate Hill Milk & Cream Company. (Defdt.'s Ex. 62, State Milk Control Law of the State of New Jersey, offered in evidence. Plaintiffs object on the grounds of immateriality, irrelevancy and incompetency. Objection overruled. Defdt.'s Ex. 62 received in evidence.)

546 The documents in defendants' exhibit 63 for identification are true copies of the Jersey price fixing orders issued by the New Jersey Milk Control Board in effect since September 1, 1938. Some of the orders refer to regulations other than prices. The exhibit contains all of the Milk Control price orders that have been in effect since September 1, 1938. (Defdt.'s Ex. 63, A to M, offered in evidence. Government objects on the ground that the documents offered are entirely immaterial. Objections overruled. Defdt.'s Ex. 63, A. to M. received.)

(At this point there was an objection to the entire line of testimony on the grounds that it was irrelevant, immaterial and incompetent. Objection overruled.)

New Jersey is divided into five marketing areas. Area 1 is South Jersey, except along the Shore. Area 2 is the South Jersey Shore area. Area 3 is the North Jersey Shore area. Area 4 is the area taking in the most populous counties, around Newark. Area 5 is a rural area. The retail prices in areas 2, 3, and 4 are the same, and the retail prices in areas 1 and 5 are the same. The retail prices for milk delivered to the door-step in areas 2, 3, and 4 is 14 cents; for milk delivered from stores to consumer, it is 13 cents, and for milk delivered from dealers to stores, it is 12 cents for Grade B milk. In districts 1 and 5, the door-step price is 13 cents; stores to consumers, 12 cents; and dealers to stores, 11 cents.

We have the following kinds of dealers in these districts: Producer dealers who produce their own milk and sell to the consumer, and who may or may not buy from other producers; dealers who buy all their milk from producers and sell direct to consumers, and dealers who buy from producers and sell to sub-dealers, The sub-dealers are those who buy from the processors and sell direct to the consumers.

Throughout New Jersey, the price fixed for Class I, Grade B, milk is 2.76 per cwt. This milk has a butter fat content of 3.5. There 547 are no freight differentials in New Jersey. Some of the Milk produced in New Jersey is shipped to the New York metropolitan area. Sheffield Farms, Sussex Milk & Cream Company, Foremost Dairy and Waldron & Sons have New Jersey plants and ship milk to the metropolitan area. The Sussex Milk & Cream Company is a subsidiary of the Borden Company. I have reports filed with the Board showing the disposition of milk purchased in New Jersey.

If a plant purchases milk from producers in New Jersey, a part of which is sold in New Jersey and a part of which is shipped, there is an order of the Board which requires that a dealer selling more ilk in the State than he purchases in the State is required to pay e New Jersey price of that milk he buys in the State, regardless f where it goes.

Q. Well, for instance, assuming that Sheffield Farms purchased 500 ns of milk in New Jersey plants and sold 1,000 cans, would you say at Sheffields would be obliged to pay New Jersey producers the full rice for the 500 cans purchased there?

A. Well, if a dealer buy Grade A milk in the State and the price n what he pays is determined on his Grade A sales in the State—if e buys Grade A milk—if he buys Grade B milk in the State and sells rade B milk in the State, the price he pays would be determined on e Grade B sales. But two grades are not taken together.

(Objection by plaintiff to entire line of testimony overruled.)

By an arrangement with their producers, it has been the custom for ealers who purchase in New Jersey and also deal in the metropolitan rea, to pay a blended price to New Jersey Producers. The arrange-ent is made by contract and a copy of the contract was filed with e Board. The contract was in effect from September 1 to Januy 1. I had no official notice that the Sheffield Company posted otices on milk-receiving stations at Hamburg, New Jersey, and Johnsonburg, New Jersey, to the effect that the company would close those plants January 1. (Plaintiff objects on grounds of incompetence, immateriality, and irrelevancy. Objection verruled.

JAY C. TREAT, recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants, stified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

The Bargaining Agency publishes a newspaper known as the "Milk roducers Market News." It is not distributed to all members of the gency, only to those who request it. Mr. V. R. Tompkins edits and as charge of the distribution of the paper. He sends them wherever ey are requested. Two different milk-receiving stations have re-ived bundles of the papers. As far as I know, the Bargaining gency has no mailing list made up by Mr. Baldwin. My cooperative as a list of its own producers, and when publicity is sent out, I take e publicity and envelopes over to our office and have them addressed.
ther cooperatives have their names handled, I think, in the same
ay. We do not turn any list over to the Bargaining Agency.

I am an officer of a local collecting cooperative known as the Cone-us Milk Producers Cooperative Association. Caccioppio & Sons wns the plant. Caccioppo & Sons own the plant known as Grandiew, and Grandview Dairy operates it. My Cooperative was formed 1934, to prevent shippers from losing their milk market. (Gov't bjects to evidence as being immaterial and too remote. Question ithdrawn.) The Conesus Cooperative has 550 to 575 members. We ive Mr. Tompkins a list of the members who request the "Milk roducers Market News" and he sends the papers. I do not know ow many copies of the paper are published each month. (Mr.

549 Cooke conceded about 9,000 copies are mailed out each month. He did not know how many are distributed at milk stations.) About 40,000 to 50,000 copies of a booklet entitled "Mr. Dairyman, save this booklet," were distributed throughout the milk shed about April 28, 1939. It was prepared by different people working with the Bargaining Agency. Letters signed by Charles H. Baldwin (Exhibits 23 AA to 23 II, inclusive, to the stipulation) were sent to producers throughout the New York Milk Shed.

I submitted the original minutes of the Bargaining Agency to an Assistant Attorney General. I did not submit the minutes to Mr. Lent. I delivered them only to the Attorney General's Assistant in the office building at Syracuse. They were not rewritten. The minutes of the meeting of May 29th, that I produced in court, were turned over to me when I was elected. Mr. Anderson turned over the minutes of meetings of the Bargaining Agency to Miss Stevenson, and when I was elected Secretary, Miss Stevenson turned the minutes over to me. I have kept them under lock and key. I cannot recollect that Mr. Anderson turned the minutes of any meeting over to me. I received them only through the office. Miss Stevenson takes the minutes, opens the mail, and is the Secretary of the Bargaining Agency active in the office.

As far as I know, Mr. Anderson has not acted as secretary at any meeting since I was elected. He took minutes for himself at several meeting, but the only person who acted as acting secretary was Dr. Shaul, who acted in my absence. I do not have the original minutes of the meetings of May 14 and May 25.

Cross examination by Mr. COOKE:

I don't recall that Mr. Anderson has ever given me anything in the way of minutes. The minutes, as prepared and in their 550 present form, were turned over to me by the office of the Bargaining Agency through the office help.

The following stipulations were made in Chambers subject to the right to object on grounds of relevancy and materiality:

It is stipulated by all the parties that the Dairymen's League through the Farm Conference Board, composed of farm organizations actively sponsored and supported in 1937 the Rogers-Allen Bill, and the Dairymen's League is the only milk member of the Farm Conference Board.

(Government objects on the ground it is immaterial. Objection overruled.)

It is stipulated by all the parties that Mr. Allen Miller, one of the attorneys of the Dairymen's League presented to the Lawyers' Committee of the Bargaining Agency a draft of a proposed marketing agreement, about November 1937, and that Lawyers' Committee consisted of Mr. Henry S. Manley, Mr. Frank Lent, Mr. Edmund Cooke, and Mr. Lloyd Anderson.

(Government objects on the grounds that it is irrelevant and immaterial. Objection overruled and the stipulation was received.)

It is further stipulated that—

On October 25th at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the argaining Agency, on motion of Mr. Lynn E. Maynard, a Lawyers' ommittee consisting of Messrs. Lent, Anderson, and Cooke, was ppointed to prepare a plan for surplus control and equalization. his committee was afterwards joined by Mr. Henry S. Manley, who ame attorney for the Sheffield Producers Cooperative, which was nember of the Agency and it was to this committee that Mr. Miller esented the draft of the agreement referred to in the last preceding pulation.

This motion was seconded by Mr. E. C. Bardin, and Mr. Ralph rton, directors of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers rgaining Agency, Inc.

(Objection by all plaintiffs on the grounds that it is irrelevant d immaterial. Objection overruled. Stipulation received.)

It is further stipulated—

Defendants offer in evidence so much of the minutes of the barining Agency for July 20th, 1937, contained on page 4 of said minutes, as states:

"Remarks of Mr. George W. Lamb, of the Springfield Bank, relevant to the great progress made in cooperative marketing. . Harmon of the United States Department of Agriculture spoke the assistance the Federal Government was ready to give and ted that there was already a law on the statute books at Washton which was a permissive law and could be used when wanted. congratulated us on the progress we had made and sincerely ed that we achieved our goal."

JAY C. TREAT, recalled as a witness on behalf of the defendants.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

Special News Bulletin of the Bargaining Agency, dated August 1938, off red in evidence. Government objects on the ground t it is immaterial. Objection overruled. Received in evidence Defendants Exhibit 66.)

n Exhibit 59 there is a statement of all cooperatives who were mbers of the Bargaining Agency on December 6, 1938, with a few eptions. The Boonville Cooperative was not in there on Decem- 6, 1938, but that was corrected. What is shown on Exhibit No. is substantially a list of members as of August 1938. (Statent showing totals of cooperatives received and withdrawn from ency from June 7, 1938, to January 6, 1939, offered in evidence. vernment objects on grounds of incompetency and irrelevancy. erruled. Received as Defendants Ex. 67 in evidence.)

RICHARD STACEY, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live in Utica, New York. I am vice-president of the Empire Milk Trucking Company. I have charge of the operations of that company in trucking milk to the metropolitan area. We have 552 about 60 trucks. With the exception of about five, they are tank trucks. The tank trucks carry from 150 to 320 40-quart cans. The company is a member of the Milk Transport Association which includes about 50% of the milk tanks that are licensed.

I am familiar with some of the rates charged and the fair and reasonable charges for transporting milk by tank truck in the New York milk shed and know something about the railroad freight rates. I have examined Order No. 27 and am familiar with the freight differentials contained therein.

Solsville is 575 miles to Long Island or Brooklyn, round trip, or 277 miles each way. Mr. Harmon places Solsville in the 231-240 mile freight zone. The railroad terminal from Solsville, Oriskany Falls, and Bridgewater is Weehawken, New Jersey, and it is on the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad.

I have been in the trucking business since September 1934. On a few occasions my company hauled milk from Bridgewater, New York, to Maspeth, Long Island, by tank trucks of the Jetter Dairy Company; we do not haul to Long Island by truck. We have transported milk from the Jetter Company plant at Solsville to New York City and New York City to Maspeth, Long Island, and from the Oriskany Falls Plant of the Jetter Dairy Company to Maspeth, Long Island.

There is no standard charge for trucking milk various distances in the New York milk zone or milk shed. My company follows the rates of the Interstate Commerce Commission only as affects interstate commerce. There are competing companies transporting milk from the vicinity of Bridgewater and Oriskany Falls, New York. (Plaintiffs' objection on grounds of immateriality overruled.) The Milk Transportation Company, operated by George Beals, transports milk from that area to the metropolitan area. Mr. James F. Burke of Vernon, New York, hauls for the Dairymen's League.
553 Most of the hauling done by my company is for independent dealers. My company charges 30 cents for ten gallons in hauling milk from Solsville and Oriskany Falls, New York, to Maspeth, Long Island. The transportation charge is the same for the entire New York City area. Our charges are substantially the same as the charges of other companies for hauling under similar conditions. (Government objects on grounds that witness is not qualified as an expert and testimony is hearsay. Overruled.) We charge twenty-five cents per ten-gallon can for drawing milk 200 miles. I do not know the usual and customary charge for transporting milk from Weehawken, New Jersey, to Maspeth, Long Island, as we have never rformed that specific service. (Government moves to strike out tire line of testimony on the grounds that the witness is not quali-d and that it is immaterial and irrelevant and has no bearing on e issues in this case. Motion denied.)

Defendants offered in evidence Bargaining Agency News release newspapers, dated February 7, 1938, entitled "Drafting Milk Mar-ting Order for New York." Plaintiffs objected on the grounds that was immaterial and irrelevant. Objections overruled. Received evidence, marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 67.

Defendants offered in evidence Bargaining Agency News release newspapers, dated April 5, 1938. Plaintiffs objected on the ounds that it was immaterial and irrelevant. Objections overruled. eceived in evidence, marked Defendants' Exhibit 67–A.

Defendants offered in evidence Bargaining Agency release to news-pers, dated April 7, 1938. Plaintiffs objected on the grounds that was immaterial and irrelevant. Objections overruled. Received evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 67–B.

Defendants offered in evidence release of the Bargaining Agency, ted Syracuse, March 28, 1938, to which was attached a list of news-pers to which the release was to be mailed. Plaintiffs objected on the grounds that it was irrelevant and immaterial. Objections overruled. Received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 67–C.

Defendants offered in evidence a letter, dated July 11, 1938, Charles H. Baldwin, Metropolitan Bargaining Agency, signed by orge C. Lee, associate editor of the Dairymen's League News, to ich was attached a story for the "News," dated July 20, 1938. aintiffs objected on the grounds that no foundation was laid; im-oper, immaterial, and irrelevant; no proof that the article was e result of the correspondence. Objections to the article overruled; the letter, sustained. Letter marked Defendants' Exhibit 67–D Identification; article received in evidence, marked Defendants' hibit 67–E.

Defendants offered in evidence copy of a booklet containing in-rmation on the Sheffield Producers Cooperative Association, pre-red at the request of Federal and State Officials, for September 38. Plaintiffs object on the grounds that it is immaterial and elevant. Objections overruled. Received, marked Defendants' hibit 68.

Defendants offered in evidence copies of claims by the Queens-boro Farm Products, Inc., for market service under Article VII, section 6, paragraph 2, of the marketing agreement. Re-ceived, marked Defendants' Exhibits 69 and 70.

Defendants offered in evidence statement consisting of six sheets pplied by the Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., showing quantities milk diverted to the Queensboro plant at Canastota for September, tober and November 1938. Plaintiffs object on the grounds of elevancy and immateriality. Objections overruled. Received, rked Defendants' Exhibits 71 through 71–E, inclusive.

PERCY W. DAKE, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside in Saratoga Springs, New York. I am in the milk business. In the month of September 1938, I was handling the sale of milk from various plants in the New York production area. I was selling milk to Alex Eisenberg and some of the corporations which he controls. I talked with Mr. E. Manning Gaynor in September about the sales to Eisenberg; I believe there were one or two personal talks and some over the telephone. In the early part of September I went to Leonardville with my brother to talk to Mr. Gaynor. He called me up and asked me to come over with my brother. Mr. Treat was present. (Plaintiffs object on grounds of irrelevancy and immateriality. Objection overruled.)

Mr. Gaynor and Mr. Treat informed me that they had made arrangements to have all of our milk transferred to the Dairymen's League plant at Massena, I mean the milk from Plattsburg and Chateaugay. Approximately 1500 40-quart cans of milk were being produced daily in Plattsburg and Chateaugay. I had not made a request to have the milk of those two plants sold to the Dairymen's League and delivered to the Dairymen's League plants. I told them we had certain existing contracts which would interfere with 556 such an arrangement and we had manufacturing facilities of our own which we thought were adequate to take care of the supply in case we wanted to have all this milk manufactured. I also told them we thought the producers would not be contented to have their milk go to the Dairymen's League because they had withdrawn from the Dairymen's League, to some extent, to establish an independent outlet.

Chateaugay is about 50 miles from Massena and Plattsburg is about 90 miles away. It was pointed out that under the order, by diverting that way, the cooperatives would get the full order price and we would get out full commission, and it should make a very satisfactory arrangement from their viewpoint.

The Plattsburg plant is owned by the Clinton County Dairymen's Cooperative Association, Inc. I assisted some of the officials of that cooperative in preparing an application for cooperative payments, as provided by Order 27. The application was not filed with the Administrator at that time but was filed subsequently. It was pointed out that under the order it would naturally follow that the cooperative would get the five cents; that was the general understanding in the conversation. (Government moves to strike answers on the grounds that witness cannot testify as to who made statements. Motion denied.)

We do not divert that milk to the Dairymen's League at Massena. It was suggested that the separators at Chateaugay be removed so as to make it a fluid plant. That was suggested by Mr. Gaynor.

Several days later, Mr. Gaynor called me up in regard to the Eisenberg contract. He said that they were arranging to divert Eisenberg's milk. Mr. Gaynor had charge of this arrangement. He told me that Eisenberg had not signed the milk marketing agreement and that they were arranging to divert his milk to other plants. I told him we would go along with him and divert the milk from Plattsburg if we were notified. At Mr. Gaynor's request, we withheld milk (at Plattsburg) from Eisenburg for about two or 557 three days. That milk was resold as fluid milk to some other buyer.

In October, I talked with Mr. Gaynor again concerning Eisenberg. Mr. Gaynor had notified us on the phone that Eisenberg had signed the agreement and we resumed shipping to Eisenberg. The calls were made by Mr. Gaynor from Leonardsville to Saratoga. (Government moves to strike all the testimony of this witness on the ground that no marketing agreement was signed; nothing in the pleadings sets forth anything about threats—coercion—in connection with the signing of the marketing agreement; Mr. Gaynor was not shown to have authority to engage in any of the alleged activities. Motion denied.) I had three different conversations with Mr. Gaynor. The last one was in October. There were two telephone conversations, and I called at Mr. Gaynor's home at his request.

The Plattsburg Cooperative was not allowed five cents, or any amount, as a cooperative.

Over objection, defendant Jetters Dairy Company, Inc., was granted permission to amend answers to conform to evidence of witness Dake. Plaintiffs moved to strike all evidence of witness. Motion denied. Defendants' Exhibit 72, carbon copy of a letter dated December 20, 1938, from Clinton County Dairymen's Cooperative Association to Market Administrator, and defendants' Exhibit 73, original letter dated December 23, 1938, from Mr. Harmon to Clinton County Cooperative Association, Inc., received in evidence.

Cross examination by Mr. WALLACH:

The correct name of the Plattsburg Co-op. is Clinton County Dairymen's Cooperative Association, Incorporated. I have a written contract with them to act as a business adviser. (Witness gives copy of contract to Mr. Wallach.) The contract was entered into in July, and it is still in force. I was never a broker to sell the milk of this cooperative. I had a conversation with Mr. Gaynor about the 558 diversions of milk to Massena. Mr. Gaynor told me, at his home, that they had made arrangements, after conversations with Washington, by telephone, and with Albany, to have the milk from our plants at Chateaugay and Plattsburg diverted to Massena. When I say Plattsburg I mean the Clinton County Co-op. I regard these cooperatives as a part of my own organization, in a sense; we buy the output of that co-op. We have been buying it since the cooperative started on July 9th. Nothwithstanding the fact that we buy all the milk of this cooperative I still have an agreement with them as their adviser and I am paid for my advice.

Before I commenced purchasing all of the milk of this cooperative, Eisenberg purchased it direct. I did not act as a broker when Eisenberg or one of his corporations purchased the milk directly. I never was a broker. Eisenberg entered into a contract with this cooperative before the opening of a plant on July 9th. His contract called for delivery from the date of opening until April 1, 1939.

Q. Now, didn't you just say a minute ago that you purchased milk from this Co-op. since the date of the opening of the plant?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, will you tell me how these two statements are compatible?

A. Yes. I received—the Clinton County Co-op. received a notice from the State Department that Mr. Eisenberg, or the corporation which he represented, was not duly licensed and bonded under the State Law, and we were about to open, it was necessary that we have a market, and inasmuch as we had a dealer's license, I suggested to the cooperative that temporarily we would purchase this milk in our own name and sell it to Eisenberg until the matter could be straightened out. Subsequently——

Q. And the matter has not been straightened out as yet, is that correct?

A. No.

I pay for the milk that I buy from the cooperative and sell it to Eisenberg. It is paid for by check I do not always wait until Eisenberg pays me before I pay the cooperative. I entered into my agreement with the cooperative after it was learned that Eisen-559 berg didn't have a bond It was entered into when the cooperative started. Mr. Eisenberg's contract was entered into before we purchased. The State Department questioned whether Mr. Eisenberg was properly licensed and bonded, and when I learned Eisenberg did not have a bond, I purchased the milk for the purpose of furnishing an outlet for the Clinton County Cooperative.

I was very instrumental in the organization of the cooperative. I have known Mr. Eisenberg over a year. I am not selling cream to Eisenberg nor one of his corporations. I believe the Saratoga Cooperative has sold Eisenberg milk or cream products from time to time, and Chateaugay has a direct contract with Eisenberg Farms. I have been connected with the Chateaugay Farms Cooperative; I have a connection with them now.

In the month of September we had some trouble with payments from Eisenberg for milk which we purchased from the Clinton County Cooperative and in turn sold to Eisenberg. I talked to Mr. Gaynor about it, in October, I think. I have had numerous conversations with Mr. Gaynor. I wanted Mr. Gaynor to act as an intermediary to try to adjust the account with Eisenberg, along with several other accounts. I did not talk with Mr. Gaynor about it in September because the payment for the milk was not due at that time. The milk was paid for in the month of October. I paid the full Q. Is it or is it not a fact that you did not pay for that milk until Mr. Eisenberg pays you, after Mr. Gaynor straightened it out for you?

A. Mr. Gaynor never straightened anything out for me.

Q. Didn't he arrange with Mr. Eisenberg to make payment?

A. The payment is not made, as yet.

Q. Did Mr. Gaynor arrange for these payments with Mr. Eisenberg?

A. He did not, not to my knowledge, at least.

I have never had control over the cooperative. I do not know whether Mr. Gaynor believed I had control of the cooperative. Early in September Mr. Gaynor asked me to have the cooperative divert the milk from Mr. Eisenberg. I explained to Mr. Gaynor that there were existing contracts. I meant the contract between Eisenberg Farms and the cooperative. It is not being operated, but it is still existing; it is still a contract.

I am paid for my advice to the cooperative pursuant to the poundage sold. We get five cents a can, providing we keep the operating cost of the plant on certain specific items in the contract at fifteen cents per hundredweight and under; and if it exceeds in cost of handling, if this exceeds fifteen cents, any portion which it exceeds that would be deducted from the commission. The Clinton County co-op. operates the plant, they simply consult with me in the mechanics of operating the plant and the general problems with which the milkman and cooperative would be confronted. I operated the Saratoga Dairy about three years ago, and an ice cream plant for a number of years. We have been in the dairy business for sixteen years. The money is not paid to me as a commission for selling milk for Eisenberg.

Cross-examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

We own a plant at Saratoga Springs. It is not an ice cream plant; it is a skimming plant and we have manufacturing facilities for casein. Previous to July I formed a connection with the Clinton County Cooperative. My contract expired in July. Prior to that time I knew that the Secretary of Agriculture was conducting hearings throughout the State, and I knew he was asked to come into New York to help the Commissioner of Agriculture of New York to regulate the milk business. I also knew that Mr. Eisenberg had been in the milk business for a long time. I knew that Mr. Eisenberg had to have a license in order to buy milk from producers and had to give bond in order to meet the requirements and get a license. The State Department notified the Clinton County Cooperative that Mr. Eisenberg did not have a license. (Letter which Clinton Dairy Co-operative received from Kenneth F. Fee, Director, Division of Milk Control, offered in evidence as Plaintiffs' Exhibit C. Received. Plaintiffs' Exhibit D, letter sent to Chateaugay Marketing Association, signed J. A. Conboy, by Charles H. Fogg of the State hibit C on the ground that it is not proper on cross-examination to impeach the witness. Defendants object to Exhibit D on the grounds that it is hearsay and no part of proper cross-examination. Defendants' motion denied. Exhibits received in evidence.)

We started the operations at Chateaugay in the early part of February 1938, and the organization of the Clinton County plant was started in the early spring months. We helped to organize both of them. We helped to negotiate the deal with Mr. Eisenberg. There is a contract between Eisenberg and the Clinton County Cooperative, and subsequent to its signing these letters were received. I did not ship any milk directly to Eisenberg under that contract. I did not use that contract when I was organizing the cooperatives.

There was an arrangement entered into after I learned that the contract was invalid because Eisenberg was not licensed to do busines in the State. I bought the milk in my name. I sold some of the milk to Eisenberg and some of it to independent dealers. As far as I know, Eisenberg had not put up his bond with the State of New York when I sold him the milk. My date of payment to the Clinton Producers was on the 14th and 28th of the month following delivery. The check has always been out on time. I paid for that milk on the utilization basis. Eisenberg had not, in all cases, paid me for the milk before I paid the producers.

We send out one check just before the 14th and one just before the 28th, payable to the Clinton County Cooperative. There might be some other checks in between there. We do not send the firm's check to the producers. The producers of these various coop-
562 eratives are paid in various ways. Sometimes we sent what they call a special Federal Bank draft drawn through the Federal Bank. It is payable at the bank at Plattsburg. (Defendants object to production of checks as being improper. The Court made no ruling, but continued the proceedings and instructed the witness to produce the checks and reports requested by plaintiffs.)

Mr. Dougherty of New York City is a former chief of the Country Milk Inspection Division and is now a broker. We sell some of our milk, that is, some of the Clinton Cooperative milk, through him. Mr. Dougherty receives a commission for the sale of milk, and the commission is charged against the Clinton Cooperative. I buy milk from the Clinton Cooperative and take title to that milk and after I take title, Mr. Dougherty sells the milk for me as broker. During the month of September, I charged the Clinton Cooperative $197.42, which was paid for Mr. Dougherty's commission for brokerage services. (The witness was shown a document purporting to be taken from the records of the Department of Agriculture and Markets.)

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to whether or not you owed the Co-ops. $1,102.07 for September milk as late as the 28th day of November, this year; that is my question?

A. It refreshes my recollection that there was a change in the figures, necessitated by circumstances.

Q. Now, who determined that a change of figures was necessary?

A. When it was shown that the full—the order price plus 23 cents plant handling on which these figures were predicated—

On the order price plus 23 cents plant handling. When it was determined that those prices were not obtainable from the Bagden Milk Company and that the Bagden Milk Company at the present time still contests that bill and has not paid it to date, when Eisenberg's Farm has not paid their bill in September to date, when the Municipal Farms still owe us substantial sums of money for this period, it became evident that the full order price plus 23 cents, which was not in the order, was not obtainable from the trade.

563 Q. I see.

A. And that necessitated a change in these figures, and at that time a new——

Q. (Interrupting) Now, wait a minute. Wait, I haven't heard about Bagden. This milk, as I understand it, you bought and took title to; didn't you?

A. Right.

Q. And then you sold some of it to Bagden?

A. That is right.

Q. And Bagden didn't pay you?

A. That is right.

Q. And Eisenberg didn't pay you?

A. That is right.

Q. And then, because Eisenberg didn't pay you and Bagden didn't pay you, then you felt justified in changing the figures which represented the amount which was to be paid to the producers; is that it?

A. We were authorized as agents by the Cooperative to make these sales and make the full return to the Cooperative for the receipts.

There was an arrangement with the cooperative by which we were to buy the milk from the cooperatives—producers—and sell the 564 milk as agents. The arrangement was made before I started buying the milk. It was made when it became advisable for us to sell the milk in our own name. We were to handle it in our own name and turn over the full value of the milk, deducting all expenses therefrom, and turn over the net receipts to the cooperatives even through that didn't yield to producers the order price.

Cross examination by Mr. COOKE:

I entered into the contract with the Clinton County Cooperative Association in July of 1938, I believe. We negotiated a contract with the Chateaugay Cooperative before that. That was a service contract. Before that the Clinton County Cooperative had been sending some milk, as individuals, not as a cooperative, to the Chateaugay unit, and previous to that, these same individuals, who were not as yet organized, had sent milk to our plant at Saratoga. In November of 1937 we began to get milk from these two groups as individuals. It was taken to Saratoga. At the Clinton County Cooperative, milk was received as a cooperative after the plant was opened on July 9th.

I have acted as an adviser at both the Plattsburg and Chateaugay plants. I entered into the contract at Plattsburg around July. The one at Chateaugay was entered into as an agreement which was filed at the hearing with the Commissioner in Albany when we made application for a license. The board of directors directed the president of the cooperative to sign the contract, but through a technical delay he never did sign that contract. We have done business for some six months.

We bought and sold some of the milk when it seemed to be to the best advantage of the cooperative, with the understanding that the full return for that milk, net return, would be turned over to the cooperative. In some cases it proved advisable for us to handle the milk in our own name—in the name of P. W. and C. V. Dake.

565 We did not act as brokers. Part of the time the milk was handled under the name of Dake Brothers and part of the time it was handled under the name of someone else. Where the sales were made direct, the returns were made direct. We did not charge a commission or brokerage on those sales. Our compensation was not for handling. We did get compensation on all the milk handled through the plants at Chateaugay and Clinton.

We took title to the Clinton milk. We did not sell the Clinton milk to Mr. Eisenberg in New York; there was an original contract entered into between the directors of the Co-op. and Mr. Eisenberg. That was after we were acting in the capacity as business advisers to the cooperative. I was acting in the capacity of adviser to the cooperative when the contract was signed with Mr. Eisenberg.

In April 1938, I sold some milk to the Bagden Milk Company. The terms of the contract provided for a sliding scale—so much over Sheffield; i. e., Sheffield was taken as the base price, the prices to be paid for the various months were based entirely upon the Sheffield price, plus a certain handling charge. I was acting as the business adviser of the Chateaugay Company and advised them to enter into that contract. There was no specific provision in either of these contracts between Chateaugay and Eisenberg and Clinton and Bagden that in the event of the adoption or promulgation of a Federal or State order prices for milk to the producer should be governed by the Federal or State order. It was agreed that conditions beyond our control would be sufficient to govern, and we thought that this would protect us in the event that there was a Federal order.

The discussion of a Federal order was general throughout the milk shed in April of 1938, and I had read a great deal about a proposed Federal and State order. No provision whatsoever beyond this allusion to conditions beyond my control was made in the contract because my attorney agreed with the attorney of Mr. Bagden 566 that that was all that was necessary. It is not true that as soon as the order had been passed I had difficulty with both of these contracts. After the order was put into force in September, then there were serious difficulties with Mr. Bagden in regard to his milk.

Q. Did most of your difficulty with Mr. Bagden arise over the fact that no provision had explicitly been madeoin your contract for the payment of the prices provided for in the Federal and State order?

A. Well, on September 1st, we did take further provision.

The contract that I had with Bagden was drawn between ourselves and Bagden and assigned by Dake Brothers to the Chateaugay Co-operative. Mr. Bagden was not a party to the assignment though he was aware of the assignment.

Some time in September, I had some difficulty with Mr. Eisenberg and with Bagden in regard to prices; they refused to pay me the prices provided for in the Federal and State order. I first discovered that I was going to have some difficulty or some argument with Mr. Bagden and Mr. Eisenberg in regard to prices on their failure to pay, on the fourteenth of September, for the previous week's milk, as was provided for in the contract.

I knew when the referendum was held on the Federal and State order and knew that the Federal order was promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture and the State order by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York some time in the latter part of August 1938. As business adviser to these two cooperatives I took the matter up with them at considerable length. I realized that the contracts that were in effect at that time might be effected seriously by the provisions of both of these orders, and that situation was discussed. At first, I was not considerably disturbed about the contracts, but later, it developed that I was 567 and I took some steps to find out what my rights might be both under the Federal and the State orders, with regard to these two cor acts. I first approached Mr. Harmon in the Hotel Commodore in New York City on the first day of September. I also took up the matter as to the status of the contracts with the State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

I talked with Mr. Gaynor and Mr. Kniffen in the State Department of Agriculture and Markets. The first meeting I ever had with Mr. Gaynor was in Utica sometime after the first of January 1938 in connection with the sale of milk which we were making in New York. I also had a meeting with Mr. Gaynor at the Hotel Utica the latter part of August 1938. My recollection is that he called me up and wanted to have a talk with me; I don't think I called Mr. Gaynor myself—I don't think I had any occasion to. My brother and I then went to the Hotel Utica.

Our conversation at the hotel concerned what our attitude was in regard to the Federal order. I saw Mr. Gaynor next about September 7, at his home. I believe he called me up and asked me to come over. I am not just sure the date of the next time I saw him, but I think I met him with you (Mr. Cooke) at the Hotel Utica. My brother and I were present at that time.

At that time I don't think there was any discussion concerning the diversion of milk in any way at all. We had a conference that lasted several hours there that afternoon. It had to do with the determination of the Bagden status. I believe that meeting was in October.

I saw Mr. Gaynor again after that at his home. My brother was with me. On that occasion, I believe I requested an interview with him. I don't think there was anyone present at that particular meeting, but Mr. Gaynor, my brother and myself.

568 In November Mr. Eisenberg and I appeared at Mr. Gaynor's home in Leonardsville. I never did go to Mr. Gaynor's house in Leonardsville and take Mr. Bagden along with me. My brother did go and take Mr. Bagden; as a matter of fact, my brother and I were in quite frequent communication with Mr. Gaynor during the months of September and October, requesting his advice in regard to the difficulties we were in with Eisenberg and with the Bagden Dairy and in regard to many other problems. I frequently sought Mr. Gaynor's advice in regard to those problems. I did not make the statement yesterday that I had never been at Mr. Gaynor's house in Leonardsville but once.

Cross examination by Mr. WALLACH:

In the action against Bagden for goods sold and delivered, he sued Dake Brothers and we have sued him. Dake Brothers are the plaintiffs in the action against Bagden for milk purchased by Bagden from Dake Brothers.

I said a little while ago that I assigned to the Chateaugay Cooperative the contract we had with Bagden for the purchase and sale of milk. Bagden did not necessarily owe that money to the cooperative—he continued to pay us for the milk under the arrangement, though, as a matter of fact, the cooperative and not Dake Brothers was the owner of the claim against Bagden. The cooperative was not the owner of the claim for all of the milk; some of the milk was sent out of the Plattsburg cooperative because Chateaugay did not have sufficient milk to fill the contract after they assumed it. Chateaugay authorized us, as agents, to make the collections. I am suing as a party plaintiff.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

We have paid Chateaugay for that milk.

In the latter part of August, just before the orders went into effect, I had a talk with Mr. Gaynor at Utica. At that time 569 the main discussion was along the lines of what we would do in regard to compliance with the order. We told them that we had supported the order from the beginning, that we had encouraged our producers to vote for it, and that we would give it every assistance possible. I stated then that I would not sign a marketing agreement, and I did not sign it. The matter of signing the agreement was discussed and I stated that I would not sign a marketing agreement.

I went to New York on the first of September and saw Mr. Harmon. I discussed with him our status and showed him a letter which I had written to all my customers at the suggestion of my attorney. I wrote a letter to Bagden, a copy of which I have here. (At this point over objection defendants offered a proposed amendment to their pleadings. Objection overruled. Amendment allowed. The Government then moved to strike all the testimony of Dake dealing with alleged coercion exercised by any persons requiring him to sign a marketing agreement on the ground that there was no paragraph in the original bill or of the proposed amendment that covered it. Motion denied. Further objection on the ground that there was no showing of any authority by any such persons to act on behalf of the Secretary of Agriculture, nor any complaint or evidence that any of the milk of any of the defendants was 570 diverted or any threats made that it would be diverted. On consideration of this objection, the Court reserved decision on the admission of this amendment.)

In my conversation with Mr. Harmon the question of what would happen to a dealer who did not pay the order prices was brought up and Mr. Harmon said, "That comes under our department." I went to New York to see Mr. Harmon because we wanted to know our status in regard to our various contracts and we wanted him to understand that we had done under the advice of our attorney and whether it was in accord with his own views. I don't recall any specific discussion on that particular point with Mr. Gaynor. I had discussion with the attorneys for some of these dealers buying milk from me at the time I made the contracts about what would be done in case of the Federal order. I had those talks I testified to on cross examination as having been with Mr. Gaynor in October and there was further discussion about diverting or withholding milk from dealers. I did withhold milk from some dealer. That conversation was on the telephone. Mr. Gaynor called me in Saratoga. (Government objects to the entire line of testimony on grounds previously stated. Objection overruled.) On October 12, 13 and 14, I withheld some milk at Mr. Gaynor's request. That milk was withheld from Mr. Eisenberg. (Question and answer of witness stricken. Exception granted defendants.)

I had a discussion with Mr. Gaynor in reference to payment to me of the diversion charge for milk withheld from Eisenberg about October 12, 13 and 14, 1938. That talk was by telephone. (The Court points out that the objection runs to all of this testimony.) I had a talk with Mr. Gaynor on or about October 11, 1938. I diverted milk from Eisenberg and shipped it to another plant for manufacturing during sometime in October 1938. That milk was diverted from the Plattsburgh plant to the Saratoga plant. Subsequently, after that three-day period, I resumed shipment to Eisenberg. I filed a claim for such diversion under the name of Clinton County Cooperative, I think. That claim has not been paid. I do not have a copy of the claim here.

I was present at a conference when Mr. Gaynor talked with 571 Mr. Sexauer, President of the Dairymen's League. I believe that was in October. While I was there he also called Mr. Wellwood of the Sheffield Farms. I don't think he placed a call to anyone else at that particular time. Nothing was said in that conversation to me about the diversion of milk.

SAMUEL ROOTSTEIN, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I reside at 1460 Bristow Street, The Bronx, City of New York. I am employed by the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company and the Jetter Dairy Company. I am the manager of those two companies. Mr. Arthur Jetter is the supervisor-general manager. Part of my work as a salesman and as a collector. I solicit new stores, collect accounts of ours, and adjust accounts.

The Jetter Dairy Company has milk-receiving plants to Solsville, New York, Oriskany Falls and Bridgewater, New York. The milk which is sold by the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company is milk which comes from those plants. The milk that is sold by the Jetter Dairy Company is milk that comes from the same plants. The volume of business done by these two companies can be separated. The Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company sold approximately 850 cases of milk on the first of September, and the Jetter Dairy Company sold about 300 cases, making a total volume of 1,150 cases for the two businesses. The daily average of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company and Jetter Dairy Company is 900 or 950 cases now. The Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company lost some business in September. (Government objects to last statement as being a conclusion, and there is nothing to show that the company does not always lose business during the month of September. The Court agrees that it is a conclusion, but the objections are overruled.)

There was some time when we lost some business. (Government objects on the ground that the operations of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company have no relevancy in the case. Objection overruled.)

572 Mr. Arthur Jetter is in charge of both the Jetter Dairy Company and the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company. I take instructions from him. (Plaintiffs object on the grounds that it is immaterial. Objection overruled.)

In the early part of September, I did lose some of the business of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company. (Plaintiffs object on the ground that it is immaterial. Objection overruled.) I lost some business on the fourth of September. I lost it from a customer located at 744 Fox Street. The customer's name is Max Weintraub. Prior to the fourth of September the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company had been selling that customer thirty twelve-quart cases of milk daily. On the fourth of September we sold that customer only ten cases of milk.

There are two classes of milk, one known as advertised and one as unadvertised. The advertised brands are Sheffield's and Borden's; the unadvertised brands include Gold Medal, Niagara Milk Company, Dairymen's League, The Jetter Dairy Company, Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company, Queensboro Farm, Eisenberg Farms, and Sunnydale Farm. I went to that store to ascertain the reason for the drop from thirty cases to ten cases and saw ten cases of Dairymen's League and ten cases of Gold Medal Farm milk. (Plaintiffs object to that as immaterial. Objection overruled.)

I continued to sell milk to that store, but not the same quantity I had sold. After the fourth of September, I continued to sell that store ten cases a day. I saw Gold Medal and Dairymen's League milk there after September fourth. There was no other milk being sold in that store on September third. I was in Mr. Weintraub's store on September first and second and third and there was no milk from the Gold Medal or Dairymen's League in that store on those dates.

(Plaintiffs object. Objection overruled.)

I made some records from the books of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company showing changes in the sale of milk after September first.

573 I made the records in my own handwriting. The sales of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company have decreased constantly since September first. (Plaintiffs object on the grounds that it is irrelevant and immaterial. Objections overruled.) The Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company and Jetter Dairy Company sell 900 or 950 cases per day now. (Government objects on the ground that there is no evidence to show that it is not a customary loss of sales at this time of year. Objection overruled.) The Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company sells about 700 to 750 cases a day and the Jetter Dairy Company sells about 200 cases a day.

574 It is customary among drivers in the trade to make out delivery slips showing the street number without showing the name of the street. We can determine the name of the street because each driver has a territory to cover and they can tell by the route.

Breakstone milk is considered as unadvertised milk in the trade and the Borden Company has an unadvertised brand known as Reid's Union Dairy. The Sheffield Farms Company, Breakstone Milk, and Reid's Union Dairy are competitors of the Jetter Dairy Company and Tri-boro. I have a list of the addresses of customers lost by the Jetter Dairy Company since September.

Between September First and Fourth we charged Mr. Weintraub 9¾ cents per quart for milk. After September Fourth I charged nine cents.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCauley:

I am employed as manager, canvasser, and collector of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company and the Jetter Dairy Company. I have been employed in that capacity for a year and a half. Prior to that time I was a route salesman. I am not now a route salesman.

There was a time during my employment when the Jetter Dairy Company and the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company were the sole dealers delivering milk to Weintraub at 744 Fox Street. That was for ten or twelve days prior to September 4, 1938.

Prior to the first of July 1938 I know that the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company was delivering milk to 744 Fox Street. I know that, because I happened to be checking on that stop around that time. I know that the Dairymen's League took over the business of the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company. As far as I know, when the Dairymen's League took over the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company the business that was in the store at 744 Fox Street was not Dairymen's League business. There was a time in August when the 575 business of the Dairymen's League or the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company at that stop decreased from eight cases of milk a day to three cases of milk a day. Mr. Weintraub continued to take eight cases of milk a day after the ninth of August 1938. The Tri-boro Company got the bulk of that business from that date. That was before September first. The Tri-boro company did not take the business away from either the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company or the Dairymen's League some time in the month of August 1938. After the time when Tri-boro, or Jetter, went into 744 Fox Street with five cases of milk a day, I believe the price was something like seven cents a quart. For a while the price was six cents a quart and then it dropped to five cents a quart.

After September 1, 1938, Tri-boro, or Jetter, continued to have Mr. Weintraub of 744 Fox Street as a customer. On and after September 1, 1938, about thirty cases of milk were delivered to Mr. Weintraub every day. I believe that we delivered thirty cases to Mr. Weintraub on September first. I don't know whether we delivered thirty cases on September second, but we were putting in the entire order at nine and three-quarter cents.

On August 31, 1937, we first started to deliver thirty cases a day to 744 Fox Street. It is not a fact that on September 1st we merely continued to deliver the five or six cases that we had been delivering during the month of August 1938. I did say that on or about August 9, 1938, the Jetter Dairy or the Tri-boro took over the bulk of the business at 744 Fox Street. I did not say that when we took over the bulk of the business we were delivering about five or six cases a day. In the month of August we were probably putting in anywhere from ten to fifteen cases a day. I know that the business of the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company, or Dairymen's League, was cut at that time, but I don't know what the order was cut to. I know that the order was cut in our favor.

I know we had the entire business of the store at 744 Fox 576 Street on September 1, 1938; the Lincoln Milk & Cream Company, or Dairymen's League, wasn't in there at all on that date. Everybody was out except Tri-boro. We charged 9¾ cents a quart for the milk which we were putting into this store. We continued to put all the milk in that store, until September fourth—about twenty-five to thirty cases a day. On September fifth, I cut the price to nine cents because I got a call on September fourth that the order was cut, and when I went over there I saw ten cases of Gold Medal milk and ten cases of Dairymen's League milk and ten cases of our milk. Since the fifth of September we have delivered only ten cases a day to that store.

At this point plaintiffs offered a memorandum consisting of three sheets, produced by the witness, marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit G for Identification.) The handwriting on Plaintiffs' Exhibit G for Identification is mine. I prepared those three sheets the day before yesterday. I prepared them at the offices of the Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company from my own books and records. I prepared them because I knew I was coming to this trial. I have made a notation on those sheets with respect to 744 Fox Street. (Plaintiffs' Exhibit G for Identification offered in evidence. Received.

When I was preparing to come here as a witness, I prepared Exhibit G from my own books and records, and from memory. I prepared it in order that I might refer to it for assistance in the event that I needed such assistance while testifying.

The sixth item in the first paragraph of Exhibit G is the item 744 Fox, "10 cases," included in a section which is entitled "Stops lost to Gold Medal." There is no notation of any kind at that point that any milk was lost to Dairymen's League. There is no other notation in the memorandum that refers to 744 Fox Street.

I have divided the three pages into sections—nine sections 577 in all—seven of which are entitled "Stops lost to" someone or other. I have not made a notation about milk being lost to the Dairymen's League. The sections of the memorandum are entitled, "Stops lost to Gold Medal," "Stops lost to Manchester Farms," "Stops lost to Breakstone," "Stops lost to Adler," "Stops lost to Queensboro Farms," "Stops lost to Bagden," "Stops lost to Eisenberg," "Gained from Adler," and "Cost." In the ninth section of the memorandum I have shown what it cost Tri-boro to retain customers; that is, concessions which I was forced to make in order to retain customers.

In the month of December we gave the customer at 1869 Third Avenue thirty cases of milk free in order to retain him. Sometime in November I gave the proprietor of the store at 800 Home Street, Bronx, merchandise equivalent to $30.24 in order to retain him as a customer. The merchandise was bottled milk. I gave the proprietor of the store at 1311 Brook Avenue, Bronx, twenty-five cases of milk on November 28th. I gave the proprietor of the stores at 504 East 138th Street and 572 East 138th Street twenty cases of milk and two quarts of heavy cream on October 22. All of the dates refer to 1938. Prior to September 1, 1938, we had sold for five and six cents a quart and I did give something away in 1937. Prior to September 1, 1938, I was free to sell milk at any competitive price I wanted to.

In the months of October, November, and December 1938 I was not giving cases of milk away to cover up the fact that I was selling milk cheaper than the price at which most milk dealers agreed that it should be sold if the dealer wanted to break even. I do not have a memorandum of any kind showing the business which I lost to the Dairymen's League after September 1, 1938. I am sure that I 578 have lost business to the Dairymen's League. Mr. Jetter told me to prepare the memorandum (Plaintiffs' Exhibit G); he called me on the telephone and instructed me to prepare it.

Cross examination by Mr. WALLACH:

I have lost business amounting to about 240 cases from the first of September 1938, to date. I have gained some new stops since September 1. I imagine I have gained around 40 cases. I solicited the new business. Since September 1, I have not attempted to take any business away from the Dairymen's League.

Q. In other words, since September 1st you didn't attempt to take any business away from the Dairymen's League, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is notwithstanding, as you say, the Dairymen's League took business from you?

A. That is correct.

I would have taken business away from Gold Medal, Queensboro, and Breakstone because they took business from me.

Q. Now, tell us why you wouldn't take from Dairymen's League notwithstanding, as you say, they took business from you?

A. Because previous to that, whenever we had any trouble with Dairymen's League, that is, as far as that branch is concerned, and I went to straighten it out, I straightened out to Mr. Myer, it was always to my satisfaction, as well as his.

I went to straighten out the Fox Street account but was not successful. I would solicit business to get it away from the Dairymen's League now because I found out a few weeks ago that I couldn't come to any sort of a head with them.

Q. Well, did you try since a few weeks ago to solicit any business of the Dairymen's League?

A. I haven't.

My drivers have also solicited business. They did not have instructions not to solicit business of Hauck & Schmidt or the Dairy-579 men's League. If they had brought in business of the Dairymen's League since September 1, 1938, it probably would have been up to me to decide whether to take that business. After I found out that I couldn't straighten out with Hauck and Schmidt I would have taken the business; before that, I would not.

Jetter Dairy and Tri-boro have seven routes. All of them are wholesale routes. There are nine regular drivers. I do not drive one of the trucks; the last time I drove a truck was about eight months ago.

I believe I know all the customers of Tri-boro and Jetter. I see all of them at some time or other. I do not take particular notice of how much milk each customer gets from any other company; I leave that to the driver. I didn't make any particular point of the customer at 744 Fox Street; it is my job to look at these route sheets every day.

I found out that Dairymen's League was delivering ten cases and Gold Medal was delivering ten cases when the driver called in and complained that he was cut on his order. I went around to see the customer and saw the ten cases from each dealer on the floor. I knew they had been delivered that morning because the driver called me and told me that. The driver called me and told me he was cut, but I didn't know who delivered them or what until I got there. I was there about eight o'clock. Grocery stores in that neighborhood open about 6:30 or a quarter of seven.

I know that customer. I have been in his store time and time again and know how he operates. He has a habit of holding milk over from day to day. I should judge he carried over three or four cases from the night before. Milk is delivered to stores by wholesalers any time from 2 o'clock in the morning to 2 or 3 o'clock 580 in the afternoon, but the grocer always gets a supply of milk on hand to be sold when he opens. (Defendants object to the answer as speculative. Objection overruled.).

When I got to the store I saw twenty cases of milk. My driver delivered his ten cases at the same time the man opened. My ten cases are usually in the ice box. It has been the driver's habit to put them in the ice box ever since he served the store. The Dairymen's League and Gold Medal drivers do not have the habit of 581 putting the milk in the ice box. Their milk was iced up, but the cases were not full of ice. All of our drivers are Union drivers.

A Union driver is permitted to deliver 135 packages on a wholesale route. We used the seven drivers on the routes in delivering the 1,150 cases of milk on September first. I was figuring the total amount of business by the welfare stations we have, which has nothing to do with the routes. We did not violate the union rules in delivering the 1,150 cases of milk. We deliver to four welfare stations. We get eight cents a quart for that milk.

I do not have charge of keeping books.

I first learned that I was going to testify that the Dairymen's League took business a way from me at Fox Street when I got on the witness stand. Mr. Pratt may have mentioned it to me, but I don't remember. I talked to Mr. Pratt about the business in the city when I got here. I asked him how this case was coming along. If he asked me about Fox Street, I probably told him; I don't remember volunteering any information. Mr. Pratt probably knew I was going to talk about Fox Street because of that affidavit—that list I gave him some time ago. We talked about it today when we went out to lunch, but I don't remember that anything was said about it before I got on the witness stand.

Cross examination by Mr. McCAULEY:

My brother Louis Rootstein was a driver on September First. He was in the employ of the Trio-boro company. He was driving Route No. 4. 744 Fox Street is on that route. My brother Louis did not call me and tell me that something had happened over at 744 Fox Street, it was a call from the office. My brother Louis is the 562 driver and he was in a position to tell me that he had lost business at that stop.

Redirect examination by Mr. PRATT:

As far as I know, the Tri-boro company first started to serve 744 Fox Street on August 31, 1937. The Lincoln Farms Company first started to serve them sometime in July or August of 1938. Eisenberg operated the Lincoln Farms before the Dairymen's League bought it. I know that the League took over Eisenberg's Lincoln Farms business. Prior to July or August of 1938 no other dealer was serving that store.

Mr. Myers is manager for Hauk & Schmidt, a branch of the Dairymen's League. I called him up to see if I could straighten out the matter of the 744 Fox Street stop with him.

The Dairymen's League took trade from the Jetter Dairy or Tri-boro company at 452 East 146th Street. (Plaintiffs objected to the question as not proper redirect examination. Overruled.) The business at that stop was lost during September or October—somewhere around October. We were selling 11 to 13 cases a day to that stop. Since we lost that business we have been selling only five cases a day to that stop. Sales of milk in August are practically the same as in September in New York City—sometimes more. Sheffield's and Borden's advertised brands were being sold to the Fox Street stop, but I understood they referred to unadvertised milk when they asked me about other dealers.

Cross-examination by Mr. McCAULEY:

In the City of New York, sales of milk are practically the same in August and September—sometimes more in August. In certain 583 sections of New York, when the children do not go to school it reflects in rather a large way in sales of milk, and, in certain sections of New York, the Summer week-ends reflect themselves in a decline of business in the sale of milk, but our business is not affected.

Our milk is bottled at Maspeth, Long Island, by the Freeman Dairy. I do not know whether Freeman Dairy buys milk from the Dairymen's League. (Defendants condeded Freeman Dairy buys milk from the Dairymen's League.)

In Plaintiffs' Exhibit G, I do not have an entry of any kind which indicates that I lost business to the Dairymen's League from the customer at 146th Street.

(At this point defendants offered in evidence statements of market service payments to the Borden Company and the Sheffield Farms Company for September, October, and November, and to the Dairymen's League for November; to the Sheffield Condensed Milk Company for September, October, and November, and Sheffield Producers Cooperative Association. (Government objects on the ground it is irrelevant and immaterial. Objection overruled. Received in evidence, marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 77.)

Defendants offered in evidence a stipulation and agreed statement showing the cost of transportation by tank trucks and the proportion of milk transported by railroad and by truck and also the basis for the differentials in New York. Received, marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 78.

Defendants offered in evidence the general schedules applicable to shipments of milk in tank cars by rail. Received and marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 79.

584 Defendants offered in evidence a statement showing transportation differential zones established by E. M. Harmon as Marketing Administrator on September 21, 1938, in the City of New York, as amended October 21, 1938, November 3, 1938, and December 3, 1938. Received and marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 80.

Defendants offered in evidence a statement furnished by the Dairymen's League stating the total volume of milk sold by them in fluid form in the State of New Jersey in September, October, and November 1938. Plaintiffs objected on the grounds that it was immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent. Objections overruled. Received and marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 81.

Plaintiffs made the following concession:

(Mr. LENT.) "In answer to a request for concession by defendants' counsel, we concede as follows:

"Total number of pounds of milk by volume sold by the Dairymen's League in its own business in the metropolitan area as fluid milk, wholesale, in each of the months of September, October, and November 1938:

"September, 10,688,784 pounds; October, 11,157,060 pounds: November, 10,451,228 pounds. With this explanation:

"These figures apply to stops, that is, store, restaurant, and hotel customers regularly served by the League's established routes. In addition to this, the League also serves institutions in the marketing area during the three months in question with milk in varying amounts pursuant to short-time arrangements made by such institutions from time to time with various handlers generally pursuant to regular competitive bids. The amounts so served to such institutions were as follows:

"September, 603,365 pounds: October, 1,079,023 pounds: November, 241,192 pounds.

"In connection with this concession it is my understanding that Mr. Pratt concedes the fact that the New York public schools opened September 12, 1938."

(Defendants then conceded it is a fair statement that the 585 consumption of milk in New York City, as a whole is greater when school is open than otherwise.)

Defendants then offered in evidence a computation of the actual base cash price to producers at Solsville, Oneida County, New York, for September, October, and November. Government objects on the ground it is irrelevant. Objections overruled. Received and marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 82.

ROBERT CHARLES DUMONT, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PRATT:

I live on a farm at Malone, New York. I am employed by Dake Brothers. I have operated the farm for eighteen years. I have been employed by Dake Brothers for about eleven months. I talked with Mr. Baldwin of the Bargaining Agency the very first part of September 1938. I talked with him over the telephone. He asked me if I could come to Syracuse; he would like to talk to me. (Plaintiffs object to the question. No foundation laid. It is irrelevant, immaterial, not binding on the Government. Objections overruled.)

I told Mr. Baldwin that it was almost impossible for me to come to Syracuse as I could not take care of the expenses. He asked me to see if the president or some of the directors of Clinton County Cooperative and Chateaugay Cooperative would come to Syracuse to a meeting being held there a few days after that. I told him I would go if I could. I attended the meeting of the Bargaining Agency and saw Mr. Harmon, Mr. Jay C. Treat, Mr. Baldwin, and Mr. Gaynor. Mr. Gaynor gave a talk. He said that if any of you fellows have any milk that anybody does not want, "Let me know and 586 I will find a place for it." (Goverment objects on the ground that it is irrelevant, immaterial, and Mr. Gaynor has no authority to act in behalf of the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States. Objection overruled.)

There was talk at that meeting about dealers' signing a marketing agreement; I don't recall that Mr. Gaynor talked about it. Mr. Gaynor said he would divert milk for anybody in distress. Nothing was said about withholding milk from anyone, as I recall. That was the day they formed the Minute Man organization. I don't recall who made the suggestion of the Minute Men; somebody made a motion or something and they called for volunteers. Mr. Rolfe was chairman of that meeting. I believe he is president of the Bargaining Agency.

Neither the Chateaugay nor Clinton County cooperative joined the Agency. After the meeting I talked with Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Treat concerning the diverting or withholding of milk. Mr. Gaynor was in the room for a short time. Mr. Baldwin said they expected there would be some trouble in getting dealers in line in getting the marketing order and signing the marketing agreement and asked me what I would do if I had the thing to do—to make dealers do things. I told him that my experience was if you wanted a milk dealer to do anything, the only thing to do with him was to take his milk away from him. I did not have any further conversation with Mr. Baldwin at that time.

Sometime around the first of October Mr. Baldwin called me on the telephone. He wanted to know if I could come to Syracuse. I told him I could, but I was running out of money for traveling expenses. He suggested if I would come down they would pay my expenses and railroad or operation of automobile and hotel bill. I told him I would come under those arrangements. Syracuse is about 200 miles. I arrived there about 4 o'clock and I believe 587 I stayed until the next afternoon. At that time I talked with Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Treat, and another gentleman. (Government objects to the entire line of testimony and all discussions. Objections overruled.) There were three gentlemen, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Treat, and another man there who was treasurer. Mr. Baldwin asked me if I had put in an application for a job with Mr. Harmon. I told him I had not. He asked me if I would be interested, and I told him I didn't think I would be. I asked him what the job might be an he said, "Well, we have got to have a fellow like you here, we have something that has got to be done, and I think you are the fellow that can do the job." (Government moves to strike the answer as it appears that Mr. Baldwin had no authority to act on behalf of Mr. Harmon. Court agreed that it does not bind Mr. Harmon or the Government, but allowed it to stand.) He said there were dealers who were not going along, and they wanted some men to go to a milk plant and dry it up the next morning.

I was a member of the Dairy Farmers' Organization Committee last year during the strike. I told Mr. Baldwin I guessed he had me overestimated, that I did not think I was any better than anybody else. I told him that I would not be interested in anything of that kind. He asked me if, in my opinion, a milk plant might be dried up and I told him if they wanted to dry a plant to send 75 or 100 good men down there and dry it up. I believe I was paid $20 for that trip. I was paid by a check of the Bargaining Agency. (Government moves to strike out testimony of the witness on the grounds that it is immaterial, irrelevant, none of it binding upon the Government. Motion overruled.)

Cross examination by Mr. SCHOENECK:

I don't think Commissioner Noyes was present at the meeting. I didn't know him at that time, but I did not see him if he was.
588 When I talked with Mr. Baldwin and the others they asked me how I would bring the dealers in line, and I told them that was the way I would do it.

I am a member of the Farmers' Union of the North Country. We dried up some plants in the North Country a year ago last fall. There was a milk strike in Sheffield's plant.

When I talked with Mr. Baldwin and the others the conversation was not to make the farmers do something, it was to make the dealers do something.

Cross examination by Mr. COOKE:

My sympathies are with the producers in this market set-up.

Parts of deposition of George R. Fitts offered by the defendants copied into the record

(From 1st page of deposition:) "George R. Fitts, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he resides at No. 65 Church Street, Cortland, Cortland County, New York, and that he is and has been for many years last past a Director of Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., and for several years last past and now is acting under the supervision and general direction of the Executive Committee of said Association as Executive Assistant in general charge of all sales of milk made to dealers and stores in the metropolitan market. As such, he is familiar not only with the policies of said Association, but also is in close contact with and cognizant of the market conditions existing in the metropolitan market and the sales made by the Association through its distributing Branches in New York City.

"By far the largest part of the sale of fluid milk in the New York City market by the Association is made direct to distributors. The Association, however, does sell and distribute a considerable quantity of milk directly to stores, restaurants, etc., in said City through its Branches. It has not been the policy of the Association to make such sales through its Branches at prices below the market therefor because such a policy would have an adverse reaction upon the distributors in said City who are buying milk from the Association and which milk is sold by them to a considerable extent to stores, restaurants, etc., in said City."

"There is a constant interplay of competition at all times between the League Branches and all dealers similarly selling milk at wholesale to stores in New York City. Jetter Dairy Co., Inc., and Tri-boro Milk & Cream Company are neither the lowest priced competition, nor the highest priced, nor are the League Branches run on a policy of either price cutting or unusually high prices. The League Branches are run by men experienced in this business because they formerly successfully conducted the businesses which the League purchased to find an outlet for its producers and these were substantial and established businesses. These men run these businesses so as to maintain their volume the same as do milk dealers, with one single and all-important exception. That is that they are now working for the farmers and consequently their underlying policy as directed by the representatives of the producers who employ them is to obtain the highest reasonable return possible under existing competitive conditions.

"In many stores which are served by both the League and Jetter Dairy Company, the same conditions exist as in stores served jointly by others. There is a constant competitive conflict with price fluctuations caused by the competitors or in many cases by the storekeepers playing one competitor against the other."

The part of the deposition of George R. Fitts offered by the plaintiffs, copied into the record, being all of the 2nd page of the deposition excluding a part offered by the Defendants, all of the 3rd page, and the first paragraph of the 4th page, as follows: Beginning with the last word on the 5th line of the 2nd page of the deposition and continuing through to the end of the first paragraph of the 4th page:

"The policy of the Association, therefore, has been to obtain as high a price in its sales to stores in said City (New York City) as was advisable under current marketing conditions and as would yield the highest return to the producers for whom the Association is acting as marketing agent. It has been necessary, however, from time to time in various sections of the City in order to hold the trade to meet competitive prices by various dealers who were attempting to obtain customers away from the Association by cutting prices. At time the Association has lost severely by such price cutting. For example, during the first year alone of State Milk Control, the Association lost nearly one-quarter of its volume in New York City, because of price cutting by various dealers below the prices fixed by the State authorities.

"During the summer months of 1938 and prior to September 1st, the competitive conditions in the bottled milk trade (in glass) to stores in New York City were very sharp and price cutting 590 was so general that in some cases milk was sold to stores as low as 5 cents per quart in glass bottles. The Association during this period was forced in many cases to meet cuts offered by competitors in order to hold its established trade.

"On the other hand, when the new Federal and State Orders took effect on September 1st, the destructive price cutting above outlined largely ceased and the price return of the Association for the first Friday in September for milk sold in glass quart bottles averaged well above 9½ cents. By the third Friday in September, price cutting, which had been started by some of the dealers in the Borough of Manhattan, had spread to Brooklyn and had started in the Bronx. The price based on similar reports to those of the first Friday showed an average reduction of about one-third of a cent per quart. This condition of price cutting by various dealers has continued so that although the price of the Association so far as obtainable is 9¾ cents a quart for milk in glass bottles to stores, the reduction necessary to hold the trade of the Association has resulted in a further lowering of the average price by the fourth Friday in November of approximately one-third of a cent for the various branches in New York City, the highest being in Manhattan and the lowest in the Bronx.

"Any claim that the Association was engaging in any price cutting campaign in order to increase its business is shown to be fallacious because of the fact that from September 1st to November 25th, 1938, the sales of the Association through its branches in New York City of glass bottled milk in quarts suffered a loss of approximately fourteen per cent in volume.

"Information from our Statistical Department, which in turn obtained same from reports of the United States Department of Agriculture, are that although the sales of the Association to stores in New York City in September and October were sharply reduced, the sales of milk in general in New York City for September were substantially on a par with those of the preceding months of the year, except June and August which were a little higher, and the tentative figures for the month of October show that they were the highest of the year up to November 1st.

"The Association's classification has been higher than the average of the entire administrator's pool for both September and October to an extent which has caused the Association to contribute equalization payments of over $45,000 a month for each month.

"The Association is similarly situated insofar as being in the business of distributing milk to stores in New York City to the defendant Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., and is in actual competition with said Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., in that business. Furthermore, the Association is similarly situated to the defendants Rock Royal Co-operative Association, Inc., and Schuyler Junction New York Milkshed Co-operative, Inc., in being engaged actively in competition with such Associations in sales of milk to distributors in New York City."

591 Government agrees that the Tri-Boro and the Jetter Dairy Company are owned by the same stockholders.

Applications of Tri-boro and Jetter Dairy Company for State license admitted as defendants' Exhibits 83 and 84, subject to affidavit on behalf of Jetter Dairy Company, which all parties agreed would be received as evidence. This affidavit reads as follows:

[Title omitted.]

I. Deponent and Anna B. Zimmerman are the owners of more than 90% of the stock of the Jetter Dairy Company, Inc. Deponent and said Anna Zimmerman own more than 90% of the stock of the Triboro Milk & Cream Company. Deponent and said Anna Zimmerman are son and daughter of the late Christian Jetter, who established the business now operated by the Jetter Dairy Company upwards of more than 40 years ago.

Deponent farther says that the Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., does not have manufacturing equipment for manufacture of butter, milk powder, or condensed milk at any of its plants. At the Solsville plant, a cream separator is maintained for the purpose of separating milk into cream for fluid consumption. The skim milk has customarily been sold at the plant.

592 The Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., Triboro Milk & Cream Company and Freeman's Dairy, Inc., are and have been since September 1st, 1938, principally engaged in the sale of milk and cream in the Metropolitan Area as defined by Order No. 27. None of said companies is engaged in the sale of any milk outside the Marketing Area.

State of New York Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, New York

OFFICIAL ORDER NO. 126

To Regulate the Handling of Milk to be Sold in the New York Metropolitan Milk-Marketing Area

Effective September 1938

3327 ORDER AND ANNOUNCEMENT OF COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE AND MARKETS ANNOUNCING THE ADOPTION OF OFFICIAL ORDER NO. 126 REGULATING THE HANDLING OF MILK TO BE SOLD IN THE NEW YORK METROPOLITAN MILK-MARKETING AREA.

Whereas, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets does hereby find that the adoption of Official Order No. 126 to regulate the handling of milk to be sold in the New York Metropolitan Milk-Marketing Area, a copy of which order is annexed hereto and made a part hereof, is approved or favored by over seventy-five per centum of the producers of milk produced in the production area for such marketing area as evidenced by a referendum conducted by the undersigned Commissioner concurrently with a referendum conducted by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States on his Order No. 27 which is similar and complementary to Official Order No. 126, and

2. The total quantity of milk and of each product of milk moved out of such plant during such month or on hand at such plant at the end of such month, the butter fat content of each product; and the destination of any milk which moved out of such plant:

3. If classification of any milk is claimed by such handler on the basis of utilization at some other plant, the utilization of such milk, together with written consent for verification by audit thereof signed by the operator, if not a handler, of the other plant, and

4. The computation, pursuant to section 1 of article VI of such handler's net pool obligation.

SECTION 4. Verification of reports and payments.—The market administrator shall promptly verify all reports and payments of each handler by audit of such handler's records. Each handler shall, during the usual hours of business, make available to the market administrator or his representative such of his records and facilities as will enable the market administrator to:

2. Weigh, sample, and test for butterfat content the milk received from producers and any product of milk upon which classification depends; and

3. Verify the payments to producers prescribed in article VII.

3338 Article VI—Determination of Uniform Price

SECTION 1. Net pool obligation of handlers.—The net pool obligation of any handler for milk received from producers during each month shall be a sum of money computed for such month as follows:

1. Determine the total quantity of milk in each class at each plant;
2. Subtract from the quantity of milk in each class the quantity such milk received from other plants, or from other handlers;
3. Subtract pro rata out of each class the quantity of milk received om the handler's own farm;
4. Subtract from the remaining quantity of milk in each class, the antity of each to which the prices in section 1 of article IV do not pply, which result shall be known as the "net pooled milk" in each ass;
5. Multiply the total quantity of net pooled milk in each class, at l plants of the handler combined, by the respective class prices set rth in section 1 of article IV, and add together the resulting sums;
6. Deduct, in the case of each plant where the average butterfat ntent of all milk received from producers is in excess of 3.5 percent d add in the case of each plant where the average butterfat content all milk received from producers is less than 3.5 percent, an amount ual to the difference between the total value of the butterfat differtials on net pooled milk in Classes III–A, IV–A, and IV–B at e rates set forth in section 2 of article IV for such milk and the tal value of the butterfat differentials on such milk as set forth in ction 3 of article VII;
7. Deduct, in the case of each plant nearer New York City than e 201–210 mile zone and add in the case of each plant farther om New York City than the 201–210 mile zone, an amount equal the difference between the sum of the respective transportation fferentials, as set forth in section 3 of article IV, on all net pooled ilk in Classes II–A, II–B, III–A, III–B, and III–C, and the sum otained by applying the appropriate zone differential set forth in olumn B of the schedule in section 3 of article IV to the total net ooled milk at each plant in Classes II–A, II–B, III–A, III–B, II–C, III–D, IV–A, and IV–B.
8. Deduct 20 cents per hundredweight for all net pooled milk ceived from producers at plants in the counties or portions of unties listed below in this section. The result thus obtained shall known as the "handler's net pool obligation."

SECTION 2. Computation of the uniform price.—The market administrator shall, on or before the 14th day of each month, audit for mathematical correctness and obvious errors the final report submitted for the preceding month by each handler and, on the 14th day of such month, compute from all of such corrected reports the uniform price in the following manner:

1. Combine into one total the net pool obligations of all handlers.
2. Subtract the total of payments required to be made for such month by section 5 of article VII and the total of payments claimed pursuant to section 6 of article VII;
3. Add the amount of cash in the producer settlement fund;
4. Divide the result by the total quantity of milk represented in the sum obtained pursuant to paragraph 1 of this section; and
5. Subtract not less than 4 cents nor more than 5 cents to provide against the contingency of errors in reports and payments or of delinquencies in payments by handlers. This result shall be known as the uniform price for such month for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat received from producers at plants in the 201–210 mile zone.

If, however, the net pooled milk in all classes at all plants of such handler is less than the total milk he received from producers and he does not pay the uniform price for all milk received from producers, such handler shall pay each producer the uniform price on such producer's pro rata share of the net pooled milk at all of his plants. Each handler shall give each producer a clear statement of the percentage of such producer's milk which was paid for at the uniform price

SECTION 3. Butterfat differential.—The uniform price shall be plus or minus, as the case may be, 4 cents per hundredweight for each one-tenth of one percent above or below 3.5 percent of average butterfat content of milk delivered by any producer during any month.

SECTION 4. Grade A premiums.—In addition to the uniform price and all other payments required pursuant to this article, each handler hall pay for milk which is qualified under the New York City De-ndler and which is reported and collected for by such association.

SECTION 6. Market Service Payment.—The market administrator shall pay out of the producer settlement fund to any handler immediately after audit of claim for such payment made on forms supplied by the market administrator:

1. With respect to milk received from producers at a plant operated by such handler equipped only for the receiving and shipping of milk to the marketing area, which was during any month except November or December, moved to a plant where it was utilized in Classes II–A, II–B, III–A, III–B, III–C, III–D, or, during the month of October, IV–A, and from which, if operated by such handler, no Class I milk was shipped to the marketing area during such month, 23 cents per hundredweight of milk so moved, plus 4 cents per hundredweight for the first five miles or fraction thereof, plus ¼ cent per hundredweight per mile for the next 20 miles, and plus $\frac{1}{10}$ of 1 cent per hundredweight per additional mile, of the shortest highway distance between the two plants; and

SECTION 7. Producer settlement fund.—The market administrator shall establish and maintain a separate fund known as 3342 "the producer settlement fund" into which he shall deposit all payments made by handlers pursuant to sections 8 and 10 of this article and out of which he shall make all payments to handlers pursuant to sections 6, 9, and 10 of this article and to cooperative associations of producers, pursuant to section 5 of this article.

SECTION 8. Payments to the producer settlement fund.—Each handler shall, on or before the 18th day of each month, pay to the market administrator for payment to producers through the producer-settlement fund the amount by which his net pool obligation for the preceeding month is greater than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price.

SECTION 9. Payments out of producer settlement fund.—On or before the 20th day of each month the market administrator shall remit to each handler for payment to producers the amount, if any, by which such handler's net pool obligation is less than the amount obtained by multiplying the net pooled milk of such handler by the uniform price. If at such time the balance in the producer settlement fund is insufficient to make all payments due to such handler, the market administrator shall reduce uniformly the payments made to each handle and shall complete such payments as soon as the necessary funds are available. No handler who on the 25th day of the month has not received the balance of such reduced payment from the market administrator shall be deemed to be in violation of section 1 of this article if he reduces his payments to producers by not more than the amount of the reduction in payment from the producer settlement fund.

SECTION 10. Adjustments of errors in payments.—Whenever verification by the market administrator of reports or payments of any handler discloses errors made in payments to or from the producer settlement fund, the market administrator shall promptly bill such handler for any unpaid amount, and such handler shall, within five days, make payment to the market administrator of the amount so billed. Whenever verification discloses that payment is due from the market administrator to any handler the market administrator shall, within five days, make such payment to such handler. Whenever verification by the market administrator of the payment to any producer for milk delivered to any handler discloses payment to such producer of less than is required by this article, the handler shall make up such payment to the producer not later than the time of making payment next following such disclosure.

Article VIII—Expense of Administration

SECTION 1. Payment by handlers.—As his pro rata share of the expense of administration hereof, each handler shall, on or before the 20th day of each month, pay to the market administrator 3343 a sum not exceeding 2 cents per hundredweight on the total quantity of milk which was received from producers at plants operated by such handler, directly or at the instance of a cooperative association of producers, and which was utilized in Classes I, II-A, and II-B, the exact amount to be determined by the market administrator subject to review by the Commissioner.

Article IX—Suspension, Termination, and Liquidation

SECTION 1. Continuing obligation of handlers.—Unless otherwise provided by the Commissioner in any notice of amendment, termination, or suspension of any or all of the provisions hereof such amendment, termination, or suspension shall not (a) affect, waive, or terminate any right, duty, obligation, or liability which shall have arisen or may thereafter arise in connection with any provision of this order; (b) release or waive any violation of this order occurring prior to the effective date of such amendment, termination, or suspension; or (c) affect or impair any rights or remedies of the Commissioner or of any other person with respect to any such violations.

SECTION 2. Continuing power and duty.—If, upon the termination or suspension of this order, there are any obligations arising hereunder, the final accrual or ascertainment of which requires further acts by any handler, or by the market administrator, or by any other person, the power and duty to perform such further acts shall continue notwithstanding such termination or suspension.

The market administrator shall (a) continue in such capacity until discharged by the Commissioner; (b) from time to time account for all receipts and disbursements and deliver all funds or property on hand, together with the books and records of the market administrator, to such person as the Commissioner shall direct; and (c) if so directed by the Commissioner, execute such assignments or other instruments necessary or appropriate to vest in such person full title to all funds, property, and claims vested in the market administrator pursuant to this order.

Liquidation.—Upon the termination or suspension of this order, the market administrator shall, if so directed by the Commissioner, liquidate the business of the market administrator's office and dispose of all funds and property then in his possession or under his control, together with claims for any funds which are unpaid and owing at the time of such termination or suspension.

Any funds collected for expenses, pursuant to the provisions of this order, over and above the amounts necessary to meet outstanding obligations and the expenses necessarily incurred by the market administrator in liquidating the business of the market administrator's office shall be distributed by the market administrator to handlers in an equitable manner.

ment Act of 1937 or the order of the Secretary or any provision thereof, on any and all grounds; all of which rights are hereby expressly reserved to any such handler upon and after withdrawal from the agreement with the same force and effect as if the handler had never become party hereto.

DM-7—Marketing Information Series—Issued August 1938

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE—AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ADMINISTRATION

Division of Marketing and Marketing Agreements

Questions and Answers on the Federal-State Milk Program for New York

1. Question. What is the purpose of the Federal-State program which the dairy industry is requesting for the New York metropolitan milk marketing area?

Answer. To help stabilize conditions in the New York milk market and to improve returns to the milk producers.

2. Question. How is this program possible?

Answer. Through a marketing agreement and order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States together with an order issued by the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

3. Question. What is a marketing agreement?

Answer. A marketing agreement is a voluntary contract between the Secretary of Agriculture and the handlers of milk who sign.

4. Question. What is an order?

Answer. An order is a regulation issued for the purpose of making the program applicable to all handlers in the market. The Federal order embodies the provisions of the agreement. The State order contains the same provisions.

5. QUESTION. What is necessary before the Federal-State program can go into effect?

ANSWER. Most important is the fact that producers must vote their approval of the plan. The Federal marketing agreement and order may go into effect if handlers of more than 50 percent of the milk sold in the marketing area sign the agreement, and if at least two-thirds of the producers voting in the referendum approve the issuance of the Federal order. In the event the required number of handlers fail to sign the agreement, the order may go into effect with Presidential approval together with the required two-thirds producer vote. The State order requires a three-quarters vote before it can go into effect. Both the Federal and State orders must receive the required producer approval before the program as a whole can go into effect.

6. QUESTION. How was the program developed?

ANSWER. The program was developed by dairy farmers and cooperative organizations working through the Metropolitan Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency. Public hearings on the plan were held jointly by the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

7. QUESTION. What part did the dealers play in preparing it?

ANSWER. Information presented by the dealers before, during, and after public hearings was taken into consideration.

3367 8. QUESTION. How long has it taken to develop the program?

ANSWER. Approximately 8 months.

9. QUESTION. Why has it taken so long?

ANSWER. Because of the complexity of the problem and the attempt to bring about a program which would as nearly as possible fit the needs of the market.

10. QUESTION. Why is the order so long?

ANSWER. Since the marketing of milk in an area as large as New York is a complicated problem, the order must be so worded as to apply to the many varying conditions. The obligations imposed must be fully and accurately defined in the order so as to prevent evasion and stand the test in the courts.

11. QUESTION. Who is a producer as defined in the order?

ANSWER. A producer is any person who produces milk which is delivered to a handler at a plant approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

12. QUESTION. What is the meaning of the word "handler"?

ANSWER. Handler means any person who engages in the handling of milk or cream which was received at a plant approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

13. QUESTION. Does the term handler include cooperative associations?

ANSWER. Yes, as applied to any milk received from producers at any plant operated by a cooperative association, or with respect to any milk which it causes to be delivered from producers to any other handler for the account of such association and for which such association collects payment.

14. QUESTION. Are persons engaged in the handling of milk not received from producers considered as handlers?

ANSWER. No; neither are persons who handle milk or cream all of which is sold outside the marketing area.

15. QUESTION. Are producers required to file reports under the order?

ANSWER. No. Reports are required only from handlers.

16. QUESTION. Does the order regulate producers in their capacity as producers in any way?

ANSWER. No. Handlers only are regulated under its provisions.

17. QUESTION. Why cannot the State regulate the metropolitan New York milk market without the assistance of the Federal Government?

ANSWER. Because the Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that while a State can regulate the handling of milk produced within that State, such regulations cannot apply to milk moving in the current of interstate commerce.

18. QUESTION. Who would be directly responsible for the administration of the program?

ANSWER. The market administrator.

19. QUESTION. By whom would he be selected?

ANSWER. By the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

20. QUESTION. What would be his principal duties?

ANSWER. Receiving reports from handlers, computing prices to be paid producers, assuring proper payments to producers, and checking on the accuracy of reports and payments made by handlers.

3368 21. QUESTION. Is the authority of the market administrator strictly prescribed in the order?

ANSWER. Yes. His duties are definitely stated and the scope of his work clearly indicated.

22. QUESTION. How would the expense in connection with the administrator's office be met?

ANSWER. By an assessment on handlers of not more than 2 cents per hundredweight of milk utilized in classes I, II-A, and II-B under the terms of the order.

23. QUESTION. Would this assessment be made as a deduction from producers' checks?

ANSWER. No. It would be paid by handlers in addition to the price paid producers as fixed in the order.

24. QUESTION. What provision has been made for violations?

ANSWER. Specific procedure for enforcement of the program in the courts is provided for under the Federal and State laws.

25. QUESTION. Would the market administrator be placed under bond?

ANSWER. Yes. For protection against losses through possible irregularity, he is required to furnish bond commensurate with his financial responsibility.

26. QUESTION. Under what authority do State and Federal agencies act in exercising regulation in the milk industry?

ANSWER. Laws passed by the Legislature of the State of New York and the Congress of the United States.

27. QUESTION. Just which laws?

ANSWER. The New York State Rogers-Allen Act and the Federal Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937.

28. QUESTION. Have there been other attempts by the State of New York to regulate the New York milk market?

ANSWER. Yes. The latest attempt terminated in March 1937 because the State regulations could not apply to milk shipped in from other States.

29. QUESTION. How would the Federal order overcome the problem which the State encountered in dealing with milk which moves in interstate commerce?

ANSWER. By complementing the State order and thus providing a complete program under which intrastate and interstate milk will be subject to identical regulations.

30. QUESTION. How may the present provisions of the program be changed?

ANSWER. They are subject to modification by amendment, suspension, or termination in accordance with the provisions of the respective State and Federal Acts.

31. QUESTION. Can producers secure termination of the order?

ANSWER. Yes; at the request of producers of more than 50 percent of the milk.

32. QUESTION. Is the plan established by the order an experiment?

ANSWER. No. The basic features of the plan are those which have developed out of approximately 25 years of cooperative marketing experience.

33. QUESTION. How does the program tend to increase the purchasing power of producers?

ANSWER. In two ways: First, by establishing minimum 3369 producer prices which are in line with market conditions for each class of milk according to its use; and second, by requiring that not less than such minimum prices be paid for all milk received from producers by handlers under the order.

34. QUESTION. Why does the order provide that milk be classified on the basis of its use?

ANSWER. Because that method is generally recognized as the only fair basis on which milk should be purchased.

35. QUESTION. What assurance is there that milk sold to handlers under the order will be properly classified?

ANSWER. The market administrator is required to verify all reports received from handlers as one of his duties in administering the program. Handlers must make available to the market administrator all records and facilities so that a complete check may be made on these reports which show receipts and utilization of milk delivered by producers at handlers' plants.

36. QUESTION. Why does the order provide for so many classes of milk?

ANSWER. To enable producers to receive the highest return from milk according to the use which handlers make of it.

37. QUESTION. Does the program throw open the metropolitan New York market to milk producers anywhere in the United States?

ANSWER. No. As in the past, the health departments in the area must approve or reject plants supplying milk to the market. The program merely provides for the pricing of milk delivered to plants approved by the health authorities.

38. QUESTION. Are producers required to control the production of milk?

ANSWER. No. Under the laws provided for issuance of State and Federal orders, there are no provisions for production control.

39. QUESTION. Would dealers be prohibited from paying producers more for milk than the minimum price to producers as computed under the order?

ANSWER. No. The prices established are minimum prices and dealers may pay their producers more than the order requires.

40. QUESTION. Under the provisions of the order, is the producer permitted to sell his milk where he pleases?

ANSWER. Yes. The responsibility for selling his milk remains entirely with the producer.

41. QUESTION. Are resale prices established under the order?

ANSWER. No. Neither the State nor Federal order provides for establishment of resale prices. Such prices are left to the forces of competition.

42. QUESTION. Have the interests of the consumer been considered in the development of the program?

ANSWER. Yes. Under the law consideration must be given to the interests of consumers. A stabilized market safeguards the interests of consumers and assures an adequate supply of wholesome milk which can be sold at prices reasonable to consumers.

43. QUESTION. Can the Federal-State program greatly help the dairy industry without the cooperation of that industry?

ANSWER. No. The policy of Government is to help the industry to help itself.

DM–6—Issued August 1938

MARKETING INFORMATION SERIES—NEW YORK MILK

EXPLANATION OF THE FEDERAL-STATE MARKETING PLAN CONTAINED IN ORDER NO. 27

This order can become effective only after approval of two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum and, in conjunction with a New York State order.

Approval of three-fourths of the producers voting in a referendum is required before the New York State order can become effective.

United States Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Division of Marketing and Marketing Agreements, Dairy Section, Washington, D. C. United States Government Printing Office, Washington: 1938.

3371 WHAT CAN BE DONE

The Federal-State program which the dairy industry has requested for the metropolitan New York milk marketing area is designed to:

1. Provide a market-wide program under which all handlers will operate in buying milk from producers.
2. Establish minimum prices which handlers will pay producers for milk according to the use made of it.
3. Assure to all producers a uniform rate of payment on milk sold for the marketing area.
4. Enable each producer to obtain his fair portion of benefits from the fluid milk market, and to bear his equitable share of the market's surplus milk burden.
5. Safeguard the interests of the consumer by stabilizing milk marketing conditions and assuring an adequate supply of wholesome milk which can be sold at reasonable prices.

WHAT CANNOT BE DONE

1. The program cannot control production, nor can it regulate dairymen as producers.
2. The program cannot take over the producer's milk-selling job.
3. The program cannot obtain for producers, over a period of time, more than milk is actually worth in relation to supply and demand conditions.
4. Milk prices to consumers cannot be fixed, nor margins of handlers protected.
5. The program cannot solve all of the problems in the market.

3372 NEW YORK MILK

A Federal-State program for regulating the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area is now before producers and handlers for final consideration. The Secretary of Agriculture of the United States has tentatively approved a marketing agreement and issued an order which, with an order issued by the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, provide for the milk regulatory program. The same provisions are included in both the State and Federal orders.

The New York metropolitan milk marketing area under the program includes the city of New York and the counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York.

Approval by producers is necessary before the Federal-State program can go into effect to regulate the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area.

The tentatively approved marketing agreement is now before handlers of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area for signature. A referendum will be held to determine whether producers approve the order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, which embodies the provisions of the agreement and makes the milk regulatory program for the New York market binding on all handlers in that market.

The marketing agreement and order may go into effect if handlers of more than 50 percent of the milk sold in the marketing area sign the agreement, and if at least two-thirds of the producers whose votes are expressed in the referendum approve the issuance of the order. In the event that the required number of handlers fail to sign the agreement, the order may go into effect with the approval of the President and the two-thirds producer vote.

3373 Purpose of the Program

The marketing agreement program for regulating the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area is designed to:

1. Establish uniform prices for milk sold by producers to handlers in the metropolitan market;

2. Assure uniform returns to producers for milk sold in the marketing area regardless of the handler to whom the milk was sold or the use made of the milk by the individual handler;

3. Assure each producer a fair share of the fluid milk market; and

4. Provide for the control of surplus milk supplies so that the burden is borne fairly by all producers interested in the metropolitan market, and enable the use of surplus so that it will bring the highest return to producers.

Producers Expressed V at Hearings

The Federal-State program for the New York metropolitan milk market was considered at a series of public hearings held in various sections of New York State from May 16 to June 8. These hearings, conducted jointly by the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, gave the representatives of the thousands of producers who attended opportunity to express their views on the proposal. Handlers and consumers also voiced their opinions and testified at these hearings.

The hearings on the marketing agreement program were called at the request of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., which claims a membership of cooperative organizations representing over 40,000 producers. The proposal was developed by representatives of producers through conferences with cooperative leaders, handlers of milk, and representatives of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the New York State Department of Agriculture.

Principal Provisions

The marketing agreement program which is now before producers and handlers for final consideration incorporates changes and suggestions which were made by industry spokesmen and others at the public hearings. No changes have been made in the basic idea of the program.

The main provisions of the program provide for:

1. The selection of a market administrator by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets to administer the program;

2. The classification of milk received from producers at handlers' plants into nine classes, according to the use made of that milk;

3. The establishment of minimum prices which handlers are required to pay producers for each class of milk according to its use;

4. A method for determining uniform prices which handlers are to pay producers through the operation of a market-wide pool to assure each producer his fair share of the fluid milk market; and

5. The filing of periodic reports by handlers to the market administrator showing deliveries and tests of milk received from producers and from other sources, the use made of this milk, and payments made to producers. The market administrator is given authority to check and verify the accuracy of all reports made to him by handlers.

Producers to Decide

Whether the Federal-State program for regulating the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area goes into effect, rests largely with the producers themselves. The decision of producers whose votes are expressed in the referendum to be held will indicate whether dairymen favor the issuance of the order and will determine whether it will be possible to put the order into actual operation.

The order cannot regulate the production of milk, nor can any producer be required to do anything under its provisions. A producer is defined as any person who produces milk which is 3375 delivered to a handler at a plant approved by any health authority in the metropolitan marketing area.

A handler is defined in the order as any person who engages in the handling of milk received at a plant approved by any health authority in the metropolitan marketing area. The definition specifically includes any cooperative association that operates plants or any cooperative association which causes milk to be delivered to plants of handlers and collects payments for such milk. The definition specifically excludes those persons who neither receive milk from producers nor handle milk which is sold in the metropolitan marketing area.

Joint State and Federal Administration

The program would be administered by a market administrator named by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets. The market administrator would administer both the Federal and the State orders, thus making it possible for the Federal and State Governments to operate jointly.

The order provides for the selection of the market administrator. It defines his powers and duties. The order requires the market administrator to furnish a bond to guarantee faithful performance of his duties.

The market administrator has the power to administer the terms and provisions of the order and to receive, investigate, and report complaints of violations.

Among his duties the market administrator is required to keep books and records which will clearly reflect the transactions of his office, furnish such information as the Secretary of Agriculture or the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets may request, and employ such persons as may be necessary to carry on the functions of his office.

The expense of administering the joint Federal-State program would be borne by handlers. Each handler would be required to pay as his pro rata share of the expense of administering the program not more than 2 cents per hundredweight on that total quantity of milk received from producers at his plant which is sold primarily as fluid milk or fluid cream. The exact amount per 3376 hundredweight of milk to be paid would be determined by the market administrator on the basis of what was necessary for administering the program.

Milk Classified According to Use

The order provides that all milk received from producers by handlers must be classified according to its use at, or the form in which milk leaves, the plant where first received from producers with the proviso that if milk is moved as milk from the plant where it was originally received from producers to a second plant outside the marketing area, the classification of such milk at the first plant may be according to its use at the second plant. Any use of milk claimed by a handler would be subject to verification by the market administrator.

Milk received at the plants of handlers would be classified into nine classes so that payments to producers may be made on the basis of the use value of the milk.

Each class of milk is defined in substance as follows:

Class I milk is defined as milk which leaves the plant as whole milk, chocolate milk, or a whole milk drink, or any milk not so accounted for as to be placed in a class lower than class I.

Class II–A milk is all milk the butterfat from which leaves a plant as cream which was not sold as frozen cream, made into ice cream, or shipped to markets in any county where there is no New York approved plant.

Class II–B milk is that milk which furnishes butterfat for plain condensed milk and homogenized mixtures (for ice cream).

Class III–A milk is all milk which supplies butterfat in evaporated milk, sweetened condensed milk, milk chocolate, milk powder, malted milk powder, or any cheese other than cream cheese and American Cheddar cheese.

Class III–B milk is milk which supplies butterfat in frozen cream.

Class III–C milk is milk furnishing butterfat for frozen desserts sold outside of New York City.

Class III–D milk is milk furnishing the butterfat for cream sold outside the New York milkshed and the butterfat in cream cheese.

3377 Class IV–A milk is milk which is manufactured into butter.

Class IV–B milk is milk which is manufactured into American cheese.

The nine classifications for milk which are provided for in the order follow rather closely the classes used by the State of New York in regulating milk since 1933 and the classes used by a large portion of the market for 10 or more years before that time. These use classifications are made necessary by the large territory of the New York milkshed, the wide variations in conditions of production and climate, the great variety of possible manufacturing outlets for milk at times not needed for Class I or Class II–A uses, and the tremendous volume of milk involved in even small proportionate changes in the sales and production of milk in the shed from day to day, week to week, and month to month. These classes, together with the rice applicable to each class, are designed to permit all producers' ilk to be absorbed in some channel of use at all times in order that may be available when needed for Class I and Class II–A uses in ne market.

Minimum Price for Each Class of Milk

For each of the nine use classifications there is provided in the der a method which will fix the price of milk in each class for each onth. The method used is designed to provide flexibility in the ricing of milk so as to recognize seasonal changes in production, eneral economic conditions, and the level of dairy prices.

The prices prescribed in the order are minimum prices based on ilk containing 3.5 percent butterfat received during each month rom producers or associations of producers at plants in the 201–210-ile zone from New York City. Differentials are provided for milk eceived at plants in zones nearer or farther than the 201–210-mile one is from New York City.

The order contains a schedule which prescribes the class I price hich handlers would be required to pay from April through July and from August through March. The schedule sets $2.20 378 per hundredweight for the 25–34.9-cent butter price range for the months of April through July, and $2.65 per hundred-eight for the 30–39.9-cent butter price range for the months of ugust through March. This seasonal movement of the class I price modified by changes in the price of butter, moving up or down by cents per hundredweight for each 5-cent rise or fall in the average f New York 92-score butter prices for a period of 60 days before ch month. The following table is contained in the order and pre-cribes the butter price range and the class I price to be paid during ne different periods:

Butter price range (cents per pound)	Class I price
	April through July	August through March
	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.
der 20	1.80	2.05
to 24.9	2.00	2.25
to 29.9	2.20	2.45
to 34.9	2.20	2.65
to 39.9	2.40	2.65
to 44.9	2.60	2.85
to 49.9	2.80	3.05
er 49.9	3.00	3.25

If an order had become effective August 1, the class I price for ugust would be $2.45, since the average of butter prices was in the -29.9-cent range.

The method for fixing the class II–A price follows along the same nes as that for fixing the class I price, but it is designed to move the class II–A price more nearly in keeping with changes in the pric of butter. This is done by requiring that the butter price range determined during the 30 days preceding the 25th of the mon before the price would be in effect. In making this determinati the average of New York 92-score butter prices would be used. T lowest level of class II–A prices in the same butter price range is s for the months of March through July when production is heavie with slight increases for the months of August through October, t highest prices coming during the months of November throu February. The following table contained in the order pr 3379 scribes the butter price range and the class II–A price for t various periods:

Butter price range (cents per pound)	Class II–A price
	March through July	August through October	November through February
	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per c
Under 20	1.30	1.35	1
20 to 24.9	1.50	1.55	1
25 to 29.9	1.70	1.75	1
30 to 34.9	1.85	1.90	1
35 to 39.9	2.00	2.05	2
40 to 44.9	2.15	2.20	2
45 to 49.9	2.30	2.35	2
Over 49.9	2.45	2.50	2

If an order had become effective August 1, the class II–A pri for August would be $1.75 per hundredweight since the average butter prices was in the 25–29.9-cent range. The class II–A pri would move to $1.90 for the month of October if the butter pri level moved into the 30–34.9-cent range, and to $2.05 per hu dred-weight for November if the butter price level remain the same. From the 25–29.9-cent butter price level the class II-price moves down 20 cents, or up 15 cents, for each 5-cent change the butter price level.

Prices for milk in the lower use classifications are established on basis so as to absorb all the milk not needed for class I and cl II–A purposes. These prices are set up so as to enable the man facturer of products made from these lower classes of milk to compe without undu advantage or disadvantage with the same produc made from milk not qualified for the New York market.

The class III–A milk price under the order is to be 10 cents high than the average of prices paid at 18 evaporated milk plants in t States of Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin. The order contains provision to prevent the class III–A milk price from being less th that price which the market administrator would compute by t following formula: The average price of 92-score butter at who sale in the Chicago market for the month, plus 30 percent that average price, times 3.5, plus 7 cents. This formu 3380 approximates that contained in the Federal marketing agr ment program in effect for the evaporated milk industry.

The class II–B price is to be 10 cents higher than the class III–A price.

The class IV–A milk price is to be calculated by the market administrator each month from the average of the highest daily prices of 92-score butter at wholesale in the New York market, deducting 4 cents as allowance for manufacturing costs, adding 20 percent of the remainder, and multiplying by 3.5.

The class IV–A milk price is the basis for the class III–B, III–C, and III–D prices, which each month are to be respectively 20 cents, 10 cents, and 7½ cents per hundredweight higher than the class IV–A price.

The class IV–B price is to be determined by the market administrator on the basis of the average of weekly quotations of cheese per pound at Plymouth, Wis., Gouverneur, N. Y., and Cuba, N. Y., deducting 3 cents as an allowance for manufacturing costs, and multiplying by 9.45, a reasonably expected yield of cheese per hundred pounds of 3.5 percent butterfat milk.

A butterfat differential of 4 cents per one-tenth of one percent butterfat content above or below 3.5 percent is to apply on all class prices except those for class III–A, IV–A, and IV–B. In the case of class III–A, IV–A, and IV–B milk prices, the butterfat differential is to be in direct ratio to the price of milk of 3.5 percent butterfat content.

Handlers Required to Report

Administration of the order by the market administrator is based largely on periodic reports which handlers are required to make. The market administrator is charged with the duty of promptly verifying all reports, and handlers must, under the order, make available to the market administrator records and facilities to enable him to verify their reports and to obtain correct figures in case of errors or omissions.

The most important report which handlers must file with the market administrator is the final monthly report which, in addi-3381 tion to considerable detailed information, shows the total quantity of milk and the average butterfat content of the milk received from producers and from other sources, and the utilization of the milk at each plant, together with a complete computation of the sum of money which represents the handlers' net cost of milk on the basis of the 201–210 mile zone.

Upon receipt of reports for a month the market administrator is required under the order to audit each report for mathematical correctness and obvious errors. These reports, subject to verification by the market administrator, must be sent to him on the 10th of the month following the month for which the report is made.

The Uniform Price Computation

On the 14th day of the month the market administrator is required to compute the uniform pool price, or blended price, out of all reports in his hands at that time.

For purposes of convenience, the milk of each class, to which the minimum prices apply, is known as the "net pooled milk." Class I and Class II–A milk which never enters the marketing area is not included in the net pooled milk. The uniform price is computed by the market administrator upon this net pooled milk in all classes of all handlers.

In computing the uniform pool price from all reports each month, the market administrator is required to deduct payments for services rendered by cooperatives and payments for market services rendered by handlers.

Payments Out of Pool

Payments for services by cooperatives are to be made to those co-operative associations which have been determined by the Secretary of Agriculture as having their entire activities under the control of their members and as being able to render service to producers as a whole by facilitating the delivery of milk to persons at the point where it may be used in the highest possible class and by making available to handlers in need of milk, an adequate supply. These payments would go to producers' cooperatives which exercise 3382 control over milk and route milk into the channels of utilization which net the highest returns to all producers.

Under the order, any cooperative association of producers may apply to the Secretary of Agriculture for determination as to its qualifications to receive the cooperative service payment. If the determination is made in favor of the cooperative, the service payment is to be received by the cooperative until it has been disqualified by the Secretary for failure to exercise the authority and to perform the functions upon which the determination was made.

These payments are to be made at only one of the following rates on net pooled milk dealt with by a cooperative:

One cent per hundredweight of net pooled milk to a cooperative which caused the milk of its members to be delivered to a handler's plant and on which the handler made reports to the market administrator and paid producers as required under the order;

Two and a half cents per hundredweight of net pooled milk to a cooperative which has collected payments for milk delivered to the plant of a handler by its members and which has met its obligations under the order; and

Five cents per hundredweight of net pooled milk to a cooperative which operates plants, is able to take care of all the milk of all its members, and is willing and able to take care of milk from producers who are not members.

Market service payments to handlers would be made for facilitating the utilization of milk in a way so as to benefit all producers sharing in the pool.

During any month except November or December one market service payment would be made to those handlers who move milk from a plant equipped only for receiving and shipping milk to one equipped for manufacturing when it is impossible to move the milk in fluid form. For moving the milk to the manufacturing plant the handler would receive for that service 23 cents per hundredweight of milk so moved, plus a small additional allowance for hauling. No such payment would be made for any month when the manufacturing plant shipped Class I milk to the marketing area if both plants are operated by the same handler.

Another market service payment would be made during November and December to a handler who moved class I milk from a plant which is primarily a manufacturing plant, and who would be entitled to claim this market service payment. This payment is at 3383 the rate of 30 cents per hundredweight of class I milk during these 2 months only, and the manufacturing plant must not have shipped to the marketing area more than 10 percent of its receipts as class I milk nor more than 50 percent as cream during the preceding May and June.

Uniform Pool Prices for Producers

The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool or blended price calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as class I milk outside of the marketing area. In such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable. For the remainder of each producer's milk the handler may pay such prices as he sees fit, but is required to furnish the producer with a statement of the percentage of the producer's milk paid for at the uniform price.

Payment of the uniform price is subject to the butterfat differential of 4 cents per hundredweight for each one-tenth of 1 percent butterfat content above or below 3.5 percent in the milk delivered by each producer and to the transportation and location differentials.

The transportation differential scale is that prescribed in the order to apply to class I milk and is based on the railway tariff for the movement of milk in tank cars.

The location differential amounts to 25 cents per hundredweight to producers who deliver at plants in counties of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusets, located close to New York City, and separated to a large extent from the rest of the milkshed by mountainous country in which very little, if any, milk is produced. Of this 25 cents paid to producers, the handler is reimbursed 20 cents per hundredweight from the total pool. This leaves a location differential of 5 cents per hundredweight to be paid by the handler.

3384 New York City Department of Health premiums according to butterfat content and bacteria count on that amount of milk actually sold in the marketing area as grade A milk. The premiums range from 78 cents for 4 percent milk having less than 10,000 bacteria count down to 5 cents for 3.7 percent milk containing over 25,000 bacteria count.

A producer settlement fund operated by the market administrator is provided for under the order as a clearing arrangement into which each handler pays the amount by which his net pool obligation is greater than his net pooled milk multiplied by the uniform price, or out of which he is paid the amount by which his net pool obligation is less than his net pooled milk multiplied by the uniform price. Provision is also made for receiving or paying out of the producer settlement fund amounts of money arising out of any errors. Handlers must make payments to producers on or before the 25th day of each month for milk received during the preceding month.

The arrangement which the order prescribes for determining and paying a uniform pool price to producers for milk sold in the marketing area operates under what is commonly termed a market-wide pool plan. Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk sold in the marketing area, and for that milk assures payments to all producers at a uniform rate except for the transportation and other differentials provided.

3387 ORDER DIRECTING THAT A REFERENDUM BE CONDUCTED AMONG THE PRODUCERS SUPPLYING MILK TO THE NEW YORK METROPOLITAN MARKETING AREA; DETERMINATION THAT THE MONTH OF MAY IS A REPRESENTATIVE PERIOD; AND DESIGNATION OF AGENT TO CONDUCT SAID REFERENDUM

I, M. L. Wilson, Acting Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, acting pursuant to Section 8c (19) of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, hereby direct that a referendum be conducted among producers, who, during the month of May, 1938, which month I hereby determine to be a representative period, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in the marketing area specified and defined in the proposed marketing agreement regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan Marketing Area, upon which public hearings were held in May and June 1938, to determine whether such producers favor or approve the issuance of an order regulating the handling of milk in said area, and I hereby designate Wellington J. Griffith, Jr., of the United States Department of Agriculture, as my agent to conduct such referendum in accordance with the following instructions.

Said Wellington J. Griffith, Jr., shall:

1. Ascertain the names of producers who, during the month of May 1938, were engaged in the production of milk for sale in said marketing area by auditing the records of handlers;

2. Determine the commencement, duration, and termination of the period of the referendum, Provided, That the referendum shall be completed on or before August 30, 1938;

3. Designate the polling places and the hours at which such polling places shall open and close, Provided, That all polling places shall remain open not less than eight consecutive daylight hours during the day or days designated as the period of the referendum;

3388 4. Give notice of the date or dates, places, and hours of polling by (a) issuing, at least five days prior to the first day of the referendum, a press release giving such information; (b) posting a copy of such press release at each polling place at least three days prior to the date of balloting; and (c) such others means, including announcements by the use of the radio, as the said Wellington J. Griffith, Jr., may deem necessary.

6. Instruct all polling officers as to (a) the conduct of the referendum and (b) the manner of transmittal of the ballots;

7. Supervise the counting of the ballots and, within 14 days after the close of the referendum, transmit to the Secretary a tabulation which will show the number of producers favoring the issuance of the order, the number of producers opposed to the issuance of the order, the number of producers whose ballots were disqualified, and all ballots.

Cooperative associations of producers whom the Secretary determine to be bona fide engaged in marketing milk or its products, or in rendering services for or advancing the interests of producers of milk, may vote for or against the issuance of the order for those producers who are members of, stockholders in, or under contract with, such cooperative associations of producers.

No person who shall present himself at any one of the polling places and who alleges that during the month of May 1938, he was engaged in the production of milk for sale in said marketing area, or that during said month he produced milk which was sold within said marketing area, shall be refused a ballot. If, in the checking of the ballots, however, it is found that any ballots have been cast by producers who were not during said month engaged in the production of milk for sale in said marketing area or who did not produce milk which was sold in said marketing area, you are directed to disqualify any such ballots and to mark on the back thereof the reason for such disqualification. In addition, any ballot on which all questions asked relative to the status of any producer are not properly filled in shall be disqualified. All ballots, including disqualified ballots, shall be transmitted to me.

389 All ballots shall be treated as confidential and the contents thereof shall be divulged only to me or to such persons as I may direct.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ADMINISTRATION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Received Dept. Agric. & Markets, Jul. 11, 1938. Division of Milk Control.

JULY 8, 1938.

DEAR: Pursuant to Section 8c of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 and to Section 258–m of the New York State Agriculture and Markets Law, hearings were held on a Proposed Marketing Agreement and Order Regulating the Handling of Milk in the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area. Subsections (8) and (9) of section 8c of the Federal act require the Secretary to determine that the issuance of an order is approved or favored by two-thirds of the producers by number or volume, who produce milk affected by the order before the order may become effective. Subsection 1 of the section 258–m of the New York law provides that no order fixing the price to be paid to producers for milk shall be effective unless the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets finds that it is favored by at least seventy-five percentum of the producers of milk for the marketing area. It is expected that simultaneous referenda will be conducted by the Secretary and the Commissioner in order to ascertain the extent of producer approval, if and when such an order is perfected for the New York market.

In anticipation that such referenda will probably be held, and in order to expedite its conduct as much as possible, the Secretary and the Commissioner have instructed the undersigned to send you this communication, advising you of the following and to secure the information listed below.

Your attention is called to the following provision of the Federal act:

"SECTION 8c (12): Whenever, pursuant to the provisions of this section, the Secretary is required to determine the approval or disapproval of producers with respect to the issuance of any order, or any term or condition thereof, or the termination thereof, the Secretary shall consider the approval or disapproval by any cooperative association of producers, bona fide engaged in 3394 marketing the commodity or product thereof covered by such order, or in rendering services for or advancing the interests of the producers of such commodity, as the approval or disapproval of the producers who are members of, stockholders in, or under contract with, such cooperative association of producers."

Your attention is also called to the following provision of the New York act:

"4. In determining the approval or request for an order as herein provided or the termination thereof on the part of producers the commissioner shall consider the approval, request or favor in respect thereto by any bona fide cooperative association of producers engaged in marketing milk within such marketing area as the approval, request, or favor either of making an order or of termination thereof of the producers who are under contract with such cooperative association of producers."

We are instructed to advise you that before any association can exercise the privilege of expressing approval or disapproval on behalf of its producers in such referenda a determination must be made by the Secretary on behalf of the Federal Government and by the Commissioner on behalf of the State, that such an association comes within the provisions of the acts quoted above. For the proper conduct of such referenda it will also be necessary to know in advance which of those qualified associations intend to exercise that privilege so that a clear understanding may be had by both producers and association officers. Consequently, unless an intention to the contrary is specifically stated, the submission of the information requested below will be construed as a declaration on the part of the cooperative submitting such information that it intends, if the Secretary and/or the Commissioner determines it to be qualified, to vote in the referenda on behalf of its producers. In the event the requested information is not submitted, or the Secretary or the Commissioner determines that such association is not qualified, the member producers will be given an opportunity to vote individually and any vote submitted by such a cooperative will be disregarded.

In order to aid the Secretary and the Commissioner in making that determination the following information must be submitted:

1. One copy of:

(a) Articles of incorporation.

(b) Bylaws.

(c) Membership contract or agreement, each of which is to be certified by the secretary or some other responsible officer of the association as being a true and correct copy of the documents now in effect and being used by the cooperative. If a membership
3395 contract is not being used, there should be submitted a brief statement by a responsible officer indicating the basis upon which the association acts in behalf of its members in marketing milk and the nature of the reciprocal obligations involved.

If the association seeks to represent in the referendum only those producers who are members, the number of stockholders or producers under contract with the association need not be given. If, however, the association also seeks to represent producers who are not members but who may be stockholders in, or who may have some kind of a contractual arrangement with, the association, the number of such producers, should be given and indication made as to what group they come under. A copy of any of the contracts, upon the basis of which the association may desire to represent such a producer, must be submitted in addition to the actual membership contract requested above.

2. The name, location, and ownership of each plant to which members of the association deliver milk.

3. The number of producers delivering to each plant listed under #2, for which the association desires the privilege of expressing approval or disapproval in the referenda.

4. List of the officers and members of the board of directors and their addresses, indicating with respect to each, when their present term of office expires and with respect to the members of the board, how long each member has served in that capacity.

(a) Are any of the officers or members of the board, also officers or directors in any other business unit or cooperative association engaged in the collection, processing, or distribution of milk or its products? If so, state specifically what these connections are.

5. On what basis does the association sell or dispose of the milk of its producers to handlers? A brief statement of the kind of trans-ctions which are now being entered into with an indication of their erms, and, if milk is being sold under contract, a copy of such contract or contracts should be submitted.

(a) Does the association take title to any or all of the milk marketed by it on behalf of its members?

(b) Does the association receive payment from handlers for any or ll milk marketed through the association? State the method used in distributing total returns to producers.

396 6. Will the association make its membership records available, if requested, to a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture or the New York State Department of griculture and Markets for the purpose of checking and verifying embership lists submitted in connection with this or any subsequent referenda?

7. Any other information which the association may deem relevant nd desire to be considered by the Secretary or by the Commissioner.

The above information should be mailed to E. W. Gaumnitz, Chief, airy Section, United States Department of Agriculture, Washingn, D. C., not later than July 16, 1938, and a duplicate of the same mailed to Kenneth F. Fee, Director, Division of Milk Control, epartment of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, New York, not ter than the same date.

Very truly yours,

E. W. GAUMNITZ,
Chief, Dairy Section.
KENNETH F. FEE,
Director, Division of Milk Control, Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Docket No. A-71, 0-71. Notice of hearing signed by the Secretary of Agriculture, April 29, 1938.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ADMINISTRATION

PROPOSED MARKETING AGREEMENT AND ORDER REGULATING THE HANDLING OF MILK IN THE NEW YORK METROPOLITAN MILK MARKETING AREA, PREPARED AND PROPOSED BY THE METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS' BARGAINING AGENCY AND UPON WHICH SAID AGENCY HAS REQUESTED THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE TO HOLD HEARINGS UNDER THE AGRICULTURAL MARKETING AGREEMENT ACT OF 1937

The Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., of the State of New York, has presented to the Secretary a petition for public hearing on a proposed marketing agreement and a proposed order regulating the handling of milk for the New York metropolitan milk marketing area under the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937. This agency, according to its petition, comprises in its membership a majority of the dairymen supplying milk to the New York metropolitan area.

The Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture after due notice of and opportunity for hearing to enter into marketing agreement with and to issue orders applicable to processors, producers, associations of producers, and others engaged in the handling of milk and its products in the current of interstate or foreign commerce. This act also authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to issue orders complementary to orders of the States, to cooperate fully with the States in their programs to regulate the handling of milk, and authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to call hearings whenever he has reason to believe that the issuance of an order will tend to effectuate the declared policy of this act. In simple terms, as applied to milk, the declared policy of the act is to establish and maintain such orderly marketing conditions for milk in interstate commerce as will establish prices for milk at a level which will give that milk a purchasing power with respect to articles that farmers buy equivalent to its purchasing power in a prescribed base period, after taking into account the available supplies of feed, the prices of feed and other economic conditions affecting the demand for and the supply of milk.

In response to the petition of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., the Secretary of Agriculture has called hearings as follows: Chancellor's Hall, Albany, N. Y., at 9:30 a. m., e. s. t., May 16, 1938; State Armory, Malone, N. Y., at 9:30 a. m., e. s. t., May 17, 1938; Lincoln Auditorium, Syracuse, N. Y. at 9:30 a. m., e. s. t., May 18, 1938; State Armory, Elmira, N. Y., at 9:30 a. m., e. s. t., May 19, 1938; Room 652 State Office Building, 80 Centre Street, New York City, at 9:30 a. m., e. s. t., May 20, 1938.

The Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., is likewise petitioning the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York for hearings on an order to be promulgated under the New York State law. It is anticipated that the above mentioned hearings will be conducted as joint hearings of the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York.

At each of the above times and places opportunity will be given for interested parties to present evidence (1) as to whether or not any marketing agreement and order should be issued, and (2) as to each and every provision set forth below and as to other provisions which may be proposed in the course of the hearings. It is suggested that each interested party who so desires carefully present all facts which he feels the Secretary of Agriculture should have in the record of the public hearing upon which to base a decision, (1) as to the issuance of an order, and (2) if an order is to be issued, what 3408 provisions such an order is to contain. The best interests of a proponent, or of an opponent, of the whole plan, or any provision thereof, will best be served by concise presentation, in the session of the hearing most convenient to him, of the relevant facts in his possession, reserving his arguments for filing in written form at the close of the hearing session.

If upon the facts in the record the Secretary of Agriculture decides that he can issue an order, the content of the order, based upon the facts in the record, will then be made known to producers and their approval or disapproval determined as to whether the order shall become effective. The content of the order will be the same as that of a marketing agreement which handlers will be given opportunity to sign.

The provisions proposed by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., are set forth below as possible provisions of a marketing agreement and of an order. Their publication in this form is for the convenience of interested parties and is not to be considered as in any way signifying their approval by the Secretary of Agriculture.

SEC. 3. Transportation Differentials.—The above prices in Classes I, II, III (a) and III (b) are subject to the application of transportation differentials on the basis of the distance of the receiving plants from New York City, as follows:

3414 The above applies to all points except those from which points the railroads have different rates. Where improved highway mileage suitable for such hauling is available and shorter, it shall govern. On milk shipped by rail, there shall be a further differential of 5 cents per cwt. for truck shuttle handling from city railroad sidings to pasteurizing plants on reports by the handler.

SEC. 4. Market Service Differentials.—The above prices are subject to the deduction of the following differentials which are hereby authorized for services which, the Secretary has found, are for the benefit of the industry in the market and will aid in effectuating the purposes of the act.

(a) By cooperatives and other handlers for receiving plants handling costs and transportation charges when milk is diverted in flush seasons to plants equipped to make products described in Classes III (a) and (d), or plants equipped to make butter or cream and manufacture the skim milk, from receiving plants regularly engaged in shipping fluid milk to the marketing area, to protect markets; 20 cents per can receiving plant handling cost and plus reimbursement for transportation to such manufacturing plant at 4 cents per cwt. for first five miles or fraction thereof plus ¼ cent per cwt. per mile for the next 20 miles or fraction thereof, and 1/10 of one cent per cwt. per mile thereafter.

(b) By cooperatives and other handlers for extra expense involved in shipping milk, in short seasons to protect markets, by fulfilling market demands equitably as to all distributors from plants equipped for and which had during the preceding year been engaged in manufacturing to the extent of at least half of their total receipts, products described in Classes III (a) and (d) or making cream and manufacturing the skim milk; 15 cents per can in case of regular fluid shipments of outputs of such plants for a fixed period of not less than 20 days or 25 cents per can in case of fluid shipments of a fluctuating character, that is not for shipment of the entire output as fluid for a fixed period of 20 days or started for a fixed period of 20 days and then changed back to manufacturing before the expiration of said 20-day period.

SEC 5. Outside Market Differential.—In the case of Class I milk used outside the marketing area, outside New York State, and outside of the counties listed under Class III (b), a differential may be applied which will adjust the Class I price on such milk to the average price of fluid milk in the market where used, as determined by the market administrator, but in no event shall a deduction exceed the difference between the Class I and III (b) prices hereunder, for the respective months.

Article V—Reports of Handlers

SECTION 1. Monthly Reports.—Each handler shall make a monthly report to the market administrator on or before the 10th day of each month with respect to milk or cream handled by him during the preceding month, except in case of purchases by handlers from collecting cooperatives of milk delivered by members at such handler's receiving plant or plants, in which event the handler shall report to the collecting cooperatives on or before the 8th day of the month and the cooperatives shall make such report to the market administrator on or before the 10th day of the month. Such reports shall show in the detail as follows:

(1) The receipts at each plant from producers who are not handlers;

(2) The receipts at each plant from any other handler, including any handler who is also a producer;

(3) The quantity, if any, produced by the handler; and

(4) The manner in which the respective quantities of milk were sold or used, including sales to other handlers, for the purpose of classification, pursuant to article III and pricing pursuant to article IV.

(5) The net blended price of the handler computed from the classifications and prices.

3415 (6) All such reports shall be made on forms supplied by the market administrator and shall contain all other data necessary to make this order fully effective.

SEC. 2. Verification of Reports.—In order that the market administrator may submit verified reports to the Secretary pursuant to section 4 of article II, each handler shall permit the market administrator or his representative, during the usual hours of business, to

(a) Verify the information contained in reports submitted by such handler pursuant to this article, and

(b) Weigh, sample, and test milk for butterfat.

Article VI—Determination of Uniform Price

SECTION 1. Computation and Announcement of Uniform Price.—The market administrator shall compute and announce the uniform price per cwt. of milk delivered during each delivery period in the following manner;

1. Verify the quantities of milk and the mathematical correctness of reports of handlers.

2. Determine the total quantity of milk of each handler from the reports of such handlers.

3. Determine the total quantity of Class I and II milk of each handler.

4. Determine the quantity of Class I and II milk used in the marketing area by each handler.

5. Determine the percent that 4 is of 3.

6. Determine the total quantity of Class III milk of each handler.

7. Apply the percent, determined in 5, to 6.

8. Add 7 to 4.

9. Add to 8 the amount of milk to which the outside market differential applies.

10. Deduct from 9 the quantity of milk purchased from new producers in accordance with the second proviso of section 3, article VII.

11. Combine into one total the net quantities and values of milk of all handlers included in 10, by the application of the prices for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat, at a receiving station 201–210 miles from New York City, as set forth in article IV, to which shall be applied an adjustment equal to the difference between the amount of the transportation and butterfat differentials at the rates provided in article IV, sections 2 and 3, for the respective classes and the amount of such differentials at the rate provided for Class I milk; and subject to the deduction of the following differentials:

(a) One cent per cwt. by handlers to be paid to cooperatives which do not collect, or operate plants, for performing services which are for the benefit of the industry in the market, and will aid in effectuating the purposes of the act.

(1) By obtaining or continuing the firm contractual relations with the producers delivering to the plant or plants covered by the respective cooperative so that the milk of such producers is subject to the exclusive sale by the respective cooperative for not less than monthly periods of time, and

(2) By obtaining firm contractual commitments, as to the purchase of such milk for monthly periods from the operator or operators of the plant or plants covered by the cooperative, providing not only for the payment for such milk as is accepted at the prices and under the terms and conditions of this order, but also for the acceptance of all the milk involved during the full duration of the contractual periods and furthermore for its manufacture when not needed by the market in surplus seasons on the best possible basis taking into consideration the milkshed as a whole and general market demands and for the shipment of the milk even though it involves the discontinuance of manufacturing operations whenever it may be necessary in short seasons to furnish an adequate supply of fluid milk at reasonable prices to the market from within the confines of the milkshed and for 3416 its sale in such event at not more than the prices and handling charges fixed herein; Provided however, That nothing herein contained shall prevent application for service payments under article 4, section 5 (a) and (b) above as to any such operation as may be found qualified to receive same;

(3) By furnishing marketing information service to its producers and providing for verification of weights, sampling, and testing of milk purchased from said producers when and where necessary.

(b) 2½ cents per cwt. by cooperatives which collect but do not operate plants, for performing the services set forth in (a) above and for performing additional services which are for the benefit of the industry in the market and will aid in effectuating the purposes of the act.

(1) In providing in such contractual commitments of the plant operator or operators for it or them to report their dispositions of the milk to the respective cooperative in order that it in turn may report to the market administrator as provided in article V and for such cooperative to audit the operators' records to determine the correctness of such reports subject to the recheck by the market administrator hereunder, and

(2) Receiving such reports from the plant operator or operators and reporting therefrom to the market administrator as provided in article V, and

(3) Making such audits, and

(4) Collecting from the operators and disbursing to the producers, and

(5) Guaranteeing payments to the adjustment fund in accordance with article VII, section 1;

(c) 5 cents per cwt. by cooperatives which collect and operate plants, for performing the services set forth in (a) and (b) above and for performing additional services which are for the benefit of the industry in the market, and will aid in effectuating the purposes of the act.

(1) By holding under producer control receiving and handling facilities and in many cases manufacturing equipment, any part of which may be unused for varying periods of time due to production and sale conditions, but which it is necessary to hold available to their own and other producers in order to provide flexibility for the industry in the interest of orderly marketing hereunder and in order that all the milk of such cooperative shall have a market at all times irrespective of favorable or unfavorable conditions of the markets for the products of surplus milk and in order to expand surplus operations quickly to support the fluid market by withdrawing milk from fluid sale when additional fluid shipments are started by condensary plant operators and separators for storage after the seasonal completions of their packs of their estimated requirements for fixed markets for case goods and storage over which estimates and resultant resumptions of fluid shipments producers have no control and in order that all other milk in emergencies may find a market, at least to the extent of such facilities, and

(2) By the creation of reserve funds to assure payments to the adjustment fund as guaranteed in (b) (5) of this paragraph and to assure prompt payment monthly to each producer of the cooperative association of his full distributive share of the proceeds of sale of milk by such association: Provided, That any cooperative making deductions under any of the provisions of this paragraph must be found qualified by the Secretary under article I, paragraph 8, and actually performing as determined by the Secretary, the services for which it is receiving or making deductions under (a), (b), or (c) of this paragraph.

12. Divide the total value of milk, as determined in 11, by the total quantity of milk in 11.

13 Subtract not less than four and not more than five cents for the purpose of retaining a cash balance in connection with the payments set forth in article VII, section 2.

14. Add an amount which will prorate any cash balance available as a result of payments to the market administrator under paragraph 13 of this section and the second proviso of section 3, article VII.

3417 15. On or before the 14th day after the end of each delivery period, mail to all handlers and publicly announce (a) such of these computations as do not disclose information confidential pursuant to the act, (b) the blended price per cwt. which is the result of these computations, and the Class III prices.

Article VII—Payments for Milk

SECTION 1. Payments by Handlers to Market Administrator.—On or before the 16th day of the month, each handler shall pay to the market administrator the amount by which the net blended value of the milk of such handler covered hereby as based upon such reports exceeds the said uniform price as so determined by the market administrator from such reports, after excluding therefrom butterfat, grade, transportation, and other differentials. The amount so paid shall be deposited in an account to be designated "adjustment fund" and withdrawals therefrom shall be made in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of this article.

SEC. 2. Payments by Market Administrator.—On or before the 18th day of the month, the market administrator shall pay from the "adjustment fund" in trust, to each handler whose report shows that the net blended value of the milk of such handler covered hereby as based upon such reports is less than the said uniform price as so determined by the market administrator, the amount necessary to bring the net blended value of the milk of such handler covered hereby up to the uniform price.

SEC. 3. Payments by Handlers.—On or before the 20th day of the month, each handler other than cooperative associations, shall pay to each cooperative association and each producer for all milk covered hereby delivered by producers to such handler's receiving plant or plants the uniform price subject to a butterfat differential of 4 cents for each $\frac{1}{10}$ of one percent of butterfat above or below 3.2 percent and subject to the transportation differentials as fixed in article III, section 3, and subject to the one cent deduction to be paid direct by handlers to bargaining cooperatives under article VI, section 1, paragraph 11 (a) and subject to any other deductions properly authorized by the producers and cooperatives representing them for payment to such cooperatives or any other person: Provided however, That no such deduction shall be made for payment directly or indirectly to the handler making the deductions; and Provided further, as to each producer who has not regularly delivered milk to a handler, for a period of thirty (30) days prior to the effective date hereof, each handler shall pay to such producer or his collecting cooperative association the Class III (c) price for all milk delivered by such producer during the period beginning with the first regular delivery of such producer and continuing until the end of two (2) full calendar months following the first day of the next succeeding month and shall pay to the market administrator on such milk for addition to the "adjustment fund" any amount by which the net blended value of all the milk of such handler exceeds the price paid for such milk by the handler.

SEC. 4. Location Differential.—Each handler, other than cooperative associations, shall pay to each cooperative association and each producer for all milk covered hereby, delivered by producers to such handler's receiving plant or plants in the territories hereinafter specified, the respective differentials indicated for the various parts of such territory, in addition to, and at the same time as the payments to be made under section 3 of this article.

SEC. 5. Saving Clause.—Nothing herein contained shall affect the time of payment for milk shipped by an operating cooperative association or other handler to another handler which time of payment is a matter for negotiation between such seller and buyer. Similarly, nothing herein contained shall be deemed as in derogation or modification of the right of nonoperating cooperatives to require handlers to make payments on account in advance of the final adjustment payments as provided in this article.

SEC. 6. Adjustment of Overpayments and Underpayments.—(1) In the event of any overpayment of any handler to the fiscal agent or to the market administrator through erroneous reports or otherwise, the market administrator shall make adjustment thereof in the next succeeding month in the payment as hereinbefore provided in article VI.

(2) In the event of any underpayment by any handler to the market administrator, through erroneous reports or otherwise, said handler upon demand made by the market administrator shall immediately make payment of said underpayment to the market administrator.

Article VIII—Expense of Administration

SECTION 1. Payments by Handlers.—As a pro rata share of the expense of administration hereof, each handler shall, on or before the 20th of each month pay to the market administrator, a sum not exceeding 2 cents per cwt. on all milk handled by him and covered hereby according to article V and VI, the exact amount to be determined by the market administrator subject to review by the Secretary. In case the handler pays to a collecting cooperative association for milk delivered by its producers to the handler's receiving plant or plants such payment shall be made by the handler to such cooperative association in addition to the payment for the milk as provided herein at the prices fixed hereby and then paid over immediately by such cooperative association to the market administrator.

Article IX—Handlers Who Are Also Producers

SECTION 1. Milk Purchased from Producers.—In the case of a handler who is also a producer and has purchased milk from producers, the market administrator shall, in the computations set forth in article V first exclude the milk purchased by him in each class from other handlers, and then apportion the milk purchased by him from producers to each class according to the ratio which such handler's remaining total sales in each class bears to his remaining total sales in all classes.

Article X—Miscellaneous Provisions

SECTION 1. Suits by Market Administrator.—The market administrator may maintain a suit in his own name against any handler for the collection of any sum which the handler is required to pay to the market administrator hereunder, including the handler's pro rata share of expenses as set forth in article V.

SEC. 2. Derogation.—Nothing contained in this order is or shall be construed to be in derogation or in modification of the rights of the Secretary or of the United States (a) to exercise any powers granted by the act or otherwise, and (b) in accordance with such powers to act in the premises whenever such action is deemed advisable.

SEC. 3. Duration of Immunities.—The benefits, privileges and immunities conferred by virtue of this order shall cease upon its termination, except with respect to acts done under and during the existence of this order, and the benefits, privileges, and immunities conferred by this order upon any handler shall cease upon its termination, except with respect to acts done under and during the existence of this order.

3419 SEC. 4. Action of State Authorities.—This order shall not be exclusive of orders or other regulations issued by the duly constituted authorities of any State, insofar as such orders or regulations are issued or shall be issued relating primarily to milk not in interstate or foreign commerce.

SEC. 5. Unfair Competition.—It shall be an unfair method of competition and an unfair trade practice for any handler, continuously or repeatedly, to sell milk, or any product thereof, in or for the marketing area at prices lower than the prices herein named as minimum prices, plus reasonable handling, processing and transportation charges, with the purpose or with the result that such handler substantially increases its business of such kind in or for said area by such practices.

Article XI—Effective Time, Termination, and Suspension

SECTION 1. Effective Time.—This order shall become effective at such time as the Secretary may declare above his signature attached hereto, and shall continue in force until terminated in one of the ways hereinafter specified.

SEC. 2. Suspension.—The Secretary may at any time suspend this order, by giving at least ten (10) days' notice by means of a press release or in any other manner which the Secretary may determine.

(2) The Secretary shall terminate this order at the end of any month whenever he finds that such termination is favored by a majority of the producers who during the preceding month have been engaged in the production for market of milk in the marketing area, or who, during such preceding month, have been engaged in the production for sale of milk in the marketing area; Provided, That such majority have during such preceding month produced for market or produced for sale more than 50 percent of the volume of the milk produced for market or produced for sale within the production area.

(3) This order shall in any event terminate whenever the provisions of the act authorizing it cease to be in effect.

SEC. 4. Effect.—Unless otherwise provided by the Secretary in the notice of amendment, termination or suspension of the provisions hereof, the amendment, termination, or suspension shall not (a) affect, waive or terminate any right, duty, obligation or liability which shall have arisen or may thereafter arise in connection with any provision of this order; (b) release or waive any violation of this order occurring prior to the effective date of such amendment, termination or suspension; or (c) affect or impair any rights or remedies of the Secretary or of any other person with respect to any such violation.

SEC. 5. Continuing Power and Duty.—If, upon the termination or suspension of this order, there are any obligations arising hereunder, the final accrual or ascertainment of which requires further acts by any handler, or by the market administrator, or by any other person, the power and duty to perform such further acts shall continue notwithstanding such termination or suspension.

The market administrator shall (a) continue in such capacity until discharged by the Secretary; (b) from time to time account for all receipts and disbursements and deliver all funds or property on hand, together with the books and records of the market administrator or such person, to such person as the Secretary shall direct; and (c) if so directed by the Secretary, execute such assignments or other instruments necessary or appropriate to vest in such person full title to all funds, property and claims vested in the market administrator or such person pursuant to this order.

3420 control, together with claims for any funds which are unpaid and owing at the time of such termination or suspension.

Any funds collected for expenses, pursuant to the provisions of this order, over and above the amounts necessary to meet outstanding obligations and the expenses necessarily incurred by the market administrator in liquidating the business of the market administrator's office, shall be distributed by the market administrator to the contributing handlers and producers in an equitable manner.

N. B.—In addition to the foregoing provisions proposed by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., which are appropriate to either a marketing agreement or an order, the following formal provisions appropriate to a marketing agreement are presented for discussion at the public hearing:

Article XIII—Amendments

SECTION 1. Proposals.—Amendment of any or all provisions hereof may at any time be proposed in writing by any handler signatory hereto or by the Secretary. Any amendment proposed in writing by any one or more handlers signatory hereto shall be deposited with the market administrator who shall promptly mail the same to the Chief of the Dairy Section, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

MR. DAIRYMAN—SAVE THIS BOOKLET—THE PLAN IT EXPLAINS MAY SAVE YOUR FARM

3423 Hearings Will Be Held On This Order At Albany, May 16; Malone, May 17; Syracuse, May 18; Elmira, May 19; New York, May 20.

Study the Plan—Attend the Hearings—Present Your Views

This booklet contains a copy of the Federal Order accepted by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York as the basis for public hearings in the Milk Shed. This Order was prepared by representatives of producers with some assistance from Federal and State authorities and represents the combined efforts and experience of many farm leaders. Six months of hard work has gone into its development and preparation. The operation of Federal Orders in other Milk Sheds has been carefully studied and checked to the end that mistakes or omissions occurring in them might be avoided or guarded against in this Order. This Milk Shed was carefully surveyed, its unusual features examined, and the trend of its experience over a period of years carefully noted. A complete study of milk production and farm economics in its relation to distribution and consumption of milk, together with the statistical and factual information available in regard to the utilization of milk, the periodic problem of surplus and shortage conditions provided the basis upon which this proposed Order is established.

Principles Upon Which the Order is Based

From an examination of all the facts in the case viewed in the light of the experience of past efforts to direct the industry toward the goal of orderly, stabilized marketing, it was generally agreed that any plan presented to producers must be built around certain acceptable principles; that those principles must be supported fully by the mechanical and legal necessary means to give them full force and effect. The fundamental requirements of the industry which this Order seeks to establish are five in number, viz:

1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.

2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid markets.

3. An equal share by each producer in the burden of the surplus and the expense of controlling it.

4. Reasonable contribution to those having surplus facilities for the use of them seasonally for market protection.

5. Effectuation of the foregoing principles in such a manner as will perpetuate and encourage farmers' cooperative organizations.

The Order then is a statement of these five basic essentials in legal verbiage, surrounded, fortified, and explained by the language and terms required to give them legal effect and protect them from overthrow, disregard, or violation by opposing or unfriendly interests. Complete simplicity in the terms of the Order is impossible, partly because of the complexity of the subject dealt with and partly because of the impossibility of giving the desired legal effect to certain provisions without employing the language of the Courts. It is confidently believed that the present Order can successfully withstand any assaults upon its legality. If this be so, it is important for the success of the Order, if adopted, depends upon its uninterrupted enforcement.

Definitions

The Order in establishing the five basic ideas outlined above, first defines the terms to be used many times throughout the docu-3425 ment itself. This is done to avoid any confusion or disagreement over definitions. Definitions are as important in this document as they were in learning grammar in school, and setting them forth in the Order avoids any possibility of disagreement later on as to what certain terms mean. In this way, the marketing area, person, producer, handler, cooperative association, etc., have been defined and if the Order is accepted each of those terms will have the meaning that the Order says it has and no person can successfully substitute a different definition.

Administration

Having disposed of definitions, the Order next takes up the subject of who shall administer the Order and the duties and powers attaching to that office. This is important because in this section, we learn the limits of the power given the Administrator. The American people and especially farmers are intense believers in this retention, by the people, of all power except that which is especially delegated by them to the State or the Federal Government and any delegation of such power should be carefully examined. The man appointed will be the appointee of both the Secretary of Agriculture and the State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets. A State Order containing the same provisions as the Federal Order will be submitted by the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets at the public hearing The two Orders are practically identical and are necessary in order that regulation of both interstate and intrastate milk can be secured. The greatest contributing cause to the failure of Milk Control was inability of the State to regulate interstate shipments. The distributors avoided the State Law by claiming their operations to be interstate. This time we don't intend that any dealer, regardless of the character of his operations, shall be able to evade compliance under the provisions of this Order. Reading this section, you will find that the Order strictly defines the power possessed by the Administrator. Unless the Order contains the power for him to do certain things, he cannot do them. The power he has can only be exercised in the manner set forth in the Order. He is no Dictator in any sense of the word. Rather he is a man skilled in accounting and investigation for his principal duty is in checking the activities of milk dealers.

The Order is an order to regulate distributors, not an order to regulate producers. There are no reports by producers to the Administrator and he has no power to compel producers to do or not to do anything. Neither the Administrator nor any employee of his office is empowered under the Order to inspect producers' premises, regulate milk production, nor interfere in any way, by suggestion or otherwise, with the business as now carried on by any producer. His job is to check weights, tests at plants and to investigate dealer movements of milk. He is appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York and is removable by the Secretary at any time. What his salary will be, no one knows, but it will be about the same as that paid other government employees performing the same character of work.

The Administrator will maintain a staff of investigators, accountants, etc. The entire expense of his office, including salaries, will be borne by a levy of not to exceed 2¢ per cwt. paid by every distributor monthly to the Administrator on the milk handled during the 3426 preceding month. This 2¢ or less per cwt. does not come out of the producer's check but is paid by the distributor in addition to the fixed price paid producers by the terms of the Order. The Administrator is compelled to furnish ample bond so no losses can be incurred by his misbehavior. Who will be appointed Administrator cannot be foretold but we can rest assured that producers will be consulted and advised with before the appointment is made. The Government is as anxious for successful administration of this Order as we are and the imposition of an Administrator unapproved by the industry, would make a distinctly unfavorable start.

How Will Milk Be Sold?

Milk will be sold in three classes and those classes are defined in Art. 3 of the Order. You will note that in defining Class 1, all milk which leaves a country plant and enters the Marketing Area will be paid for as Class 1. This will break up the age-old practice of dealers reclassifying fluid milk after it reaches the city. A dealer who receives 600 cans, or any other number of cans, of fluid in New York, cannot say, "I used 300 for fluid and 300 for cream," and pay for it on the basis. He must pay the Class 1 price. Everything shipped as milk or cream into the Marketing Area must be paid for under Class 1 or Class 2, as the case may be. Marketing Area is defined as New York City, Westchester, Nassau, and Suffolk counties.

Class 3 milk, which is the manufactured class, is subdivided into four sections and paid for according to formulas which have been used by the industry and the Milk Control Board for many years. However, some important gains in prices to producers have been provided for. In the butter formula, making deduction has been reduced from 4¢ to 3¢ and overrun increased from 16% to 20%. In the cheese formula the deduction for making has been reduced from 3¢ to 2¢.

Butterfat and Freight Differentials

In all classes of milk, prices are based on 3.5% butterfat with [illegible] added for each 1/10 percent in excess of 3.5%. All milk is delivered by the producer f. o. b. country plant subject to a freight differential computed upon the 201–210 mile zone but on a new basis. At present your milk is subject to a freight differential based upon the less than carload lot can shipment rate. This order provides that the tank car freight rate shall be used in figuring transportation differentials. When put into effect, thousands of dollars will be diverted from dealers' to producers' pockets by this change. This particular section will meet with solid opposition from dealers at the hearings but we feel we are well prepared to demand its adoption because almost no milk is shipped today in less than carlot shipments.

Grade A Premium

The present system of grading milk is not interfered with. Grade A premiums will continue on the present basis as far as the Order is concerned. The prices established by the Order are on a Grade B basis to which will be added such Grade A premiums as each producer earns.

The Method of Establishing Prices

Article 4 of the Order deals with the prices which are to be fixed in the Order and from the viewpoint of many producers con-3427 stitutes the most important section in the Order. The prices inserted in the Order are tentative prices and placed in the Order merely by way of example and as a basis for discussion. The price of milk in Classes 1 and 2 will be fixed at the public hearings by the producers themselves thru testimony offered by them. Under the law and under this Order no other authority than the producers can fix the price. After the price is fixed by the producers, it becomes the legal price dealers are compelled to pay. And let us say at this point, that not only prices, but every line of this Order is subject to change, alterations, or complete deletion if proof is produced at the hearing indicating that such action is needed. There is nothing fixed as far as the contents of the Order is concerned until after the public hearings. In fact, the hearings are for the purpose of writing the Order and this proposed Order is but the basis upon which the Order is written, so if some provision of this Order is unsatisfactory to you, don't think that you have to accept it as written, for you need not. Present your objections and your proof at the hearings and if you are right, the Order will undoubtedly be changed.

The Control of Surplus

In Section 4 of Article III, you will find provisions made for certain market service differentials which are to be deducted from the pool before the uniform price is set and paid to those perform-ng the services. The Order seeks to keep "distress" milk off the fluid market by supplying only normal fluid market demands and providing for the manufacture of such milk as may be in excess of such demands. Thus you maintain the stability of your fluid and cream market, protect its price and in so doing will receive a higher blended price than if you sold all of your milk as fluid but contributed to market break-down in so doing. Competition for fluid markets by producer groups has periodically caused market breakdown. Eliminate that competition by equalization of prices by which you give every producer his share of the fluid market but compel him to bear his portion of the burden of surplus, and you maintain a stable market. For example, the cooperative to which your milk is being delivered may not be equipped to manufacture surplus. Let's say the fluid requirements of your dealer are 200 cans daily. Your plant is taking in 300 cans so you have 100 cans which would be shipped to New York, under present conditions, as fluid at "distress" milk prices, contributing to further market demoralization. Under the Order, we will say that 20 miles away from your plant is a manufacturing plant, so you load your 100 cans of surplus on a truck and take it to the manufacturing plant. For that service, your plant receives from the Administrator 20¢ per can handling charge, or $20, and for transporting the milk your plant receives 8¢ per cwt. Carrying out the principle of an equal share by each producer in the surplus and the expense of controlling it, the Order has provided compensation to those who bear surplus expense and has equitably distributed that expense over the industry.

Serving markets During Shortage Periods

Paragraph (b) in Section 4 compensates manufacturing plants for diverting milk from manufacture to fluid during short periods. The market must be assured of an adequate supply of milk during every part of the year. That is our obligation as producers and if 3428 we fail to fulfil it, the City of New York will secure milk elsewhere. To supply fluid markets in short seasons, we must fall back upon milk which is being delivered to manufacturing plants. Everyone knows that a manufacturing plant has a much greater investment in equipment than a fluid plant and if it is compelled to suspend manufacturing and supply the fluid market, it means idle equipment and unprofitable investment. No manufacturing plant can ship fluid milk as cheaply as a fluid plant. Its business is interfered with by being compelled to ship fluid and it is compensated for that interference and for serving the market.

Dealers' Reports

Under Article 5, all handlers are instructed as to what reports they must make. Every effort has been made to provide complete and detailed information in regard to everything which should be known by the Administrator in respect to the movement of milk. In addition to that, we at last have a means thru the Administrator and his investigators of checking on the accuracy of these reports monthly. If the Order provided no other benefit, that in itself would be sufficient to recommend it to the producers for when you finally get an honest classification of your milk, a larger part of the consumer's dollar is going to return to you.

Uniform Price and Co-operative Service

In setting up the method for the determination of the uniform price, the three principles recognized as basic requirements are carried out. That uniform price guarantees first, "an equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use." Second, "an equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid outlets," and third, "an equal share by each producer in the burden of surplus and the expense of controlling it." Article 6 merely provides the exact mechanical and mathematical formula for attaining the result and places a value on the services rendered by co-operatives of various types. This Order as well as the law which authorizes it, is founded upon a conviction held by Congress, the State Legislature, and farm leaders, that agricultural progress depends upon the successful development of the co-operative. In most states it is the declared policy of the Legislature expressed in law. Our experience justifies recognition of the cooperative as the most potent instrument in the hands of the farmers for the improvement of their condition. Advancement has been more rapid and successful where the co-operative principle has been permitted to work. The fact that the principal discouragement of co-operative action is voiced by the middleman who makes his living handling farm products, should be a convincing argument in its favor, if any were needed. This Order, then, is founded upon a belief in the utility of the co-operative as a means of securing economic justice and equality. To encourage co-operative effort, we have made a vital part of this document the last basic principle deemed essential, "the effectuation of the Order in such a manner as will perpetuate and encourage co-operatives." Furthermore, no marketing agreement or price order has ever been successful in any market except where it had the backing of sound co-operatives.

Three classes of co-operatives are recognized: first, bargaining co-operatives which comprise those co-operatives which are organized for the purpose of maintaining firm contractual relations with 3429 their dealer, represent their membership in the adjustment of local differences and supervise vigilantly all operations, producer and distributor, in order that its members may be constantly informed as to the details of their business. Second, bargaining and collecting co-operatives which, in addition to the service performed by the first class, collect the money from the dealer and disburse it to the members, and third, bargaining, collecting, and operating cooperatives or those which perform complete co-operative service by way of plant ownership, manufacturing facilities, etc. Co-operatives of the first and second class may develop and qualify for inclusion in the third class, and unorganized farmers can incorporate and qualify for such class as their operations entitle them to. These provisions in the Order, while compensating co-operatives for the services rendered at present, are intended to be an incentive to country plant ownership and operation by every co-operative. The sums earned by these co-operatives are deducted before the uniform price is set. Each co-operative contributes on an equal basis and withdraws benefits according to the service rendered. Each co-operative pays the expenses of the operation of its own organization. There is no charge against any producers for losses incurred, inefficiency, or mismanagement in any co-operative except his own.

Payments for your milk will be made each month by your dealer or co-operative direct to you and in instances where dealers are paying twice a month there is nothing in the order to prevent that arrangement continuing. Your present relations with your dealer continue, except that he must pay the prices fixed in the Order and must correctly classify his purchases of milk. Your dealer's financial rating is still of importance to you, with this difference; many producers have been shipping to dealers of doubtful responsibility in order to retain fluid outlets. Under the Order you get the same price for your milk whether it is sold as fluid or manufactured, so if you have a dealer whose credit is in doubt you can refuse to sell him and manufacture your milk and receive the same price as if it had been used for fluid.

The rest of the Order is composed of stock provisions which do not affect other than to strengthen the administration. It is expected that if accepted by the producers this Order can go into effect about July 1st. Hearings must first be held on the Order and provision has been made for the holding of five public hearings in the State of New York. Shortly after the conclusion of the hearings a vote will be taken on a day designated by the Secretary and if two-thirds of the persons voting, individually or by co-operatives are in favor of the Order it becomes effective upon the Secretary attaching his signature thereto. The Secretary of Agriculture may suspend or terminate the Order on ten days' notice, and he must terminate it at the end of any month if 51% of the producers producing 50% of the milk request it. The method of termination is simple and no involved procedure is necessary to get rid of the Order if it does not work out as anticipated.

This is a sincere effort by a large percentage of all producers to provide a plan which will assure to the producer a living price for milk. As such it is submitted for your consideration and your action.

SECTION 5. Outside Market Differential.—In the case of Class 1 milk used outside the marketing area, outside New York State, and outside of the counties listed under Class 3 (b), a differential may be applied which will adjust the Class 1 price on such milk to the average price of fluid milk in the market where used, as determined by the Market Administrator, but in no event shall a deduction be made which exceeds the difference between the Class 1 and 3 (b) prices hereunder, for the respective months.

Article V—Reports of Handlers

SECTION 1. Monthly Reports.—Each handler shall make a monthly report to the Market Administrator on or before the 10th day of each month with respect to milk or 3445 DO YOU HAVE ANY QUESTIONS ABOUT THE PROPOSED MILK MARKETING ORDER?

What Is It?

The proposed milk marketing order gives producers Federal and State aid in compelling all dealers to pay fixed minimum prices to all producers approved for the New York metropolitan market.

Why Will This Work When Milk Control Didn't?

There were two things wrong with Milk Control. It couldn't control milk from other states. It did nothing to stop producer groups fighting each other for fluid markets. These orders correct both these things. The Federal Order takes care of the out-of-state milk. The State couldn't do this but the Federal government can. These orders will divide fairly the benefits of the fluid markets among all producers. There will be no reason for producers fighting among themselves for the fluid markets.

t Will Stop "Distress" Milk?

ilk from fluid plants which have lost their regular markets, or produce and have no manufacturing facilities, no longer need be ped on the market at cut prices. The order makes a charge nst all milk for the extra expense of moving this surplus milk her country plants for manufacture.

This Widen the Milk Shed?

. This has nothing to do with approval of dairies. That will be done by City and State inspectors. In fact, the order goes oward assuring an adequate supply from the present milk shed aking a charge against all milk for the extra expense of shutting condenseries and other manufacturing operations so as to ship during short periods.

Pays for Administering the Order?

very dealer pays not more than 2c per hundred on all milk. This is the only charge for administration expense.

Will producers Get Their Checks at the Same Time as Now?

Nothing in the order changes time of payment, which will nue to be arranged between each group of producers and who pays them, except that each dealer must pay producers or their rative for each month's milk not later than the 20th of the next h.

the Order Have Classified Prices?

s, the same as Milk Control in this and other states and counties ll other federal orders. There are three simple classes. This only way to get the most out of the milk for the producer. A flat price cannot be fixed for milk for fluid shipment by one r and that same price paid for use as cream, condensed, or butter other dealer. A low flat price (blended basis) is the principal of chiseling.

y One Cooperative Favored Above Others?

The order recognizes three classes of cooperatives—1. bargain- 2. bargaining and collecting, 3. bargaining and collecting and ting. The services rendered by all these is made a charge st all milk. Each cooperative receives a contribution for its rt according to the class for which its operations qualify. The ratives which merely bargain get 1c per hundredweight on the they sell; those which bargain and collect get 2½c; and those perform complete cooperative services get 5c. Any cooperative lower classes can increase its services and qualify for a higher Unorganized producers may organize and qualify. There is rge against any other producers for the regular plant operating ses or distribution branch operating expenses of any cooperative.

Is the Order so Long?

basic principles are simple and could be stated briefly but it is ecause it contains so many legal safeguards against evasion.

Who Wrote It?

The producers through their Bargaining Agency, with some help from Federal and State agricultural officials.

3447 Can the Producers Bargaining Agency or Any One Cooperative Dominate the Administration of the Order?

No. The Market Administrator is appointed by Secretary Wallace and Commissioner Noyes and is subject to removal by them. The order provides just what he is to do. It contains exact details and leaves no room for favoritism.

Is This an Experiment?

Federal assistance is new in this milk shed, but has passed through the stages of trial and error in other milk sheds during the past four years. It has now developed into a successful and workable plan.

How Can the Order Be Adopted?

The order can be adopted only after public hearings and with the consent of two-thirds or more of the producers.

When Does It End?

The order ends any time a majority of producers demands that it be ended.

METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS
BARGAINING AGENCY, INC.,
Syracuse, N. Y., August 29, 1938.

DEAR PRODUCER: Before you receive this letter, a Federal-State Milk Marketing Order, covering the Metropolitan New York Milk Market, will have been signed by the President. This Order will, no doubt, become effective September 1st.

To the casual observer, a wonderful battle has been won, but we, who have known the opposition, realize that the real battle is ahead. Through cooperative effort, a skirmish with the dealers has resulted in a producer victory that should give all confidence and which shows us the way for greater victories and a permanent living price for milk. This will be secured through the complete operation of a State-Federal Milk Marketing Order, backed up by strong producer cooperative associations. The farmers have proven the power of their united strength.

As you know, the dealers in Boston took the Boston Order into Court and have held up its full operation for over a year. Over two million of the farmers' money has been held up by the dealers. This means that 27–30 cents per hundredweight on all producers' milk as been held up for a year. Dealers and dealer controlled coopera-ives are now threatening to do the same thing with our Order.

This, producers can stop by inducing dealers to consent to the peration of the Order as an agreement. Your dealer, by such con-ent, voluntarily refrains from using the Courts to block the Order. he fewer dealers who appeal to the Courts, the greater the benefits om the Order. We want results through compliance with the rder, not law suits. If all the dealers sign the Order as an agree-ent, it becomes completely effective at once.

You will be contributing greatly towards that end if you singly collectively with other producers insist that your dealer cooperate ith others in signing this Order at once. If you have not already one this, won't you please take care of it immediately?

Won't you also cooperate with me by giving your advice on ques-ons that you will find on the enclosed page? By answering these estions, and by giving other suggestions and advice, you will be lping all producers, as well as yourself, to secure a living price for ilk.

I am looking forward to receiving your reply.

Sincerely yours,

C. H. BALDWIN.

METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS
BARGAINING AGENCY, INC.,
Syracuse, N. Y., September 15, 1938.

DEAR PRODUCER: With this letter is sent two copies of three resolutions that were passed at the recent meeting of the delegate body of the Producers Bargaining Agency. Each has a very important relation to our surplus milk problem. If the intent and purpose of these resolutions are made effective, very important steps towards getting better prices for all milk will have been taken and put on a more permanent basis.

It is, therefore, suggested that you see that these resolutions are properly presented and acted upon by your local cooperative association and by any other farm organization of which you are a member. Resolutions passed by such organizations should first be presented by a committee to your assemblyman and senator in person, so that you may know that you have their active support. Copies should also be sent to the proper State officials with a letter telling of the action that has been taken. It would be well to advise the Dean of the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca and the Director of the State Experiment Station at Geneva of your interest in and support for more intensive work to find more uses for dairy products.

Active local support for these measures will help to build a strong, aggressive program for your local associations, will bind all farm organizations closer together and thus they will become a more united power working to get the last possible dollar for that "surplus" milk which in the past has dragged, or been the excuse for dragging, all milk prices to unbearable levels.

I know that your support will be given. I only ask, at this time, that it be given proptly and that we be notified as to what active support you will promise from your organizations.

Very truly yours,

C. H. BALDWIN.

DEAR SECRETARY: Within a short time, you will receive from the Milk Market Administrator's office a questionnaire calling for considerable information in regard to your cooperative association, its policy, and its service to members who are under contract. You, of course, know that in order that producers cooperate with the Administrator to the fullest possible extent, every producer should be under contract. Now is the time to get producers under contract and to see that all records and papers of your cooperative association are in proper form.

TO FARM LEADERS:

To this letter is attached copy of letter that was sent to nearly ten thousand producers of October 13.

It is sent to you for your information and any suggestions that may come to you as a result.

It must be apparent to everyone who knows the facts that a sound surplus control plan has been developed by the milk producers and with producer support and aggressive backing it can be made effective and helpful to all. It must be equally as evident that without producer support through strong cooperative associations the plan will fail.

To my mind the great danger lies in the apathy ("Let George do it" attitude) of many producers. The price that has been announced by Administrator Harmon for September milk is comparatively speaking very satisfactory and it will naturally tend to increase the unconcern. This lackadaisical attitude will be played upon by cunning representatives of some dealers. Sly, foxy brokers and their well-known stooges who have grown fat and comfortable as a result of conniving are now in huddles to decide upon the best play to take advantage of this common, well-known weakness among producers.

I expect that soon some individual or officer speaking for some organization reputed as representing some group of producers will be pulled to the front to make a break in the producer line. Naturally the planners of this movement hope that "weak sister" groups will respond to the urge of the brokers and will follow as a flock of sheep trail the first one to break away. Such action will result in confusion, drawn-out court actions, and a fall in milk prices.

The question is not who will be the one to attempt the break, but how can the producers be aroused to the danger! Every producer should be determined to keep his line united and should listen to no coaching or softly whispered promises from the opposing camp.

The ball is in the producer's hands. Won't you watch with me to check in the bud any disloyalty to the producer cause?

Again I ask how can the producers be aroused to the danger and made to see the need for each becoming an active part of this splendid producer movement. Your interest and cooperation we appreciate. Your suggestions are requested.

Yours very truly,

C. H. BALDWIN.

TO MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL BUTTER CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE:

Before this, I believe you have received a letter from Mr. Charles . Holman, Secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers ederation, stating that you were one of those selected to represent ur County and your cooperative association in the National Butter mpaign.

I have just returned from a meeting of the Federation, which was ld at Cincinnati and which was attended by representatives of co- erative associations from all parts of the United States. The en- usiasm that was shown in discussing the National Butter Campaign dicated that throughout the United States producer representatives e going to take a very active interest in putting this compaign ross.

In New York State a large group of farm women are going to act a special committee to work in conjunction with the committee at is representing the various cooperative associations. As a result, ew York should do its full share in putting this surplus butter in e hands of the consumer.

Some definite responsibilities will have to be assumed by you as epresentative of your cooperative association and I have the follow- g suggestion to offer.

You will have to use your own initiative and your own plan for rrying out this suggestion or any policy that will accomplish the ne results. The idea is to get every producer to buy either a five- ten-pound package of butter during the first week of this cam- ign. Orders for this butter might be taken by you and those who working with you at the plant where milk is delivered, or you ght choose to write a letter to each of your members, enclosing dges to buy butter as suggested. One of our good cooperative lead- has suggested that each cooperative actually buy the butter and e it to the members as they deliver their milk, taking pay for same m their milk checks. This butter should be purchased from some your local storekeepers, dividing the business up among those who cooperating in this special campaign. By buying butter in larger antities, producers will be setting a good example. We can all nomize by using liberal quantities of butter at present prices.

Remember that, if we can put this surplus butter into commercial annels at this time, it will have a beneficial effect upon the price of classes of milk under the Federal and State Order.

This drive should include a campaign to discourage the use of oleo or any butter substitutes, especially during this time when good butter is so very cheap.

Please report to me as to your plans so that I may in turn report to Mr. Holman.

Sincerely yours,

(signed) C. H. BALDWIN.

METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS
BARGAINING AGENCY, INC.,
Syracuse, N. Y., October 29, 1938.

DEAR PRODUCER: Since you received my letter of October 13, many important events in connection with the operation of the Federal-State Marketing Order have taken place. Many serious problems, which demanded prompt and forceful action, were properly disposed of by producer action through their cooperative associations. The Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., has been alert and has thrown the united strength of the organized producers, who make up the Agency, to support the Order and its enforcement. Problems are continually arising that threaten the welfare of each and every dairyman and it is necessary that all have the facts so that each, to a greater extent, can put his strength and intelligent work in the organization that represents united farmer action. It is an aid towards this end that this letter is sent.

As in the first letter, you will find enclosed a reprint of the Agency's advertisement in the October 22 issue of the American Agriculturist. This advertisement is informative and states clearly the basic facts. It gives the big general problem that faces us and quite properly gives you, as a member of a cooperative association that is supporting the Order, credit for the results obtained thus far. That is where credit belongs and, as you compare the milk check you have just received with the previous check, you have reasons to feel proud of the fact that you are a part of the power that has brought the change about. You rightfully should take credit to yourself in proportion to the support that you have given to this movement.

I urge that you read the attached page carefully, then look at the improved price that your milk check shows and ask yourself if you are going to let anyone drive the price of your milk again into the ground without first having to account to you personally. I know that your answer is that of 60,000 other well-informed dairymen—an emphatic No.

I do not like to be continually yelling, Wolf! Wolf!! Wolf!!! Yet no one can possibly be aware of even a small part of the plans of the dairymen's enemies without knowing that the wrecking crew is already at work. The Order, which you built, rests on rock foundaon and is, in principle, as sound throughout as steel. But equally e true, it does not please those who have had unfair advantages over mpetitors and who for years have been responsible for keeping the rices of all milk at starvation levels. These old enemies are now ery busy whispering soft promises into the ears of those who will sten, while they connive very cunningly to tear your Marketing rder apart by court action or make it worthless by making it imposble for the cooperative associations, through the Bargaining gency, to carry on the practical work that is necessary if enforcement is made effective.

56 It does not perhaps seem reasonable, yet I honestly believe that some people have no hearts at all, or have hearts of stone.
it were not so, they would not insist that they are entitled to un-ir advantages over competitors. They would starve all farm peo-e and cripple all business to regain an unfair advantage over comtitors which they have long held and, as a result, have been able pile up more and more unearned wealth. These heartless individls, to whatever class they happen to belong, have been, from the ginning, and are still, watching with their stooges for the best ints of attack and are scheming and combining forces for that rpose. They are active: they are now combining brain powers, sources, and all possible strength to wreck your marketing plan.
ou, therefore, if you do your part, must be equally as active, and ually as willing to combine your ability with the ability of other oducers by making your cooperative association a united group, cognized as producer owned and controlled, and in a position to ttribute your full share to the cause.

The Federal-State Marketing Order recognizes cooperative assotions and makes provisions for cooperating with those that truly resent producers. There is no reason whatsoever for any procer not being an active member of one of these cooperative associans. Every producer controlled cooperative association should sup-rt the strict enforcement of the Order.

Those who attended the delegate meeting held at Syracuse this ek heard representatives of both State and Federal Governments press their willingness to cooperate with cooperative associations bringing about any necessary changes so that they can get all the efits that are intended under the Order, and thus do their full re towards seeing that producers work to support the cause.

The Bargaining Agency wants to be of service and if, at any time, cooperative or any individual producer feels that any of us can of service in helping you perfect your cooperative association, we nt to hear from you.

caution you that continuation of better prices depends upon you.
u must feel a responsibility as an individual for doing your full re. You must check the attacks of your enemies who are making a vicious attack on your plan. In your hands lies the responsibility for maintaining a "living price for milk."

Sincerely yours,

C. H. Baldwin

METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS.
BARGAINING AGENCY, INC.,
Syracuse, N. Y., September 17, 1934.

DEAR PRODUCER: On or about June 8, 1934, Hegeman Farms, Inc., laboring under what it believed were onerous conditions imposed upon it by the provisions of the Milk Control Law, was instrumental in setting up a new corporation known as the Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., composed of the producers at that time selling milk to Hegeman. By this process Hegeman Farms relieved itself of all responsibility to pay Control Board prices and placed upon the producers full responsibility for the amount of return to them. The farmers under this arrangement agreed to furnish the milk, pay for the processing at 20¢ per can, stand all losses which might be incurred in distribution and employ seven officers of Hegeman Farms to conduct the country plant and city distributing business for them at salaries of $150 per week each. Under the agreement, the farmers saddled themselves with all the risks of the business but guaranteed to Hegeman Farms, continued operation of its business with no possibility for loss to its former officers.

This arrangement has continued for several years, whether satisfactorily or not to producers apparently unknown, as there is little indication that the average producer is aware of the contents of the agreement nor of the liability he is under. While this scheme resorted to under Milk Control may have achieved moderate results, it is unlikely that this unusual set-up can return to producers under the Federal and State Orders, an amount per cwt. for milk equal to that received by other producers. After the uniform price paid to producers throughout the milk shed is received by Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., it must deduct from it all the items of expensive overhead now being charged by Hegeman Farms and the resulting return to producers will be small.

That these deductible items of expense are considerable is amply borne out by the facts in the case. I quote from Findings of Facts made August 30, 1934, by Kenneth F. Fee, Division of Milk Control in the Matter of Hegeman Farms Corporation, Hamilton Milk & Cream Company, Inc., and the Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc., as follows:

"The first meeting of the incorporators was held on June 18, 1934, and at that time bylaws were adopted. These bylaws provided, among other things, that the management of the affairs of the corporation be vested with the Board of Directors; that the Assistant Treasurer, Henry Breyer (formerly Secretary of Hegeman Farms Corporation) shall have charge of all funds, shall sign all checks, drafts, and notes; that there shall be four Assistant Secretaries each of whom is authorized to countersign checks, etc.

1459 "The directors approved resolutions authorizing the employment of the following persons at the salaries indicated:

Name and title:	Weekly salary
Henry Breyer, Assistant Treasurer	$150.00
Benjamin M. Wisch, Assistant Secretary	150.00
Benjamin Greenberg, Assistant Secretary	150.00
Irving Krout, Assistant Secretary	150.00
Irving Abramson, Assistant Secretary	150.00
Robert Schlifsky	150.00
Benjamin Cheifetz	150.00

The facts further indicate that while Hegeman Farms transferred the stock of Hegeman Farms Products, Inc., and the stock of Hamilton Milk & Cream Co., a subsidiary owned by it, to the Central New York Cooperative Association, it had taken the unusual precaution of first transferring all of the assets of both companies to a new corporation organized for that purpose, namely Hegton Milk Corporation, so that both companies were empty shells when their stock was transferred to the farmers. In support of this I quote again from Mr. Fee's findings as follows:

"It appears from documentary evidence that all of the assets of the Hamilton Milk & Cream Co. as well as the assets of the Hegeman Farms Corporation were recently transferred to the Hegton Milk Corporation, and that after this transfer of assets took place the capital stock of Hegeman Farms Corporation and the capital stock of the Hamilton Milk & Cream Company, Inc., was transferred to the Central New York Cooperative Association, Inc. and placed in escrow with Mr. Haskell."

After the consummation of the transfer above referred to, the Central New York Cooperative entered into an agreement under which you are still operating whereby the farmers leased the plants and equipment transferred by Hegeman to the new corporation, Hegton Milk Corporation, I quote again from the findings above referred to:

"The directors approved of the leasing, until June 30, 1935, of the facilities of the Hegton Milk Corporation, constituting the plants and equipment formerly owned by Hegeman Farms Corporation and by Hamilton Milk & Cream Company, Inc. For the use of these facilities a rental of 20¢ per can of milk handled is to be paid. According to an affidavit of Benjamin Greenberg, in January 1934, the entire cost of handling milk at the upstate plants was less than 16¢ per can.

"The contract between producers and the cooperative, which contract was approved by the directors, provides: For the payment to producers of a price which shall be based upon the amount received for said milk less the expense of handling, hauling, marketing, and distributing and less all other incidental expenses incurred in conducting the cooperative corporation of the first part, including all expense of every name and nature."

Mr. Fee's conclusions as to the character of this business are summed up in the following words:

"The conclusion that the inspiration for the formation of this cooperative association originated with the former officers of Hegeman Farms Corporation is inescapable. The producers have doubtless consented to go along with the plans only because they feared that if they did not do so they would lose their present milk market.

3420 "In addition to the risks of possible losses in producing milk, which they have always taken, these producers are now assuming risks incurred in its distribution in a market torn by fierce competition. While these producers have nominal control of the distributing end of the business, it will in fact be managed by the former officers of a corporation which for some reason has not in the past returned the legally prescribed prices. The plan is designed to provide these former officers with substantial salaries and a good return upon their investment, without the usual risks."

In conclusion, permit me to say that if the producers now members of the Central New York Cooperative, with full knowledge of all the facts, desire to continue the arrangement now in force, we have no desire to oppose their wishes altho we believe that the returns to your producers are bound to be lower than the return to other producers. If after knowledge of the facts you believe that some more equitable arrangement should be demanded, we stand ready to assist you in procuring it.

A new producer's cooperative is in process of organization by Hegeman producers, many of whom have signed contracts with it. A eting of all Hegeman producers has been called by the Board of rectors of the new cooperative at the Court House, Cortland, Y., September 20th at 8 P. M. At this meeting there will be a l and complete discussion of your situation. You are earnestly ited to attend and take part.

Very truly yours,

EDMUND F. COOKE,

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—DECEMBER

U. S. COURT REFUSES TO INTERFERE WITH MILK MARKETING PROGRAM

RACUSE, Nov. 21.—There will be no let up in activities of the tropolitan Co-operative Milk Producer's Bargaining Agency to ain full compliance with the Federal-State milk marketing pro- m, declared Charles H. Baldwin, Executive Secretary, today. Ir. Baldwin made this statement following a conference with his rney, Edmund F. Cooke, and other lawyers who argued against application by Jetter Dairy Company to restrain Mr. Baldwin, Bargaining Agency, and the Dairymen's League Cooperative ociation before United States Judge Frank Cooper in Albany urday.

he Jetter Company sought to restrain these defendants and tropolitan Market administrator E. M. Harmon and officials of State Department of Agriculture and Markets from enforcing marketing program which was instituted September 1 under The gers-Allen law and the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Judge Cooper made it plain," said Mr. Baldwin, "that he was going to rule on the constitutional questions raised by Jetter hout trial, and that he would issue no restraining order applying uch questions. He refused to restrain the administration and en- cement of the orders by State and Federal officials.

An important point raised by the plaintiff was that the Bar- ning Agency has been keeping producers informed as to which lers failed to comply with the regulations of the marketing pro- m, particularly in regard to payments to the Market Administra- Judge Cooper said that the Bargaining Agency, the Dairymen's gue, the Administrator or any one else has a right to state ether or not a dealer has made proper payments.

That is the crux of the whole matter. It is plain that producers' anizations have a duty to perform for farmers, and it is equally in that the court expects us to perform that duty.

"Judge Cooper specifically stated that he did not intend to restrain the Administrator from collecting from Jetter, and that he did not intend to interfere with this marketing arrangement pending final determination of the constitutionality of the law and validity of the marketing orders issued thereunder.

"The Jetter case marks a new milestone in the progress of New York Milk Shed dairy farmers. Never before have dealers sought to enjoin farmers, although there have been cases where dairymen have had to seek protection of the courts from the acts of dealers. Starting of this case seems to indicate the desperate desire of dealers to wreck this program and frighten producers into acceptance of less money for their milk.

"The effect, however, will be the opposite. Indignation is running high among farmers all through the State, and I believe they will now be more insistent than before that every dealer comply in every respect with this marketing program, which has already added more than $2,500,000 to dairymen's income.

"Farmers are fully aware of the truth of statements by Attorney Cooke for the Bargaining Agency and Seward A. Miller, of the Dairymen's League who told Judge Cooper that under this program farmers for the first time saw hope of becoming economically safe. They pointed out that this program merely gives farmers what labor has long enjoyed—the right to set and obtain a living price for their product, and that dealers having failed to block the program are now seeking court assistance to prevent its being made effective."

3471 MILK DEALERS WARNED TO RIGHT INDUSTRY

SYRACUSE.—New York state milk distributors were warned yesterday by a producers' bargaining agency executive that "the public demands that the industry right itself or be righted."

The admonition was sounded by Charles Baldwin, executive secretary of the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, in an address before the joint conventions of the New York State Milk Distributors, Inc., and the New York Dairy Boosters Association.

"If the industry does not soon do something to put itself in a better light before the public," Baldwin said, "I believe we can expect changes which will, in the long run, create no more efficiency, but which will put more and more complicated regulations upon distributors."

Baldwin told his audience of 300 distributors and dairymen that the new federal-state milk marketing order, designed to fix minimum prices to be paid producers for their milk "cannot be expected to be perfect," and predicted that "time will prove that changes are necessary."

"It is the producers, working through their bargaining agency, that will perfect these changes just as they developed the original order," he added.

is these same producers, working co-operatively through their erative associations, who will see that the intent of the order is ed out. Without strong co-operative associations supporting and ng to enforce the order, its provisions would be of little use."
dwin declared that through their bargaining agencies producers listributors can "work together to bring about better understand- nd harmony in the whole industry."

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—MAY

PRODUCERS, ATTENTION

How much longer are we willing to milk cows for nothing! For seven years our market has been riddled. Our prices have been ruinous. With 65,000 of us fighting for fluid markets we have killed our own business. Today everyone feels sorry for us: politicians, editors, soapbox orators, demigods, in fact everyone with an axe to grind is holding it on our grindstone.

Last year the farm organizations of the milk shed made a study of this milk problem. As a result we secured the Rogers-Allen Milk Law. To-day more than 50,000 producers are working under that law to build a living price for milk. We were successful during the fall and winter in bargaining for fair prices. To-day, with surplus flooding the market, these 50,000 producers are powerless to control prices without a plan to control surplus.

Such a plan has been built and is ready for your inspection. Hearing will be held during the week of May 16th on the plan which is in the form of a State and Federal Marketing Agreement. This plan will bring every dealer in the market right up to the rack and force him to pay a stated price for our milk. No dairyman has to sell for a penny less because, under the plan, every dairyman is protected.

Dealers will fight this plan with their last ounce of blood. They will come to you and call you "Dear Friend" and try to fill you full of lies and misinformation about the plan. Check their statements with the information in the enclosed booklet. Make them point out the parts which they say will pauperize or regiment you. No individual farmer is regulated in any way. There is no production control of any kind. You do not have to make any reports. No government agents will visit you. This plan controls dealers, not producers. It protects producers. Don't let any dealer or dealer's stooge tell you any different.

This may be dairymen's last stand, our last chance to handle our own business. We have muffed it so long, that to-day the Constitutional Convention in Albany is considering making milk a public utility. Would you like to work under some Public Service commission selected by voters who are 93% consumers. At the polls you are outvoted 10 to 1. Think!

Ask your dealer friend why he is opposed to this plan. Check his reasons against the best information you can get. Ask yourself why the dealer should be interested in your welfare. He has ground you down in poverty and now poses as your friend. Isn't it about

2 THE PROPOSED MILK MARKETING ORDER

What Is It?

The proposed milk marketing order is producer price fixing by leral and State orders. It compels all dealers to pay fixed minim prices to all producers approved for the New York metropolitan rket.

Why Will This Work When Milk Control Didn't?

There were two things wrong with Milk Control. It couldn't con- milk from other States. It did nothing to stop producer groups ting each other for fluid markets. These orders correct both se things. The Federal order takes care of the out-of-State milk. e State couldn't do this but the Federal Government can. These ers will divide fairly the benefits of the fluid markets among all ducers. There will be no reason for producers fighting among nselves for the fluid markets.

Will This Widen the Milk Shed?

No. This has nothing to do with approval of dairies. That will l be done by City and State inspectors.

Who Pays for This?

Every dealer pays not more than 2c per hundred on all milk. This he only charge for Administration expense.

Will Producers Get Their Checks at the Same Time as Now?

Yes. Nothing in the order changes time of payment.

Is Any One Co-operative Favored Above Others?

No. The order establishes three classes of co-operatives—1. barning, 2. bargaining and collecting, 3. bargaining and collecting l operating. The services rendered by all these is made a charge inst all milk. Each co-operative receives a contribution for its port according to the class for which its operations qualify. The operatives which merely bargain get 1c per hundredweight on the k they sell; those which bargain and collect get 2½c; and those ch perform complete co-operative services get 5c. Any co-operve in the lower classes can increase its services and qualify for a her class.

Who Wrote It?

The Producers' Bargaining Agency, with some help from Federal and State agricultural officials.

Can the Producers' Bargaining Agency or Any One Co-operative Dominate the Administration of the Order?

No. The Market Administrator is appointed by Secretary Wallace and Commissioner Noyes and is subject to removal by them. The order provides just what he is to do. It contains exact details and leaves no room for favoritism.

Is This an Experiment?

Federal assistance is new in this milk shed, but has passed through the stages of trial and error in other milk sheds during the past four years. It has now developed into a successful and workable plan.

How Can the Order Be Adopted?

The order can be adopted only after public hearings and with the consent of two-thirds or more of the producers.

When Does It End?

The order ends any time a majority of producers demands that it be ended.

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—FEBRUARY

AAA OFFICIAL CONFERS WITH AGENCY GROUP

WASHINGTON.—A group of New York milk producers conferred with Dr. G. W. Gaumnetz, chief of the agricultural adjustment administration's dairy section, concerning possible federal action to aid the dairy industry in their state.

Headed by Homer S. Rolfe, of Ogdensburg, president of the metropolitan co-operative milk producers' bargaining agency, the 3495 producers discussed steps necessary to establish federal marketing control in New York.

Rolfe said no commitments were planned by the group but expressed belief federal aid would be necessary to "preserve the marketing structure" of New York's $2,000,000,000 dairy industry.

Several of the group criticized Mayor LaGuardia of New York city, who recently placed milk on sale at nine cents a quart in the city. They contended his action threatened the whole price structure in the state.

olfe said his organization felt federal control of the New York shed would be necessary "because some producers are underselling narket."

olfe said the group expected to continue discussions with Dr. mnetz this afternoon.

e upstate producer emphasized the delegation was here merely information." He said it would report to the metropolitan co-ative members before determining any course of action.

n producers accompanied Rolfe. They were Leon Chapin, North gor; J. C. Treat, Honcoye Falls; E. C. Bardin, West Winfield; Laidlaw, Gouverneur; Ralph Norton, Boonville; E. R. Skillman, hamton; Richard Child, Amsterdam; Alfred Williams, Franklin-; J. A. Coulter, Watertown; and Joseph Davis, Little Marsh, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA REQUESTS FEDERAL ORDER

he Agricultural Adjustment Administration has been asked to e into the Philadelphia market to regulate the price of interstate . This action was taken by the Executive Committee at a special ting held on December 22, and formal written request was sent etter to Dr. E. W. Gaumnitz, Chief of the Dairy Section of the icultural Adjustment Administration, on December 23.

his move was the outgrowth of a conference held on December 22, ch was arranged by the Pennsylvania Milk Control Commission was participated in by that Commission, the New Jersey Board Milk Control, the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment inistration, the Executive Committee and officers of your own perative, and representatives of the Allied Dairy Farmers' Asso-ion, Chester County Dairymen's Association, and the United mers' Association.

Gaumnitz Outlines Procedure

he procedure to be followed was outlined by Dr. Gaumnitz and sists of four points as follows:

. The Federal Government proceed jointly with the states in the elopment of a plan for consideration at a public hearing.

. Establishment of uniform orders by the Pennsylvania and New sey control agencies and the AAA so that uniform producer prices uld prevail throughout the area supplying milk to the market, se orders to be preceded by a joint public hearing at which all erested parties may appear.

. Federal regulation would be confined to milk in interstate com-rce.

. If a Federal order is issued, administration of it should be ely coordinated with the administration of orders of the New sey and Pennsylvania control agencies.

At the close of the conference, Howard G. Eisaman, Chairman of Pennsylvania Milk Control Commission, stated that substantial progress had been accomplished and further conferences will be held in the immediate future to the end that the interstate phase of milk control might be brought under adequate control at the earliest possible date.

The need for Federal regulation has been felt for considerable time. Previous to October 1935, the majority of the milk dealers who were operating in both Pennsylvania and out-of-state were paying the same price for milk at all points within the same mile zone from Philadelphia. At that time, however, an order issued by the Pennsylvania Milk Control Board established prices at receiving stations in Pennsylvania which took into consideration the average actual cost of operating receiving stations and actual hauling costs to Philadelphia. Although milk was bought at Pennsylvania stations on this schedule the same differential as before was used in calculating prices at receiving stations outside of the state.

Even before that a few dealers who obtained milk principally outside the state were paying less than the established price for the market.

In checking the files of the Milk Producers' Review, we discover that producers selling through receiving stations in Delaware and Maryland had received prices which ranged from 3 to 20 cents per hundred pounds less than producers supplying milk to receiving stations operated by the same dealers in similar mile zones in Pennsylvania had received.

Lower Price Out of State

A. H. Lauterbach, general manager of the Inter-State, outlined to the conference some of the facts of the situation and discussed trends which are developing. It was pointed out that some of the smaller dealers are getting more and more of their milk from out of the state and that additional dealers are threatening to get a part of their supply from some other state in order to escape Control Commission regulations and meet their competition. There have been instances of Pennsylvania dealers going to New Jersey to get milk and New Jersey dealers coming to Pennsylvania, with the farmers in their own states being laid off.

This situation is made possible because the control boards of the respective states can regulate the price on only the milk which originates and is sold within their own state, having no control over milk which crosses state lines.

There have been frequent demands by producers, especially in Maryland and Delaware, that action be taken to correct the difference in price that producers there receive as compared with Pennsylvania producers. It is feared that unless the price is stabilized there will be an eventual breakdown in the market, with many Pennsylvania producers having a price but no market, while the out-of-state producers would have a market at a lower price.

Senator Weldon Heyburn, Delaware County, concurred in the need for some type of regulation in order to stabilize the milk market and prevent probable loss of markets for our own producers.

It has been pointed out that consumers got no benefit from the lower price paid out-of-state producers.

See Need for Federal Order

Numerous conferences have been held with milk dealers in order to adjust these differences in producer prices. Some progress resulted and the difference in price now being paid is less than it was a year or more ago. However, some dealers show no desire to cooperate and never appear at conferences on the subject. It was felt that the only way to obtain uniformity is to put a Federal marketing agreement or order into effect.

It is generally felt that if a Federal order is to be effective it must be identical, as far as producers' prices are concerned, with orders issued by the state control agencies. In order to obtain a Federal marketing agreement, two-thirds of the producers in a market must be in favor of the action. Should the milk dealers refuse to sign an agreement, then an order may be issued which must be requested by producers representing three-fourths of the milk supplied the market. A Federal marketing order may be cancelled by request of a majority of the producers in the market. In every case a producers' organization may speak for all its members.

A Federal order would cover producer prices only and then only on milk which crosses state lines into the marketing area. The price to producers for milk within the state would be set by the respective state control agency. The states would also have the power of establishing prices charged wholesale buyers and consumers.

Plans are under way to hold a hearing in the Philadelphia area as soon as possible. It is expected that some investigation will be made first in order to show the need for Federal regulation and, on the basis of the facts thus found, the hearing will proceed. Prices included in any Federal agreement or order will be set according to facts as determined after careful study. If, as hoped, concurrent orders are issued by the AAA and the state control agencies, the Class I price will be uniform to all producers supplying Philadelphia with milk, with differentials, of course, for freight, Grade A bonuses, etc. Likewise, prices in other classifications will be uniform.

The proposed level production plan must also be considered in connection with the Federal regulation. Here, again, the Federal order must be uniform with state orders so as to put all producers in the milk shed on the same basis.

The administration of the concurrent orders, it is hoped, will be placed under one head and with the arrangements contemplated it is expected that cost of administration will be relatively low.

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—MARCH

BARGAINING AGENCY MEETS

Snow and ice, along with the blizzard, failed to keep your directors home on Monday, February 28th, as they met in an all day session at the Hotel Onondaga, Syracuse.

Matters of great importance to every member of the Cooperative, who make up the Bargaining Agency were discussed. The meeting lasted far into the night and small groups gathered together, discussing various angles of the proposed program which is based on the following fundamental principles:

1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.
2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid outlets.
3. An equal share by each producer in the burden of the surplus and the expense of controlling it.
4. Reasonable contribution to those having surplus facilities for the use of them seasonally for market protection.
5. The effectuation of the foregoing principles in such a manner as will perpetuate and encourage cooperatives.

The directors also discussed matters pertaining to the welfare of your organizations and reports were given them from various sections of the New York Metropolitan area, which revealed the present conditions, as to prices, activities, for and against the Bargaining Agency, and plans were outlined for many meetings which will be held with various groups, so that the ranks of the Bargaining Agency members can be solidified.

On Tuesday, March 1st, meeting in the same City, delegates to the number of over 100, gathered together with the officers and in the two sessions, matters of great importance were discussed and approved.

The delegates voted for the continuance of the present milk price schedule through March. These prices called for $2.20 per hundred pounds for fluid milk on a 3.5% basis; fluid cream continues at $2.06; while the price of milk were the entire output of a country plant is taken still remains at $2.10.

President Homer Rolfe acted as chairman for the two sessions, and Congressman Edmund Cooke was given the job of presenting to those present the recommendations of the Executive Board and the directors on the proposed State-Federal Marketing Assistance plan.

Our only regret is that every member of the Bargaining Agency was not present to listen to the explanation that Mr. Cooke gave on the new proposed program. He declared that the officers and delegates of the Bargaining Agency were charged with the leadership that they must not fail to undertake. He also stated that no great things have ever been done, unless it has been done in a spirit of a compromise.

Step by step, Mr. Cooke led the delegates and officers and a few guests that were present through the maze of difficulties that have faced the officers of the Bargaining Agency in their efforts to stabilize the industry of the great State of New York and adjacent areas in Vermont and Pennsylvania. A much clearer conception of the vast amount of under ground opposition to any plan or attempt made by the Bargaining Agency to better the conditions of the producers was given to all present.

The present situation and the opposition that has been set up against the Rogers-Allen law by certain disgruntled people, was openly discussed and Mr. Cooke carefully explained just how matters of this kind can be overcome, and how in the long run the Producers' Bargaining Agency will prove to the milk industry of the State that their program is the right one, and to date no one has ever offered anything that could take its place.

A number of the delegates present explained in detail as to how certain dealers were juggling the prices as set by the combined meeting of the producers and dealers for the milk sold in January and February by the producers to these dealers. In several instances the schemes that have been tried out were very raw, and many of our producer members, as well as the fieldmen, are on the alert watching for such tricks which can be classified simply as those practiced like "chizzlers."

The delegates unanimously approved of the recommendations made by the directors as to the continuance of the present price schedule on milk. This schedule is subject to the reopening by either agency at any time on reasonable notice; and the Bargaining Agency Grievance Committee was instructed to endeavor to keep Alternate No. 2 in the price agreement, for as long a period as possible, pending the next negotiations.

Another recommendation of the directors group that was approved by the delegates was that no cooperative in making future contracts with dealers should do so without including in such contracts, a statement to the effect that said contract be subject to State and Federal orders, if and when such orders are issued.

Executive Secretary Mr. Baldwin outlined to the delegates the plan of a number of public meetings, where all of these important matters will be discussed, and in addition there will be special broadcasts, and your country newspapers will be supplied with down to the minute information, while special issues of the Market News will be sent out, keeping you fully informed of developments as they occur.

The delegate body unanimously adopted a resolution commending the efforts of Senator George F. Rogers and Assemblyman Howard N. Allen in seeking to procure by legislations, means to further protect the producers.

A specially prepared report on the market conditions in New York City was given to the delegates, and it revealed some startling conditions as to the prices of milk and the attempt of certain upstate dealers to break down the price by offering milk at a much lower price than has been set throughout the milk shed. This report revealed conditions that are facing certain groups of North Country producers and how they are being compelled to take a price far less than what the producers of the Associated groups in the Bargaining Agency are receiving.

All in all, the delegates meeting was another one of the gathering which are frequently held by the Producers' Bargaining Agency, and when a visitor is with us, they generally comment on the character, appearance, and ability of the gentlemen that have been chosen to represent the various Cooperatives and who gather together and discuss their individual or group problems, and as a general rule, differences are ironed out by those that have developed into a leadership that is second to none in the milk industry in these United States.

3498 DAIRYMEN WILL BENEFIT IF NO HEED IS PAID TO TALK OF POLITICIANS

ITHACA, Feb. 18 (Editorial correspondence).—Keep the politician's foot out of the milk bucket and the dairy farmer will benefit.

Agitation now is being carried on by a number of politicians who were disappointed in the results shown by the Ernst & Ernst audit and others who have special axes to grind.

Its result will be increased consumer resistance and smaller returns to the dairy farmer.

Prominently displayed on the campus here are notices of a talk by a Communist leader of the state on distribution of milk. It shows the qualifications of another "expert" on the milk question from the political side.

Dairy farmers chuckle at the promise of Attorney-General Bennett that he will show excessive profits by milk distributors. They are inclined to believe he went off half cocked and that the would-be Democratic candidate for governor will have some trouble proving his point.

Studies made here by marketing experts—and their studies go back as far as 1865, just as the civil war came to a close—indicate a cost of distributing milk in the metropolitan area of approximately five cents a quart. This is about the cost found by the Ernst & Ernst audit made for the department of agriculture and markets. The profit revealed was a fraction of a cent a quart, actually about one-third of a cent.

Farmers discount 90 per cent of the talk by politicians and believe that a moratorium on it would be a good thing in that it would stop the misleading information which makes for consumer resistance and instability in the dairy industry from which the farmer suffers in the form of reduced returns.

MR. SEXAUER SPEAKS

following address was delivered at the Farm and Home Week ca, New York, Feb. 18, 1938.

The Milk Situation

scussion on milk by a representative of farmers which does l with prices to farmers is a waste of farmers' time and money.
ears ago I discussed at some length the report of the Pitcher ttee. This Committee, as you will recall, was appointed by slature to investigate the milk situation during 1932. It made t exhaustive investigation ever conducted; it issued one of the reports; it made the most definite recommendations of any tee which has ever investigated the industry.
t report is long but the recommendations are clear and concise.
of the fact that in 1932 we were in the depth of the depres-d there were some temporary emergencies which needed im-attention the report would be as pertinent today as at that time. This Committee's report is so sound that I am impelled to quote a few paragraphs from it. The Committee spent nine months in its investigation. It held thirteen public and several private hearings. Its report dealt with the problems of the industry in two ways, first with the immediate emergency which then faced dairymen, and second the broad basic economic and psychological problems inherent in the great industry.

They recognized that the plight of dairymen was the result of causes reaching into the realms of economic organization trade practices, and the peculiarities of the industry. They outlined the causes of the depression of 1933 and they pointed out the relationship between the general economic depression and the conditions dairymen were then faced with. But they also stated,

"The fluid milk industry is affected by factors of instability peculiar to itself which call for special methods of control" and then they discussed problems of surplus and cow cycles, and made this statement,

"A satisfactory stabilization of prices for fluid milk requires . . . that the burden of surplus milk be shared equally by all producers and by all distributors in the milk shed. So long as the surplus burden is unequally distributed the pressure to market surplus milk in fluid form will be a serious disturbing factor."

The Committee recommended as an emergency measure the establishment of a temporary milk control board with broad powers to regulate and stabilize the milk industry, but they said this board should also foster and promote more complete organization of producers. This was the recommendation to meet the emergency. For four years a law based upon that recommendation continued upon the statute books of this state. This last year the Milk Control Law passed on its way.

The Pitcher Committee also recommended a permanent program of handling permanent or continuing problems of the industry. Most people lost sight of this. Their suggestions for handling this phase of the problem were:

1—"Universal application of the classified price plan and control of surplus milk by the producers through effective cooperative organization."

2—"Definite action should be taken without delay * * * to initiate and perfect a plan and recommend remedial legislation by which a more perfect union of all milk producers both within the state and within the milk shed may be attained, and * * * so as to effect a fair, just, equitable, and legal relation between the producer, distributor, and consumers of milk and milk products, * * *."

The question before us then is; what progress has been made toward carrying out the recommendations for the permanent handling of the problem? The emergency program was carried out. A milk control law was passed. In this state it lasted four years and then ast spring was not re-enacted. In the meantime the emergency had retty well passed. Basic commodity prices had arisen, unemployment had declined, business activity had increased, and consumer urchasing power was such that each year had seen an increase in he consumption of milk over the previous year. Upon elimination f the milk control law as such last spring the market again went nto a tailspin. This was not because of an emergency condition, but s outlined by the Pitcher Committee in its report, was because of he "peculiar problems inherent to the industry":

"Sec. 4. The fluid milk industry is affected by factors of instability eculiar to itself which call for special methods of control."

heir recommendations for a permanent program were again p for consideration.

The question before us is—

1st, How far have we progressed in the passage of legislation to llow producers to work together through their organizations to andle surplus and

2nd, How far have we progressed in perfecting and passing emedial legislation by which a more perfect union of all milk proucers both within the state and within the milk shed may be attained, nd by which the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, laryland, Massachusetts, Vermont, and Connecticut * * * may ooperate * * * to effect a fair, just, equitable, and legal relaon between the producer, distributor, and consumers of milk and ilk products."

At this point we can take up a discussion of legislation passed this ast year and the extent to which dairy farmers through their oranizations have utilized that legislation for the purpose of raising nd maintaining milk prices. Two pieces of legislation have been assed:

A. Rogers-Allen Law.

B. Amendment to the Marketing Agreement Section of A. A. A.

This Rogers-Allen Law was drafted and passed for the purpose f carrying into practical operation the recommendations of the itcher Committee made in 1933. It allows cooperative organizations oth within and without the state to join together in bargaining for price for milk. It allows them to organize to handle surplus if hey so desire. It provides for a cooperative working arrangement etween New York State and other states and between New York tate and the Federal Governme .t. It allows negotiations of prices etween producer groups and distributor groups. These are all in ccordance with the Pitcher Committee's recommendations. In other ords the provisions of the Rogers-Allen Law which allow producers o get together for the purpose of negotiating with distributors, which llow them to get together for the purpose of handling their surplus, hich allow this state to cooperate with other states and which allow he state to cooperate with the federal government, are in accordance ith the recommendations of the Pitcher Committee, had their inption with that report, and were supported by the dairy industry as a part of the program to put the recommendations of the Pitcher Committee into effect.

By inference at least the Pitcher Committee also recommended that federal legislation be passed which would allow the federal government to cooperate with the state along the same lines and upon the same program. During this past year amendments to the marketing agreement section of the A. A. A. were passed which gave to the Secretary of Agriculture many of the same powers that the Rogers-Allen Law gave to the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

These two pieces of legislation fitted together carry forward as far as remedial legislation is concerned the recommendations of the Pitcher Committee. Just how have dairy farmers of the New York Milk Shed taken advantage of this legislation?

The Rogers-Allen Law provided that cooperative organizations of whatever kind or character now existing within the Milk Shed, or hereafter to be formed, can work together for the purposes of negotiating with distributors or handling surplus. Some people feel that this is a League idea. I believe the Rogers-Allen Law is a sufficiently good document that I should like to take credit for the basic ideas contained therein. However, common honesty compels me to give credit to others. I want to take this opportunity to read to you a recommendation made by a witness before the Pitcher Committee during the period in which they were taking testimony.

"The recommendation I would make would be, first, revise our Co-operative Law in the State, and provide in that law that farm organizations with the title of cooperative, should be organized from the ground up; * * * Each association send a delegate to a central body, and that body create an executive committee to sell milk to take care of surplus, if their is any; do anything that the members ask that they do, through their organization, * * * in that plan it would not be necessary to disturb any group of dairymen that exists now, the Dairymen's League, the Sheffield Producers, the Unity, and the Rutland Plan, or any other that is organized to handle milk, they could go right into it as a unit. The organization could be very easily perfected without any danger of the anti-trust law, and in fact could be made one organization and not disturb anyone that had a preference to remain in the organization they have now."

That is an excellent description of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency and how it operates. The recommendation was made on September 29, 1932, by Mr. John J. Dillon, appearing before the Pitcher Committee at Carmel, New York.

The transformation of these ideas into a working document, I must admit, is very largely the work of the Dairymen's League and there seems to be some logical reason why this should be so. The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association has had twenty years experience in dealing with the problems of membership, negotiations, and marketing.

Pioneering as we have in the cooperative field for twenty years there plainly is in the Dairymen's League the greatest all-around legal background on this problem that exists in the dairy industry. As it combines the judgment of a bunch of hard-headed farmers with the experience of an able legal staff and the resourcefulness brought about by twenty years experience in negotiating with distributors, it is not surprising that legislation on milk bears something of the stamp of the Dairymen's League.

During the past eight months since the Rogers-Allen Law was passed and signed by the Governor over one hundred groups of farmers ranging in size from 50 to 35,000 have indicated their willingness and desire to work together for a common purpose. This does not mean that all these groups are well-integrated organizations with capital and experience. It does mean, however, that the magnet of common interest contained in this law has drawn these groups together for the purpose of working jointly on their problem.

The going has been tough. Some dealers have not changed their attitude toward producers or producers' organizations. Many of them still want to make money buying cheap rather than by sound merchandizing. There is no reason to believe that they will change unless forced to. The same distributors who broke down the unity of dairy farmers under the Cooperative Law are working as diligently to break down the unity of cooperatives under the Rogers-Allen Law. They are using the same tactics to prevent cooperation among the cooperatives as they once used to prevent cooperation among producers.

Cooperatives today have more freedom under this law, and there are still provisions in this law to assist them in maintaining prices that have not yet been called into use. The state has not entirely laid down its responsibility of assisting in the handling of the problem. Under the Rogers-Allen Law, rather than stepping into the picture as an autocrat to handle the problem regardless of the will of producers, it today stands aside as a kindly mentor awaiting such time as the large majority of the producers signify their desire for the assistance of the state and the kind of assistance they want.

Under the Rogers-Allen Law at the request of producers the state can step into the picture and exercise all the powers of protecting producers' prices that it previously exercised under the Milk Control Law, but it is presumed that it will only exercise those powers when a sufficient number of the producers are organized to handle a large part of the problem themselves, and the state will be required only to cooperate with this group in order that the problem as a whole may be equally as well handled.

But these powers of the state are not all the powers that today can be called into being on the part of the cooperatives. Under the federal law the federal government is authorized to do all the things so far as interstate milk is concerned that the state is authorized to do as far as intrastate milk is concerned. But the federal government also stands aside until such time as a large majority of the producers say that they want the federal government to assist them in handling those parts of the problem which cooperatives themselves are unable to handle. And like a kindly mentor it, too, must step aside at such a time as a majority of the producers request it.

So today we have a situation within this Milk Shed where the recommendations of the Pitcher Committe for the handling of the permanent phases of the problem have been carried out as far as 3510 legislation is concerned. Cooperatives are now working together under this legislation to carry out the provisions of the remedial legislation.

This legislation is largely permissive, available to producers when they organize to use it and of themselves make use of it. Powers of state and federal governments never before made available are there for the asking if they, the producers, develop their own program. It is an opportunity for self-government combined with governmental assistance seldom, if ever, granted an industry.

More people in diverse groups have come together in a shorter time under this law than I have ever heard of before.

From July 1937 to January 1938, working under the Rogers-Allen Law alone and using only a part of the rights and privileges which it grants, Dairymen's League members have received $800,000 more for their milk than a year ago under State Milk Control. The benefit to all dairymen of the New York Milk Shed, in my opinion, will total more than $2,000,000 for that period. Still greater benefits will come to the dairy farmers of the New York Milk Shed when and if they learn to operate more effectively under this law and learn to use all of its provisions.

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—APRIL

BARGAINING AGENCY MEETING

Once again on Friday morning, March 25th, officials, delegates, and visitors gathered in Syracuse and discussed the demands for a reduction in the prices of milk and cream and matters of importance relative to the proposed Federal Assistance plan.

Chairman Rolfe, in opening the morning session held at Hotel Onondaga, went into detail of the meeting held a few days previously with the committee from the Dealers Bargaining Agency.

At this meeting the dealers bluntly told our committee that the uncontrolled milk that was being brought into the New York Market, was rapidly demoralizing the entire price structure.

Chairman Rolfe stated that, after an all-day discussion, the dealer group finally offered to pay $2.00 for milk for fluid distribution to the retail trade and $1.75 for fluid cream for retail distribution. This is a reduction of 20c per hundred for fluid milk and 25c for milk for fluid cream, and is the third reduction since January 1st.

Chairman Rolfe stated that the committee was presenting to the del-ates present these suggested prices and following his remark there s a wild skirmish on the floor between those in favor of the reducn and many who felt that it was unwise to accept such a reduction this time.

Seemingly the bone of contention was the proposed elimination of ternate No. 2, which set the price for milk where a dealer pur-ased the entire output of the plant.

Quite a number of the co-operatives present expressed dissatisfac-n at the proposed elimination of this section and among the speaks who discussed the matter was Chairman Rolfe, E. J. Friers, Delete Dunn, William Mather, Delegate Mason, Stanley Piseck, F. H. ilds, Delegate Kinney, Delegate DuMont, Delegate Markofski, nie Sheldon, Warren Davey, Mr. Strobeck, Alfred J. Williams,
d J. C. Treat.

Several of the delegates were a little harsh in their condemnation the work that the directors have done, but a great many of the legates present rally to the support of the delegates and, after oper explanations were made, the meeting turned into one of the ster type and everything went along nicely.

Chairman Rolfe told those present that the Bargaining Agency uld be just as strong as the Farmers made it, and he urged a closer -operation out in the field so that the twenty-five percent of the oducers, who are not in the Bargaining Agency, would eventually e up and thus benefits for the entire milkshed could be secured.

When the vote was taken by the delegates to approve the new price hedule, it was almost unanimous and, when Mr. Sexauer, as Presint of the Dairymen's League, cast the vote for the many thousands producers who belong to the Bargaining Agency, he read a state-nt which is given in another section of the Market News.

Mr. Sexauer talked to the delegates and visitors present in a man-r that won for him hearty applause at the conclusion of his talk.
e spoke as an individual and discussed the Bargaining Agency from l angles, disclosing the weakness and praising the strong attitude ken on many subjects of vital importance to the producer members.
r. Sexauer urged that a strong program be immediately prepared ong militant lines and in case that at any time it was necessary fall back on this reserve program, that all groups would be ready face any emergency and, even if it meant a strike, we should all be a position to carry out any program the special committee should cide upon.

Edmund Cooke, the attorney for the Bargaining Agency, once ain discussed the proposed Federal Assistance Plan, which is now ving the rough spots ironed out of it. Going into detail as to the erpretation of the proposed act, he once again presented a clear ture to the delegates and visitors, and it seems to your writer that e is a man most capable of handling the legal affairs of your rgaining Agency.

During the afternoon a number of "Good Will" talks were given and finally one of our guests, Mr. Davis of the Dairymen's League, brought in several boxes of fine New York State apples and it was late in the afternoon before Chairman Rolfe adjourned the meeting.

The special committee, headed by Chairman Rolfe, who have been handling the details in regards to the proposed Federal Assistance plan, were in Washington, conferring with federal officials on March 28th and 29th. A tentative draft of a fluid milk marketing agreement for the New York City area producers was outlined at the conference, and, after matters relative to the proposed plan were discussed, both sides issued a statement at Washington in which certain information relative to the proposal was given to the press.

This proposal contemplates establishment of uniform interstate and intra-state prices and regulations in New York City, Nassau, 3528 and Westchester Counties. The price provisions would apply only to producers who would share in the proceeds of fluid-milk sales under a pooling arrangement.

NOTE.—Just as soon as this plan has met the approval of the Federal Officials, we will present it to our readers complete, and Chairman Rolfe, with the assistance of Executive Secretary Baldwin and the fieldmen, have arranged many meetings among the members, in which the plan will be discussed in detail.

It is planned by the Federal Officials to hold a series of hearings on the proposed order and every producer in the state who supplies milk to the New York City market will be given an opportunity of learning the details of the proposal.

3515 NEWS NOTES FROM MR. BALDWIN'S OFFICE

Meetings are being held all over the milk shed for the purpose of discussing the principles of the proposed marketing agreement.

On February 24th, the Directors of the Portville, Steamburg, and Leon Cooperatives met in Salamanca. These Directors agreed unanimously that Federal assistance was necessary in order to give all the inspected producers in the milk shed the advantages of a surplus control plan.

On March 10th, the Directors of six cooperatives met at Granville, N. Y. These Directors represented the Rupert, Metrowee Valley, Slate Valley, Fair Haven, Otter Valley, and Bennington County Cooperatives. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the Federal Agreement, and to make plans for other meetings at which these Directors can explain the principles of the Agreement to all the members of the Cooperatives. Farmers have taken a long step forward when representatives of many groups come together for a single purpose.

The Producers of the East Freetown Cooperative met on March 8th. The principles of the Federal Marketing agreement were explained and a resolution was adopted approving of these principles.

Members of the Otselic Valley Cooperative met at the High School n Cincinnatus on March 8th. In the discussion following the explanation of the surplus control plan, it was pointed out that owing o the refusal of some groups to cooperate in voluntary agreement hat Federal assistance was the only way that the five fundamental narketing principles could be established in a marketing program.

The producers of the Frankfort Cooperative met on March 10th. The principles of the Surplus Control Program were explained and a number of producers signed contracts.

At a meeting of the High School Agriculture teachers of St. Lawrence County, held at Briar Hill on March 9th, the Bargaining Agency program was explained. There was a very thorough round able discussion of the principles that have been agreed upon as essential to a sound marketing plan.

On March 14, a group of Future Farmers of America met at Goshen, N. Y., for an accounting of the past year's work, and to listen to a discussion of the program of the Bargaining Agency and he need of a surplus control plan. These young men invited their fathers to meet with them. A better understanding of the fundamental principles of sound marketing will enable these young farmers to take their place in helping to build a better agricultural program for the future.

At Slate Hill, producers met to discuss the surplus control plan and to formulate a program which will bring the cooperative associations of Orange County closer together.

The Directors of the Oriskany Valley, Marshall, Bridgewater, and Kirkland Cooperatives met in the Grange Hall at Paris Hill, on March 14th. The proposed Federal Marketing Agreement was thoroughly discussed. These Directors were agreed on the principles of the Marketing Agreement, and felt that Federal assistance must be called upon to compel all dealers to pay a uniform price for fluid milk.

A meeting of the Fultonville Cooperative Association was held on March 14th at Fultonville, N. Y. The producers of this Cooperative voted to purchase the milk plant in order to have full control of milk produced by its members. This Cooperative becomes one of the leaders in a development that will be of great value to all producers in the New York Milk Shed.

A group of producers of the Conesus Cooperative Association met at Bristol Center on March 15th. Congressman Cooke explained the proposed surplus control plan, and explained how State and Federal assistance could be used in working out a sound marketing program. On the following night, another group of producers of the Conesus Cooperative met at Holcomb, N. Y., to discuss the progress of the surplus control plan. On March 16th, the Business Men of Afton, N. Y., under the leadership of Daniel Grant, invited the farmers in this area to a meeting which was held at the High School. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the condition of the milk industry and to explain the proposed federal marketing agreement. It was generally agreed that Federal assistance must be called upon if producers are to receive a Living Price for Milk. The farmers at this meeting, as at many of the other meetings which have been held, were anxious to bring Federal assistance into the New York market as soon as possible in order to prevent the complete breakdown of prices.

A meeting of the Directors of Clockville and Conastota Cooperatives was held at the home of Mr. Roy Turner at Clockville on March 18th. These meetings where two or more Cooperatives get together are an indication of the growing tendency of all producers to work together. More meetings of this type would be beneficial.

On March 17, the Kiwanis Club of Ticonderoga, N. Y., invited a number of dairy farmers to their luncheon meeting. A representative of the Bargaining Agency explained what the organized farmers are doing to develop a sound marketing program. With the business men and farmers working together in this way, better understanding is assured.

3523 MR. SEXAUER'S STATEMENT MADE AT LAST DELEGATE MEETING WHEN NEW PRICES WERE APPROVED

That the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., reluctantly permits its delegate to acquiesce in the establishment of a $2.0[illegible] price of milk for use in fluid retail markets, and $1.75 per cwt. for milk used for fluid retail cream in the retail markets in New York City, but in doing so it wishes to point out

1st: That the establishment of such prices affects not to exceed 30% of the total amount of milk sold in the New York City market; and

2nd: That the negotiations establish a price for only milk sold by Sheffield producers and the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., and only a part of their milk; and

3rd: That the fluid milk and milk for fluid cream used in the wholesale market in New York City is left absolutely without price; and

4th: That this wholesale market is now open and completely free and on a competitive basis and that this action release every member of the Producers' Bargaining Agency to sell milk for wholesale purposes at such prices as they see fit; and

5th: That any material continuation of this condition will result in prices to producers as low or lower than they were last year; and further

That this section in voting favorably is conditional upon the Producers' Bargaining Agency developing a program either through State and Federal assistance thru marketing order, or if that becomes impossible a marketing program which has as its objective the maintenance of fair prices to producers, the forcing of distributors to pay equal prices for milk for same uses, equity of returns to producers, together with compensation for the handling of surplus milk for rket protection, and that the Executive Committee and Board of rectors be instructed immediately to begin to lay the ground work such a program in order that should State and Federal assistance l to be put into effect, the Bargaining Agency will have a program ich will protect the market of each and all of its members.

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—JUNE

Federal-State Hearings Draw Huge Crowds

housands of producers, dealers and officials of various State and leral groups were in attendance at the hearings held in Albany, lone, Syracuse, Elmira and New York City.

large majority of the producers who testified at these various tings were in favor of a Federal order and presented interesting imony, coupled with facts and figures that made an impression ll who attended the meetings.

t Albany, the 1,100 that were present listened to many of our lers in the Bargaining Agency present a word picture of the ditions in the industry, what had taken place in the past year and t was needed so that the producer could finally have a feeling security in knowing that he would receive a fair price for his k, a proper classification and the elimination of the surplus head- e which has faced him year after year.

lany dealers and their representatives were present at Albany we also noticed that individuals from groups opposing this order e quite busy in the hall, or on the outside passing out literature ch attacked the Federal order and its proponents.

he Malone hearing in attendance was the largest to date, and at time, over 2,300 persons were crowded in the Armory to listen to testimony given by the great many interested persons.

he opposition to the order in the North Country either got cold , or they could not coordinate their facts, because the real leaders have continually fought the Producers' Bargaining Agency, ed to speak and several of them even failed to show up at the ting.

ne producer from the Western part of New York, who is said to on the pay roll of the Dairy Farmers' Union and who is not even he New York City market, talked longest and loudest, but it was consensus of opinion that if this gentleman had continued to talk ther meetings, he would have helped put over the Federal order grand style. Another gentleman who is said to be an attorney in North Country, spoke at length and at the start he revealed he not own a dairy or had any actual connection with the produc- of milk.

nother producer from Gouverneur made several accusations inst our efficient Executive Secretary, Mr. Charles H. Baldwin.

and it was quite evident that the speaker was attempting to rouse the producers present, but his efforts fell flat.

We might mention at this time that all who testified did so under oath, and it would be a joke that was not so funny if several of these gentlemen were "called on the carpet" and asked to furnish data to back up what statements they made.

At Malone it was quite evident that a vast majority of the best type of producers were fully in accord with the Producers' Bargaining Agency program and the attempt to stir up trouble fell flat. This was probably due to the fine testimony that was given by Earl Laidlaw, Leon Chapin, and the masterful handling of the various testimony by Attorney Cooke, followed by the friendly remarks made by Commisisoner of Agriculture Mr. Noyes, at the conclusion of the days proceedings.

The next hearing was held May 18th, at Syracuse and once again the producers were in a large majority of the 1,500 present, and it was quite evident that most of the group were in sympathy with our attempt to secure a stabilized milk market for them.

Producer after producer gave testimony as to why they favored the proposed Federal order and the opposition, mainly composed of attorneys, talked at length, but we feel that their eloquence was not sufficient to change the minds of any of those present.

Leaving Syracuse, the caravan went to Elmira and on May 19th, over 1,800 producers gathered to listen and applaud those that spoke in behalf of the proposed order.

The opposition that appeared at this meeting was such that one could hardly consider their remarks in connection with the proposed order. All in all, it was one of the banner days of the hearings where the producers expressed themselves in accord with the proposed agreement.

Our next stop was New York City and on Friday, May 20th, approximately 400 producers, dealers, and consumer representatives gathered in a hot, stuffy room at the State Office Building. Once again the proponents of the order were given an opportunity to express themselves and they occupied most of the morning in so doing. Due to the terrific heat and the lack of space, the afternoon hearing was moved to the spacious ball room at Hotel Commodore. Here over 900 persons listened to testimony of various nature for and against the bill. The outstanding surprise of this session was that the consumers group, under the leadership of Dr. Caroline Whitney, and Attorney Meyer Parodnick, their testimony was such that they actually favored the proposals in the bill and the only objections made were on one section which they claim might permit price fixing to the consumer.

The hearing adjourned on Friday until Tuesday, May 23rd, and once again we met at the State Office Building where, on the first day, the hearing master, Mr. Gifford, permitted the dealer groups to present their case. It was quite evident that the dealer groups presentatives at every meeting previously held and made many which were incorporated into their testimony given at this g.

nly speaking, the dealer groups, headed by the Sheffield Farms any, objected to practically every part of the proposed order e famous trio of Mr. McKay, Mr. Eastlack and Mr. Rubenfeld, d by Attorneys Sklar and Tiffany practically occupied the during the entire day. It seemed quite strange to some of present how this group of shrewd business men could come into hearings and claim they knew very little about the order and ld take from four to seven weeks more to make a study of the s testimony and then ask for the privilege of making examina- f said testimony.

—Producers—remember if these hearings are carried along eks by this procedure, don't forget that the low price of milk ontinues, and someone gets the benefit, and you continue to the low prices for your products.

opposition came into this meeting fully prepared, and several during the day it was noticed that the dealers who were testi- attempted to ridicule the efforts of the Bargaining Agency, Board of Directors, along with the assistance of State and al officials, prepared the proposed Federal order.

the conclusion of the day's hearings, announcement was made he hearings on Wednesday would be transferred to the Lawyer's at 42 West 44th Street. There were a great many who desired heard and in addition to the New York testimony, the possi- s of the hearings being reconvened to up-State was not remote. we will not be able to give our readers facts concerning other gs, we would suggest that they carefully read the testimony s printed in this issue of the Market News and judge for them- . The suggestion is that you carefully read the full testimony by Dr. K. Schaul, the Secretary of the Sheffield Producers' iation. Facts in Dr. Schaul's testimony are such that you can your own conclusions as to why the producers should approve ote their approval of this proposed order.

MR. BALDWIN'S MESSAGE TO YOU

er having worked for twenty-five years with various groups of rs one quite naturally knows well many farm people from all of the Milk Shed. The Federal-State hearings which I at- l last week gave me an opportunity to see more of these friends ld acquaintances than I ever before saw and visited with in such rt period. They assembled at the hearings with one thought in —to learn how they can do their best and their bit in bringing stability and orderly marketing of milk, thus assuring them a price month after month and year after year. It was my ure to talk with many of these real producers of milk on the big question that is soon to be decided, and I believe as a result I know their thoughts. Based upon my observation and experience of the past week I summarize them as follows:

Dairy farmers who are depending upon the sale of milk for a living and who are doing their own thinking are 99.44% in favor of Federal and State assistance.

They recall the experiment of price fixing under State control and realize the necessity for joint State and Federal cooperation in bringing about orderly marketing in a milk shed composed of parts of several states.

They realize the necessity for strict and honest enforcement of any order affecting a milk shed.

They have complete confidence in Commissioner Noyes and Secretary Wallace to pick a man as administrator who is not mixed up in any faction, and who will administer the rules that are written and approved by the producers fearlessly and honestly.

They are all determined to have a share in fluid markets.

They know that uncontrolled shipments to fluid markets of milk and cream in excess of requirements destroy everyone's price.

They agree that producers cannot live on present prices, and they say that under present conditions prices will continue to go lower.

They agree that all qualified producers should have equal share in the fluid markets and all should share equally in taking care of the surplus.

They are agreed on the five fundamental principles upon which the present tentative order is written, and the one universal question asked me during the past is, "When Do You Think We Can Vote on This Agreement and When Can It Be Put Into Effect?"

It is true there were those who opposed the agreement.

There were individuals who honestly wanted to know and who desired minor changes in the order. Some wanted more information on certain points to make sure that the agreement as written does cover the five fundamentals in a way that is fair and just to all producers. These producers went from the hearings well satisfied and will help in a forceful, constructive way. I admire these producers for "being from Missouri and having to be shown," as producers have a right to be suspicious of almost everything after having received the treatment that they have received from some dealers in the past.

Dealers quite generally opposed the producers' efforts.

True, there are others who are not licensed dealers who opposed the agreement in a general way. I shall not attempt to classify them, but I urge every dairy farmer to do so and to investigate carefully their record for evidence of constructive action in the past and to determine for themselves for whom they are working at the present time. Perhaps a list of those who opposed the order on general principles can be secured from those who conducted the hearings.

My message to producers today consists of the following warning: I Am Firmly Convinced That Producers Are Not Going To Have This Agreement or Any Agreement That Will Be Enforced by deral and State Authorities and Give Producers Control of the ce That They Receive for Milk Without One of the Stiffest Fights at Producers Have Ever Seen. The Five Fundamental Principles e Too Sound and the Agreement Which Will Put Them Into ect Is Too Constructive and Too Helpful to Producers To Be sily Secured. CONGRESSMAN COOKE'S MESSAGE

To Be Well Born is to Be Successful

I agree with the old proverb and by all reasonable standards of mparison, I think one must conclude that the Rogers-Allen bill was ll born. As the joint product of distinguished farm leaders and soned, experienced legislators, approved by a Governor whose rction to duty and righteousness is generally acclaimed, it is en-ed as law to take an earned and dignified place in the esteem and dgment of the people. It was no one-man bill, I assert again. It s not expression of men obsessed with the idea that one man's ir must prevail or ruin be created. It was the result of study, in-tigation and orderly intelligence, the best thought of thousands of n people in the state, and the efforts selfishly put forth by a few weaken faith in the wisdom of its provisions, deserve the contempt h which they are meeting."

A LETTER FROM STATE GRANGE MASTER COOPER

MAY 3, 1938.

MASTERS AND SECRETARIES OF SUBORDINATE AND POMONA GRANGES.

DEAR PATRONS: As you know, the Conference Board of Farm ganizations, of which our Grange is a part, developed the Rogers-len Bill," which became a law and under which the Metropolitan rketing Agency was formed.

More than 50,000 dairymen were drawn together in this agency, rough their co-operatives. Starting in June 1937 this agency developed so fast that the price of milk increased from about $1.6 in June to $2.63 in November, the highest level in seven years. Then came the surplus season and because the organization was young and incomplete and no adequate solution had been developed to handle the surplus problem, prices fell and continued to fall low as the surplus increased.

Today the Agency has a surplus control plan ready for dairymen to inspect. This plan is drawn in the form of a State and Federal Marketing agreement. It is drawn up within the provisions of the Rogers-Allen Law. The framers of this law wisely foresaw that possibly the voluntary cooperation of producers would not be enough to safeguard markets and might require some assistance from governmental agencies.

This question is of vital interest to dairymen throughout the state and as so many of our Grange members are dairymen we are inclosing a booklet which contains the tentative plan in full, together with an explanation of how it would work.

Milk has always been a controversial subject. Everyone has a right to his views, but since the Grange sponsored the Rogers-Allen Law, since we advocated its continuance without change at our last Annual Meeting by resolution, and since the price of milk is so very vital to our members, we are asking that at least one Lecture Hour be devoted to a thorough study of this plan, not with a view to passing resolutions or taking any stand as a Grange but that our dairymen members of the Grange may be fully informed and be ready to vote after hearings are held. (Worthy Secretary, after you have read this letter will you kindly hand it with the booklet to the Lecturer of your Grange? Thank you.)

Patrons, let us try to keep the old differences of opinion in the background long enough, at least, to make an intelligent and calm examination of this plan. Let's examine it on its merits and decide for ourselves as to its value to dairymen in their dire need.

Fraternally yours in the Grange spirit of true cooperation,

(signed) RAYMOND COOPER,
State Master.

3534 LEON A. CHAPIN—REMARKS AT MALONE, N. Y.:

MAY 17TH, 1938.

The surplus problem is more acute in this section than in any other in the milk shed. This is so because of the type of production and because this section is so remote from the market.

Summer production is easily adapted to this section. As a consequence production in June, according to the State's figures for 1935, was three times that of January.

Late March freshening predominates in this area so that production is very high in June, holds up well through August, and has its low point in January and February. This naturally brings a tremendous surplus in June and results in shipments of milk and uid cream out of this section in June of about 19% of the total olume produced. At the same time the percentage for the state s a whole is nearly 52%. With 81% of the production in these orthern counties being manufactured in June, it is easily apparent at the producer is vitally interested in the control of surplus isposal.

Nor is this problem confined to the month of June. In November, r instance, only about 75% of the milk moves in Classes 1 and 2, hile nearly 90% of the total production of the State is so used. The foregoing figures are for all plants in this area including heese factories. Because cheese and butter disposal is higher in this erritory than in the rest of the State, we have removed from both he figures for the area and from the figures for the State, the uantity of milk used for each of these purposes and have figured he disposal in terms of classification percentage after eliminating he cheese and butter factor.

Doing so we find that for the year of 1935 only 47% of the balance as moved in Classes 1 and 2, whereas the total for the State under ike conditions was 78%.

This is not an unnatural situation. Our location far from the narket makes it more economic to hold milk off the market and nanufacture it, than it would be to do so in more adjacent areas.

What we need in this section, from an industry standpoint, is not change in the percentage of milk and cream shipped but rather ome method whereby the returns from surplus operations may be o controlled that the producer is assured of the greatest possible eturn.

3539 MR. SEXAUER SPEAKING AT ALBANY HEARING

Producers need state and federal help to correct abuses.

Courts and investigating bodies have recognized surplus problems give dealers advantage and,

Have recommended equalization and stronger cooperatives.

Proposed agreement sets up machinery to do the job.

Some weaknesses in the proposal but they can be offset by coop- eration.

Producers must control surplus.

3540 LET EVERY DAIRY FARMER DEMAND A LIVING PRICE FOR MILK—NOW IS THE TIME TO APPLY THE FULL POWER OF THE ROGERS-ALLEN LAW

Chiseling dealers and other selfish interests are saying that the Rogers-Allen Law has failed. They want it completely out of the way, so that they can go on buying surplus milk at cheaper than fluid prices and keep prices to farmers down. That's the only way they can be sure of continuing their big profits.

THE ROGERS-ALLEN LAW HAS NOT FAILED

The Rogers-Allen Law, as a matter of fact, hasn't even been fully tried. Only the first of its three provisions has been used by the farmer to help in keeping milk prices up.

The first provision of the Rogers-Allen Law was put into effect immediately after the law was passed. It makes it legal for farmers, through their cooperatives, to join together in a producers bargaining agency, and through the agency to bargain with a dealers agency to set the prices for fluid milk.

In spite of the fact that not all farmers and dealers joined their respective bargaining agencies, the producers bargaining agency obtained price increases for the farmers every month from June to December last year, hitting the highest peak in prices since 1931. But some chiseling dealers, disregarding the terms of their own dealers agreement, went out and bought up distress fluid milk and sold it in the fluid market at cut prices, forcing all milk prices down.

The second part of the Rogers-Allen Law provides for negotiation between farmers and dealers to control the surplus.

This second part of the law could not work because not all dealers could be made to observe the agreements of the dealers bargaining agency.

Third—The Rogers-Allen Law further provides that if ALL farmers and ALL dealers couldn't get together to control the surplus, the State and Federal Governments could, upon request, step in and make it impossible for chiseling dealers to operate.

This third provision of the Rogers-Allen Law is now planned to be put into operation. A plan of Federal and State assistance to help the farmer control the milk market has been drawn up with the aid of officials from the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture.

Federal and State assistance will put the milk market control in the hands of the farmer for the first time. It will give the farmer Federal and State backing in his efforts to get a LIVING PRICE FOR MILK.

Everyone who stands to profit by disorganizatio among farmers will oppose Federal and State assistance. Every farmer who thoroughly understands this plan will be for it.

With control of the surplus in the hands of the farmers—with support given by both Federal and State Governments, the farmers will be on the way to getting a living price for milk. Without this Federal and State support—without taking advantage of all the provisions allowed under the Rogers-Allen Law, milk prices to the farmers must go down.

Understand and support the request for Federal and State help. The proposed marketing agreement will give farmers these things:

1. It will take the surplus out of reach of chiseling dealers. They will no longer be able to push your milk checks down in order to make larger profits.

2. It will give every dairy farmer an equal share of the benefits of the fluid market and make it unnecessary for farmers to compete with each other for marketing advantages.

3. It will spread the burden of the surplus so as not to be unfair to any producer.

4. It will keep the control of milk out of the hands of politicians and unscrupulous dealers and definitely put control in the hands of farmers themselves.

5. It will accomplish these things on the basis of fair play to all—the producers, distributors and consumers.

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—JULY

MILK PLAN CAN BE MADE TO WORK SAYS COMMISSIONER HOLTON V. NOYES

"This plan can be made to work," said Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets Holton V. Noyes of the proposed federal-state marketing agreement which would establish government control of producer prices. Mr. Noyes spoke before dairymen and cheese manufacturers at Canton and he qualified his statement by terming the plan workable "if the defects disclosed at the hearings are corrected, and if it has the wholehearted cooperation of at least a majority of the producers.

"If I am assured these conditions are met I should have no hesitancy in recommending to our dairymen that the plan is worthy of trial and holds the possibility of leading to more stable, more profitable, and more satisfactory conditions in our great and important dairy industry."

Mr. Noyes incidentally cited "misrepresentation, deliberate or unintentional" and the "frequent impossibility of sufficiently complete publication of official utterances." Said he:

"As we move forward to work out a solution of our milk problem along permanent lines we are faced with the necessity for immediate action to meet present distressing conditions. I do not need to tell you that prices are below cost of production; that market conditions are chaotic; that efforts by the industry, under the machinery provided by the Legislature, have proved ineffective. Your milk check tells the story more forcefully than anything I can say. What is the solution?

"As you know, representatives of the federal and state governments have journeyed about the state in recent weeks holding hearings on a proposed federal-state marketing agreement which would establish government control of producer prices. It has been our experience in this matter that human nature behaves no differ on a subject so serious as this than it does on any other matter.

"I refer to misrepresentation, deliberate or unintentional. One the few conditions about my own or any other public office that early found most irritating is the too frequent impossibility obtaining accurate or sufficiently complete publication of an utterance to convey its real meaning. I am not saying this in criticism of the press as such, or of any representatives of the press particular. I know that newspapers each day have probably times as much news material as they can publish and that inevitably there must be much omitted and that which is used must be condensed.

"In this process of condensation or omission I find the greatest reason for my criticism. What I want the public to know and what consider it important that they should know, I realize, often may be what the editor thinks is unimportant from his viewpoint. And of course, it is for him to decide what his publication will publish. But whatever the cause and whoever is to be blamed, the effect is always the same—to increase misunderstanding and distrust, because complete information is denied. And then again, we must remember the political or economic beliefs of the publisher may exert an equally effective censorship in preventing or curtailing publication of complete and necessary information on any public question. This practice, I regret to say, seems rather to have increased than decreased in recent years.

"It is this situation which provides fertile field for the growth and spread of deliberate misrepresentation, either by the dissemination of half truth or withholding of full truth, both of which have the same ultimate effect. The present discussion of this marketing agreement is a good example of what I mean.

"Some of those who oppose it have not been content to do so in the open by sound factual objection. They have preferred to seek its defeat rather by capitalizing the present trend of American popular opinion against dictatorship of any kind. The plan, they charge, represents another attempt by the state and federal governments to extend their control to the State's dairy industry. This is untrue. The original request for intervention of both governments to control producer prices under this plan had, under the national agricultural administration law and under our own state Rogers-Allen law, to come voluntarily from the producers themselves by petition. It is the producers who must vote to establish this control. The producers themselves can at any time end if it does not work satisfactorily.

"We shall soon be prepared to vote upon this marketing agreement. The law permits cooperative associations to vote their membership collectively upon this question. But I have maintained that the issue so seriously concerns the individual farmer that he alone should give the answer by individual vote. Unless the vote is individual, I see how we can, with any accuracy, measure the individual t that exists for the plan and therefore how much individual ation may be expected to make it effective. That is another reason with me why I have insisted upon an individual vote.

is plan, or any other for industry or governmental regulation dairy industry, can never be made to work effectively unless the support and cooperation of the dairymen. This cooperaas denied under industry control in the early thirties; it was d under State control; it has been lacking under the recent ttempt at industry control. The effectiveness of all previous to solve the problems of the dairy industry has been destroyed or impaired by non-cooperation. I am no prophet of disaster but I should be wanting in courage and frankness if I failed to warn you here and now that non-cooperation can ruin esent plan as it has the others.

a majority of the producers is not prepared to give full and e cooperation to this plan and to register it by individual vote, by what right morally, or legally can any official presume to l the entire membership of his organization favorably on the r? And how can cooperation, so vitally necessary to the plan's s, be expected unless a majority favor it? An individual vote e plan carries with it a moral obligation to support and cooper-making it successful. That moral obligation is not specific binding otherwise.

oresee another possibility in connection with the vote upon this on which I feel obligated to point out. The provisions of the al law require a majority of 66⅔ per cent for or against. Our law requires 75%. It is not inconceivable that a percentage oducers may vote for the plan in sufficient numbers to meet the al requirement but insufficiently to comply with the state law.
such case, we could establish only federal control and such conould apply only to milk in interstate commerce. Milk moving n the state would not be controlled. If this should happen, it belief that it would be unworkable and without benefit.

is important, therefore, in my opinion, that if this plan is to be ive it must be voted for in its entirety or defeated in its en-
. This is a matter on which there can be no compromise. It be all or nothing. Which it shall be is a matter for the dairy-themselves to decide.

s for my personal opinion, I repeat what I have said before on al occasions: This plan can be made to work, if the defects ed at the hearings are corrected, and if it has the whole-ed cooperation of at least a majority of the producers. If I ssured that these conditions are met, I should have no hesitancy commending to our dairymen that the plan is worthy of a trial holds the possibility of leading to more stable, more profitable, more satisfactory conditions in our great and important dairy stry."

3542 WHEN DO WE VOTE?

By Charles Baldwin

When do we vote? When do we vote? This question still echoes and rings in my ears after having completed a trip from one end of the Metropolitan Milk Shed to the other. Over and over again the question is being asked daily by dairymen who would be utterly discouraged were it not for the hope that very soon their Federal and their State governments will join hands and give them the help that will insure to all a "Living Price for Milk." How long the smouldering fires of indignation towards forces that are responsible for delay can be held in check, no one dare prophesy. Hope that their governments will not fail them and faith in their organizations and their leaderships is causing a calm like that which frequently precedes a storm.

You remember how you used to count the days before Christmas, you remember your behavior, you knew the date, it was fixed, and you how long the hours and how slow the days before that day of joy. There is a similarity of feeling as dairymen look forward to the day when they can vote on Federal and State assistance. There is a difference, however, in that the date for voting is still unknown, still a sort of Will-o-the-wisp. What would we think of one who would move the date of Christmas backward weeks or months when the children had been wishing and waiting for that day? Would the children be discouraged and lose faith in those who were responsible for causing the day to be changed? What would the children do if they had the power and could lay their hands on that one?

What do you think of that greedy power that has been squeezing the farmers and deliberately causing that voting day to be put off week after week, and perhaps month after month, while dairymen and their families go without? What would dairymen, if they had the power, do if they could get their hands on it? With pointing finger dairymen are demanding, "When do we vote and have a living price for milk!"

Personally I love people. There is good in all and they differ so widely that knowing people is most interesting and fascinating. Last week I visited with many old friends. I heard many sad personal interest stories, some of which bring tears to the eyes of any human being. Quite naturally some milk dealers could not understand. Combinations of wealth set up wholly for the purpose of making dividends have no heart and with them the almighty dollar is their god. There is no soul in that power which would purposely cause unnecessary hardships to dairymen through delay in voting. Officials and employees working for corporations set up to make profits on watered stock have difficult jobs, and it must be remembered that they must keep this strangle hold on dairymen if they are able to make the returns that are demanded and hold their positions.

Never before have I seen such expectation and oneness of thought as I saw on the trip of last week. Never before have I seen more reason for dairymen to be utterly discouraged than I saw last week, scorching hot weather, burned pastures and meadows, lack of labor, and lack of necessities due to the low price for milk. The hope that soon they will have what they are asking for (equal share of the fluid market and a living price for milk) is buoying most of them up. I am sorry to say, however, that while on this trip I read of several dairymen who have decided to quit living and leave the battle to those left behind. They apparently lost faith that the dairymen would ever get a square deal. The big majority, however, are optimistic in that they believe soon they will be given the assistance that they are pleading for in order that they may free themselves from bondage from which they themselves have not been able to free themselves. Delay, however, even though it may be caused by well financed and cleverly handled corporations working under cover, may at any time cause a condition which no human being wants to see. That is why patient and serious minded milk producers ask, "When do we vote?"

3550 BARGAINING AGENCY HAPPENINGS

Down in New York City there is a columnist by the name of Winchell on the New York Mirror. On June 27th of this year the following item appeared in his column: "State Attorney General Bennett's office will rock the front pages about Sept. 1 with a report on the milk sitch-ee-ay-shun in N. Y."—Directors Warren Davey and Ralph Norton have just returned from a trip to Boston where they made a study of the situation in that area.—Mr. Baldwin and his staff of fieldmen are quite busy making personal contacts with the producers and holding group meetings.—The order of business now days is the careful explaining of the proposed Federal order.—It is estimated that the officers and directors of the P. B. A. have held over 150 meetings during the past month with producers.—The milk situation in New York City is so bad that we know of places where milk is being sold at 5c per quart.—Milk situation at Scranton, Pa., is bad and dealers ask for 2c reduction.—Fieldman J. Cooper is recovering nicely from his operation and is now able to be back on the job.—No one can deny that Ernie Sheldon, of Little Falls, is not working for the complete success of the P. B. A.—Requests for copies of the Market News are coming in from all parts of these United States.—One director suggests that the best way to fully explain the new proposed Federal order is to hold group meetings of not more than five producers.—Sometimes it is necessary to throw bouquets at a person, and this time it is Frank Smith, the North Country field man for the P. B. A. He is doing a fine job and we want to let Frank know that many producers who are members of the P. B. A., and, yes, members of the union, are saying nice things about him.—President Rolfe and Attorney Cooke ran into some opposition over in Pennsylvania, but the combination of these two gentlemen easily overcame this opposition after they had carefully explained the sections of the proposed order that were not understood.—We understand that four or five hundred producers in Pennsylvania, who are members of the Interstate Co-operative, have decided among themselves to complete a new set up and seek admission to the P. B. A.—Remember, producers, that we are always willing to publish articles that you send in.—We would also like to have the Secretaries of various Co-operatives send us a news letter of happenings in their own group. Do this and they will be published in the following issue.

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—SEPTEMBER

PRODUCERS, IT IS NOW UP TO YOU

The producers in the area supplying milk to New York City have, by their majority vote, decided that the State-Federal Marketing plan is a logical one, and they desire to give it a trial. Probably every producer, whether he voted or not, gave consideration to the problems that face the industry at this time, and it is regrettable that all of them did not see fit to vote on such an important matter, affecting their families and their very livelihood.

We are fully aware of the insidious propaganda that was used to advise producers not to go to the polling places and express themselves. This propaganda sprang up in many places, and if by chance anything should happen to harm this order in the future, the blame can be solely placed upon the heads of a few unscrupulous dealers, leaders of a minority farmers group, which is set up to be nothing more than a racket and several writers, as well as a publisher who claims he has the God-given right to speak for the producers.

The time is here when we must speak bluntly about these things and not be "too polite." These people went all over the milk shed, holding meetings and advising the producers not to vote, and at some of the meetings, when some one got up to ask a question, they were then called hecklers. This thing occurred in a series of meetings at which Mr. Dillon and Mr. Burghold spoke and later on, Mr. Dillon and his farm journal referred to several that were present as hecklers. Call us what he may, we were present and so were four or five others from the Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency. For months we have listened to the long-winded talks as given by this well-known editor and not once have we ever listened to a program that would actually work in the milk shed. Instead the substance of most of the talks has been a bitter attack against one of the larger members of the P. B. A. We have been called tools of the milk trust, and all that sort of thing, but it is [illegible] writer's sincere opinion that if no one connected with the Bargaining Agency had gone out into the field and done one item of work for the success of this order, it would have been voted in, because the producers would have, after listening to Mr. Dillon or Mr. Burghold, decided that what they had to offer compared in no way with the proposed State-Federal Order, which was whipped shape, not by the milk trust, but by at least fifty persons con-ed with the industry up-State. Even several who assisted us in aring the first drafts of the order fell by the wayside, and towards end of the campaign came out in the open and fought the order.

these gentlemen, all we can say that is you made a big mistake the farmers by their vote thought the same way.
uring the campaign to convince you producers that the Federal er was the logical way to stabilize the milk industry, the Dairy mers Union, Mr. Dillon, Mr. Burghold, and a few others had a derful opportunity to join with the others and work for the ess of a program that would put more money into the pockets of producers. Instead, these gentlemen, who control the destinies of Farmers Union and the others, bitterly campaigned against the r and it appears that they have one idea in mind, and that is to tinually stir up trouble in the milk shed. What is the motive k of the actions of these gentlemen? Is it to secure subscriptions, for personal gain? We are not going to attempt to answer this ter, but our answer to these gentlemen is that over 86% of the ducers who voted, thought the program, as originated by the k Producers Bargaining Agency, a good one.
You producers have spoken and now the order is in effect. It is duty of every producer to help in every way he possibly can to that all provisions of the order are carried out and, too, watch this ll minority of troublemakers and see to it that they are kept their place, and whenever you find one of them sticking his nose the picture and trying to disrupt what you have approved, then ood idea is to swat that nose and talk afterwards.
This order is going to mean hundreds of dollars to each one of you, d it means that if all of us put our shoulders to the wheel and keep icing the situation, we can go along and have a well-regulated lk shed and forget about the continuous headaches that have pre-minated over a period of years in up-State New York and the ier sections.—V. R. TOMPKINS.

54 Mr. Baldwin Speaks

SYRACUSE, N. Y., August 26, 1938.—Last night and this morning I oned to nearly one hundred dairy farmers, each of whom reprents a group of producers who have worked long and hard for the eparation and adoption of a sound surplus milk control plan.
ese men collectively developed the Federal-State Milk Marketing der in its tentative form and upon which hearings were held.
ese men knew last night that milk producers had overwhelmingly ted to approve of the adoption of the Federal-State Order (a rplus control plan).
It is the same group of men to whom I have often phoned during e past year, yet from their voices one would never judge them to be e same. A new day has dawned for the dairy farmers and col-ctively they see the way to securing a living price for milk. There was determination in their voices this time and the spirit that exists throughout the producing area today will not tolerate interference on the part of milk dealers with the free and full operation of the plan that the producers have developed and which the Federal and State Governments have agreed to administer to the fullest possible extent.

This determination, to which I have referred, must be put to a helpful purpose. The cooperative association, which each represents, must be made stronger. Where no cooperative association exists, strong producer controlled cooperative associations must be built. All groups must continue to work together with greater determination and with the one purpose in mind to collectively, through cooperative effort and with assistance from the State and Federal Government where that is needed, secure permanently a living price for milk. To that purpose, let every milk producer in the metropolitan milk shed dedicate himself.

3555 PRESIDENT ROLFE URGES MILK FIRMS TO SIGN ORDER

The milk dealers who distribute more than 6,000,000 pounds of milk to New York's millions each day were urged by Homer S. Rolfe to sign the state-federal milk-marketing and price-fixing order and "thereby dispel the apprehension that there may be a long court contest."

"Any dealer not willing to sign would presumably have intentions of planning to disregard or contest the program," said Rolfe, who returned to Syracuse from Washington, D. C., where the order was formally signed by Secretary Wallace and President Roosevelt.

He issued a statement outlining the stand of the agency in which he said in part:

"The sound judgment of our national and state officials in enactment of the agricultural marketing agreement act and the Roger-Allen law, enabling the federal and state governments to render assistance in the regulation and stabilization of the distressing situation existing in the metropolitan milk shed, is confirmed by the almost unanimous approval accorded the milk order by producers.

"The experience and knowledge of the government representatives who gave invaluable aid in the drafting of the order, have provided a just and equitable instrument for the protection of the rights of consumers, distributors, and producers. The public interest demands that this order, prepared and intended to correct an unbalanced economic condition among thousands of farmers, be given a fair trial. If it succeeds, it will have widespread influence in dispelling generally the depressed conditions in agriculture, commerce, and industry, in northeastern United States.

"The Metropolitan Producers' Bargaining Agency assumed leadership in the effort to secure federal and state assistance. It could not have succeeded without the sympathetic and intelligent aid of both the secretary of agriculture and the commissioner of agriculture and

ets. The order is the achievement of an earnest co-operation ben the three agencies. Its success depends, in large degree, upon inued harmony of action. The Producers' Bargaining Agency ges to both governments the united efforts of its members in aid ne successful administration of the order."

YES! THE MARKETING ORDER HAS BEEN ADOPTED! BUT NOW—MORE THAN EVER—FARMERS NEED STRONG COOPERATIVES!

airy farmers of the New York Milk Shed have voted overwhelmns Federal and State assistance will be brought to the aid of the ut that doesn't mean the fight is won. Some dealers will throw y possible obstacle in the path of smooth operation of the order.

perative marketing organizations, and closer cooperation through

MILK PRODUCERS' MARKET NEWS—OCTOBER

BARGAINING AGENCY PRODUCERS

Market Administrator, Mr. Harmon, on Friday, October 14th, resed the prices for your milk for the first month under the new deral and State Marketing Order.
Throughout the area there were thousands who actually believed at the initial price would be considerably lower than what was t under the new arrangement.

Whatever your individual feelings are in this matter you may consider that a number of unusual situations existed in our milk shed, which created conditions for Mr. Harmon, Commissioner Noyes and the officers of the Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, that seemed at times impossible to overcome.

A few days ago members of the Executive Committee of your Bargaining Agency met in Syracuse and outlined a work program for the coming year. Harmony prevailed and each member of the committee gave serious thought and study to each section of the program which, based on the coming months, has just one idea in mind, and that is, to improve conditions and help you get the most possible money for your milk check.

To say that any one individual or group is working harder on this program than another, would not be telling the truth. All are co-operating and Mr. Baldwin, our Executive Secretary, issued a complete program of instructions to the fieldmen, which calls for unified efforts and intensive work among all member cooperatives, so that each producer will sign his or her contract with the Bargaining Agency.

The Executive Committee also hired Mr. Edmund Cooke as full-time Counsel for the Bargaining Agency and he will devote his entire time assisting the cooperatives throughout the milk shed, advising them on their individual problems as they may arise.

It is only fair to say that Mr. Noyes and Mr. Edward Gaynor of the State Department are working in complete harmony and assisting the officials in signing up the cooperatives who yet have not come in under the banner of the Federal and State Marketing Program.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Market News we will tell you of the work that has been carried on by the fieldmen and officials of the Bargaining Agency during the past few weeks. It has been the desire of the Executive Committee to fully cooperate with the delegate body on every matter that is of vital importance to all members of the Bargaining Agency. This has made necessary the holding of many small meetings and thousands of miles of travel in all sections covered by the Marketing Order, as there are a thousand and one small details springing up almost every hour of the day and night.

Please bear in mind that our able Secretary, J. C. Treat, who is in charge of the "MINUTE MEN," is doing a fine job and these men, who are distributed throughout the milk shed, are on the watch at all times for disturbances, chiseling, and other items that are not for the best interests of your producers.

There are times when we must talk plainly with each other in regards to matters which concern our livelihood. At this time the occasion has arisen where it is necessary to tell you of something that is going on, which has all the appearances of an attempt to stir up trouble and possibly create another bad situation in the New York

Milk Shed. It has come to our attention that the editor of l known farm journal, who has continuously fought the Bar- ng Agency and the new Marketing Order, is sending out a onnaire to all members of the State Assembly and Senate, g their opinion of the Rogers Allen Law. This questionnaire that possibly the Assembly and Senate might desire to repeal w. Stop a minute and think over what I have just told you. re we have, after months of hard work, a Bargaining Agency has a membership of 75% of the producers in the State. This cy, with the help of the better type of farmers and also the Department of Agriculture, combined and worked hard to have leral Marketing Order put into action in an effort to settle the ic conditions that face the milk industry of the State. No r had this been done, the opponents, including this publisher, d another campaign and our suspicions are that the sending of questionnaire to the members of the Assembly, is just another f their tricks to overthrow, which 86% of you producers ap- d recently by your vote.

y we suggest to each and every individual producer that they themselves a committee of one to keep a watch on everything comes up in their respective territory that is not for the best sts of the Bargaining Agency. After all, it is your Agency the officers can only carry out your wishes to the best of their y.

e could have prepared this article with English just a little er than what is given here, but we feel that it should be written manner that each one of you could thoroughly understand.

METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS
BARGAINING AGENCY, INC.,
Syracuse, N. Y., September 21, 1938.

EAR SIR: Every effort is being made by the Producers Bargaining ncy to obtain from the distributors full compliance with the Fed- and State Order. Almost every dealer in the Metropolitan market signed the Agreement. In some instances it has been necessary to t producer pressure and the willingness of producers to cooperate in withholding or offering to withhold their milk until their dealer signed has been encouraging and gratifying.

There remains one loophole of considerable size which must be blocked before all major opportunities for chiselling have been eliminated. That is the subject of a uniform handling charge. The enforcement of it is up to the producers and their cooperatives. If one cooperative charges less than 23¢ per hundredweight handling charge, the dealer buying that milk has an unfair advantage over the dealer who is paying a 23¢ handling charge. Twenty-three cents ($.23) per hundredweight is a fair charge. It must be made the standard and uniform charge throughout the Shed.

We believe that there should be an agreement on the part of every cooperative in the Milkshed to charge not less than 23¢, and that the cooperatives should enforce a gentlemen's agreement to charge this price.

I am enclosing a resolution for adoption and signature by your cooperative and return to us. I believe every group in the Shed will sign and make it its business to see that it is obeyed. If it is, it guarantees to us a living handling charge for conducting our plants, as well as a living price for milk.

Your cooperation is earnestly requested.

Sincerely yours,

J. C. TREAT.

3572 FARMER' UNION LEADER BACKS MARKET ORDER

Assurance of the support of the Dairy Farmers' Union to the state-federal milk marketing order was given to Charles H. Baldwin, executive secretary of the Metropolitan Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, by Charles Dumont of Malone, leader in the dairy union and one of the founders of two recently built cooperative milk plants.

"The North Country farmers are determined the milk marketing order will go through," Dumont declared, "It provides the only sensible policy whereby each producer can receive his share from the fluid market."

The Dairy Farmers' Union, in which he is a leader, now has approximately 15,000 members throughout the state.

During the past year Dumont has organized North Country farmers and been influential in construction by them of two cooperative plants. The new plants serve farmers in northern Franklin and Clinton counties.

The sentiment among producers throughout the North Country is overwhelmingly in favor of the milk marketing order, Dumont told Baldwin, as they see in it their only hope of obtaining a decent living from their farms. They realize, he said, that the order setup is only getting under way, but they will stick with it through thick and thin until it bears fruit.

2576 PRESSURE IS PUT ON MILK DEALERS

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 13 (AP).—Milk Producers supplying the New York City markets began withholding milk today from dealers failing to abide by provisions of the federal-state marketing agreement.

The producers diverted 1,300 cans from a New York dealer who E. M. Harmon, administrator of the agreement, said failed to file the first monthly report of milk sales.

Homer S. Rolfe, president of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, said the agency ordered the milk diverted from the dealer to cheese plants. The agency, he added, will pay the difference between the cheese plant price and the price they would have received from the dealer.

DRIPPINGS FROM THE MILK CAN

Executive Secretary Mr. Baldwin recently made a trip to Alabama. Upon his return we noticed that he used the expression "you-all."

J. Treat entertained a number of guests at a game dinner at his home at Honeoye Falls. After the dinner, J. was wandering around looking for Chicken thieves when he ran up against the electric fence and spoiled his disposition.

Ralph Norton and Warren Davey are thinking about chartering a boat to go North and find the land of the midnight sun.

Director Dumont in the North Country is doing some very fine work, and evidently it has reflected on his brother who has now come out for the new Federal Order. Congratulations to both of you.

Felix Piseck, our scrappy fieldman, recently passed a skunk on the road. After proceeding for many miles, the sweet odor from Mr. Skunk still followed the car and in desperation he speeded up, tried to get away from it, but of no avail. A traffic officer in one of the North Country towns stopped him and they discovered that Mr. Skunk was wedged in the spring of the car. "A rose under any other name smells just as sweet," said Felix.

Some mighty fine work has been carried on at Bridgewater, Cannonsville, by the leaders in the past few weeks. Over in Pennsylvania, fieldman Mahood and Charlie Smith of the Market News are stirring things up and we are receiving some mighty fine help from the producers in that area.

An orchid to Eddie Gaynor, of Leonardsville, who is doing some mighty fine work in assisting the groups working for the success of the Federal Order. We want to welcome the Young-Mayber Cooperative Association, one of the new members of the Bargaining Agency. They start off with over 200 members.

If at any time something bothers you in regards to the Bargaining Agency, or you see something going on that is not for the best interest of the producer members of the P. B. A., simply call Syracuse 2-8906 and Secretary Treat will do the rest.

It is remarkable the manner in which the dealers and the cooperatives are signing up under the new Federal Order. We have a list in our possession which is growing smaller each day, and this list comprises those who have not signed up as yet.

Congratulations are in order to Dr. Shaul, the able secretary of the Sheffield Producers' Association. He is doing a splendid job with the Sheffield Producers' News, and we took the liberty to use one of his articles in this issue. An orchid to you Doc.

Very glad to hear that E. K. Tompkins and the Dolgeville group have signed up. Sometime ago when all of the wrangling was going on in regards to surplus, this group took matters in their own hands and handled their own surplus at their plant. Keep up the good work.

We are sorry to inform our readers that the New York Guernsey Cooperative have decided for the time being to go along on their own. Somehow or other it always seemed natural to have Ben Rikert in our meetings and for those who are not acquainted with Ben, let me tell you that he is one of the hardest working fellows in the milk business. Remember, Ben—there is always a place for you at the family table.

Another fellow that has been missed of late in our meetings is Lloyd Anderson of the Crowley group and his able co-workers, McLean, Skillman, and Thompson. We trust that before the snow flies heavy, they will be back taking an active part in the deliberations of the Bargaining Agency.

3577 The Bargaining Agency, plus Treat, plus Baldwin, plus Andover Cooperative, created a headache for what large New York dealer?

Secretaries of all Cooperatives.—We have added nearly 2,000 names to the individual mailing lists since the last issue was sent out. If you have not already sent in your list, do so at once and you will no longer be bothered with the bundles of Market News and the trouble of distributing same.

Some time ago we published an article entitled—"Hot Stuff," and it had to do with the Consumer problem in New York City. To date we find that papers in other parts of the country evidently liked the tone of it, because six different organizations have used same.

Recently President Rolfe was in New York and a beggar approached him and asked Homer for a half-dollar to get where his family was. Big-hearted Homer gave the man the half, then asked the beggar where his family was.

"At the movies," said the beggar, as he walked hurriedly away.

Our attorney, Ed Cooke, is fond of lobsters and recently, while in New York, he went into one of the lobster palaces and ordered one for a meal. The waiter brought the lobster in and one of the claws was missing.

Cooke, curious asked: "What has happened here?"

Waiter: "It was in a fight out in the kitchen."

Cooke: "Then bring me the winner," as he pushed the one-clawed lobster back from his plate.

APPROVE PRELIMINARY DRAFT OF MARKETING ORDER

Delegates of 50,000 Producers in Cooperatives Take First Step Toward Federal Assistance

Approval of work done by the Directors of the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency toward enlisting federal and state aid to bring dairy farmers a living price for milk was voted by delegates at Syracuse March 1.

Unanimous Vote on Marketing Order

By unanimous vote the delegates approved a preliminary draft of a proposed marketing order and reiterated the five fundamental principles upon which the final order is to be based. These principles are:

1—An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.

2—An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid markets.

3—An equal share by each producer in the burden of the surplus and the expense of controlling it.

4—Reasonable contribution to those having surplus facilities for the use of them seasonally for market protection.

5—The effectuation of the foregoing principles in such a manner as will perpetuate and encourage cooperatives.

Edmund F. Cooke of Buffalo, attorney for the Producers' Bargaining Agency, outlined to the delegates the preliminary draft of the proposed order. Copy of that is now in the office of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace at Washington. Department of Agriculture men are redrafting it into the form necessary to meet legal requirements. The same thing is being done in the office of Commissioner Holton V. Noyes at Albany. A representative of the federal government is also in Albany gathering statistics and other data essential to the order.

Price Break Postponed

Mr. Cooke explained that while a break in farmers' milk prices has been avoided for the present, that there is no doubt but that prices will go lower. The tendency is down, he said, and the division of forces among farmers is being utilized by dealers to force returns lower and lower.

"There is only one way," said Mr. Cooke, "to obtain and assure 3582 continuance of a living price for milk. That is to make full use of the Rogers-Allen law and the federal laws at our disposal."

Mr. Cooke declared that when the proposed order is in final form every dairy farmer in the territory will have an opportunity to vote on it. Public hearings will be held throughout the state by Secretary Wallace, and arrangements will be made whereby every producer will have opportunity to cast his vote for the order.

Gaumnitz Statement

Stressing the importance of developing "a real marketing program," Dr. E. W. Gaumnitz, Chief of the Dairy Section, Department of Agriculture, in a prepared statement distributed to the delegates, said in part:

"The responsibility of the various groups in the market, relative to their marketing problems, does not cease upon their requesting an order.

"Under the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, producers must approve the issuance of an order, and, furthermore, producers may request that an order be terminated at any time. Fundamentally, it is their order—not ours.

"Some people feel, perhaps, that the government is interested in assuming control of as many marketing functions as possible; this is not the case.

"Our experience has indicated that cooperation in a market is a strong factor in the success of an order. First, strong producer cooperative associations contribute materially to the success of an order. Secondly, we always endeavor to work with the state. That is, we feel that the best interests of all can be served by cooperation between federal and state governments.

"In connection with this question of cooperatives, for example, we definitely want to give full consideration to cooperatives, that is, real producer cooperatives. This involves the question as to how cooperatives are to be handled in the market. Some provisions must be included in the order regarding this point."

DAIRYMEN'S LEAGUE NEWS—NEW YORK, N. Y., MAY 17, 1938

LOW PRICES SHOW NEED FOR MARKETING AGREEMENT

Need for a federal-state milk marketing agreement was impressed on some dairy farmers by returns they received for March milk. Reports reaching the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency last week showed some producers receiving the lowest returns they have ever known.

Some producers in one northern New York group were reported receiving as little as 61 cents per hundredweight for milk. Their price was $1 a hundred pounds for milk. That was the price regardless of butterfat test. From that was made trucking and handling charge deductions which in some cases left the farmer 61 cents.

In a community on the edge of the central New York area returns were at the rate of $1.15 per hundredweight, it was said. Another group was reported receiving $1.26.

Some farmers were reported having trouble getting any return. Their buying dealers being far behind schedule in sending checks.

CHAOTIC MARKET LOWERS MILK RETURN

New York Price Cutting More General as Supplies Increase

As reported on another page, the average net pool return to League members for milk delivered during April is $1.43 per 100 pounds. The principal reason for this lowered return as compared with March and February is the chaotic condition that has existed in the wholesale New York Metropolitan market ever since before the flush season began. This condition has grown steadily worse through April and May because of increasing volumes of surplus milk in the hands of dealers without any facilities for handling it except to force it on the fluid market at any price.

The only price that has remained at the established level is the retail Class 1 milk delivered to homes in the New York metropolitan area and a relatively small percentage of the total volume of milk produced by members of the Association is sold in this way.

Today more than half of all milk sold in the New York metropolitan district is handled through stores. Much of this milk for the past two months has been sold out of stores at prices as low as 6 and 3603 7 cents a quart where the regular price at present is 9 cents. This cut price supply comes into the city in tank cars without any destination and is offered for sale in competition with other milk in the wholesale trade. These lowered returns are further concrete evidence that producers always have to bear the burden of chiseling in the market.

With no control of increasing surplus volumes the price of Class I milk has been forced down since December last from $2.63 to $2. In January it was $2.40 and in February and March $2.20. Since March 28 there have been no established prices on milk and cream for wholesale purposes in the metropolitan market. During the last four months there has also been a 30-cent per 100-pound drop in the price of milk going into cream and almost as much in the returns from condensed milk and in the prices of butter and cheese.

There is one favorable factor in a comparison of milk returns for April 1938 with April 1937. Based on prices before the war, League members' returns last year for April milk were 8 per cent above the prewar levels. However, the dairy ration at that time was 53 per cent above prewar, and other farm products were selling for 27 per cent above prewar. Thus milk prices then were in a very unfavorable relationship with dairy ration and other farm prices.

On the other hand, while the milk return for this April was 2 per cent below prewar, the dairy ration was 7 per cent below and other farm products 5 per cent below. Thus from April 1937 to April 1938, feeds and other things farmers sell went down considerably faster than did the returns for milk.

After all, this is no justification for the April return because farmers are not getting enough for anything produced on the farm today to pay their bills. The records show that the things farmers have to buy are still 25 per cent above what they were in the base prewar period. Farm commodities have gone down much faster than have the commodities which farmers buy. These reduced returns for all farm products means reduced purchases by farmers for farm supplies, machinery, etc.

Reports from some sections of the milk shed on April milk returns show a wide variation of price returns, some independent groups getting as little as $1 per 100.

THOUSANDS ATTEND MILK SHED HEARINGS

New York Hearings Reveal Dealers, Consumers, and Their Allies Massing Forces Against Producer Plan

Five days of public hearings on the proposed Federal-State milk marketing agreement wound up in New York Friday, May 20, with the Metropolitan hearing indicating a distinct line of cleavage between farmer opinion and that of dealers and consumers regarding the plan

John J. Dillon grasped opportunity at the New York hearing to maintain his record of opposing all constructive movements by farmers. He made a typical speech from the witness chair, denouncing the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, the proposed order, and other farmer ' organizations.

His memory failed, however, when under cross examination excerpts of his testimony before the Pitcher Committee in 1932 were read. He then urged creation of an organization along lines close to those followed in creating the Bargaining Agency. Upon being questioned, however, he said he did not remember that part of the testimony, but he proceeded to demonstrate that he remembered other testimony given on the same occasion.

The New York hearing came after four days of up-state hearings in which farmers had paraded to the witness stand to approve the proposal and urge its adoption. The Metropolitan hearing, however, was almost a solid mass of objection, including a consumer witness who declared "some farmers are too lazy to get out and make a decent living," and who stated at another time, "some farmers couldn't run a peanut stand and make money." He was saved from what promised to be ruthless cross examination when the Hearing Master ruled 3615 that his testimony was merely opinion, and indicated it was not very important.

Witnesses identifying themselves with various consumer organizations vied with each other for occupancy of the witness stand to find fault with various sections of the program.

After Franz Childs, of Amsterdam, testified adoption of the program would mean three and a quarter to five million dollars more income for farmers and denounced consumer opposition, the same consumer witnesses went clamoring to the stand to testify to their kindly feelings, friendliness, and keen interest in farmers' welfare.

Additional Hearings this Week

Friday's session ended the scheduled hearings, but additional hearings began Monday morning, May 23, in New York. Two or three more days were likely, with possibility of one more up-state hearing.

The New York hearing had to be moved from the State Office Building to the Commodore Hotel because the crowd could not be accommodated in the smaller quarters.

Dealers were present by the score. Their lawyers, many of whom were present, made no move to put in testimony at Friday's session. Some thought they were delaying to give their legal batteries opportunity to digest reports of stenographers who had covered up-state hearings. Possibly the delay in putting in objection was part of stratagem by which they allowed consumer opposition to build up defense walls before the legal experts enter with their bag of tricks.

Spokesmen for some small groups of producers in New Jersey opposed certain sections of the document. So did a Westchester County

Spokesmen for the New York Mercantile Exchange found fault with one section, evidently because reference was made to possibility of butter price manipulation. The Milk Consumers' Protective Committee, the Consumers' Union, and Settlement Workers had criticism.

The New York hearing made it plain that tremendous opposition is going to be filed against the attempt to improve dairymen's income.

HEARINGS START AT ALBANY WITH LITTLE OPPOSITION

Dealers Sit on Side Lines and Make Notes

With the exception of a dealer-employed lawyer and a man who identified himself as secretary of the Communist party, no opposition to the proposed federal-state milk-marketing agreement was recorded at the first of last week's five hearings. On the contrary, nearly two score witnesses, farmers and farm leaders, came to the witness stand to stamp approval upon the plan.

1,000 Farmers Present

Getting away to a slow start because of the necessity of laying out the procedure to be followed and the reading of formal documents by Hearing Master G. J. Gifford, of Indiana, special representative of the United States Department of Agriculture, the Albany hearing on May 16 lasted until after 10 at night.

More than 1,000 persons attended the hearing. Close to 150 dealers, lawyers, and employees of dealers were there. It was evident that the dealers' lawyers were there to gather material regarding the support for the plan with the intent of laying down a barrage of opposition at a later hearing.

First opposition came when Lloyd C. Anderson, of Binghamton, attorney for the Crowley Milk Company and the Crowley Producers' Association, leaped to the front when the hearing was opened with objections to its being held. He went through a long rigmarole of objections, claiming that the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets had "no power or jurisdiction" to hold the hearing. Continuing, he claimed the hearing premature, that proper preliminary procedure had not been complied with.

The dealers' lawyer, although he said he was testifying as attorney for producers, slapped the civic pride of five important New York state cities when he stated that farmers were being deprived of their right to be heard because the hearings were being held in "remote places." Hearings were held in Albany, Malone, Syracuse, Elmira, and New York City. He said, too, that the order had been kept secret. Later Edmund C. Cooke, Bargaining Agency attorney, testified that close to 100,000 printed copies had been distributed.

Mr. Anderson said he spoke for Crowley Producers, an organization of 1,200 farmers, but admitted that only 25 per cent of them would be affected by a federal marketing order.

Next opposition came during the afternoon session, when the Communist, who had made himself generally objectionable during the day with his questions to witnesses, many of which were ruled out, took the stand. He made a good Communist speech while attempting to tear the order apart. Cries of "throw him out" were heard just before he left the stand.

Dairy Leaders Favor Proposed Plan

The Albany hearing was distinctive for the numerous dairy leaders who testified in favor of the proposed agreement.

(Full text of some witnesses' testimony appears elsewhere in this issue of the Dairymen's League News.)

Lynn E. Maynard, president of the Philadelphia Milk Producers' Cooperative Association, said that in all his experience he had never seen the shipper price structure in a more demoralized condition than at present."

"Last year," said Mr. Maynard, "due to the confusion from the discontinuance of milk control, there was a somewhat similar situation, but it did not seem to be as bad.

"At this time in New York, although theoretically the shipper price is based on the Sheffield blend, it is difficult to get any handling charges, and there is no chance at all of collecting for extra butterfat. In many cases the price offered even compels the taking of losses on transportation costs."

Speaking from personal experience in marketing milk under a federal order similar to that proposed for the New York market, Ernest Sheldon, manager of the Little Falls Dairy Company, gave an o. k. to the plan. He said:

"I have the experience of owning a farm which ships to the Boston market under the federal order in that territory, and I want to say in the strongest possible way that, in spite of the attempts by dealers to block the Administrator in the New England territory, I believe the order has done a lot of good in bettering returns to producers. I am convinced from my experience in both sections that the only remedy for the chaotic conditions existing in the New York milk shed is the one proposed by the Producers' Bargaining Agency."

Henry S. Manley, of the Producers' Bargaining Agency attorneys' committee, former counsel to the Milk Control Board, testified as to the area covered by the order and the reasons for boundary lines specified in the plan.

Homer S. Rolfe, president of the Producers' Agency, gave testimony regarding the necessity of the classified price plan.

Jay C. Treat, president of the Conesus Cooperative, testified on the same subject.

Dr. Kenneth Shaul, a director in the Sheffield Producers' Cooperative Association, declared purpose of the plan is "to work out a fair price under which all producers will gain." His testimony indicated past experience has been that while some producers got more than others, none received a worthwhile price for milk. This, he said, would be remedied by the federal-state plan, and added:

"The proposed plan will not take anything away from any producer or group or producers, but will mean a substantial gain for all of them. It will mean higher returns for all producers instead of a preferred position for some."

Warren E. Davey, president of Coventry Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, favored the order and pointed out the benefits accruing to producers generally when plants are owned by producer organizations especially in handling surplus.

Others who testified as representatives of cooperative groups included Ralph N. Norton, president Boonville Farms Cooperative; Sherrill Huffcut, president Circleville Milk Producers Cooperative; and Roswell Kinney, director of Sheffield Producers' Cooperative Association.

MANY NORTH COUNTRY FARMERS FOR PLAN

Farmers' Union Speakers Oppose—Noyes Says Agree

A long parade of farmer witnesses testifying to the need for and their anxious desire that a federal-state milk marketing agreement be made effective featured the second hearing on the proposed plan at Malone, May 17.

Against this was the loud, critical, destructive attitude of speakers who identified themselves with the Dairy Farmers Union.

Holton V. Noyes, Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, in a brief speech at the close of the Malone hearing, which was attended by close to 3,000 persons, voiced his firm belief that the proposed order "could be made to work."

Stating that there are a few minor points in the suggested 3621 agreement that he would like to see changed, Commissioner Noyes said:

"I believe this order can be made to work, provided a few slight changes are made, and provided that a good administrator is selected, which I believe can be done, and provided that farmers give it their support."

The Commissioner prefaced this remark with a statement to the effect that he had discussed with representatives of the Secretary of Agriculture, who will select the administrator, the qualifications of that individual. He indicated that it was practically agreed that such administrator should be a person who has not had any connection with the milk business in this territory.

Record North Country Crowd Present

The Malone hearing started promptly at 9:30 in the morning with around 2,000 persons in the big state armory. The crowd grew throughout the morning session, and the afternoon session brought a peak attendance despite the fact that skies were clear, warm sun was shining down, and it was an ideal day for farmers to press spring work.

Earl Laidlaw, of Gouverneur, representing the Gouverneur Cooperative Dairymen's Association, voiced approval of the proposed agreement.

"Our cooperative has made an honest effort to work with the other cooperatives in the Producers' Bargaining Agency," said Mr. Laidlaw. "We sought to force payment of a fair price for milk through a voluntary effort by the different cooperatives working through a single bargaining agency.

"We feel that we have been but partially successful—not because the better class of dealers were not willing to pay fair prices, and not because the majority of dairymen were not willing through their different cooperatives to support a sound plan, but because a small percentage of the producers were willing to turn their milk over to a few irresponsible, destructive dealers at prices much below our suggested Class 1 and 2 price.

"This was done in an effort by a minority of the industry so as to move all their milk in the upper class market, and in so doing crowd someone else out, with the resulting disturbance that a practice of this kind is bound to bring about."

Stating that he has had 30 years experience in milk marketing and that he has no illusions as to what will and what will not work, Mr. Laidlaw continued:

"I have no faith in a plan of selling which is not based on an equalized plan of payment to producers, subject, of course, to freight and butterfat differentials; and subject also to each cooperative having to care for its own debts; and also subject to their own inefficiencies due to lack of volume, poor management, or any other cause which the industry as a whole should not be called upon to bear.

"I also have no faith in a plant that does not contemplate sending every dealer into the market with his milk costing him the same price paid by his competitors.

"Price cutting by dairymen and dealer price cutting on milk they have obtained from price cutting dairymen is at the bottom of most of this continual trouble in the dairy business."

In conclusion Mr. Laidlaw declared that the proposed agreement "will compel dealers to make money out of selling milk instead of out of buying it."

Other Cooperative Leaders Testify

Sherrill Hufcut, president of the Circleville Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc., who had journeyed 300 miles from his home in the rich fluid territory of Orange County to tell the North Country farmers, who long distance from the metropolis makes their market mostly a surplus operation, approved the plan.

"I came up here to tell you men," said Mr. Hufcut, "that despite my being within 70 miles of the world's best fluid milk market, which thus provides me a preferential location, I am all for this plan. My fluid market is of no great value to me if the price is constantly being depressed because you farmers are striving to get a share of that fluid market. I am willing to share my fluid market with you. I am willing to share with you the burden of surplus. That is why I am for this agreement."

C. R. Leach, Enosburg Falls, Vermont, member of a cooperative with 126 members, testified as to the economic necessity for the plan.

"We have $10,661 of unpaid taxes, three farms have just been sold for taxes, and more are threatened. Our youth is leaving the farm because they can't make a living and because they see no future to it. This proposed agreement is the only thing that can bring farmers a living price for milk."

Lester Dumont, of Malone, an officer of the Malone Cooperative Association, declared his organization 100 per cent for the plan. For April milk, he said, they got $1.31 per hundredweight.

W. A. Mather, Adams Producers' Cooperative Association, was for the plan because "it is fair to all."

Howard F. Jones, Gouverneur; R. C. Harper, Waddington; and A. C. Pilger, Batavia, which is near Buffalo, were the principal opposition witnesses. They testified in the afternoon. Harper and Pilger have long been identified with the Farmers' Union. All were in general opposition to the order and made long, impassioned speeches that brought loud applause from their followers.

Among the witnesses at the afternoon session favoring the plan were E. C. Jenkins, of Winthrop, one of the North Country's big dairymen, with a herd of 43 head.

"An emergency exists," he said. "It is time that we get together instead of fighting over little details. I do not believe the federal government is anxious to come in here, but we ought to be anxious to have them. We ought to try this plan, and if it does not work we can have another hearing and vote it out."

I. B. Mitchell, of Lafargeville, declared that he and other dairymen of the Lafargeville Milk Producers Corporation "have confidence in the ability of the men who wrote this order. We have confidence that the federal and state governments would not submit it to us unless it were for our benefit. Therefore we are for it."

Testimony for the day closed when Frank Crary, of Canton, told how the proposed agreement was created. For months, he said, it was discussed by delegates of the Producers' Bargaining Agency, who instructed the Board of Directors to prepare a plan. This, he said, was done through a committee.

TESTIMONY AT SYRACUSE STRONG FOR AGREEMENT

Many Producers Testify After Hearing Master Calls Halt on Lawyer Spouting Contest

Opponents of the proposed federal-state milk marketing agreement sent their wrecking crew into action at the third hearing, which was held in Syracuse, May 18.

A crowd of 1,500 dairy farmers turned out for the Syracuse hear-. Half of them walked out in disgust in mid-afternoon after yers spouting for the opposition had wasted most of the afternoon ng with each other in what appeared to be a contest to see which ld grab the most publicity.

Most of the morning session was taken up with the legal prelimi-ies that marked the opening of each day's hearing. Included was presentation by counsel for the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk oducers' Bargaining Agency of a résumé of the proponents' case.
is was a necessity at each hearing to comply with government reguons. This was followed by a few brief proponent witnesses testify-as to the need of various sections of the plan. Among these was nley Piseck, who favored the plan, but wanted a higher price edule.

The Syracuse evening session, which lasted until 9 o'clock, etching the day's hearing out to twelve hours, was a real farmer sion. It was then that opposition witnesses voiced views that ught from Hearing Master G. J. Gifford a statement for the record erting that Uncle Sam is not trying to jam any agreement down the oats of farmers. A tally of the day's witnesses showed them two to for the proposed plan.

(Full text of Judge Gifford's statement appears elsewhere in this ue of the Dairymen's League News.)

A string of dairy farmers took the stand for three to ten minutes to ce in the record facts of the suffering among rural people due to low milk prices. Outstanding in this testimony was that of loyal irymen's League members, who expressed resentment of insinuations t they were controlled or coerced by officials.

Fred Palmer, of Depauville, said:

"Some of today's witnesses have tried to leave the impression that irymen's League members are coerced. I have been a League mem-r many years and I have never seen any acts of coercion. Our prob-ns are discussed in meetings. The more they are discussed and the re criticism there is the better our directors like it. I am perfectly tisfied that Dairymen's League members are going to vote on this tter as they want to."

Opening his remarks with a statement that "We have listened to the alers' lawyers' filibuster all day," Marshall Minolo, of Pulaski, a ung man four years out of agricultural vocational school, said he d chosen dairying as a "life work," and added, "But I am beginning doubt the wisdom of my choice. Low milk returns," he said, "are scouraging to farm youth."

Fred H. Hewitt, of Mexico, was brief, but effective. He said:

"It may be refreshing to you gentlemen to find someone who is for e Bargaining Agency. I am for it all the way."

Milton D. Dexter, of Dexter, dramatically pictured the rural scene hen he said:

"Farmers' wives are going without the necessities of life."

Mrs. Sette Buhrig, Canastota, made it plain that to her the idea of consumer objection to milk prices is a myth. "I have lived in cities and on farms," she said. "I have lived in New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, and Chicago. Milk prices were raised by the distributors from time to time. But I never heard consumers making much complaint.

"I believe in the American system," said Mrs. Buhrig, "and ordinarily do not favor government interference in business. But we must have a living price for milk. We ought to get it, and quit worrying about consumers. This plan of government assistance has promise of help for farmers. I favor it."

Soon after the afternoon session began Frank N. Decker, a Syracuse lawyer, who testified that he owned a dairy farm, went on and began his testimony with the statement that he was "neither for or against" the agreement. He proceeded, however, to tear it apart, finding fault with the document as a whole and in many parts.

Then came R. C. Harper, of Waddington, who had testified and made a lengthy speech at Malone the previous day, at which time he stated he was speaking for the Dairy Farmers Union of St. Lawrence county. Harper went into his oration and kept going until the crowd began showing signs of restlessness.

Lloyd C. Anderson, lawyer for the Crowley Milk Company, who says he speaks for members of Crowley Milk Producers' Association, popped up next. Time meant nothing to Mr. Anderson. In fact, he said he could talk for days against the proposal, and before he relinquished the witness stand some began to think that he intended to do just that. To report what Mr. Anderson found wrong with it would take reams of paper. There is nothing to report on what he said in favor of it.

When Attorney Anderson surrendered the witness stand, Edmund C. Cooke, counsel to the Producers' Bargaining Agency, in courtesy to the farmers who wanted to testify, waived his right to cross examine the Binghamton lawyer.

Some farmers yelled out to go ahead and cross examine, evidently being anxious for it. That was not done, however, as already hundreds of farmers were quitting the meeting, one shouting, "it's time to go home and milk the cows."

Farmers Finally Got a Chance

Then came a line of farmer witnesses testifying in favor of the proposal. Outstanding among these was Charles H. Riley, of Cayuga county, who described the misery among farm people. He told of farmers driven to suicide because they could not make a living for themselves and families at present low milk prices. He told of widows supporting parents and raising children by their own labor in working dairy farms. He told of unpaid mortgage interest and overdue taxes. Of women in overalls and children improperly clothed.

Irs. Kirk H. Meyers, of Cato, Onondaga county, a woman with ege degrees, who milks her own cows, plants and harvests the crops, l she wanted the order put into effect.

I go to the store with a shopping list," she said, "but I can only buy bare necessities because my milk check is too small to buy all that need."

Farmers cannot live, she said, when the price for milk goes below $2.

ester Tucker, of Marathon, said:

We farmers have failed to solve our marketing problem. We re- e to get together and work together. Our enemies tell us this is inentation. I don't believe that; but if it is, I prefer that to vation."

ther farmers speaking for the measure were F. H. Childs, of sterdam; M. C. Bond, of the College of Agriculture at Cornell iversity; Ralph Goff, of Wampsville; Hilton D. Harris, of Water- e; and Orrin Wilcox, of Theresa.

5 HISTORY OF THE SURPLUS PROBLEM

Weaknesses of the Proposed Order here are seven basic weaknesses in the proposed plan, which are ollows:

. Lack of control of surplus handlers' premium fluid sales in rtages;

. Lack of control of diversions;

. Loading pool through inspection of additional sources;

. Lack of pricing on milk for shipment to North Jersey and other dental markets from New York approved plants;

. Inability to handle storage cream problem so as to properly tect market without inequitable distribution of possible losses;

. Consumer pressure against governmental price changes; and

. Inability to bring about general operating efficiency.

hese are not the fault of the wording of the plan, but as we are ised by attorneys, these weaknesses arise from our system of gov- ment under which government assistance can only be exercised stitutionally and legally through very specific, rigid, inelastic, carefully limited delegations of power to administrative agencies.

Neces ity in Spite of Weaknesses—United Support Through Cooperatives Will Offset Weaknesses

t may be asked why try to get these orders in view of the weak- ses outlined. One reason why the recognition of these weaknesses uld not stop us from trying to get tne orders is because there is a ong possibility that united producer activity, collateral to the erations of the Administrator under the orders, may result in pping dealers from availing themselves of these weaknesses in an endeavor to evade the orders. But I cannot too strongly emphasize the fact that the orders MUST provide for the carrying out of the congressional and legislative mandates of encouraging and fostering cooperatives, or such activity by united producers cannot even be started with any hope of success in strengthening and supporting the administration of the orders.

The laws were passed and the order drafted for the purpose of protecting producers' income. They regulate distributors. It is too much to expect the support of distributors. Undoubtedly they will oppose its application and endeavor to obstruct its operation. If there are no large united groups of farmers to protect producers' interests and support and assist in its operation, success can hardly be hoped for under this plan. Thus the cooperative differentials provided in the orders are essential to the program. Without such provisions the effective support of producer co-operatives cannot be given and without co-operatives united producer action is objectless and futile.

DEALERS SEEK TO DELAY ORDER—FARMERS PRESS FOR ACTION

Demand "Middlemen" End Obstructive Tactics or Producers May Take Matters in Their Own Hands—Hearings Recessed to Albany For Early Wind-up

Closing on a compelling note of producer protest against dealers' maneuvering, obstructive tactics and attempts to delay, three and a half days of hearings on the proposed federal-state milk marketing plan in New York City was recessed May 26 to resume at Albany Friday, June 3.

All through last week's two and a half days of hearings dealers and their lawyers had sprinkled the record with testimony that they would require much time in which to examine the record of previous hearings and prepare their complete case. With this as a background, they argued for long delay before additional hearings should be held when Glenn J. Gifford, Hearing Master, had heard the last witness and prepared to recess.

Cooke Demands End of Obstructive Tactics

Sensing that opponents would fight for long delay, Edmund C. Cooke, former Buffalo Congressman, who, as counsel for the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, had skillfully woven into the record the story of farmer need for help, laid down a strenuous bombardment in the last 30 minutes of hearing. In a brunt attack he sent a trio of concluding witnesses led by Charles Baldwin, former state commissioner of agriculture and markets, e stand. Next was J. C. Treat, head of the Conesus Cooperative: ast witness was E. C. Bardin, of West Winfield, veteran dairy ner, and leader of the Saquoit Valley cooperative. Stern visaged speaking in a calm, but forceful voice, Mr. Bardin shattered the rinthine logic that had been woven by the adroit dealers' lawyers ain delay.

Bardin Says Farmers Won't Wait Long

've been listening to these dealers—the middlemen—opposing this npt to obtain a living price for milk," said Mr. Bardin.
think when we go back and tell the farmers up in the country t this opposition by the dealers they will be all the more for this

've never seen such a scramble by any group for an imaginary as has been going on here.
believe in this order, and I'll fight for it to the last ditch.
think this is the best thing for the dealers that has come up in s. They are always telling us that all they care for is that all ers pay the same price for milk. Well, here is something that res just that, and I can't see any harm in their all paying pro- ers the same price. But that isn't what they want. They want ntages. They want to chisel. Well, farmers aren't going to d for it. These dealers down here are sitting on a keg of dynamite don't know it.
You can't get by on dollar milk. You heard yesterday that unless thing is done quickly for farmers there may be the worst strike milk shed has ever known. I don't know but what it would be a l thing right now. Milk isn't worth much to us farmers at present es, and maybe we might as well pour it out on the ground—it's l fertilizer."

ttorney Cooke concluded the argument for proponents with a plea quick resumption and completion of hearings. He pointed out it is farmers who are vitally effected, that it is they who are ering from low returns for milk, and asserted that farmers and r representatives stood ready to work day and night, and that holidays should not interfere with much-needed progress.

Still the dealers' lawyers were for delay to give them more time to examine records and prepare their case in greater de- —this despite their having spent long days in tearing the proposed r apart. In benevolent tones they pointed out that they had testi- to their anxious desire "to sit down with farmers and consumers the government and straighten out this order." It was the old nd table idea, tried many times by patient farmers and without efit. Albany was too far away and the dealers wanted any addi- al hearings that were held kept in New York.

Judge Gifford Recesses to Albany June 3

Hearing Master Gifford listened politely and patiently and when all had been heard announced that he would resume hearings in Albany June 3.

The New York hearings resumed in the State Office Building, Tuesday, May 24. Again, the hearing room there was too small and the hearing had to be moved. The spacious auditorium of the New York Bar Association Building was used for Wednesday and Thursday sessions. There the very atmosphere was different. A fine, stately building, the auditorium dignified in its high court appointments, the fine paintings and statues of distinguished jurists that lined the walls giving a feeling of justice.

From the very beginning it was apparent that metropolitan dealers, collectively and individually, were pretty much against the order. The sessions were in contrast to those of the previous week in the upstate milk-producing country. The farmer witnesses of the week before were replaced by correctly attired, clever, quick-thinking dealers and their suave, persuasive attorneys; among the latter a former attorney general of New Jersey.

Early in the opening session the Metropolitan Milk Distributors Bargaining Agency went to the witness stand. The story of this Agency, which started last July with 30 dealer members to bargain with the Producers' Bargaining Agency, was told. Distributors Agency membership is now only four dealers, it was shown. Though not entered as evidence, the shrinkage of membership from 30 to 4 is the story of present low milk prices. Dealers quit the Agency so they could go out and bargain with farmers in small groups to escape the pressure of the Producers' Agency. The old trick of playing one group against another.

Dealers Up to Old Tricks

The four members of the Dealers' Agency rotated to and from the witness stand. Each, with his set piece of testimony. Each finding fault with the proposed plan in one way or another. The final result: practically nothing about the plan was satisfactory.

After this group had laden the record with objections came the lawyer-spokesman for one of the big distributors: one that is a unit in a national combine that never has been friendly toward farmers' real cooperative efforts.

This witness proclaimed his client "prepared to enter into a marketing agreement" possessing four definite characteristics. These included that it "be fair to producers, fair to distributors, not unfairly burdensome to consumers," and that it be "executed under such circumstances as to justify the expectation that it can and will be enforced comprehensively and with an even hand."

nice, cordial gesture to which was added the statement that the r "is not convinced that the proposed agreement and order meet tandards enumerated."

eading that "time has not permitted" a "complete analysis" of the ement and its "defects," the witness read into the record 18 type-en pages of fault finding, criticism, and objection.

its broad sweep to please all groups the document said, "we are interested in the attitude of consumers," adding:

onsumers should not be left in doubt that higher prices to be paid roducers * * * will necessarily result in an increase in the of milk to consumers." Continuing the statement said: "Dis-faction on the part of consumers would result in sales resistance, this is highly undesirable both from the standpoint of producers handlers."

llowing on the witness stand was the spokesman for another large ibuting concern. He frankly admitted the existing problems and eed for a constructive program. He gave approval to the basic ipals upon which the program has been drawn and voiced desire lp solve existing problems. In conclusion the witness concurred e statements recorded by the Distributors' Bargaining Agency.

Long Parade of Dealers and Attorneys hrough the balance of Tuesday and all of Wednesday it was a de of lesser lights from among New York's 300 dealers and their neys. Their stories differed only in the language used to express selves. All were anxious to help farmers, but all found a lot of gs wrong with the proposed program. Lawyers argued at length technicalities and the definitions of words.

onsumer groups had their representatives on hand to testify to anxious desire that farmers have larger returns. Some of them loudly critical of dealers, and they were emphatic that they want milk at lower prices.

rong opposition was recorded against the marketing plan. Some points in the document were brought to light. Amendments already been submitted on some of these. The opposition is exed to enter further protests at the hearing beginning in Albany
3. These may be augumented by briefs filed at the close of ings.

hen the record of the hearings has been transcribed it will go to etary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Holton V. Noyes, missioner of Agriculture and Markets, for examination to deter-whether need and necessity for a marketing order has been estab-
d. Upon their findings will depend whether a revised order shall ubmitted to farmers for a vote.

LEAGUE PLEDGES COOPERATION—WARNS DEALERS

Will Consider Extension of Distribution Direct to Consumers If Dealers Block Producers' Plans

Gaumnitz and Brandt Guest Speakers at Big Annual Meeting

League farmers, meeting in Syracuse last week for the 18th annual membership gathering of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., served plain notice upon milk dealers that if they defeat or delay the proposed marketing agreement for the New York market Dairymen's League producers will consider extending their own distribution operations clear through to consumers in the New York Metropolitan area.

This militant declaration of the organization came in the form of a resolution, recommended by the Resolutions Committee and unanimously adopted by the nearly 3,000 members present at the close of the Thursday morning session. It marked the high point of this year's annual meeting, as the great gathering of League men and women sensed that here was a call to battle—a battle to obtain and protect a living price for milk, if present plans of the producers were upset by dealer opposition.

Warning Climaxes Stirring Annual Message

This significant warning to dealers came as a very forceful climax to the stirring messages brought to members by President Fred H. Sexauer in his annual report. Mr. Sexauer traced the desperate efforts of the dealers during the past year, sometimes in combination with a farm-paper editor and sometimes through the control of producers, to block cooperative progress of dairymen.

"Farmers will not stand this for too long," said Mr. Sexauer. "If dealers will not work cooperatively with cooperative organizations to handle these market problems, consumers can well demand that they (the dealers) be regulated so that they cannot play both ends, the producer and the consumer, for the benefit of the middle."

"It is unfortunate," said the League president, "that the conservative, forward-looking distributor gets squeezed because of the destructive, chiseling practices of some. Producers' organizations cannot be expected to sacrifice the interests of producers if distributors cannot work together for the benefit of all—producers, consumers, and distributors."

President Sexauer concluded his annual report with the prediction that if there could be continued progress with a continuing better understanding among producers, a better knowledge of the problems and greater cooperation, then dairymen could expect real progress during the next year.

League Pledge Repeated

Mr. Sexauer repeated the pledge made in his annual report a year ago—that the League would cooperate with others on any sound program and "that an unscrupulous majority of dealers must not be allowed to deprive farmers of a living price for milk."

In the Home Department meeting on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Sexauer described the deprivation and the distressing conditions among farm families as a result of the low price for milk over a long period of years, and very emphatically declared that the milk industry needed an overhauling from beginning to end "for the purpose of laying a foundation of understanding in order to build groundwork upon which farmers will be brought together."

The Warning Resolution

The resolution warning dealers that continued opposition might force the League into direct distribution to consumers was as follows:

Whereas in the early days farmers delivered their milk to city consumers, but in due time the growth of the cities made it necessary to bring milk from longer and still longer distances, as a result of which there appeared middlemen, who, buying milk in the country and selling it in the cities, induced conditions which in due time resulted in the prices received by farmers being ruinously low; and

Whereas during the long period in which the farmers have sought by organization to place themselves in a position where they could obtain living prices for milk, their efforts have been continually opposed by middlemen, in part by open and honorable methods and in part by insidious methods; and

Whereas by the enactment of Federal and State laws farmers' cooperatives are authorized to associate themselves together in a bargaining agency and to effectuate a milk marketing agreement, with the assistance of Federal and State authorities, having as its objective not only living prices to farmers but equal prices to competing middlemen; and

Whereas there is now pending a marketing agreement applicable throughout the territory supplying the metropolitan market which, if effectuated and operated in accord with its spirit and purpose, will result in farmers receiving fair prices, and to prevent destructive and unfair price cutting in the cities; and

Whereas middlemen are jointly and collectively endeavoring by methods both fair and unfair to prevent farmers from obtaining such a marketing agreement: Therefore be it

Resolved, That if middlemen succeed in defeating the adoption of such marketing agreement, or, if adopted, if they succeed, either by litigation or other vexatious tactics, to prevent its full, free, and fair operation, that we recommend to the members of this organization, and to its directors and officers, that they consider the expediency of farmers taking back the right which they have never surrendered of themselves, supplying city consumers with milk, and that to this end the Board of Directors at once cause an investigation to be made to ascertain if funds can be obtained so as to finance such enlarged operation without unduly burdening the Association members; and if the Directors find that such action is necessary and feasible, they proceed accordingly; and be it further

Resolved, That in so doing they endeavor, by seeking cooperation with consumers' groups, by adopting new and improved methods of handling and marketing, and by seeking necessary regulatory legislation, reduce the spread between the prices received by farmers and paid by consumers, and to the end that both producers and consumers may be better served.

DAIRYMEN'S LEAGUE NEWS—NEW YORK, N. Y., AUGUST 16, 1938

EXPLANATION OF FEDERAL-STATE MARKETING PLAN

In last week's issue of the News we printed verbatim final draft of the proposed Federal marketing order which is now before producers for final decision by ballot on August 18, 19, and 20. The New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets will issue an order to be voted on at the same time. The same provisions are included in both the state and federal orders.

This joint Federal-State milk marketing plan asked for an originally proposed by the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., representing about 40,000 producers in the milk shed, is not mandatory in any sense. It is like a piece of machinery for farmers to use, and it can't be put into operation unless enough dairy farmers vote favorably on it.

The plan itself is primarily a producer plan providing for federal and state aid to make it effective. It will not regulate the production of milk, nor can any producers be required to do anything under its provisions. It does regulate the handlers of milk.

However, its provisions are fair to all concerned—handlers, consumers, and producers. Its purpose is to bring to producers only a fair and living price for milk.

Following is an explanation of the main provisions of the plan now before producers for a vote next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. Complete text of the final draft of this plan was printed in the News last week:

Purpose of the Program

The marketing agreement program for regulating the handling of lk in the New York metropolitan marketing area is designed to:
. Establish uniform prices for milk sold by producers to handlers the metropolitan market;
2. Assure uniform returns to producers for milk sold in the mar-ing area regardless of the handler to whom the milk was sold or use made of the milk by the individual handler;
3. Assure each producer a fair share of fluid milk market; and
4. Provide for the control of surplus milk supplies so that the bur-n is borne fairly by all producers interested in the metropolitan rket, and enable the use of surplus so that it will bring the highest urn to producers.

Principal Provisions

The marketing agreement program which is now before producers d handlers for final consideration incorporates changes and sug-stions which were made by industry spokesmen and others at the blic hearings. No changes have been made in the basic idea of the ogram.

The main provisions of the program provide for:
1. The selection of a market administrator by the Secretary of riculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets to minister the program;
2. The classification of milk received from producers at handlers' ants into nine classes, according to the use made of that milk;
3. The establishment of minimum prices which handlers are re-ired to pay producers for each class of milk according to its use;
4. A method for determining uniform prices which handlers are pay producers through the operation of a market-wide pool to as-re each producer his fair share of the fluid milk market; and
5. The filing of periodic reports by handlers to the market ad-nistrator showing deliveries and tests of milk received from pro-cers and from other sources, the use made of this milk, and pay-ents made to producers. The market administrator is given thority to check and verify the accuracy of all reports made to m by handlers.

Producers to Decide

Whether the Federal-State program for regulating the handling milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area goes into fect, rests largely with the producers themselves. The decision of oducers whose votes are expressed in the referendum to be held ill indicate whether dairymen favor the issuance of the order and ill determine whether it will be possible to put the order into actual eration.

The order cannot regulate the production of milk, nor can any oducer be required to do anything under its provisions. A producer is defined as any person who produces milk which is delivered to a handler at a plant approved by any health authority in the metropolitan marketing area.

A handler is defined in the order as any person who engages in the handling of milk received at a plant approved by any health authority in the metropolitan marketing area. The definition specifically includes any cooperative association that operates plants or any cooperative association which causes milk to be delivered to plants of handlers and collects payments for such milk. The definition specifically excludes those persons who neither receive milk from producers nor handle milk which is sold in the metropolitan marketing area.

Joint State and Federal Administration

The program would be administered by a market administrator named by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets. The market administrator would administer both the Federal and the State orders, thus making it possible for the Federal and State Governments to operate jointly.

The order provides for the selection of the market administrator. It defines his powers and duties. The order requires the market administrator to furnish a bond to guarantee faithful performance of his duties.

The market administrator has the power to administer the terms and provisions of the order and to receive, investigate, and report complaints of violations.

Among his duties the market administrator is required to keep books and records which will clearly reflect the transactions of his office, furnish such information as the Secretary of Agriculture or the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets may request, and employ such persons as may be necessary to carry on the functions of his office.

The expense of administering the joint Federal-State program would be borne by handlers. Each handler would be required to pay as his pro rata share of the expense of administering the program not more than 2 cents per hundredweight on that total quantity of milk received from producers at his plant which is sold primarily as fluid milk or fluid cream. The exact amount per hundredweight of milk to be paid would be determined by the market administrator on the basis of what was necessary for administering the program.

Milk Classified According to Use

The order provides that all milk received from producers by handlers must be classified according to its use at, or the form in which milk leaves, the plant where first received from producers with the proviso that if milk is moved as milk from the plant where it was originally received from producers to a second plant outside the marketing area, the classification of such milk at the first plant may be according to its use at the second plant. Any use of milk claimed by a handler would be subject to verification by the market administrator.

Milk received at the plants of handlers would be classified into nine classes so that payments to producers may be made on the basis of the use value of the milk.

Each class of milk is defined in substance as follows:

Class I milk is defined as milk which leaves the plant as whole milk, chocolate milk, or a whole milk drink, or any milk not so accounted for as to be placed in a class lower than class I.

Class II–A milk is all milk the butterfat from which leaves a plant as cream which was not sold as frozen cream, made into ice cream, or shipped to markets in any county where there is no New York approved plant.

Class II–B milk is that milk which furnishes butterfat for plain condensed milk and homogenized mixtures (for ice cream).

Class III–A milk is all milk which supplies butterfat in evaporated milk, sweetened condensed milk, milk chocolate, milk powder, malted milk powder, or any cheese other than cream cheese and American Cheddar cheese.

Class III–B milk is milk which supplies butterfat in frozen cream.

Class III–C milk is milk furnishing butterfat for frozen desserts sold outside of New York City.

Class III–D milk is milk furnishing the butterfat for cream sold outside the New York milkshed and the butterfat in cream cheese.

Class IV–A milk is milk which is manufactured into butter.

Class IV–B milk is milk which is manufactured into American cheese.

The nine classifications for milk which are provided for in the order follow rather closely the classes used by the State of New York in regulating milk since 1933 and the classes used by a large portion of the market for 10 or more years before that time.

These use classifications are made necessary by the large territory of the New York milkshed, the wide variations in conditions of production and climate, the great variety of possible manufacturing outlets for milk at times not needed for Class I or Class II–A uses, and the tremendous volume of milk involved in even small proportionate changes in the sales and production of milk in the shed from day to day, week to week, and month to month. These classes, together with the price applicable to each class, are designed to permit all producers' milk to be absorbed in some channel of use at all times in order that it may be available when needed for Class I and Class II–A uses in the market.

Minimum Price for Each Class of Milk

For each of the nine use classifications there is provided in the order a method which will fix the price of milk in each class for each month. The method used is designed to provide flexibility in the pricing of milk so as to recognize seasonal changes in production, general economic conditions, and the level of dairy prices.

The prices prescribed in the order are minimum prices based on milk, containing 3.5 per cent butterfat received during each month from producers or associations of producers at plants in the 201-210-mile zone from New York City. Differentials are provided for milk received at plants in zones nearer or farther than the 201-210 mile zone is from New York City.

The order contains a schedule which prescribes the class I price which handlers would be required to pay from April through July and from August through March. The schedule sets $2.20 per hundredweight for the 25-34.9-cent butter price range for the months of April through July, and $2.65 per hundredweight for the 30-34.9-cent butter price range for the months of August through March. This seasonal movement of the class I price is modified by changes in the price of butter, moving up or down by 20 cents per hundredweight for each 5-cent rise or fall in the average of New York 92-score butter prices for a period of 60 days before each month. The following table is contained in the order and prescribes the butter price range and the class I price to be paid during the different periods:

Butter price range (cents per pound)	Class I price		Butter price range (cents per pound)	Class I price
	April through July	August through March		April through July	August through March
	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.		Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.
Under 20	1.80	2.05	35 to 39.9	2.40	2.85
20 to 24.9	2.00	2.25	40 to 44.9	2.60	3.05
25 to 29.9	2.20	2.45	45 to 49.9	2.80	3.25
30 to 34.9	2.20	2.65	Over 49.9	3.00	3.45

If an order has become effective August 1, the class I price for August would be $2.45, since the average of butter prices was in the 25–29.9-cent range.

The method for fixing the class II–A price follows along the same lines as that for fixing the class I price, but it is designed to move the class II–A price more nearly in keeping with changes in the prices of butter. This is done by requiring that the butter price range be determined during the 30 days preceding the 25th of the month before the price would be in effect. In making this determination the average of New York 92-score butter prices would be used.

The lowest level of class II–A prices in the same butter price range is set for the months of March through July when production is heaviest, with slight increases for the months of August through October, the highest prices coming during the months of November through February. The following table contained in the order scribes the butter price range and the class II–A price for the ious periods:

r price range s per pound)	Class II–A price
	March through July	August through October	November through February
	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.
29	1.30	1.35	1.50
34.9	1.50	1.55	1.70
39.9	1.70	1.75	1.90
44.9	1.85	1.90	2.05

Butter price range (cents per pound)	Class II–A price
	March through July	August through October	November through February
	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.	Dollars per cwt.
35 to 39.9	2.00	2.05	2.20
40 to 44.9	2.15	2.20	2.35
45 to 49.9	2.30	2.35	2.50
Over 49.9	2.45	2.50	2.65

f an order had become effective August 1, the class II–A price August would be $1.75 per hundredweight since the average of ter prices was in the 25–29.9-cent range. The class II–A price uld move to $1.90 for the month of October if the butter price el moved into the 30–34.9-cent range, and to $2.05 per hundred-ght for November if the butter price level remained the same. m the 25–29.9-cent butter price level the class II–A price moves p 20 cents, or up 15 cents, for each 5-cent change in the butter e level.

Prices for milk in the lower use classifications are established on a is so as to absorb all the milk not needed for class I and class II–A poses. These prices are set up so as to enable the manufacturer of ducts made from these lower classes of milk to compete without lue advantage or disadvantage with the same products made from k not qualified for the New York market.

The class III–A milk price under the order is to be 10 cents higher n the average of prices paid at 18 evaporated milk plants in the tes of Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin. The order contains a pro-on to prevent the class III–A milk price from being less than that e which the market administrator would compute by the following mula: The average price of 92-score butter at wholesale in the icago market for the month, plus 30 per cent of that average price. es 3.5, plus 7 cents. This formula approximates that contained in Federal marketing agreement program in effect for the evaporated k industry.

The class II–B price is to be 10 cents higher than the class III–A ce.

The class IV–A milk price is to be calculated by the market admin-rator each month from the average of the highest daily prices of score butter at wholesale in the New York market, deducting 4 ts as allowance for manufacturing costs, adding 20 per cent of the mainder, and multiplying by 3.5.

The class IV–A milk price is the basis for the class III–B, III–C, d III–D prices, which each month are to be respectively 20 cents, cents, and 7½ cents per hundredweight higher than the class IV–A ice.

The class IV–B price is to be determined by the market administrator on the basis of the average of weekly quotations of cheese per pound at Plymouth, Wis., Gouverneur, N. Y., and Cuba, N. Y., deducting 3 cents as an allowance for manufacturing costs, and multiplying by 9.45, a reasonably expected yield of cheese per hundred pounds of 3.5 per cent butterfat milk.

A butterfat differential of 4 cents per one-tenth of one per cent butterfat content above or below 3.5 per cent is to apply on all class prices except those for class III–A, IV–A, and IV–B. In the case of class III–A, IV–A, and IV–B milk prices, the butterfat differential is to be in direct ratio to the price of milk of 3.5 per cent butterfat content.

Handlers Required to Report

Administration of the order by the market administrator is based largely on periodic reports which handlers are required to make. The market administrator is charged with the duty of promptly verifying all reports, and handlers must, under the order, make available to the market administrator records and facilities to enable him to verify their reports and to obtain correct figures in case of errors or omissions.

The most important report which handlers must file with the market administrator is the final monthly report which, in addition to considerable detailed information, shows the total quantity of milk and the average butterfat content of the milk received from producers and from other sources, and the utilization of the milk at each plant, together with a complete computation of the sum of money which represents the handlers' net cost of milk on the basis of the 201–210-mile zone.

Upon receipt of reports for a month, the market administrator is required under the order to audit each report for mathematical correctness and obvious errors. These reports, subject to verification by the market administrator, must be sent to him on the 10th of the month following the month for which the report is made.

The Uniform Price Computation

On the 14th day of the month the market administrator is required to compute the uniform pool price, or blended price, out of all reports in his hands at that time.

For purposes of convenience, the milk of each class to which the minimum prices apply is known as the "net pooled milk." Class I and Class II–A milk which never enters the marketing area is not included in the net pooled milk. The uniform price is computed by the market administrator upon this net pooled milk in all classes of all handlers.

In computing the uniform pool price from all reports each month, the market administrator is required to deduct payments for services rendered by cooperatives and payments for market services rendered by handlers.

Payments Out of Pool

Payments for services by cooperatives are to be made to those cooperative associations which have been determined by the Secretary of Agriculture as having their entire activities under the control of their members and as being able to render service to producers as a whole by facilitating the delivery of milk to persons at the point where it may be used in the highest possible class, and by making available to handlers in need of milk an adequate supply. These payments would go to producers' cooperatives which exercise control over milk and route milk into the channels of utilization which net the highest returns to all producers.

Under the order any cooperative association of producers may apply to the Secretary of Agriculture for determination as to its qualifications to receive the cooperative service payment. If the determination is made in favor of the cooperative, the service payment is to be received by the cooperative until it has been disqualified by the Secretary for failure to exercise the authority and to perform the functions upon which the determination was made.

These payments are to be made at only one of the following rates on net pooled milk dealt with by a cooperative:

One cent per hundredweight of net pooled milk to a cooperative which caused the milk of its members to be delivered to a handler's plant and on which the handler made reports to the market administrator and paid producers as required under the order;

Two and a half cents per hundredweight of net pooled milk to a cooperative which has collected payments for milk delivered to the plant of a handler by its members and which has met its obligations under the order; and

Five cents per hundredweight of net pooled milk to a cooperative which operates plants, is able to take care of all the milk of all its members, and is willing and able to take care of milk from producers who are not members.

Market service payments to handlers would be made for facilitating the utilization of milk in a way so as to benefit all producers sharing in the pool.

During any month except November or December one market service payment would be made to those handlers who move milk from a plant equipped only for receiving and shipping milk to one equipped for manufacturing when it is impossible to move the milk in fluid form. For moving the milk to the manufacturing plant the handler would receive for that service 23 cents per hundredweight of milk so moved, plus a small additional allowance for hauling. No such payment would be made for any month when the manufacturing plant shipped class I milk to the marketing area if both plants are operated by the same handler.

Another market service payment would be made during November and December to a handler who moved class I milk from a plant which is primarily a manufacturing plant, and who would be entitled to claim this market service payment. This payment is at the rate of 30 cents per hundredweight of class I milk during these 2 months only, and the manufacturing plant must not have shipped to the marketing area more than 10 per cent of its receipts as class I milk nor more than 50 per cent as cream during the preceding May and June.

Uniform Pool Prices for Producers

The order requires handlers to pay the uniform pool, or blended price, calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as class I milk outside of the marketing area. In such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable. For the remainder of each producer's milk the handler may pay such prices as he see fit, but is required to furnish the producer with a statement of the percentage of the producer's milk paid for at the uniform price.

Payment of the uniform price is subject to the butterfat differential of 4 cents per hundredweight for each one-tenth of 1 per cent butterfat content above or below 3.5 per cent in the milk delivered by each producer and to the transportation and location differentials.

The transportation differential scale is that prescribed in the order to apply to class I milk and is based on the railway tariff for the movement of milk in tank cars.

The location differential amounts to 25 cents per hundredweight to producers who deliver at plants in counties of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts, located close to New York City, and separated to a large extent from the rest of the milkshed by mountainous country in which very little, if any, milk is produced. Of this 25 cents paid to producers, the handler is reimbursed 20 cents per hundredweight from the total pool. This leaves a location differential of 5 cents per hundredweight to be paid by the handler.

In addition to the other differentials, handlers are required to pay to producers delivering milk qualified as grade A by the New York City Department of Health premiums according to butterfat content and bacteria count on that amount of milk actually sold in the marketing area as grade A milk. The premiums range from 78 cents for 4 per cent milk having less than 10,000 bacteria count down to 5 cents for 3.7 per cent milk containing over 25,000 bacteria count.

A producer settlement fund operated by the market administrator is provided for under the order as a clearing arrangement into which each handler pays the amount by which his net pool obligation is greater than his net pooled milk multiplied by the uniform price, or out of which he is paid the amount by which his net pool obligation is less than his net pooled milk multiplied by the uniform price. Provision is also made for receiving or paying out of the producer settle-

t fund amounts of money arising out of any errors. Handlers t make payments to producers on or before the 25th day of each th for milk received during the preceding month.
he arrangement which the order prescribes for determining and ing a uniform pool price to producers for milk sold in the market-area operates under what is commonly termed a market-wide pool . Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for sold in the marketing area, and assures for that milk payments ll producers at a uniform rate except for the transportation and er differentials provided.

"I URGE ALL PRODUCERS TO VOTE FOR THIS ORDER"—COMMISSIONER HOLTON V. NOYES

n a statement issued last week New York State Commissioner of riculture Holton V. Noyes again urged every dairy farmer to make ecial effort to get to his voting place next week and vote for the posed federal-state marketing order. Commissioner Noyes said:
Milk producers of the New York City milk shed will determine by e August 18, 19, and 20 whether milk control under State and Fed-l cooperation shall be adopted.
Every producer should see that his vote is registered either for or nst this very important question.
I believe that many years of experience point clearly to the necesof milk control. Particularly the experience of the past several rs indicates that State and Federal control is the only form that l work.
We have been working on the present order for some time. It is essarily a complicated document. Every possible utilization of k must be clearly defined, and every possible movement of milk m one utilization to another must be foreseen and provided for.
We believe that the present order is so written that its provisions fair and reasonable and will assure a satisfactory price to all pro-cers. Under the law it can be amended later if experience should ow the need of change.
I urge all producers to vote for this order. I am confident that if s adopted it will stabilize conditions in our milk industry which can t be assured in any other way.
Neither the State nor Federal government wants to go ahead with is order unless the producers signify clearly by vote that they nt it.
This is no proposition for government regulation. It is a plan by hich the industry may secure government cooperation in the enforce-ent of rules which the industry itself believes to be necessary to the derly and equitable marketing of milk.
If the vote is favorable, the order will be put into operation as soon possible. But the continued cooperation and support of producers ill still be necessary to insure success."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE FEDERAL-STATE MILK PROGRAM FOR NEW YORK

The News prints herewith questions and answers on the proposed Federal-State milk program for the New York metropolitan marketing area. Producers qualified to ship milk to this market will ballot on this plan on August 18, 19, and 20. The final draft of the marketing order, as the plan is officially called, was printed in the News last week. These questions and answers have been prepared in the Department of Agriculture to clarify the main points in the plan for the benefit of all producers who will ballot on it August 18, 19, and 20.

Q. What is the purpose of the Federal-State program which the dairy industry is requesting for the New York metropolitan marketing area?

To help stabilize conditions in the New York milk market and to improve returns to the milk producers.

Q. How is this program possible?

Through a marketing agreement and order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, together with an order issued by the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

Q. What is a marketing agreement?

A marketing agreement is a voluntary contract between the Secretary of Agriculture and the handlers of milk who sign.

Q. What is an order?

An order is a regulation issued for the purpose of making the program applicable to all handlers in the market. The Federal order embodies the provisions of the agreement. The State order contains the same provisions.

Q. What is necessary before the Federal-State program can go into effect?

Most important is the fact that producers must vote their approval of the plan. The Federal marketing agreement and order may go into effect if handlers of more than 50 percent of the milk sold in the marketing area sign the agreement and if at least two-thirds of the producers voting in the referendum approve the issuance of the Federal order. In the event the required number of handlers fail to sign the agreement, the order may go into effect with Presidential approval, together with the required two-thirds producer vote. The State order requires a three-quarters vote before it can go into effect. Both the Federal and State orders must receive the required producer approval before the program as a whole can go into effect.

Q. How was the program developed?

The program was developed by dairy farmers and cooperative organizations working through the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency. Public hearings on the plan were held jointly by the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

. What part did the dealers play in preparing it?
formation presented by the dealers before, during, and after ic hearings was taken into consideration.
. How long has it taken to develop the program?
pproximately 8 months.
. Why has it taken so long?
ecause of the complexity of the problem and the attempt to bring t a program which would as nearly as possible fit the needs of the ket.
. Why is the order so long?
nce the marketing of milk in an area as large as New York is a plicated problem, the order must be so worded as to apply to the y varying conditions. The obligations imposed must be fully and rately defined in the order so as to prevent evasion and stand the in the courts.
. Who is a producer as defined in the order?
producer is any person who produces milk which is delivered to a dler at a plant approved by any health authority for the receiving ilk to be sold in the marketing area.
. What is the meaning of the word "handler"?
andler means any person who engages in the handling of milk or m which was received at a plant approved by any health authority the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.
. Does the term handler include cooperative associations?
es; as applied to any milk received from producers at any plant rated by a cooperative association, or with respect to any milk ch it causes to be delivered from producers to any other handler the account of such association and for which such association ects payment.
. Are persons engaged in the handling of milk not received from ducers considered as handlers?
o; neither are persons who handle milk or cream all of which is outside the marketing area.
. Are producers required to file reports under the order?
o. Reports are required only from handlers.
. Does the order regulate producers in their capacity as pro-ers in any way?
o. Handlers only are regulated under its provisions.
. Why cannot the State regulate the metropolitan New York milk rket without the assistance of the Federal Government?
ecause the Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that le a State can regulate the handling of milk produced within that te, such regulations cannot apply to milk moving in the current nterstate commerce.
. Who would be directly responsible for the administration of the gram?
The market administrator.

Q. By whom would he be elected?

By the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

Q. What would be his principal duties?

Receiving reports from handlers, computing prices to be paid producers, assuring proper payments to producers, and checking on the accuracy of reports and payments made by handlers.

Q. Is the authority of the market administrator strictly prescribed in the order?

Yes. His duties are definitely stated and the scope of his work clearly indicated.

Q. How would the expense in connection with the administrator's office be met?

By an assessment on handlers of not more than 2 cents per 3679 hundredweight of milk utilized in classes I, II–A, and II-B under the terms of the order.

Q. Would this assessment be made as a deduction from producers' checks?

No. It would be paid by handlers in addition to the price paid producers as fixed in the order.

Q. What provision has been made for violations?

Specific procedure for enforcement of the program in the courts is provided for under the Federal and State laws.

Q. Would the market administrator be placed under bond?

Yes. For protection against losses through possible irregularity, he is required to furnish bond commensurate with his financial responsibility.

Q. Under what authority do State and Federal agencies act in exercising regulation in the milk industry?

Laws passed by the Legislature of the State of New York and the Congress of the United States.

Q. Just which laws?

The New York State Rogers-Allen Act and the Federal Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937.

Q. Have there been other attempts by the State of New York to regulate the New York milk market?

Yes. The latest attempt terminated in March 1937 because the State regulations could not apply to milk shipped in from other States.

Q. How would the Federal order overcome the problem which the State encountered in dealing with milk which moves in interstate commerce?

By complementing the State order and thus providing a complete program under which intrastate and interstate milk will be subject to identical regulations.

Q. How may the present provisions of the program be changed?

They are subject to modification by amendment, suspension, or termination in accordance with the provisions of the respective State and Federal Acts.

Q. Can producers secure termination of the order?

Yes; at the request of producers of more than 50 per cent of the milk.

Q. Is the plan established by the order an experiment?

No. The basic features of the plan are those which have developed out of approximately 25 years of cooperative marketing experience.

Q. How does the program tend to increase the purchasing power of producers?

In two ways: First, by establishing minimum producer prices which are in line with market conditions for each class of milk according to its use; and second, by requiring that not less than such minimum prices be paid for all milk received from producers by handlers under the order.

Q. Why does the order provide that milk be classified on the basis of its use?

Because that method is generally recognized as the only fair basis on which milk should be purchased.

Q. What assurance is there that milk sold to handlers under the order will be properly classified?

The market administrator is required to verify all reports received from handlers as one of his duties in administering the program. Handlers must make available to the market administrator all records and facilities so that a complete check may be made on these reports which show receipts and utilization of milk delivered by producers at handlers' plants.

Q. Why does the order provide for so many classes of milk?

To enable producers to receive the highest return from milk according to the use which handlers make of it.

Q. Does the program throw open the metropolitan New York market to milk produced anywhere in the United States?

No. As in the past, the health departments in the area must approve or reject plants supplying milk to the market. The program merely provides for the pricing of milk delivered by producers to plants approved by the health authorities.

Q. Are producers required to control the production of milk under the order?

No. Under the laws provided for issuance of State and Federal orders, there are no provisions for production control.

Q. To what extent will producers receive a uniform price for milk?

Milk of the same quality produced in the same mileage zone and sold to handlers for sale in the marketing area will command the same price.

Q. How will producers shipping the same quality of milk under similar conditions share in the benefits of the fluid milk market?

They will share equally in such benefits through the operation of a market-wide pool which makes it possible for handlers to pay producers on the basis of all fluid milk sales in the market.

Q. How is the burden of surplus in the market shared among producers?

Producers will share equitably in the burden of surplus milk in the market also through the operation of a market-wide pool.

Q. Would dealers be prohibited from paying producers more for milk than the minimum price to producers as computed under the order?

No. The prices established are minimum prices and dealers may pay their producers more than the order requires.

Q. Under the provisions of the order, is the producer permitted to sell his milk where he pleases?

Yes. The responsibility for selling his milk remains entirely with the producer.

Q. Are resale prices established under the order?

No. Neither the State nor Federal order provides for establishment of resale prices. Such prices are left to be fixed by the forces of competition.

Q. To what extent does the order prevent a minority group of handlers from destroying the general marketing program?

The order applies alike to every handler who receives milk from producers at plants approved by any health authority for the receiving of milk to be sold in the marketing area.

Q. How does the program affect cooperatives?

It is intended to supplement and strengthen the position of cooperatives in the market.

Q. Have the interests of the consumer been considered in the development of the program?

Yes. Under the law consideration must be given to the interests of consumers. A stabilized market safeguards the interests of consumers and assures an adequate supply of wholesome milk which can be sold at prices reasonable to consumers.

Q. Can the Federal-State program greatly help the dairy industry without the cooperation of that industry?

No. The policy of Government is to help the industry to help itself.

THIS MARKETING ORDER IS NOT VOTED IN WE WILL BE THROWN BACK 50 YEARS.

"To Dairymen of the New York Milk Shed:

"The chaotic condition of the metropolitan market has for many years been the great discouraging element in the lives of all dairymen in the Empire State especially.

"For a little more than a year there has been an attempt to bring order out of chaos through the opportunity afforded by the so-called Rogers-Allen Law.

"In this situation, through the cooperation of the Cooperative groups in New York and adjoining states with the Department of griculture the Federal Marketing Order has been prepared. The airymen are to vote on this order in a few days. The effect of this rder if adopted will be to guarantee a reasonable price to the Dairy- en of the New York Milk Shed for their milk.

"From my personal observation and study of conditions it is my m conviction that if this marketing order is not voted in we will thrown back fifty years in our marketing of milk or we may be ed with the proposition of milk being made a public utility. We ir men cannot afford to contemplate either of these results, so let vote for the Federal marketing order and save our business."

—Raymond Cooper, Master New York State Grange.

DO NOT BE LED ASTRAY BY DEALER PROMISES

o PRODUCERS IN THE NEW YORK METROPOLITAN MILK SHED:

"On August 19 and 20, producers will vote and decide whether ey want to use the full powers intended under the Rogers-Allen w to secure for themselves a living price for milk. It must be nembered that the Rogers-Allen Law is a permissive law and pro- cers themselves decide what shall be done under it. Producers , if they will, control their prices or they can let the dealers ntrol, with resulting ruinous prices, as they have in the past.

"My statement of last year still holds and I call your attention to now. I urge all producers to vote for the Federal-State Order, d thus prove to the public that, through real cooperation, they win. By adopting this Order, producers will make use of all the power that their Governments intended they might have if y so wished.

"Knowing producers as I do, I am confident they will not be led ray by dealer promises or propaganda at this time but will vote producer control of prices and a better living for all farm folk."

—George F. Rogers.

IRYMEN'S LEAGUE NEWS—NEW YORK, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 20, 1938

PRODUCERS READY TO DIVERT MILK FROM NONCOMPLYING DEALERS

ague Gets Vote of Thanks From Bargaining Agency for Its Offer of Marketing Facilities

Volunteer enforcement agents—100 strong—were riding the roads t week explaining to farmers how they could convince recalcitrant tropolitan milk handlers of the advantages of complying with the by obeying the rules and regulations of the new federal-state lk marketing program.

This action followed a meeting of delegates of the Metropolitan operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency in Syracuse September 10. The delegates voted to have 100 farmers go out as volunteer enforcement agents to "crack down" on dealers who have not signed the marketing agreement. They were to explain to producers delivering to such dealers that they could divert their milk and not lose money. Such diversion it was believed would quickly bring the few New York holdouts into line.

Delegates of the Producers' Agency gave a rising vote of thanks to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association for its generous offer to make plant and sales department facilities available to handle 5,000 cans of diverted milk daily.

Harmon and Gaynor Address Meeting

Decision to organize the squad of volunteer enforcement agents followed speeches by E. M. Harmon, Market Administrator, and E. M. Gaynor, personal representative of Holton V. Noyes, Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

Mr. Harmon told the farmers that the rules and regulations of the new marketing program are laid down in the order voted into effect by farmers, and that he intends to administer them without fear or favor.

Despite harnessing of federal and state government forces to combat farmers' milk price problems, said Mr. Harmon, producers' cooperative organizations shall continue to be the most powerful factor in obtaining favorable prices. He urged farmers to perfect their organizations, and said that if they were properly united there would be no need for a market administrator.

In a spirited speech Mr. Gaynor told the dairymen that they "need not think about dealers for two minutes." He explained the 3694 provisions for diverting milk from dealers who fail to comply with the regulations. The Dairymen's League plants are open—and others too," said Mr. Gaynor. "Call me up, I'll tell you where to put the milk. You won't have to divert very long before these dealers will be ready to sign up."

Dr. A. C. Dahlberg, of the Geneva Experiment Station, told the dairymen of work being carried on to develop new outlets for milk, particularly cheese and industrial products.

C. E. Ladd, Dean of the Cornell Agricultural College, also addressed the meeting and urged that action be taken toward obtaining government assistance to carry on research work to find new industrial uses for milk.

Action was taken by resolution on that subject, and also requesting a $2,000,000 appropriation by the New York state legislature to fight Bangs disease.

E. R. Eastman, editor of the American Agriculturist, addressed the meeting.

Ask Funds for Research

Following is the resolution asking funds with which to intensify search at Geneva:

"WHEREAS the dairy farmers of the New York Metropolitan ilkshed have, through the cooperative associations, developed a sur-us control plan; and

"WHEREAS the producers have overwhelmingly voted to put this an into effect by the adoption of a Federal-State Milk Marketing rder; and

"WHEREAS surplus market milk of high quality is now being held the country and is there being manufactured into dairy products; nd

"WHEREAS the New York State Agricultural Experiment Sta-ons at Ithaca and Geneva have proven that superior products can e made from high quality milk and these stations have already de-eloped new methods of manufacturing and found new uses for dairy products; and

"WHEREAS at Geneva there are studies being carried on that offer romises which, if successful, should be of great financial benefit to e producers of market milk; and

"WHEREAS there is need for more intensive study along this ne:

"BE IT RESOLVED, that we firmly believe that the services of ur scientists should be used to the fullest possible extent, and that as r as practicable, the results of their studies should be used for the nefits of the producers of New York State.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we, the representatives of e cooperatives making up the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Pro-ucers Bargaining Agency go on record as commending the scientists nd research workers who are working in our behalf and pledge our pport and appreciation; and

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we go on record as favor-g an appropriation on the part of the State Government of $10,000 r the Dairy Department of the New York State Agricultural Ex-eriment Station at Geneva for more intensive work on new and nproved uses of dairy products.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the purposes of this resolu-on be explained by the Executive Committee to other dairy and rm organizations and that their support be solicited and that copies f this resolution be sent at the proper time to the authorities directly sponsible for putting the purpose of this resolution into effect."

393 OFFICIAL VOTE ON N. Y. C. ORDER MADE PUBLIC

The final and official results of balloting on the federal and state rders for fixing milk prices in New York City were made public by lbany and Washington last week. On the state order 86.8 per cent oted "yes" and on the federal order 87.6 per cent voted "yes."

Total State Ballots 35,596

In announcing the results on the state order, Commissioner Holton V. Noyes, of the Department of Agriculture and Markets, said:

"Exclusive of rejected votes, a total of 29,883 votes were cast on the state order. Of these, 25,935, or 86.8 per cent, were in favor and 3,948, or 13.2 per cent, were opposed.

"Out of a total vote of 35,596, a total of 5,713 votes were rejected. The principal ground for rejecting ballots was that they were 3694 cast by producers who are members of cooperative associations which voted collectively for all of their members. Many additional ballots were rejected because they were cast by producers whose milk was not being delivered to plants approved by any health authority having jurisdiction in the marketing area, or because the voting producer's name did not appear on the list of producers delivering to an approved plant.

"Other ballots were rejected because they were not completely filled out, and in many of these instances the intent of the voter could not be determined. The intent of the voter could be determined, however, in the case of 5,376 ballots which were disallowed for the reasons mentioned. Of these 5,376 ballots disallowed, 77 per cent of the voters favored the adoption of the order.

Commissioner Noyes expressed the conviction that even though no cooperatives had insisted on voting as units, as the statute permits, and had the members of such cooperatives voted individually, more than the required 75 per cent would have voted in favor of the state order.

On the federal order, total number of votes cast was 45,644, according to an announcement by the Triple A Office at Washington. Out of this number 7,017 were rejected because of practically the same reasons given for rejections of votes on the state order.

The total number of the valid votes on the federal order was 38,627. 33,663 voted "yes" and 4,964 voted "no." The total number of ballots voted by cooperatives was 24,903, with 24,589 voting "yes" and 314 voting "no." The total number of individual votes was 13,724, with 9,083 voting "yes" and 4,641 voting "no."

The ballot on the federal order through the milk shed was tabulated according to the plant to which the delivery was made, rather than by residence. In this way producers in the seven northeastern states were able to vote at any polling place. They could even go from one state to another to vote if necessary.

90 PER CENT OF N. Y. C. MILK SIGNED UP BY DEALERS

York Producers and Dealers Set Up New Record, Says AAA Official

lilk dealers representing approximately 90 per cent of the milk in the New York City area have signed the federal marketing ement. This fact was confirmed by announcements made at the of last week by the Dairy Section of the Agricultural Adjustment inistration and the New York office of Wellington J. Griffith, Jr., ctor of the recent producer referendum.

. C. Treat, secretary of the New York Metropolitan Cooperative k Producers Bargaining Agency, made the prediction in Syracuse all the larger dealers would be signed up by the end of last week. ept for a few small handlers, Mr. Treat predicted the sign-up ld be almost 100 per cent. None of these smaller dealers handle e than 50 or 75 cans a day and practically all of them are in the t buyers" class, he said.

Ir. Treat also reiterated a former statement made by the Bargain- Agency to the effect that the squad of 100 producer volunteers e still on duty in the milk shed and that shipments of milk would iverted from those buyers who declined to pay full prices as called by the order or who might attempt through court action to obstruct inistration of the order.

Washington officials hailed the signing of the agreement by dealers. R. Tolley, administrator of the AAA, said that the handlers' action encing cooperation between producers and distributors enhanced possibilities for effectiveness of the marketing program. He ed that this was the first instance in which a marketing agreement a large metropolitan market where an order also is in effect, had n signed by handlers representing such a large percentage of the ket.

Ir. Tolley said: "The federal program requested and approved by ducers and their representatives supplying milk to the New York ket was developed by the AAA Dairy Section under the direction Mr. Gaumnitz and was made possible largely by the efforts and cooperation of producer cooperative associations."

E. W. Gaumnitz, chief of the AAA Dairy Section, said: "Co- operation by producers and handlers with state and federal governments is essential to end chaos that has existed in the stry and to stabilize marketing conditions for the benefit of pro- ers, handlers, and consumers."

NEW YORK MARKET STABILITY THREATENED BY PRICE CUTS

Some Dealers Bid for Store Trade by Lowering Prices Three Fourths of a Cent Per Quart—Farmers Have Power to Halt Destructive Practice

A threat to stability of the New York City milk market exists in the low prices at which some distributors are selling milk to stores.

To meet prices established under the federal-state milk marketing order milk should sell to stores at 9¾ cents per quart. A good many dealers are selling at 9 cents and soliciting new business. It is the old price cutting trick to build up volume. Various producer groups are beginning to worry as to how they are going to obtain full payment for their milk, while dealers insist on selling at reduced prices. To pay established prices, pay for full butter fat content and all other charges, 9¾ cents is figured as the absolute minimum at which handlers can sell milk to stores and make full payment to producers.

There is apprehension in some quarters as to what this situation may lead to in the future. If history repeats itself, and it usually does, further price cutting may be expected. Some day some dealer who loses business to one of the price cutters will lower his selling price below the quotation of his rival. It takes only a few such instances to launch a wave of price cutting and soon the foundation has been knocked from under the price structure.

Remedy for the present condition is in the hands of the producers supplying handlers who are trying to wreck the market. By insisting that they receive full payment for all of their milk in accord with all of the regulations of the federal-state program, they can make it practically impossible for dealers to destroy their market.

THE SHEFFIELD PRODUCER—NOVEMBER 1938

MINUTES OF DIRECTORS' MEETINGS

Minutes of Special Full Board Meeting, Held in New York October 31, 1938

Meeting called to order by President Cronk at 9:45 A. M. Roll Call. All directors present. Mr. Cronk reported on a meeting called by the Research Council, at which the members of the council discussed ways and means of assisting in the enforcement of the Order. He also reported on a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Producers' Association held on October 19, at which the matter of payment for September milk was fully taken up.

It was moved by Mr. Selleck and seconded by Mr. Lamb that the following resolution be adopted:

Whereas by the items of agreement entered into on the 30th day of August 1938, which agreement is supplementary to a contract made prior thereto on the 30th day of August 1938, this association agreed to pay to the Company for certain services to be rendered by the Company, 2c per cwt. for all milk sold to the Company during the month of September 1938, subject, however, and conditioned upon the approval of the Federal and State authorities; and

Whereas the portion of said contract above referred to has been disapproved by the Federal and State authorities having in charge the enforcement of the Milk Marketing Order:

Resolved, that in compliance with the recommendations of the Federal and State authorities, the Association void so much of said contract as is referred to above; and further

Resolved, that the claims of the Company for services rendered under the said contract be rejected. Unanimously carried.

It was agreed by the Board that the publication of The Sheffield Producer be held up until after the announcement of the market pool price by the Administrator.

There was considerable discussion by the Board in regard to making deductions from our members checks for our own cooperative expenses or for our payment of dues to the Bargaining Agency. Neither deduction was made from the September milk payments.

The contract between the Association and Sheffield Farms Company for the sale of October milk was read by Mr. Cook and discussed by the Board, particularly that clause in the propose contract which limited the Company's purchases to their needs, following which the contract was rewritten.

Sheffield Farms Company, represented by Messrs. Wellwood, Crowley, Halsey, Daly, Judge Pyrke, and Dr. Roberts, entered the meeting at 12 noon.

Dr. Roberts gave figures which indicated a drop in Sheffield Farms ceipts of over 2,000 cans per day from October 15 to October 31. he production per dairy per day on October 15 was 218 lbs., against 6 for the same d te in 1937. These figures, however, are not comrable on account of the strike which was in effect a year ago in tober. Dr. Bond, of Cornell, reports a nine to ten pound per day r dairy increase for September 1938 over September 1937. It was so pointed out that over 400 cans of milk per day had been manutured into butter by the company during the month of October.

The meeting was adjourned until 2:30 P. M., at which time the ard reconvened.

Mr. Williams gave a detailed report of the meeting of the committe of directors Williams, Smith, and Lamb with the Federal authoris in Washington, at which time was explained our reasons why we lieve our association should be qualified as a bargaining cooperative der the Order. Mr. Williams also reported that the committee had inted out to the men in Washington what our association had done the past regarding returns to our producers.

Moved by Mr. Lamb, seconded by Williams, that we accept the conct as drawn for the sale of October milk and that we authorize the sident to sign the same in behalf of the association. Unanimously rried.

Meeting adjourned.

Minutes of Regular Meeting of Full Board, November 15, 1938.

Meeting called to order at 9:45 A. M. All directors present. The nutes of the meeting of October 31, 1938, were read and approved. e Secretary reported on a meeting with Messrs. Loomis and Fee in bany as to the classification of our cooperative under the Order. Mr. Rolfe reported on a meeting in Mr. Harmon's office in regard the same matter. He stated that at that meeting he took the poion that there was great danger in withholding cooperative payents from a great number of the co-ops, whose activities were instrutal in the formation of the Bargaining Agency and the favorable e of all producers for the joint Federal and State Order.

Mr. Rolfe told the Board that there was to be a meeting in a few ys, probably Thursday of this week, in New York City, between a mmittee of our association and representatives of the Commissioner d the Secretary, at which time a final determination as to our classiation under the order would be made.

It was suggested by Mr. Rolfe that the committee of directors illiams, Lamb, and Smith be enlarged for this meeting. It was ved, seconded, and unanimously carried that Directors Kinney, lfe, and Ceas be added to the above committee.

Moved by Mr. Kinney, seconded by Mr. Carlson, that we direct the effield Farms Company to deduct ½ cent per cwt. from the payments to members of our association for October milk for the expenses of the association.

Unanimously carried.

Motion made and carried electing Mr. Rolfe as director of the bargaining agency for our association. Mr. Williams was elected to act as our delegate to the Bargaining Agency for the coming year, with Mr. Kinney as alternate.

Mr. Cronk called for discussion by the Board of the price we should receive for that portion of our October milk not covered by the Order. He also suggested that due to the fact that our association finds itself faced with an increasing number of problems, more time should be devoted by the directors to association affairs than had been in the past.

Sheffield Farms Company entered the meeting at 12:15, represented by Messrs. Wellwood, Reynolds, Crowley, Halsey, Daly, Drs. Corbin and Roberts, and Judge Pyrke. It was pointed out by Mr. Wellwood that the latest available figures for September 1938 revealed a decrease in milk consumption in the New York area of 4.8%, or over 4,000,000 quarts. Also, a decrease in cream consumption of 19.9%. The question of irregularities in the sale of fresh and storage cream during the month of September by some dealers was considered. It was also announced that the purchase of surplus milk by the surplus Commodities Corporation for the month of November was aiding considerably in stabilizing the price.

Sheffield Farms Company stated that some attention should be directed toward amending the Order to provide diversions of milk to butter manufacturing plants for more months of the year. They stated that unless this was done that they would be forced to cut to a considerable extent their purchases of surplus milk.

There was also some discussion as to the activity of the Mayor's committee in regard to its investigation into the cost of distributing milk in N. Y. City; also, its movements toward the elimination of the grading principle of milk. Dr. Roberts report on total receipts showed an increase of more than 2,500 cans per day over a year ago, and production per dairy per day showed an increase of 25 pounds over last year. Again it was pointed out that these figures were not comparable on account of the 1937 strike.

It was stated that wholesale prices to stores had been held very generally to nine to 9¼ cents per quart during the past month.

Dr. Corbin asked Pres. Cronk to designate a committee of directors to work with the Company to consider the Grade A problem.

A market pool price for the New York area of $1.91 per cwt. was announced. Negotiations were then started toward fixing a price for the 12.8% of our October milk which was not priced under the Order. Meeting was adjourned until 3:30 P. M. At which time the Board reconvened.

Moved by Mr. Rolfe, seconded by Shaul, and unanimously carried that a committee of three be appointed to work out plans for the future development of the association. Directors Kinney, Burditt, and Shaul were appointed by Pres. Cronk.

Moved by Rolfe, seconded by Shaul, and unanimously carried that a Ways and Means committee of two be appointed to act upon suggestions presented by the Plan and Scope committee, and directors Williams and Ceas were appointed to act on this committee.

Moved by Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Lamb, and carried that we adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved, That this Board declares as a matter of policy:

1. That it will support the movement of surplus milk and cream from Sheffield country plants to Cooperative Associations which have offered and have been recognized as possessing the facilities for handling surplus.

2. That it will forthwith prepare to strengthen and protect established Grade A milk production and sales.

3. That it will initiate proceedings for the Amendment of the Federal and State Order to increase the period during which milk may be diverted from fluid plants to butter manufacture.

After a long discussion, considering the price to be negotiated for that portion of our milk which is not priced by the Order, it was moved, seconded, and carried that a price of $1.88 per cwt. be agreed upon for October milk, from which price shall be deducted one-half cent to provide for the publicity tax for the month of September and October and one-half cent to be deducted for association expenses, netting the producer $1.87 for October milk.

A contract for the sale of November milk was entered into between the company and the association and was signed by both parties.

Meeting adjourned at 5:30 P. M.

SEPTEMBER 20, 1938.

ANDLERS IN NEW YORK MILKSHED APPROVE MARKETING AGREEMENT

he Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced today 51 handlers, representing about 85 percent of the milk supplied y to the New York metropolitan market, have signed a Federal keting agreement. The agreement parallels the terms of the eral and New York marketing orders which became effective
September 1.

H. R. Tolley, Administrator of the A. A. A., said today that the handlers' action, evidencing cooperation between producers and distributors, enhanced the possibilities for effectiveness of the marketing program. He said this is the first instance in which a marketing agreement for a large metropolitan market, where an order also is in effect, has been signed by handlers representing such a large percentage of the market.

"Cooperation by producers and handlers with the State and Federal Governments is essential to end chaos that has existed in the industry and to stabilize marketing conditions for the benefit of producers, handlers, and consumers." E. W. Gaumnitz, chief of the A. A. A. Dairy Section, said.

A federal marketing program under the 1937 Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act can be put into operation if approved by at least two-thirds of producers, by number or volume, and with Presidential approval. The Federal order for the New York program received Presidential approval as well as the necessary pro-3776 ducer approval required by the Federal statute. A Federal marketing program can likewise be put into effect when at least two-thirds of producers supplying the market approve a Federal order, and handlers of 50 percent of the volume of milk delivered to the market sign a Federal agreement approved and signed by the Secretary of Agriculture. The marketing agreement has been approved by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. With the approval of the agreement, both requirements, either one of which is sufficient to make an order effective, have been met.

Mr. Tolley also announced final results of the producers' referendum which had been required to put the order into effect September 1. "The Federal program," Mr. Tolley said, "requested and approved by producers and their representatives supplying milk to the New York market, was developed by the A. A. A. Dairy Section, under the direction of Mr. Gaumnitz, and was made possible largely by the efforts and full cooperation of producer cooperative associations."

The referendum was held August 15, 18, 19, and 20 among dairymen in New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Maryland who deliver milk to plants qualified by health authorities to ship milk into the New York marketing area. Of the 38,627 valid votes cast, 33,663, or 87.1 percent, were in favor of the Federal order.

Results of the vote on the Federal order in the New York referendum compiled by Wellington Griffith, Jr., who was designated by Secretary Wallace as referendum polling officer, are as follows:

Total vote cast, 45,644 (including votes of the members of the cooperatives approved for casting a ballot for their membership).

Ballots rejected as invalid, 7,017 (unsigned, omitted plant names, failed to indicate "yes" or "no" or written with both "yes" and "no."

ecause the individual voted after having been voted by this erative):

Valid votes, 38,627; "yes" 33,663; "no" 4,964.

Votes of members of cooperatives which cast single ballots for their members who supply milk to the New York market, 3; "yes," 24,580; "no," 323.

tal individual votes, 13,724; "yes," 9,083; "no," 4,641.

e vote on the Federal order used throughout the milkshed was ated according to the plants to which delivery was made, rather by the State residence of producers. Producers in the seven eastern States were able to vote at any polling place.

tes in the referendum were cast in polling booths so that the of the farmer to vote as he decided was fully protected. Polling s were located in places most easily accessible and during hours convenient to the bulk of the farmers, and the voting was super- by local committees.

ballots were signed by dairymen voters so that votes could be ed by checking the names on the ballots with the names of dairy- delivering milk to the country plants in the milkshed supplying ew York market. Mr. Griffith and a New York State polling and officials of the New York Department of Agriculture and e were in charge of counting the ballots in Albany, New York, they verified the votes.

proval by 75 percent of the dairymen in New York who voted referendum is required by the Rogers-Allen Act (New York eting law) to make the State order effective. More than 75 per- f New York dairymen who voted in the referendum approved tate order, as announced by New York officials recently. The order implements the Federal order as far as intrastate milk ents are concerned.

K MARKETING ORDER PROPOSAL SUBMITTED TO NEW YORK INDUSTRY

notice giving producers, handlers, and other interested parties opportunity to file arguments for or against a proposed marketing ement program to regulate the handling of milk in the Metro- tan New York marketing area was signed today by Acting Secre- of Agriculture M. L. Wilson, the Agricultural Adjustment inistration announced.

he notice requires seven copies of written arguments to be filed the Hearing Clerk, Room 0318, South Building, United States artment of Agriculture Washington, D. C., not later than August postmarked not later than August 1.

the request of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' gaining Agency, Inc., an organization of more than 100 coopera- claiming 43,000 producer members, hearings were conducted ly by the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York Commis- r of Agriculture and Markets during the period from May 16 ugh June 7. Provisions of the marketing agreement program, tter with findings, were prepared following these hearings.

her study of the written arguments filed by interested parties, ion will be made as to whether a marketing agreement will be tively approved by the Secretary and an order issued which will. by the provisions of the agreement. Before the program can go effect it must be approved by at least two-thirds of the producers, by number or by volume of milk.

Main points of the provisions of the marketing agreement program on which arguments are to be filed govern:

The establishment of minimum prices which handlers would uired to pay producers for each class of milk; (2) the classifica- f milk received from producers at the handlers' plant into nine s according to the form in which it is on hand or leaves such ; (3) the establishment of a method for making payments to ers and the use of a market-wide pool plan to assure producers share of the fluid milk market; and (4) the selection of a market istrator to administer the program.

imum prices to producers for each class of milk would be set up the marketing program by a flexible method prescribed to give ition to seasonal changes in production and variations in ge-eral economic conditions. The Class I or fluid milk price, under this method contained in the program, would vary from the season of flush production to the season when milk production is short, depending upon the range of butter prices in the New York market. Using the 201–210 mile zone as a basis for calculation, the price paid producers in other zones for their milk varies with the freight differential from New York City to their respective areas.

For Class I milk in the 201–210 mile zone, the schedule sets $2.5 per hundredweight for milk (if the price of butter is between 30 and 39.9 cents a pound) for the months August through March, and $2.9 per hundredweight (if the price of butter is between 25 and 34.9 cents a pound) for the months of April through July.

From this starting point, the Class I milk price moves up another 20 cents per hundredweight if the price of butter rises about 39.9 cents a pound, and 20 cents additional each time there is an additional increase of more than five cents from the original starting point. In other words, an increase of more than 10 cents above 39.9 cents a 3782 pound would mean an increase of 40 cents per hundredweight; an increase of more than 15 cents would mean an increase of 60 cents per hundredweight, and so on. There would be a corresponding decrease for each decrease below 30 cents per pound. For example, if the provisions of the order were effective August 1 and butter prices were between 25 and 29.9 cents, the Class I milk price for August would be $2.45 per 100 pounds.

Under the program handlers would be required to file with the market administrator periodic reports showing their purchases, utilization of milk received from producers, and payments made. These reports would be subject to verification by the market administrator, who could examine and audit books and accounts of handlers.

A provision of the order would require handlers to bear the cost of administering the program, each handler paying not more than two cents per hundredweight of Class I (fluid milk), Class 2 (fluid cream use), and Class 2b (plain condensed milk or homogenized milk) sold in the marketing area.

The marketing program defines the New York metropolitan marketing area as the City of New York, and the counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester, all in the State of New York. Between 60,000 and 70,000 dairymen in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Vermont produce milk for the New York metropolitan area. About one out of every three pounds of milk received in the New York market is shipped in from outside the State.

An average of approximately 13,000,000 pounds of milk is delivered daily by producers to plants qualified by New York City health authorities. About half of this volume of milk is shipped to the marketing area in fluid form, the remainder being manufactured into cream and other dairy products for the market.

Twenty years ago dairy farmers producing milk for the New York market organized cooperatives to get better prices and improve mart conditions. Flat price selling to distributors was replaced in a sector of the market in 1921 with pricing according to use.

38 New York passed a state milk control act in 1933, the first of its kind in the United States, to supplement farmers' cooptive efforts. This law was upheld by the United States Supreme urt, but the legislation did not operate to the satisfaction of most oducers, because distributors obtained milk supplies from outside e state. Price of this milk from outside the State was not ntrolled by the State law.

An act, known at the Rogers-Allen Act, authorizing cooperative ociations of producers to bargain collectively with milk distribus, was adopted in 1937 to replace the state control law.

The Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency en was organized to utilize the regulatory and bargaining features the Act. The measure permits the New York State Commisner of Agriculture and Markets to issue orders under certain nditions if the bargaining system fails to produce satisfactory ults. A number of New York milk distributors do business with e agency, but many buy at their own prices from producers.

The orders issued under the Rogers-Allen Act may fix prices paid dairymen by distributors in the State of New York, but do not ply to dairymen in the milkshed outside the state. According to oducers, the aid of the Federal Government is necessary to regue the orderly marketing of milk from outside the State.

Consequently, producers have asked the help of the federal govnment in regulating the handling of milk coming into the New rk market from outside the state. Provisions of the Federal milk rketing order would complement a similar order which would issued by the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and rkets.

Testimony at the hearings in May and June showed that during latter part of May milk prices to producers ranged from $1.30 to 70 per hundredweight. Since then prices paid dairymen have hit low levels, many producers receiving a June price below $1 per ndred pounds of milk.

RODUCTORY STATEMENT BY COMMISSIONER HOLTON V. NOYES OF THE NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND MARKETS

This hearing, and others to be held throughout the State this week, cerns a proposed plan for the establishment of State and Federal trol over milk prices to be paid to producers supplying the tropolitan New York market.

The plan has been prepared by representatives of the dairy indus in this State, in consultation with representatives of the Federal d State Departments of Agriculture. Utilizing the provisions the National Agricultural Adjustment Act and our own State

Rogers-Allen law, it is proposed in this plan to coordinate the authority of both governments to establish minimum prices to be paid producers for all milk approved for sale in this market and which originates within or without the State.

Neither the Federal nor State government can assume the control proposed to be set up in this plan unless, and until, it has been favorably voted upon by at least a majority of the producers concerned. The detailed provisions of the Federal law require that at least sixty-six and two-thirds per cent of producers vote favorably, while our State law requires seventy-five per cent.

It is possible under the law for cooperative associations to cast the vote of their entire membership by action of the officers and directors alone on this question. I have, however, repeatedly warned in public statements that it would be, in my opinion, a mistake for cooperative associations to cast their votes in this manner. My reason for this attitude is that no law, rule, or regulation ever has been effective in operation unless it had majority support favorable to it and popularly expressed.

This plan, however meritorious its advocates say it is, or however bad its opponents claim it to be, should not be put into operation without an individual vote by every dairyman concerned. The question directly concerns his business and his future, and he, alone, should decide by his vote what he wants to do about it. The question is too important for any group to presume to express anyone's attitude toward it by collective rather than individual action, although the law may specifically permit this.

This and other hearings provide an opportunity for full discussion of this plan. You are invited to say how, and in what way, the proposal should be changed to make it more satisfactory and effective. If you oppose it in any form, you are to feel free to say so. When these hearings are completed, all testimony will be reviewed. Suggested changes developed at these hearings to make the orders more equitable and more likely of success will be incorporated in the final form, which will be submitted to our dairymen for approval or rejection.

3785 I feel it my duty at this time to point out also that if this form of control is authorized by the dairymen the cost of its administration must be paid by them. No provision in either the State or Federal law exists for defraying its expense out of government funds. The salary of the market administrator, his assistants, and such machinery as may be necessary to make the control effective must be paid by deductions from producers' checks under the State order and by distributors under the Federal order.

The control set up by this plan extends only to producer prices. In this respect it differs from the State control act, which fixed prices to producers and to consumers as well. It is intended to equalize producer prices throughout the New York milk shed, subject, of course, to the usual differentials for freight, butterfat, etc. To do this means that those dairymen who have heretofore enjoyed special rketing advantages over other producers will have to pool these rantages for the benefit of all producers. This does not mean, rever, that these producers' return will necessarily be lower as a sequence. Proponents of the plan claim and expect its operation, l raise the general level of all producer prices sufficiently high so t no producer will receive a lower price than he now gets.

bring these matters to the attention of our dairymen as we enter on the discussion of this plan so that there may be no future mis-derstanding. After the discussion of all phases of the matter which se hearings provide, I urge each dairyman to consider the question efully, thoughtfully, and with the sole purpose of determining for nself what is best for his own and his industry's interest.

feel it my duty also at this time to repeat what I have said be-e. This plan, or no other, will ever be of lasting or permanent efit to the dairy industry until, and unless, it has the active and cere cooperation of at least a majority of the dairymen who have ividually and willingly voted for it.

Release Tuesday P. M., January 25, 1938

MARKS BY HOLTON V. NOYES, COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE AND MARKETS, AT THE NORTHEASTERN DAIRY CONFERENCE, HARTFORD, CONN., TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1938

The dairy industry of New York is learning to walk all over again. That statement, I believe, quite accurately describes the milk situa-n in the Empire State today. After a four-year period of state gulation, the industry convinced the Legislature and Governor that was able again to take over its own affairs. State regulation was led last April and machinery provided for the resumption of self-ntrol.

During the emergency that provoked state control, prices to pro-cers and consumers were fixed by the state and an attempt made to force them. The effect of this supervision quite naturally encour-ed greater reliance upon government and discouraged individual or up effort by the industry to work out its own solution of its prob-s. This tendency was not peculiar to our state, or to this industry. s the usual result of circumstances of this kind.

After four years of such complete dependence upon the state, it was be expected that abandonment of a policy of control and price-ng necessarily would be temporarily disturbing to the industry, to the least. The only question was how great this disturbance uld become. It could easily be most destructive to the whole price ucture. It could, if it became bad enough, bring the whole indus-down in a tremendous crash. In New York such a result would a catastrophe of the first degree, with our dairy industry, our largest agricultural branch, accounting for approximately one-half of our farm income.

But I am happy to tell you here today that while we feared and expected the worst, we have been pleasantly disappointed. The crash has not come. There was disturbance in prices immediately following the transition. There were times when it seemed that failure was dangerously close. This trend might have continued and resulted in the disaster which we feared if our dairymen had not acted resolutely and with no time to spare, to make the fullest use of the machinery for self-control which the Legislature and Governor had provided.

3787 Organization under this legislation, popularly known as the Rogers-Allen Law, was completed and in full operation about the first of July. From that moment on, the perplexity and uncertainty with which the industry had been groping about to get its bearings began to be displaced by some confidence and hope. Today, several months later, I feel justified in saying that the industry has met and passed this first critical test successfully. It is beginning to walk again, alone and unassisted.

Will this progress continue until the industry again becomes able-bodied and independent, or will it go backward and collapse again upon the doorstep of the capitol at Albany?

The answer to this question can be given only by the industry itself. If it has learned that each of its component groups must play fairly and squarely with each other; if it has realized that internal dissension, distrust, and disagreement lead only to disintegration; if it has sensed that cooperation and good will are vitally necessary to success and they can only be supplied by the industry itself—then I think we may with confidence expect not only happier days for this bedevilled industry but a sounder, more stable and more prosperous condition.

If most of these conditions which I have stated are not met with some degree of completeness, then I fear that instead of this pleasant prospect we shall have a picture as dark as the other outlook is bright.

No one realizes better than I do how difficult it will be to meet all of these conditions. Disorganization, dissension, and distrust have so long been the accepted practice in this industry that they cannot be overcome in a day. Nor can they be changed by individuals acting alone or groups of individuals acting alone. The chore is so big that it needs the help of all individuals and all groups.

But it should be heartening and stimulating to the industry to know that in so far as the government of the State of New York is concerned all of its resources, all of its prestige, and all of its influence can be depended upon to help this industry to help itself.

3788 I appreciate that what we do in New York may greatly influence the destiny of the whole dairy industry of the northeastern states. This responsibility is but another reason why all that we do in dealing with the milk problem should be undertaken in an unselfish and broad-minded spirit that gives equal consideration to producer, tributor, and consumer. This injunction applies equally to governnt and the industry.

f this is our approach to the problem, then the results must be conctive.

TEMENT BY COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE HOLTON V. NOYES OUTINING HIS POSITION REGARDING THE PROPOSED FEDERAL-STATE ORDER

YRACUSE, May 3d—Commissioner Holton V. Noyes, in addressing eral dairy groups at the Drumlin Country Club, Syracuse, Tuesnight, made the following statement of his position regarding the posed federal-state marketing agreement:

No plan of voluntary or arbitrary control of the dairy industry ever be effective, in my opinion, unless it meets three definite irements:

1. It must have at least the majority support of those members of industry over whom the proposed control is to be exercised.

2. It must not favor any particular group or groups at the expense ny other group or groups. By the same sign, no one group or ps should be allowed a determining influence in establishing con- or in destroying it.

3. It must have the active and sincere cooperation of at least a tantial majority of the industry.

In explanation of the first requirement, it has always been my ention that no law can be made to work which does not have the roval of a substantial majority of our citizens. If any law is d upon the statute books without an opportunity for possible ression regarding it, the difficulties of enforcement and the possiies of failure are thereby greatly increased.

know that under provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Adistration Act, under which the proposed control system will be set cooperative associations can vote the whole association member- by decision of the officers and directors only. I realize also that provision is considered by some a justifiable protection of coopives.

t me say here and now that no one is more sympathetic to the s and purposes of cooperative associations than I am. They have ived every possible encouragement from me in private and official They will continue to have my support and interest.

"But in the present instance I have taken the position that it would be most unwise, if not most unfortunate, for any cooperative association in this state to cast the votes of its members n this proposition solely by action of officers and directors, even gh it is permissible to do so by law. The whole question is so fundamental and of so great importance to the welfare of all our dairymen, their families, and their future that I do not believe any association is justified in presuming to express the opinions of its members, at least without an honest referendum among the membership as to their wishes.

"Some leaders of cooperative associations take an opposite view. They contend that allowing individual members to vote upon the proposition itself or to express them by a referendum within the organization would be confession of weakness by the cooperatives and undermine their prestige and influence. I disagree with them. Instead, I insist that a referendum of the membership would have the opposite effect. It would inspire and strengthen the belief of members that their leaders were interested in doing what the majority really wants, rather than doing what officers and directors alone think is best, without regard to individual views.

"The ideal plan, in my opinion, would be for every dairyman in the State of New York to have an opportunity to vote individually upon this question with the same protection of his ballot that he enjoys in selecting the Governor of his State or any other public official. I think his vote upon this matter is no less important.

"But if the leaders of these cooperatives insist that this should not be done, I would feel that any vote registered upon this proposition by officers and directors alone did not represent the true sentiment of the dairymen of this State.

"The least they should do, I feel, is to have an actual poll within the membership on the question. If this is done, then I feel that the actual vote so registered should be the official vote of the membership upon the proposition. I mean by this statement that if an actual poll of the membership shows 70 percent for the proposition and 30 percent against that is the way the vote of the organization should be recorded, only expressed in the actual figures.

"One of the principal weaknesses of some forms of control tried by the industry heretofore has been the suspicion that one 3791 or more particular groups are able, by the size of their membership, to exert a dominant influence upon the action of all dairymen in this State. If the present proposed order offers even the possibility of such suspicion, then I feel it is doubly important that the leadership take such a course that this suspicion can not be justified.

"As no group or groups, or combination of groups, should be allowed dominant influence at the expense of other groups in setting up this control, so I believe that no group or groups should have the power to destroy its control by withdrawal at any time that suits their convenience.

"In other words, in keeping with my idea that this plan should not be enacted in the first place without an individual vote of the membership, so I believe that it should be so interpreted that it cannot also be destroyed without an individual vote of the membership. No group or groups which now favor it as the possible salvation of the iry industry should be allowed the opportunity to throw it aside if ey discover that things are not going to suit them, or that it is not complishing all that they hoped and expected.

"As for the matter of cooperation in an undertaking of this kind, have repeatedly stated in my discussions of the dairy problem that e industry's troubles could be solved without resort to official interrence of any kind, if the members of the industry would show a eater determination to cooperate for their common benefit. Failre of the industry to cooperate prior to 1933 caused the emergency ich necessitated state control. Failure of the industry to cooperate stroyed state control. Failure of the industry to cooperate has paired the effectiveness of the Rogers-Allen law, successor to state ntrol. Failure to cooperate, no matter how high-minded the prinples and purposes of those interested, will cause any plan to fail.

"So, I warn the industry that, unless and until it is willing to give ive and interested cooperation of at least a majority of the indus-, it will be as futile to expect this plan to bring any more lasting ace to New York's troubled dairy industry than the futile plans heretofore tried, most of which were destroyed or impaired by 2 those they were intended to benefit through their failure to cooperate.

"It should be remembered that the request for government control s not originated with us, but with some producer groups in the te. This fact makes it the more imperative that all dairymen have opportunity to express themselves on it by individual vote to determe if all, or at least a substantial majority, want it. No one should asked to assume the great responsibility of such extensive control the dairy industry as this plan would establish without such urance.

"In the event that this plan is approved, I consider it absolutely ential to its success that the administrator be someone of demonated ability and experience, and who is not, or has not been, in any y connected or identified with any dairy group in the State."

MARKS BY H. V. NOYES, COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE AND MARKETS, ON THE WGY FARM FORUM, JULY 8, 1938

Released to morning papers Saturday, July 9, 1938 am again indebted to the generosity of Mr. Markham for the portunity of attending this last meeting of the Farm Forum in the sent studios.

ew York State farmers, who regard WGY as an institution peculy their own, will join me in congratulating the General Electric Company; Mr. Hager, WGY station manager; and the Forum Director, Mr. Markham, on the well deserved promotion to new and more modern studios.

The agriculture of our State has no better friends than these three. For many years programs of WGY have advised, counselled, and informed our progressive farmers of what is going on in the world that directly and indirectly affects their business. I believe that those farmers, who have been most faithful listeners to these programs and have taken advantage of what they heard, will generally be found among the most successful in our State. They believe in and practice that cooperation of which this program is an outstanding example.

In a short time New York farmers must make one of the most momentous decisions in the history of our State. They must decide if our dairy industry is to continue trying to manage its own affairs or whether this responsibility is to be shared with state and federal governments under a marketing agreement. During the hearing on this question many arguments, both for and against, have been presented. Some exception was taken to details of the proposed order for control. These objections, however, have generally been helpful in enabling representatives of both state and federal governments to rewrite the agreement to make it as completely fair to all interests as is possible. Some of the other discussion has been along such general lines that it has not been entirely clear whether it originated in rather undefined prejudice or clearly thought out reasoning.

Much has been said against the general idea of price fixing and many oratorical references have been made to the impossibility of getting away from the great economic law of supply and 3794 demand. Both of these subjects, "Price Fixing" and "The Law of Supply and Demand," lend themselves to demagogic oratory and specious reasoning. The fact is, if you step behind the natural reluctance, which I think we all feel against price fixing, and subject this particular question to the light of investigation, it must be admitted that prices are always fixed by someone. The only question is, who shall be the proper authority to fix prices.

A good many years ago I lost faith in this law of supply and demand, as applied to any ordinary transaction between the farmer and his market. I had a large barn full of good hay in the days before automobiles. When hay was a very substantial and important cash crop for farmers of Central New York. I wanted to sell the entire crop. I baled two carloads and shipped them to commission merchants, one in New York, one in Boston. Both carloads came from the same barn. There was no possible difference in quality. When returns came back from the commission merchants, I received $12.00 per ton for the New York shipment and $28.00 from Boston. Right then and there I lost faith in the law of supply and demand.

The transaction interested me so much that I went to Boston to find out just what happened. I found the shipment was sold as high quality hay to a large merchant in Boston. I actually went with the mission man to this buyer to find out just how satisfactory the had turned out to be. He not only expressed complete satisfac-, but said he would take all of my crop. I sold him the entire nful, making shipments weekly until the entire lot was gone.

frequently asked myself whether the law of supply and demand ked that time in Boston, or in New York. I still wonder! My clusion from that operation, and from a lifetime of observation, hat this much revered law probably does work in a very broad over a series of years, but, so far as direct relations between the York State farmer and his market are concerned, it is seldom mitted to operate without interference.

n our milk industry it is my opinion that there is never any real plus of milk if it is put to proper use. It is also my opinion, after years' experience with the law of supply and demand, as it applies, fails to apply, to this particular industry, that we must look the situation squarely in the face and take such measures as will meet it. These must include assurance that so far as the fluid milk market in the Metropolitan district is concerned, we start n cost of production in determining fair prices to farmers and gnize that to maintain a sufficient milk supply for the fluid market e must always be a surplus. A practical way of disposing of this plus necessarily must be found.

tate milk control, which worked satisfactorily for a time, was dicated upon realization of these facts. But when it was found state control could not be extended legally to interstate milk, the k plan began to fail and finally had to be abandoned. Voluntary stry control under the Rogers-Allen Law replaced state control has been tried during the past year. It has also failed, because as as the flush period arrived each group insisted upon competing inst other groups for a larger share of the fluid market, thereby ressing the price to all, instead of cooperating to share the burden easonal surplus.

hen hearings were held throughout the State by the 1937 Legis-e Committee to determine whether State milk control should be ndoned, I made the statement at the Syracuse meeting that the e milk control law should be strengthened, possibly through co-ration with the federal government to control interstate milk; that tate milk control were abandoned we should promptly find the stry unable to operate its affairs successfully; that this experience ld show some kind of government control, probably state and fed-, as the only course holding any promise of stability or security New York dairymen.

his was long before I had any idea I should ever be in my present tion. I refer to this statement because what I predicted has been ified by events. My conclusion at that time, and my conclusion , is that we must have milk control of some kind. My conclusion , and my conclusion now, is that the only kind of milk control will work is state and federal.

I personally feel an instinctive repugnance against any control, state or federal. But it seems to me that we are up against cold, hard facts that make government control necessary in some form. I am quite willing to call upon government, state and federal, to so regulate this important industry that the interests of producers will be safeguarded insofar as it is necessary and proper for government to protect them.

3796 Under the law I, as Commissioner of Agriculture, am faced with the very grave responsibility of determining whether our producers supplying the Metropolitan market want such federal and state control; whether an emergency exists making it necessary or desirable that such measures be adopted.

As I have said, I am entirely convinced that we should adopt such a control system. But I am not at all convinced that producers generally agree with my views. Under the law I am not justified in proceeding with the establishment of state control until I am convinced that at least a majority want such control.

Unfortunately, the law permits cooperative associations to vote as a unit. This means that any legal cooperative may vote its entire membership solely by action of the Board of Directors, although there may be considerable disagreement on the subject within the membership itself.

To illustrate: Suppose a cooperative has a hundred members, of which fifty favor federal and state control, while fifty are opposed. The Board of Directors of this cooperative can legally, under the law, disregard this difference of opinion in the membership and vote the entire hundred either for or against the measure.

With this collective method of voting by action of the directors I do not believe it possible for me, or anyone else, really to determine the correct collective producer opinion on the question. And you may be assured I shall certainly not assist in establishing either state or federal control unless I am convinced in some definite and accurate manner that producers themselves really want it.

Neither the state nor the federal government will make any move toward the adoption of this control plan without definite assurance that the producers themselves want it and ask for it. Neither government initiated the demand for this control. The farmers themselves have made the demand. But no law or regulation has ever worked in a democracy unless it had the backing of a substantial majority of the citizens. We must, therefore, have assurance that producers want this control before it is adopted, and to make certain it will work after adoption.

The proposed control order is being re-written and about to be published. We believe the new document will correct the 3797 imperfections pointed out at the hearings. We believe that provisions of the new document will be fair to all producers and dealers. When it is submitted to producers for a vote, if dairymen could be individually polled, the result would be a clear mandate to s Department. If the vote is taken collectively through the direcs of cooperatives, I shall be in considerable doubt as to just what means. A vote cast by the latter method would need to be nearly e hundred per cent for or against to be convincing to me.

We, as the people of New York State, elect representatives to the gislature. On any ordinary matters we permit these legislators to ke laws. But on fundamental matters, such as increasing the nded debt or altering the constitution, the Legislature's action must approved by direct vote of all the people.
It seems to me that our milk situation is comparable. The question fundamental. It affects the lives and future of one of our most portant groups. I believe that the vote should be a direct referdum to the producer, and only an individual vote by each producer l accurately reveal the true producer opinion. It seems to me, in w of the very vital importance of the question, that the cooperaes themselves ought to insist on a direct individual referendum.

Albany, July 21.—"Copies of the revised Federal-State Milk Marketing Agreement will be mailed in a few days to all persons, groups, or organizations which appeared officially at hearings on the proposed order," Commissioner Holton V. Noyes of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets said in a statement issued tonight.

"A period of about ten days will then be allowed to submit briefs supporting recommended changes or criticism of the revised document. The federal and state departments of agriculture will study these briefs and make any changes in the order which seem necessary and justified.

"We will, of course, do this as quickly as possible, and it is the hope and expectation of both departments that the final document will be ready to submit to a vote of the dairymen not later than August 15.

"In preparing the final document our one purpose is to make it fair and equitable to every group interested in and concerned with the dairy industry.

"Those who have been critical of the delay in preparing this agreement should consider the complexities of the metropolitan New York market. Every conceivable condition that might arise must be provided for and every possible use of milk must be definitely specified in the order because the market administrator, if the order is adopted, will have no discretionary power. He must administer and enforce the provisions of the agreement as he finds them.

"I repeat what I have said many times, that demand for this proposed Federal and State control came from the dairymen themselves. It did not originate with either government. Neither government, I am sure, wants to undertake such a great responsibility without definite and overwhelming assurance that the dairymen want to transfer price control of milk from the industry itself to the government.

"My opinion, often expressed, is that experience has shown that some form of milk control is necessary and the only control that will work is combined State and Federal. But even that form of control will not succeed without the overwhelming support and cooperation of the dairymen."

JUSTICE FOR MILK PRODUCERS

So much is said, from time to time, about the so-called Law of Supply and Demand, and there is so great an inclination on the part of the public to think that this is some great law of nature which determines the price of most of the necessities of life, that I feel once in a while we should inquire into the general question of just how this law works in actual practice.

Without doubt there is a general relationship between available supply and immediate demand, which, to a certain extent, regulates the price of any commodity. However, in most industries there is no supply if there is no demand. The successful manufacturer produces only what he can sell at a satisfactory price. If he finds this impossible, he shuts down the factory.

The power and light companies, which have the potentiality of an endless supply of electric current available, set the price to their consumers and then produce only as much power as their consumers demand. The same general principle applies to the transportation industry. Transportation for the public or the movement of merchandise is provided at a price set by the operators of these common carriers, subject to approval by quasi-judicial commissions of the state or federal governments. If there is a demand for more transportation, another train is placed in operation. If the demand declines, one or more trains is removed from the schedule.

In many spectacular instances in history, the law of supply and demand has been manipulated in such way that the supply of the necessities of life got into private hands, to the very great detriment of the general public. These were the famous "corners" in wheat and corn, which resulted in enormous fortunes to the certain 3802 individuals or groups of individuals, all at the expense of either the producers of these commodities or the consumers of them.

In general, I think, it is becoming more and more recognized that the law of supply and demand under modern conditions is so susceptible of manipulation that it cannot be left to itself; that there must be regulation, particularly in certain branches of industry, to protect the public interest by offsetting this artificial interference of selfish and interested individuals or companies with the free working of supply and demand.

This, I believe, is true of the dairy industry in particular in this State. Milk is a necessity of life. The milk industry should be so regulated that people living in the cities should always have available an ample supply in the best sanitary condition at a fair and reasonable price.

At the same time, this regulation or control should be such that those who produce milk efficiently are reasonably assured of a decent living from their investment and labor. It should also permit those who distribute milk efficiently to be reasonably assured of a fair return upon capital invested and reimbursement for fair wages paid to those they employ.

Recently the uncontrolled law of supply and demand has been working at its savage worst in this industry. I have on my desk several photographs of store windows in New York City with large advertisements printed on them offering milk of a certain reputable brand at three cents per quart.

We learn from investigations that have been made from time to time that the actual cost of processing and delivering milk is not far from five cents per quart. It is perfectly evident that when it is sold at three cents per quart that is less than cost and is done for some unfair, sinister purpose; perhaps to put some competitor out of business. This would not be a matter of so great concern if it were simply a fight between two dealers. But price cutting inevitably reacts to the disadvantage of the producer who is the least able to suffer this loss and in no way responsible for it.

The attempt on the part of a few dealers to buy cheap milk to carry on a savage fight such as this in the retail market results in a generally much lower price for all milk. During the past several months much more milk in fluid form has been offered for sale in New 3803 York City than the market, under recent economic conditions could absorb. The result has been that the producers who are unorganized and unregulated, are suffering from the lowest prices experienced in many years.

The law of supply and demand has brought the milk producers of New York State very close to ruin. While we have been nearly fifty years trying to find some way to make the law of supply and demand operate to produce its greatest benefits, it is difficult to see where any great progress has been made. One of the purposes of government is to regulate relationships between factors of industries having to do with the necessities of life.

If there were no differences of opinion between people and groups in this world, there would be very little need for government of any sort. The purpose of government is to so govern that the interests of each group are fairly considered and to so regulate the affairs of individuals and groups that the best interests of all groups are served.

When the price of milk gets too low, the farmer cannot simply shut off the supply. When the supply of milk is too little, the farmer cannot, through any immediate action, very greatly increase the supply. Therefore, the source of supply must be so regulated that in periods of shortage there is still enough to supply the needs of the public. In order to insure a proper supply for the public during the shortage period there will always inevitably be a surplus during the flush period.

Milk is a commodity which can be used for purposes other than sale as fluid milk, and the sensible thing, of course, is to remove from the fluid milk market any surplus above needs. This can only be done by a general movement on the part of the farmers, and such united effort is entirely dependent upon organization and cooperation, which are not possible except under government regulation.

It seems to me entirely natural and proper that in such a case as milk the government should take responsibility for enforcing such rules as the industry itself may suggest to cure the evils of uncontrolled operation of the law of supply and demand, providing such rules are fair to all factors of the industry.

I feel very definitely that this is a natural and proper function of government. To me it does not appear like government regulation so much as government cooperation to secure justice throughout the industry.

From Foster Potter, Department of Agriculture and Markets, State Office Building, Albany. Telephone 3–5511, Ext. 207. Holton V. Noyes, Commissioner. Released to morning papers, August 10, 1938.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—Commissioner of Agriculture Holton V. Noyes today made the following statement in urging dairymen to support the proposed Federal milk marketing agreement:

"Milk producers of the New York City milk shed will determine by vote August 18, 19, and 20 whether milk control under State and Federal cooperation shall be adopted.

"Every producer should see that his vote is registered either for or against this very important question.

"I believe that many years of experience point clearly to the necessity of milk control. Particularly the experience of the past several years indicates that State and Federal control is the only form that will work.

"We have been working on the present order for some time. It is necessarily a complicated document. Every possible utilization of milk must be clearly defined and every possible movement of milk from one utilization to another must be foreseen and provided for.

"We believe that the present order is so written that its provisions are fair and reasonable and will assure a satisfactory price to all producers. Under the law, it can be amended later if experience should show the need of change.

"I urge all producers to vote for this order. I am confident that if it is adopted it will stabilize conditions in our milk industry which can not be assured in any other way.

"Neither the State nor Federal government wants to go ahead with this order unless the producers signify clearly by vote that they want it.

"This is no proposition for government regulation. It is a plan by which the industry may secure government cooperation in the enforcement of rules which the industry itself believes to be necessary to the orderly and equitable marketing of milk.

"If the vote is favorable, the order will be put into operation as soon as possible. But the continued cooperation and support of producers will still be necessary to insure success."

I FAVOR THE MARKETING AGREEMENT

(A radio talk over WGY by Holton V. Noyes, Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets)

Many dairymen throughout the state have recently written or called upon me personally asking that I say a final word about the proposed federal-state milk marketing agreement before a vote is taken this week.

I have had but one answer to each of these inquiries. It is my sincere belief that this plan is the only one that holds any possibility of bringing stability, peace, and prosperity to our great dairy industry. For that reason, I earnestly urge and recommend that it be adopted.

This is not a new position with me. For many years I have been personally interested in the production of milk. I have watched intimately the development and expansion of this industry from the restricted business of cheese and butter manufacture to the present extensive fluid operation which embraces seven states.

Prosperity has alternated with distress during this transition. Problems incident to this growth have become matters of great concern, not alone to the industry but to the economic welfare of the state itself.

To deal with them the industry has attempted self-regulation, which failed. State control followed, with equally unsatisfactory results. Its breakdown has been followed by another attempt at self-control that has been no more successful than the previous effort.

Experience has thus shown that none of these forms of regulation is adequate to solve the problems of this industry in its present expanded development. None can hold forth any promise of mastery of the industry's complex problems. None can, in the light of 3806 trial and experience, suggest with any reason the likelihood of sufficient success to insure fair return for labor and capital invested. That, after all, is what every dairyman is entitled to. That is what any plan offered as a remedy for the ills of this industry must provide.

It was from this personal knowledge and experience that I told a joint legislative committee a year and a half ago that some form of control is necessary for this industry; that the only form that could succeed must be combined state and federal regulation.

That declaration was made long before I had any idea of holding my present position. What has happened in the meantime, however has only strengthened the conviction that what I said at that time applies with equal, if not greater, force to our present milk situation.

For several months we have seen this industry struggle along by itself without any semblance of control or regulation. The bargaining provisions for dealer-producer negotiation of price have not been utilized successfully. Every farmer who produces and sells milk knows what this has meant to him better than I or anyone else can tell him. His milk check tells the whole story. He knows that if he must continue to produce and sell milk at present ruinously low prices there can be only one outcome. He must go bankrupt, or go out of business.

He knows now, if he did not know it before, that without control of some kind price-cutting of the most vicious kind is possible by dealers. That the milk his hard labor and money has produced, without control, will be sold at any price to drive a competing dealer of business. That the one who ultimately pays for this price cutting is the farmer himself who is finally paid only what his milk finally sells for after the price cutting is over.

The farmer should also know that this price-cutting with his milk which so greatly harms him does not benefit the consumer. Milk consumption has declined during this price-cutting period of the last three months when milk retailed in some stores at three 807 cents a quart and farmers have received about two cents a quart. Consumers, I am sure, want our farmers to receive a fair price for their milk. That price must be not less than five cents a quart which most studies agree is the average cost of production.

The first essential to milk consumption is purchasing power. Given that, consumers will gladly pay a fair price that will adequately reward the producer and distributor. The greatest gains in consumption in the past three years have been at the period of highest retail price but also at the time of rising purchasing power, according to statistical records.

To each individual dairyman, his own situation under present conditions is disheartening and disastrous. Many farmers will be unable to pay their taxes this fall. Collectively the misfortune and distress of our dairymen present a major economic danger to our whole state because at least half of our farm income is derived from milk and tax revenue in many upstate communities comes principally from farmers' milk checks.

No one has a right to claim and no one should expect that the proposed marketing agreement will cure every evil that now afflicts this industry. But I feel that it can justifiably be maintained that with at least 35% of all milk supplying the metropolitan market coming from other states, any control plan must include federal authority. Only such authority can lawfully be applied to out of state milk. For the 65% produced and delivered within our own state, authority granted to our department under the Rogers-Allen law is adequate. By combining federal and state authority—a procedure now possible under the revised national Agricultural Adjustment Act—the two governmental authorities can be coordinated to bring all milk entering this metropolitan market under equal jurisdiction and control. That is just what the proposed order does.

But despite the apparent advantages of the proposed agreement there are dairymen who honestly and sincerely oppose this plan and who believe its adoption will be unwise. Others may have been in-808 fluenced to such an attitude by misinformation deliberately circulated by elements in the industry who are selfishly interested in seeing the plan defeated and the present chaotic conditions continued. These dairymen, however they have reached their decision, have every right to take such a position and they are entitled to respect for their belief.

They see in the plan further expansion of governmental authority which they believe may lead to dictatorship. I do not share this fear. Government to me is nothing more or less than organized cooperative enterprise itself. Its tremendous power and influence can and should be, in my opinion, utilized to the fullest extent to make our greatest cooperative enterprise, our dairy industry, a success.

As for the possibility of dictatorship, I believe that such a fear is based more upon prejudice and emotion than upon fact. We should remember that under provisions of the Rogers-Allen law only 35 per cent of producers is necessary to terminate the marketing agreement insofar as it applies to intrastate milk. This milk, I have said, constitutes 65 per cent of the whole metropolitan supply. If control is ended over this amount, then control by the federal government over the remaining 35 per cent would be ineffective and would have to be ended.

This means that veto power over the whole plan rests solely in the hands of the dairymen themselves, who can end it at any time they believe it is failing to accomplish its purpose.

Another frequent criticism is that the plan means regimentation of our dairymen. Again I must disagree. The agreement, despite all the authority, influence, and prestige of both federal and state governments, cannot succeed unless at least a majority of the dairymen support it and will give to it their active and wholehearted cooperation. They must themselves approve it. They only can make it succeed by cooperating.

This cooperation is wholly a voluntary matter. It cannot be compelled by any official edict or law. As the heading "marketing agreement" indicates, the whole plan is based upon willingness to 3809 unite. Therefore, if there is to be any so-called regimentation, it must be entirely voluntary on the part of the dairymen themselves. But such action is at once contradictory of regimentation and therefore no regimentation at all. The petition for governmental assistance under the law had first to originate with the dairymen themselves. It can be ended only by their action.

I feel that we must remember in considering this question that personal prejudice, political feeling, or bias should have no part in influencing our judgment. We should weigh this question solely upon its merits and in terms of what the decision means to each farmer individually, to farmers and their principal industry collectively, and, lastly, to the state itself.

If that is done, I am sure that when our dairymen cast their votes this week on this question, either individually or collectively, that the result will be overwhelmingly favorable.

But such a vote will be only the first step. From that point on it becomes the moral responsibility of every dairyman who votes for the plan to back up his vote with his own interested and active cooperation. As for those who may sincerely and honestly oppose the plan in the exercise of their best judgment, I ask that once the polls are closed and the result known, if it be contrary to their opinion, that they, nevertheless, in true American tradition, abide by the result and unite with their neighbors to give the plan a fair trial.

If experience justifies the fear and judgment of those who oppose this order, it will not long endure. If, however, a fair trial justifies the hope and expectation of those who favor it, the benefits will flow equally to those who favor and to those who oppose and contribute unreasonably to the betterment of economic conditions of the state at large.

3815 Exhibit No. 26-O to stipulation

From Foster Potter, Department of Agriculture and Markets, State Office Building, Albany. Telephone 3-5511, Ext. 207. Holton V. Noyes, Commissioner. For immediate release.

ALBANY, Aug. 18.—State and Federal officials today assured milk producers in six states that "each producer who votes in the referendum on orders regulating the handling of milk in the New York market will do so by secret ballot."

This assurance was given to more than 65,000 dairy farmers eligible to vote by L. L. Clough, referendum agent for Holton V. Noyes, New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, and by W. J. Griffith, Jr., referendum agent for the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States.

Commissioner Noyes will speak on the proposed orders at a meeting of North Country dairymen at Malone tonight.

"The secret ballot is being used in the referendum to enable producers to vote their own views on whether they want the help which the State and Federal governments are able to extend jointly to overcome the chaotic conditions existing in the New York milk market," Mr. Griffith said.

"Milk producers who vote on whether they approve the issuance of the orders regulating milk handlers," Mr. Griffith said, "may be assured that no one in the dairy industry will know how any individual voted."

Both Mr. Griffith and Mr. Clough said the ballots are to be counted by State and Federal employes "bound by strict regulations which govern the handling of confidential information."

More than 300 polling places will be open to milk producers in New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Vermont. Voting in New York State started today in Ulster county. Dairy farmers in all other New York State counties will vote Friday and Saturday, with most of the polling places open on Friday. Producers in Massachusetts will vote Friday and Saturday. Dairymen in Maryland will vote Friday. In Pennsylvania and New Jersey dairy farmers will vote Saturday.

The plan under the Federal and State orders would establish minimum prices which handlers would be required to pay 3816 farmers for milk delivered to plants qualified by health authorities to receive milk for the New York market. Producers would be assured of a uniform rate of return through the operation of a market-wide pool arrangement for making payments. The pool is designed to enable producers to share equitably in the benefits from fluid milk sales in the market as well as in the burden of the market's surplus milk. The two orders would be administered jointly by a market administrator named by the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets. The cost of operating the program would be borne by handlers, each paying not more than 2 cents per hundredweight of milk sold primarily as fluid milk or fluid cream.

New York State dairy farmers who vote will mark two ballots, one for the Federal order and one for the State order. Producers in all other states will mark only the Federal ballot. The two orders are designed to complement each other and provide for joint Federal-State regulation of the handling of milk in the New York market. The area included under the program consists of the City of New York and the counties of Nassau, Westchester, and Suffolk, all in New York State. This territory has a population estimated at more than 10,000,000 people and is said to be the largest milk marketing area in the world.

Federal and State officials said they expected "a fairly large number of farmers to vote." They based this on the widespread interest which the program has aroused and the heavy attendance at the public hearings and meetings held to consider the proposal.

Briefs filed by milk handlers with the State and Federal agencies indicate general dealer opposition to the regulatory program. Milk producers have indicated strong support for the plan which is sponsored by organized dairy farmers operating through the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency.

Officials of the Federal department of agriculture point out that if the program had been in operation producers in the 201–210 mile zone from New York would receive for the month of August $2.45 per hundredweight for Class I, or fluid milk, and $1.75 per hundred for milk used for cream. These prices, it is pointed out, represent "a material improvement from those which prevail without a program. Farmers experienced the most chaotic conditions in the New York market during June when many producers received returns of less than $1 per hundredweight for their milk. The situation has improved only slightly since."

Before the Federal order can go into effect the Secretary of Agriculture must determine that its issuance is favored by at least two-thirds of the producers who vote in the referendum. The issuance of the State order must be approved by 75 percent of the New York State producers who vote. Producer approval of both orders is necessary before the joint program can go into effect.

Under the plan, minimum prices to producers only would be established. Prices at which consumers would buy their milk are left to the forces of open competition, officials explained. The orders would apply to handlers only. They cannot regulate production, nor regulate dairy farmers as producers.

3818 Exhibit No. 26-P to stipulation

From Foster Potter, Department of Agriculture and Markets, State Office Building, Albany. Telephone 3-5511, Ext. 207. Holton V. Noyes, Commissioner. Released to afternoon papers, Monday, Sept. 12, 1938.

ALBANY, Sept. 12.—The final results of balloting on the State order fixing prices to be paid to producers for milk sold in the New York metropolitan area were announced today by Commissioner Holton V. Noyes, of the Department of Agriculture and Markets, upon his return from the State Fair.

Exclusive of the rejected ballots, a total of 29,883 votes were cast on the State order. Of these, 25,935, or 86.8 percent, were in favor and 3,948, or 13.2 per cent, were opposed to its adoption.

Out of a total vote of 35,596 on the State order, a total of 5,713 votes was rejected. The principal ground for rejecting ballots was that they were cast by producers who were members of cooperative associations which voted collectively for all of their members. Many additional ballots were rejected because they were cast by producers whose milk was not being delivered to plants approved by any health authority having jurisdiction in the marketing area, or because the voting producer's name did not appear on the list of producers delivering to an approved plant.

Other ballots were rejected because they were not completely filled out, and in many of these instances the intent of the voter could not be determined. The intent of the voter could be determined, however, in the case of 5,376 ballots which were disallowed for the reasons mentioned. Of these 5,376 ballots disallowed, 77 per cent of the votes favored the adoption of the order.

The 14 cooperatives which voted as units cast a total of 19,499 votes, 98.3 per cent of which were cast in favor of the order. Out of a total of 16,097 individual votes cast, 10,440 were found to have been cast by persons who were duly qualified. Of these, 65.3 per cent were favorable to the adoption of the order. Had the votes cast by persons who for one reason or another were not qualified but whose intention was shown, been considered, the percentage of those who voted as individuals who were in favor of the order would 3819 have been increased to 69.3 per cent.

Commissioner Noyes expressed the conviction that even though no cooperatives had insisted on voting as units, as the statute permits, and had the members of such cooperatives voted individually, more than the required 75 per cent would have voted in favor of the State order. He pointed out that it is a well-known fact that the percentage of individual members of cooperative associations who favored the order was greater than the percentage of non-members.

OFFICIAL BUFFALO MILK COUNT SHOWS 94% VOTED "YES"

estern New York Dairymen Overwhelmingly Approved New Milk Marketing Order, According to Final Tabulation

ALBANY, Sept. — Milk Producers in the Niagara Frontier milk rketing area—the so-called Buffalo area—voted 94 percent in favor the order which goes into effect Oct. 1 fixing minimum prices to be id to farmers, according to the official tabulation of votes announced Commissioner Holton V. Noyes, of the Department of Agriculture d Markets.

Not counting the rejected ballots, 3,264 votes were cast. A total of 69, or 94 per cent, favored the State order, and 195, or six per cent, re opposed to it.

Total vote of the dairymen was 3,575, but 311 votes were rejected. st of the rejected ballots were discounted because they were cast by oducers affiliated with cooperative associations which had voted llectively.

The intent of the voter could be determined on all but three of the ected ballots, and 87.3 per cent of those disallowed favored adoption the order.

Three cooperative associations voted as units, representing 2,663 es, of which 99 percent favored the order. Of the 904 individual es cast, 601 were cast by properly-qualified dairymen and 72 per- t of them favored adoption.

Laurance L. Clough, referendum agent, explained that if the votes t by farmers who were not qualified for any one of several reasons, whose intent was shown, had been counted, the percentage of those o voted as individuals would have stood at 77 percent in favor.

Commissioner Noyes said he is "entirely satisfied," that more than the required 75 percent of Buffalo area dairymen favor the order, which is expected to stabilize the milk market in that tion of the State.

From Foster Potter, Department of Agriculture and Markets, State ice Building, Albany. Telephone 3–5511, Ext. 207. Released to rning papers, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 1938.

Commissioner Holton V. Noyes, of the New York State Depart... of Agriculture and Markets, speaking from Station WGY, Schen... tady, Monday night, Oct. 24, said:

"It is a real pleasure to speak on this program of the She... Company.

"It is my belief that I can best serve the entire dairy industry b... helping each particular group solve its problems, insofar as I can b... helpful. I do not conceive of the dairy problem as a matter in whi... the interests of the dairymen alone must be considered. Nor do I think that only the interests of the dealer should receive attention. Nor are the interests of the third interested group, the consumers, to be considered alone.

"Each of these three groups—producer, distributor, and consumer—have their own interests and their own special problems. But each should have an appreciation of the other's point of view. Each should try to help the other understand what that point of view is. Each should recognize that only by all three working cooperatively together can there be any lasting and profitable solution of the dairy problem in this State.

"This being my conception of the relationship of these three groups, I have, at every opportunity, tried to find the practical application of these relationships. I have given much of my time to conferences with each of these groups. I have contributed such counsel as my experience enables me to provide, both as a farmer and business man. I have refused to believe that farmer organizations are necessarily all good; that dealer organizations are necessarily all bad; that consumer representatives are all unreasonable.

"I have preferred rather to recognize and respect the rights and the interests of each group and to recognize the fact that in many ways their real interests are quite identical.

"It was in accordance with this theory that about a year ago I conferred with officials of the Sheffield Company in New York 3823 at their request. Some time previously I had not hesitated publicly to criticize the policy of this company in its handling of the milk situation in northern New York. In the correspondence that followed I had opportunity to suggest that both the company and the industry would be benefitted by a more broad-minded and progressive public relations policy, which would have its basis in the recognition of the necessity and importance of the three groups interested in the dairy industry.

"At this conference I suggested a closer contact with both producers and consumers and a real attempt to discuss the problems of these groups in a sympathetic and appreciative way. Such frank discussion, I felt, would be an important and helpful contribution to removal of much of the misunderstanding which has stood in the way of any constructive approach to the problems of the industry.

"Perhaps this radio program may be one of the results of that conference. I hope that at frequent intervals the company will take its problems to the public in this fashion.

"Sheffield, I am informed, is now celebrating its 98th year of business. Any organization which has been able to endure and grow during the past 98 years certainly merits admiration. I say this with the distinct understanding that my statement is not in any way to be interpreted as a blanket approval of all the policies and acts of this company. For I have not hesitated, nor shall I in the future, to criticise such policy, if it pursues what I honestly and sincerely believe to be a course inimical to the best interests of the whole dairy industry, of which this company is such an important part. That is a duty and responsibility which my public office imposes upon me and which I shall not hesitate to discharge fully to the best of my ability.

"We have embarked upon another experiment in regulation for the dairy industry. We who have urged its adoption sincerely believe that it holds the greatest promise of success of any plan heretofore proposed. But as I have repeatedly pointed out this plan or no other has any chance of success unless and until it receives the complete cooperation of every group in the industry. Thus far it is a pleasure to report very general cooperation of dealers.

24 "I do not pretend, and I know of no one else in authority who does, that the present plan is perfect and complete. Experience will reveal its defects. I shall be the first to insist that these be corrected and any injustices that may develop be righted at once. I shall be equally eager, if it should be fully demonstrated that the plan will not work, to urge its abandonment.

"It is too early to make any prediction. I am encouraged by the first month's operation but I do not base any prediction for the future upon that showing.

"I prefer instead to close this talk with an appeal to every group in the industry for its whole-hearted and active cooperation to afford this plan an honest and fair trial. If that is done, I am sure that within a reasonable time we shall be able to reach a permanent solution of New York's great agricultural problem."

From W. J. Griffith, Jr., Agent to Conduct the Referendum for the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, Hearing Room No. 3, State Office Building, Albany, N. Y. Release on receipt.

POLLING PLACES ANNOUNCED FOR VOTE ON NEW YORK MILK MARKETING PROGRAM

Over 300 polling places will be available to dairy farmers in seven states who will vote in a referendum on whether they approve the order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture to regulate the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area.

A detailed list of polling places together with the time and plac of voting at each was released today by Wellington J. Griffith, Jr., agent of the Secretary of Agriculture to conduct the referendum. Over 230 of the polling places are located in New York State where voting will take place during August 18, 19, and 20.

Dairy farmers in Vermont, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland will vote on the federal order August 20. The polling places scheduled for these states are located in sections from which milk supplies are drawn for the New York market.

Connecticut dairy farmers whose milk is produced for the New York marketing area will be the first to vote in the referendum. A polling place for these producers will be open August 15 from 1 to 5 P. M., daylight saving time, at the Community Service Food Store at Canaan in Litchfield County, Conn.

In addition to voting on the federal order, dairy farmers in New York State will, at the same polling places, vote on the order which the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets has issued. The two orders are designed to complement each other and provide for joint federal-state regulation of the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area.

Before the federal order can go into effect, the Secretary of Agriculture must determine that its issuance is favored by at least two-thirds of the producers participating in the referendum. The state order requires approval, of three-fourths of the New York State producers voting.

The program under the federal and state orders is designed to establish minimum prices which handlers would be required 3826 to pay for milk bought from dairy farmers. Provision is made for a method of paying producers through the operation of a market-wide pool to assure a uniform rate of return to dairy farmers. The operation of the market-wide pool is designed to provide for equitable sharing of the benefits of the fluid milk sales in the market, as well as for equitable sharing of the burden of surplus milk.

Detailed information relating to the referendum to be held in the seven states may be obtained from the referendum headquarters in charge of Mr. Griffith, located in Hearing Room No. 3, State Office Building, Albany, N. Y.

Attached is a list of polling places in the various states together with the time and place of voting at each polling place.

FEDERAL MARKETING ORDER

Why Should It Be Rejected?—What Will It Accomplish, if Adopted?—What Are the Reasons, and Who Is Responsible for the Dairy Farmers' Distress?—What Program Will Give You Relief?—How Can You Escape This Marketing Order Trap?

828 FEDERAL MILK CONTROL

Why the Proposed Federal Milk Order Should Be Rejected

Every dairy farmer should oppose the proposed Federal order or the following reasons:

1. The producer himself has no actual voice in fixing the price for is milk.

All prices proposed are founded on base prices of butter and cheese. The prices for butter and cheese are controlled and manipulated by he Milk Trust.

The report of Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., states among ther things, that National Dairy, Bordens, and other dealers make ver 100% profit on milk which is manufactured. Under the Order, hey will make newer and greater profits at the dairy farmer's xpense.

2. The Order will make the producer the absolute slave of the ooperatives; put every producer under contract (see Article VI, ection 11); and penalize him if he changes his market by paying him butter price for from two to three months (see Article VII, ection 3.)

3. The program now presented should be rejected if for no other eason than it was written and is now sponsored by the Dairymen's eague, Sheffield Producers, and agents of the Big Three. The terms re so intricate that a staff of lawyers and accountants would have ifficulty in understanding it, and the clear intention of the sponsors eems to be to tie the dairy farmer up in such a vast legal tangle hat he can never free himself again.

4. The measures used to put it across discredited it at the start. The Federal legislation under which it is proposed, was unquestionbly enacted at the instance of the Dairymen's League.

5. The apparently unlimited sums of money for radio broadcasts, eetings, speeches, propaganda in the public press and elsewhere, ave largely come from the Bargaining Agency. Of the eighty ooperatives in that Agency, only the Dairymen's League and Sheffeld Producers are known to have furnished the money. If these unds have been supplemented, there can be no other source than the ig Three, Bordens, National Dairy, and the Dairymen's League.

6. Milk control was actually promulgated at the instance of the Dairymen's League. Its widespread political activities and huge expenditures in this direction, put it across. Public sentiment was built up by depressing the price of milk to a pitifully low level.

The Rogers-Allen Bill was promulgated and put across by the Dairymen's League. The same measures were employed. Milk was sold in New York City at two quarts for 7 cents in 1937. At least one dealer, who sold milk at that price, got 40,000 quarts of milk daily from the Dairymen's League. The 7 cents for which the milk sold was only sufficient to pay the cost of receiving, shipping, pasteurizing, bottling, and delivering the milk. There was nothing left for the farmer.

The same method is again being employed. Actually, the Milk Trust is responsible for the present low price of milk in order to create a demand for Federal Control. The paid propagandists and mouth pieces of the League in their own state wide meetings, in the newspapers, over the radio, and in a whispering campaign, all accuse others of responsibility. The dairy farmers themselves have neither the money nor the organization to distribute the actual facts, and to give the farmers and the public the real truth. The lies and 3829 propaganda, half truths, deliberate falsehoods, and clever misrepresentation, must go unanswered. The demagogues have all been hired by those interested in the adoption of this Order, who seem to have unlimited funds to put it across.

What Will Actually Be Accomplished If The Order Is Adopted!

Large market service differentials will be paid, principally to the Dairymen's League. If this would actually pay League farmers a better price, it might be justified. However, after the blended price is arrived at, the cooperative may (an' unquestionably will) take from its producers deductions the same as in the past (Article VII, Section 3), and the price returned to such producers will still be far below that returned by bona fide dealers who actually pay the control price. The most important result will be to give the large cooperatives a strangle-hold on those who are so unfortunate as to have to earn their living in producing milk. Under the proposed Order, that strangle-hold cannot be shaken off. The League will be free to give rebates, indulge in unfair trade practices, to aid the Trust in returning large profits, and to whip out of business the class of individual dealers, now almost extinct, who in the past were willing to live and let live, and who in most cases paid a substantial price for milk.

What Is The Reason And Who Is Responsible For The Present Distressed Condition Of The Farmer?

That purchasing power of the public and the law of supply and demand is a factor in milk prices, cannot, and should not, be denied. These contribute to some extent to the present low prices.

However, for many years past, an insurmountable disturbing factor n the New York City market is the presence of the Dairymen's League n that market as a dealer. This dealer, posing as a cooperative, was xempted from compliance with Milk Control, the Rogers-Allen law, nd is now to be exempt, under the Federal Order. Many informed ersons in the industry believe that if the Dairymen's League is taken ut of the New York market as a dealer, and acts only as the pro- ucers' agent, the industry can get on its feet without government egulation.

Any well informed persons in the industry also knows that if the eague and other cooperatives are subject to a bona fide and critical xamination by the Commissioner of Agriculture so that it cannot xtend rebates and special privileges and cannot indulge in unfair ade practices, as brought out by the Attorney General's report, that aos in the market will end.

Recommendations

If new legislation is needed, it should incorporate the following:

1. A producer organization should be restricted from engaging in usiness as a milk dealer and restricted from competing with its stomers.
2. Cooperatives should be forbidden by law to give rebates, special ivileges, or to give loans to customers of any nature.
3. Cooperatives should be forbidden by law to expend moneys for bbying, political activities, propaganda, and particularly from pay- g, either directly or indirectly, any sums of money to or on behalf candidates to any legislative body, whether state or federal.
4. The financial affairs of cooperatives and their marketing activi- s should be subject to examination and control in the same manner at banking institutions, committees of incompetents, trustees, and duciaries of every nature are regulated.

How You Can Escape This Trap

You can deliver yourself from this unholy scheme by insisting that ting be by individuals, and then individually in making it your siness to cast your vote aga'nst the proposed Order or in favor of e recommendations above stated.

New York State Commissioner of Agriculture Holton V. Noyes, on ay 4, 1938, gave out a public statement, which we quote in part:

"No plan of voluntary or arbitrary control of the dairy industry will er be effective * * * unless it meets three definite requirements:

"1. It must have * * * majority support of those members of e industry over whom * * * control is to be exercised.

"2. It must not favor any particular group or groups at the expense any other group or groups. By the same sign, no one group or oups should be allowed a determining influence in establishing ntrol or in destroying it.

"3. It must have the active and sincere cooperation of at least a substantial majority of the industry.

"I have taken the position that it would be most unwise, if not most unfortunate, for any cooperative association in this state to cast the votes of its members upon this proposition solely by action of officers and directors, even though it is permissable to do so by law. The whole question is so fundamental and of so great importance to the welfare of all our dairymen, their families and their future, that I do not believe any association is justified in presuming to express the opinions of its members—at least without an honest referendum among the membership as to their wishes.

"Some leaders of cooperative associations take an opposite view. They contend that allowing individual members to vote upon the proposition itself or to express them by a referendum within the organization would be confession of weakness by the cooperatives and undermine their prestige and influence. I disagree with them * * *.

"But if the leaders of these cooperatives insist that this should not be done I would feel that any vote registered upon this proposition by officers and directors alone did not represent the true sentiment of the dairymen of this State."

Conclusion

We regret Commissioner Noyes' entire statement cannot be printed here. It is the sincere expression of a man of high character, who has brought credit to the administration of which he is a cabinet member.

If you would save your self from greater misery than you now have, defeat the proposed marketing Order and make it your business to help break the strangle-hold of the Milk Trust and the Big Cooperatives in accordance with the recommendations above outlined.—Dairy Farmers' Union.

3831 THE FEDERAL MARKETING ORDER

Who is sponsoring it?—How is it to be voted by producers?—How does it set prices?—Why?—What are the market service differentials?—Are producers to be under contract?

3832 Sponsors

This order is sponsored by the Dairymen's League, the Sheffield Producers' Association, and the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency.

The Sheffield Producers' Association has been branded by the Federal Trade Commission as controlled by Sheffield Farms, a subsidiary of National Dairy. No evidence has ever been presented to prove dealer control of the League. However, the Attorney General, in a report on the milk industry dated March 8th, 1938, states that the League, from the nature of its setup and operations, would naturally incline to a "distributor" point of view, and its relations with Bordens were such so as to have great weight in determination of policy, and that it would have, naturally, sympathy with distributors' problems.

The attitude of the Metropolitan Producers Bargaining Agency upon any problem is necessarily the combined attitude of the Sheffield Association and the League. The League is at present in open cooperation with the Sheffield Producers Association.

Close Inquiry Justified

These circumstances justify a close inquiry into the supposed merits of any plan, procedure, or method advanced by any of these agencies for the ostensible benefit of milk producers. Also justified is inquiry as to the manner in which the agreement is to be presented to producers for their action. Regardless of the importance of this agreement, it is doubtful if 25% of the producers will vote individually. Therefore, a solid League vote cast by the League Directorate would insure the ⅔ majority.

This agreement comes from sources of extremely doubtful loyalty to producer interests. Are these interests to prepare the plan and rig the vote also?

The publicity put out in favor of the Order is entirely misleading and notable for its silence on certain provisions of the Order. It is in some instances untruthful.

It is misleading to say that dealers are to pay for the administration of the order when no limit is placed on dealer profits.

It is misleading and untruthful to say that prices will be fixed at public hearings by producers or that producers will have anything to do with fixing the prices of milk under this Order. This is done to focus attention of the hearings upon price rather than upon the merits of the Order.

No mention is made of the provision for producer contracts. Such contracts are distinctly unpopular in this milkshed.

The nature of the misrepresentation and omissions in the propaganda favoring the Order confirm the "sympathies" of the League and the control of the Sheffield Producers.

Phony Price Fixing

The Order is against producer interests.

Price fixing in the two upper classes and class 3B and C is based upon New York outside quotations for 92 score butter. Butter prices for the U. S. are set on the Chicago Market. The operation of the Chicago exchange has been a matter of complaint to the Federal Trade Commission, which has found the comparable Cheese Exchange at Plymouth, Wisconsin, to be under domination of National Dairy, Bordens, and a couple of meat packers.

In Class 3A the price is set with a differential on prices paid a certain midwest condensaries. These condensary prices are 3833 on a formula which takes into consideration the Plymouth Cheese and Chicago Butter Quotations.

Class 3D (cheese) is set on the average of the Plymouth, Cuba and Gouverneur Exchanges. Gouverneur meets the same day as Plymouth and sets no price until receipt of a telegram from Plymouth. Cuba meets the day following and its prices follow Plymouth. Thus it will be seen that the prices to be paid in all instances for milk under the present Order are within certain control of Bordens and National Dairy.

Borden and National Dairy Benefit

These two companies will purchase about 70 per cent of the milk handled under this Order. In some instances a difference of one quarter of a cent on the quoted price for butter in a market affected by their operations and in which they have been charged with exerting an undue influence will mean a difference in return to producers under this order of 23 to 24 cents per cwt. in class one and 20 cents per cwt. in class two: a matter of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Certain minimum returns are supposedly to be made to producers. It has been shown that the basis of these returns is within the control of the larger companies. The order, however, sets no resale or consumer price. Consequently the rates of profit of the distributors is uncontrolled. This rate of profit now takes upwards of 25 per cent of the farmers milk. That rate of profit is the real cause of all present farm ills. No people can long stand to have one quarter of their product taken away from them in the form of profit alone. It is as much of a handicap to both consumer and producer purchasing power. The present Order makes no effort to correct this condition, and it is, indeed, doubtful if any governmental interference could correct it successfully.

There is no indication in the order that producers will receive the blend of minimum prices. Certain market service differentials are provided, ostensibly for the care of surplus and the supplying of a short market. It is obvious that the larger companies are in a preferred position to take advantage of the possibilities offered for profit in interplant or even intercompany exchange of surplus milk. Any movement of surplus would necessarily be within the judgment of the company. While the freight rate is set, return hauls are possible to the considerable profit of the dealer. In fact, great quantities of milk could be shunted around to the profit of the dealers by extra freight charge and plant handling charges. There is also the matter of extra handling charges for surplus plants in the short season. All of these extra charges are to come out of the blended return to pro-ers to the profit of the dealers. Is there anything in the history ie milk business to indicate that these dealers will neglect any sibility of profit! Furthermore, the companies best in a position ake advantage of these marketing differentials are Bordens, Na-al Dairy.

Producer Contracts

rticle 6, Section 11, subdivision a, paragraph I, requires cooperas to put producers under contract for not less than thirty-day ods.

he idea of producer contracts is repulsive to the producers to be ted by this Order. These contracts have been used to keep the producer in line and delivering his milk under unsatisfactory conditions. These contracts have been used effectively and continuously to prevent protest.

here is no necessity of any producer being put under contract.
milk is being produced. It must find an outlet. Any decent ditions of sale and decent treatment of producers, collectively and ividually, will bring in plenty of milk.

New Producers!

Article VIII, Section 3, a "new producer" is defined as one who has not regularly delivered milk to a handler for a period irty days prior to the effective date of this Order." This lane is not clear. In the Fall River and Greater Boston Orders the ition is one "who did not regularly sell milk for a period of y days prior to the effective date hereof to a handler or to persons in the area." The interpretation of this clause is a matter of con-iable moment. New producers are penalized by a Class 3C
ter) return for a period of two calendar months at least.

e new producers to be defined as new producers to the market or producers to a plant? Are producers to take their weights, erfat tests, and treatment by any plant and like it, or be penalized wo full months out of the blend, or worse? Handlers do not to lose producers; they also want to treat them as they think nity demands. This clause is suspicious.

hy cannot this Order be written in plain English!

will be seen from the foregoing that organizations suspiciously to Bordens and National Dairy are sponsoring this Order. That proposed method of voting insures its acceptance; that the price g system set forth places price control with National Dairy and ens; that there is no restraint upon distributor profits; that tial provisions of the Order place these companies and their diaries in the way of making great profits; that producers are bound into this system by contracts, and perhaps penalized if do not stay put.

The Five Principles

The five principles upon which this Order is supposed to be predicated are in no wise borne out by the Order as submitted.

1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.

The market service differentials defeat this principle.

2. An equal share to each producer of the benefit of the fluid market.

The price control and profits of the monopoly, together with the failure to protect the blend, make this an equalization in misery rather than in benefits.

3. An equal share by each producer in the burden of surplus and the expense of controlling it: and

4. Reasonable contributions to those sharing surplus facilities for the use of them seasonably for market protection.

These principles have undeniable merit, but in the present Order are only a blind to promote the interests and preferential position of monopoly.

5. Effectuation of the foregoing principles in such a manner as will perpetuate and encourage farmers' cooperative organization.

Why?

Why promote and protect and encourage farmers' cooperatives in sympathy with or under control of the distributors?

This Order is not in the interests of farmers.

It is an Order in the interests of private monopoly.—DAIRY FARMERS UNION.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Southern District of New York, County of New York, ss:

Paul Grossman, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a certified public accountant residing at 147 East Washington Avenue, New York City, and having an office at said address. Deponent has had 5 years' experience as an auditor covering accounts in the milk business in New York City, and has audited the books of many milk dealers or distributors. Deponent has had and now has charge of the books of the Freeman Dairy, Inc., of Maspeth, L. I., which is engaged chiefly in the sale of fluid milk to storekeepers and other retailers. Said Freeman Dairy, Inc., purchases a part of its milk supply from the Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., the defendant above named, and Arthur Jetter, President of the Jetter Dairy Company, Inc., is also a stockholder in Freeman's Dairy, Inc.

Deponent further says that he has made a computation of the cost of a quart of milk purchased at prices stated in the Federal and State Marketing Orders, so-called, to wit: at $2.45 per cwt., plus butterfat F. O. B. in the 201-210 mile zone, so-called, plus receiving station or handling charges at 23¢ per cwt., freight at 32¢ per cwt., processing charge at 30¢ per 40-quart can, the average cost of such processing, plus the cost of delivery, including actual overhead, general administrative office expense, cost of maintenance and operation of trucks, truck drivers' pay, taxes, compensation insurance, liability and public liability insurance, and the expenses ordinarily incident to the economical operation of a milk business in the Metropolitan Area, and deponent has determined that after considering all of said 3838 figures, that the minimum economical delivered cost of a quart of milk at the stores or places of business of customers, both of Freeman's Dairy, Inc., and of all economical operators engaged in said wholesale, or "dealer-to-dealer" business, is slightly more than 9¾¢ per quart. Deponent believes it to be utterly impossible for any dealer, by any means of saving, to deliver such milk for less than 9¾¢ and the cost to many dealers is more than 9¾¢ per quart. These figures apply to milk delivered in glass bottles. The cost of a quart of milk delivered in paper containers is at least 1⅓¢ per quart more. In the above figures, due consideration is had and made for breakage and loss of bottles in deliveries made in glass, and for wastage and defective containers in paper, the wholesale cost of which, before filling, is $13.89 per thousand (American Can Company).

Our company ates a number of retail routes and several wholesale routes. We ne of the larger independent dealers in this market, doing a busi- amounting to about two million dollars in volume annually.

am thoroughly acquainted with the history of competition in the York City Marketing Area and with the various efforts that have made to stabilize this market for the benefit of producers, dealers, consumers. I can unqualifiedly assert that it is a market in which eenest competition exists between dealers.

uring the period of six months preceding the inauguration of the ral Milk Marketing Order No. 27 for this area, conditions in the market were very chaotic. About March 1938 representatives of a large number of producers petitioned the Secretary of Agri- culture for an order. The distributors were notified by the tary of Agriculture that hearings were to be held on the proposed ; and I recall that I received a notice some time in April.

e actual hearings commenced in Albany, moved throughout the of New York, and then finally came to New York City, at which I attended hearings which began about May the 20th and lasted ver a week. At these hearings there were present many producer sentatives, distributor representatives, and representatives of ming interests. The hearings were presided over by federal officials and were also attended by state officials. The distributor representatives opposed certain parts of the proposed order and fully stated their views at the hearings.

After the hearings all sides were given time to prepare and file briefs. A revised proposed order was then sent to all handlers in the market. Everybody was given an opportunity to present their views. Time was allowed to present additional briefs. I also attended a conference in Washington, D. C.

During the hearings a great many independent dealers testified, but I do not recall that any representatives of any of the present defendants in the above action appeared at the hearings to testify either for or against the order. I am thoroughly acquainted with the fact, however, that a large volume of testimony was taken, which, when transcribed in final form, amounts to a rather staggering record.

It is my recollection that heading the consumer representatives who testified was the late Dr. Caroline Whitney, who at that time, I believe, represented the Consumers' Co-operative and a Consumers' Research Foundation.

The larger distributors of the marketing area frequently carry substantial surplus milk, sometimes as much as 50%, in order not to deprive their producers of a regular and continuous market. Many of the smaller competing units made it a practice to buy their fluid milk requirements from day to day and are able in many instances to buy their requirements on the basis of the blend price, that is the average between the price for Class I and the prices for the lower classifications composed of the surplus paid for by the larger distributors. Consequently the smaller operators buying on the basis of such a blend price are able to undersell in the wholesale and retail market.

3841 This very rapidly reduces and depresses the prices which can be paid to the farmer. Many of these smaller units market substantially all of their milk in fluid form and therefore carry no burden and make no allowance for surplus.

On September 1, 1938, the order was put into effect. All handlers were required under the order to pay the Class I price for all the fluid milk and the prices for all other classes of milk according to their uses. This, of course, tended to stabilize the market. This salutary condition continued for approximately three or four weeks after the promulgation of the order. However, beginning about October 1st, there was an indication that milk was being sold in this market substantially below cost. In the last few weeks a downward spiral occurred in this market which was caused principally by milk going into channels where it is sold substantially below cost. This condition is necessarily resulting in loss to all handlers.

Milk is now being sold to stores at prices as low as eight cents per quart. The results have developed a method of distribution known as the "peddler type." In this type of distribution an individual or up of individuals sometimes operating as a family proposition, ply hire a truck or trucks from day to day and solicit business any price they can get. They do not have nor do they carry any the burdens or obligations of the established milk distributor. is "peddler type" of distribution does not meet the high standards ablished by the labor union and generally does not pay any Social curity taxes or compensation insurance. In the case of my com- ny, all of these obligations must be met and under our contract th the labor union we are required to pay fixed minimum wages d to comply with high standards of working hours and conditions. The Dairymen's League and its subsidiaries distribute milk in the tropolitan Marketing Area. I do not think that the Dairymen's ague and its subsidiaries are responsible for the cause of the break- wn in this market. In this highly competitive market their com- ition is no different from the competition of other distributors. ey are naturally attempting, as every other distributor is, to pro- t their own business.

Normally at this season of the year the market should be in 2 its most stable condition, but due to reckless operations and apparently the feeling on the part of certain distributors that ey may not be required to pay the minimum prices fixed in the der, a depressed condition has developed.

It is my opinion, based on my experience in this industry and in s market, that if any handler is permitted to evade the order the tire market will break down completely in a very short time and notic conditions will rapidly develop. It takes only one or two stances of this character to result in disorder in the entire market. st of the handlers in this market are attempting to hold their own de and to pay to producers the beneficial price fixed by the order. failure to comply on the part of a few units, however, must result the breakdown of the market structure and if permitted to con- ue, will very rapidly make it impossible for my company and all her handlers who are complying, to continue to comply with the der. If those who are now opposing the order are permitted to ade it, there is no question but that the whole structure will umble very rapidly.

DEAR MR. POWELL: Your letter of June 25, in which you state that you have contracted with Eisenberg Farm Products, Inc., for the sale of your milk and that you expect to start operations on or about July 1, has been received.

We regret to advise you that Eisenberg Farm Products, Inc., has not obtained a license from this department and has filed no bond for the protection of producers or cooperative associations of producers. Under the circumstances, it would be illegal for you to sell milk to that corporation. This corporation cannot permit the sale of milk by you to any unlicensed dealer, and it will be necessary for us to require that any licensed dealer to whom you may desire to sell milk first file with this department a bond to insure payment for such milk.

Very truly yours,

GENTLEMEN: My attention has been called to your monthly report for the month of May in which you indicate the sale of cream to Eisenberg Farms and to I. P. Douglass, both of Brooklyn, New York. Neither Eisenberg Farms, Inc., or Eisenberg Farms Products Company have obtained a milk dealer's license for the license year beginning April 1, 1938. The statute provides that it shall be unlawful for a milk dealer to buy milk from or sell milk to a milk dealer who is unlicensed; milk being defined in the statute as liquid milk and or cream, fresh, sour, or storage. Will you kindly furnish us with an immediate explanation with respect to your sale of milk to this dealer in apparent violation of the statute.

With respect to sales to L. P. Douglass, Mr. Douglass holds a license limited to transactions as a broker. Will you kindly furnish us with the names of the dealers to whom this cream is sold.

ANALYSIS OF MILK UTILIZATION NEW YORK MARKET SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER 1938

For September and October a few reports were late. A few others were confused and our staff was overworked with current pressing duties. We have, however, been able to complete a summary of the classification of milk from all reports of all handlers (including late and corrected reports) who reported milk received from producers during those months, which we give you below. In analyzing this data you can determine approximately the amount of errors and late reports by handlers by deducting the unpriced Class I and Class II-A from the column entitled "Total Milk Reported Pounds" each month and comparing the result with the column entitled "Milk Included In Price Computation Pounds."

IFORM PRODUCER PRICE OF $1.87 FOR SEPTEMBER MILK IS ANNOUNCED

NEW YORK, Oct. —. E. M. Harmon, market administrator of the deral and State orders regulating the handling of milk in the New rk metropolitan marketing area, today announced $1.87 as the uni- m price per hundredweight of 3.5 percent butterfat content milk eived from producers during the month of September at handlers' nts in the 201–210 mile zone from New York City.

The uniform producer price of $1.87 per hundredweight for Sep- ber milk is based on a Class 1, or fluid milk, price of $2.45 per dredweight, $1.75 per hundredweight for Class 2–A, or milk d for cream purposes, and the following prices for each of the re- ining seven class of milk, which represent the value of milk used various manufactured products: Class 2–B milk, $1.338 per hun- dweight; Class 3–A milk, $1.238 per hundredweight; Class 3–B k, $1.135 per hundredweight; Class 3–C milk, $1.035 per hundred- ght; Class 3–D milk, $1.01 per hundredweight; Class 4–A milk, per hundredweight; and Class 4–B milk, .832 per hundredweight.

Producers who delivered milk in September to plants located in es nearer or farther than the 201–210 mile zone is from New York y are to receive from handlers the uniform price plus or minus erentials for location and for butterfat content.

he price announced is the first since the federal-state program went effect with the approval of over 85 percent of the producers in n states who voted in a referendum last August. The orders were ed following a series of public hearings held during a period in ch many producers were receiving around $1 per 100 pounds for r milk. The regulatory program, which applies only to handlers he metropolitan market, is designed to improve marketing condi- s and returns to approximately 65,000 dairy farmers located in York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, Massa- etts, and Vermont.

he price announced is based on report of handlers, which show their receipts of milk from producers and represents the use A value of all milk as reported by handlers for the marketing area, Mr. Harmon explained. The September price, he said, substantial increase over prices received by producers before Sep- ber 1, when the federal-state milk marketing program went into t in the metropolitan area."

Mr. Harmon reported that the total amount of milk accounted for in the uniform price computation amounted to 356,852,200 pounds. This milk, based on the value of each of the nine use classes established by the orders, had a total value of $7,107,527.15. Out of this total there had to be deducted a total of $270,605.13 for market-service claims by handlers and for payments to cooperatives. Claims filed by handlers for market-service payments amounted to $204,230.33. The market-service payments are provided for in the orders on surplus milk moved to manufacturing plants when not needed in the market. Actual payments are to be made to handlers only after audit of their claims. The remainder of $66,374.80 is to be paid to cooperatives which were determined by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets as meeting certain requirements provided for in the orders. These requirements relate to the ability and willingness of of the cooperatives to function in a manner which will serve the market as a whole.

Under the terms of the federal-state orders, the market administrator is required to announce the uniform producer price on the 14th day of each month. Producers must be paid by handlers by the 23th of each month.

A uniform price of $1.91 per hundredweight of 3.5 percent butterfat content milk received from producers during the month of October at handlers' plants in the 201–210 mile zone from New York City was announced today by E. M. Harmon, administrator of the Federal-State orders regulating the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan marketing area.

The producer price for October milk, Mr. Harmon said, represents an increase of four cents per hundredweight over that announced by the market administrator for milk received at handlers' plants during September. The October price of $1.91 is based on a Class I, or fluid milk, price of $2.45 per hundredweight, $1.75 per hundredweight for Class II–A, or milk used for cream purposes, and the following prices for each of the remaining seven classes of milk which represent the value of milk used for various manufactured products: Class II-B milk, $1.35 per hundredweight; Class III–A milk, $1.25 per hundred-weight; Class III–B milk, $1.136 per hundredweight; Class III–C milk, $1.086 per hundredweight; Class III–D milk, $1.011 per hundredweight; Class IV–A milk, 93.6 cents per hundredweight; and Class IV–B milk, 92.2 cents per hundredweight.

Establishment of the uniform producer price is provided for by the Federal-State orders which went into effect September 1 with the approval of over 85 percent of the producers in seven states who voted in a referendum. The price announced each month is based on reports which handlers are required to file with the market administrator. These monthly reports show, among other things, the receipts of milk from producers at handlers' plants and the use made of this milk.

Producers delivering milk to plants located in zones nearer or farther than the 201–210 mile zone is from New York City receive from handlers the uniform price plus or minus differentials for location. Differentials for butterfat content are also provided.

Mr. Harmon reported that the total amount of milk accounted for in the uniform price computation amounted to 350,326,500 pounds. This milk, based on the value of each of the nine use classes estab-3873 lished by the orders, had a total value of $7,075,507.38. Out of this total there had to be deducted a total of $252,653.71 for market service claims by handlers and for payments to cooperatives. Claims filed by handlers for market service payments amounted to $182,591.42. The market service payments are provided for in the orders on surplus milk moved to manufacturing plants when not needed in the market. Actual payments are to be made to handlers only after audit of their claims. The remainder of $70,062.29 is to be paid to cooperatives which were determined by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets as meeting certain requirements provided for in the orders. These requirements relate to the ability and willingness of the cooperatives to function in a manner which will serve the market as a whole.

The program under the Federal-State orders is designed to improve marketing conditions for approximately 65,000 dairy farmers who sell to handlers operating in the New York metropolitan area. These producers are located in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Vermont. Minimum prices to producers only are established under the orders. Prices at which consumers buy their milk are left to the forces of open competition. The market administrator is required to announce the uniform producer price on the 14th day of each month. Producers must be paid by handlers by the 25th of each month.

DECEMBER 14, 1938.

NOVEMBER MILK PRICE UNDER NEW YORK ORDER

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—A uniform price of $2.10 per hundredweight for milk testing 3.5 percent butterfat received from producers during the month of November at handlers' plants in the 201–210 mile zone from New York City was announced today by E. M. Harmon, Administrator of the Federal-State orders regulating the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan area. Producers who delivered milk in November to plants located in zones nearer or farther than the 201–210 mile zone from New York City are to receive from handlers the uniform price; plus or minus differentials for location.

The producer price for November milk represents an increase of 19 cents per hundredweight over that announced by the Market Administrator for milk received at handlers' plants during October. The November price of $2.10 per hundredweight is based on a Class I, or fluid milk, price of $2.45 per hundredweight; $1.90 per hundredweight for Class II–A, or milk for cream purposes, and the following prices for each of the remaining seven classes of milk, which represent the values of milk used for the various manufactured products: Class II–B milk, $1.402 per hundredweight; Class III–A milk, $1.30[illegible] per hundredweight; Class III–B milk, $1.177 per hundredweight; Class III–C milk, $1.077 per hundredweight; Class III–D milk, $1.052 per hundredweight; Class IV–A milk, $.977 per hundredweight; and Class IV–B milk, $.875 per hundredweight.

The Market Administrator's office reported that the total amount of milk accounted for in the uniform price computation amounted to 310,496,093 pounds. This milk, based on the value of each of the nine classes established by the orders, had a total value of $6,648,040.73. Out of this total, $71,805.51 was deducted to be paid to cooperatives which have been determined by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets as meeting certain requirements provided for in the order. These requirements relate to the ability and the willingness of cooperatives to function in a manner which will serve the market as a whole. An additional deduction of $40,673.39 was necessary in order to provide for Market Service Claims which have been filed by handlers. A further deduction of $131,535.16 was made to provide operating reserve, pursuant to Section 2 of Article VI of the order, to provide against the contingency of errors in reports and payments or of delinquencies in payments by handlers. The sum of $116,391.16 was restored from the operating reserve of the previous month.

POOL RETURN FOR NOVEMBER 1938

The Dairymen's League average return to producers is based upon $2.125 per cwt. for 3.5% milk at the 201-210 mile zone. This is the amount per cwt. collected from all sources for all milk delivered by producers after expenses of country plants, city branches, surplus selling, and necessary reserves have been allowed for. It still includes Association service costs of .055 and differentials of .06, as explained below:

Gross pool return at base zone (201-210 miles) for 3.5% milk (including service costs and differentials)		2.125
Less service costs:
State advertising of milk	.0026
Producers bargaining agency	.0024
Administrative expense	.032
Distributed to local associations to cover local expense	.002
Distributed to subdistrict organizations to cover expense	.001
To create insurance fund to cover losses from uncollectible accounts and other losses	.005
To cover part of cost of fixed assets and good will of business purchased, which it is deemed inadvisable to carry as assets	.01
Total service costs as itemized above	.055	.055
Pool return in base zone (201-210 miles) including differentials (this is the Dairymen's League announced return)		2.07

NOTE.—Of the total pounds for November, 89.95% was sold in the New York Metropolitan milk marketing area and was subject to the minimum prices for each class as announced by the market administrator. Prices applying to other markets were established by negotiations with dealers or by the various State milk control Boards. The Board of Directors at their September meeting revised our differential system as of October 1st. These differentials will become effective on your October milk.

It is desirable that producers be well informed as to the activities of the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., and the problems that face dairymen.

For that reason the enclosed booklet is sent. You will find it worthy of study and will want to keep it on file as a record of the developments in co-operative marketing in the New York Metropolitan Milk Shed during the year 1938.

If you attended the Annual Meeting on December 6, 1938, and already have a copy of this report, will you not see that this one is given to another?

3891 President's Address—Homer S. Rolfe

Last year at the first annual meeting of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency I said that the occasion marked a new forward step in cooperative effort. I was referring to the fact that producers had been given the right to work together cooperatively by the enactment of the Rogers-Allen Law and now had an opportunity to solve their marketing problems. I pointed out that many organized groups of producers, bound together and working for common good of all, were assembled for the first annual meeting of their Bargaining Agency. I emphasized the fact that "orderly marketing includes the supplying of the market with the maximum amount of goods that can be sold at the established prices, at the same time keeping from the market any surplus that would tend to break prices. To apply this principle to the marketing of milk is our big problem. We must face this problem squarely," I said, "if we are to be truly successful in our efforts. The solution of this problem is fundamental to our permanent success." All this had been recognized in previous years as true. It was true at the time of our first annual meeting. It is true today.

As we convene to hold the second annual meeting we should review the events of the past year. Readily we see that the many years of education and hard work has culminated during 1938 in the greatest forward step dairymen of the New York Milk Shed have ever before taken in cooperative marketing. We have a sound surplus control plan in operation and producers are making the plan work. The Bargaining Agency is generally credited as being the force by which and the medium through which this plan was prepared and accepted by producers and, with their support, made effective. History will record that the long-sought permanent marketing program to control surplus was established in 1938 on a solid foundation, backed by Federal-State assistance, and put into operation with a united producer support. It will also be recorded that it was a result of years of education and costly experience in marketing.

In reporting to the membership at this time it is well to review the developments that placed the responsibilities squarely on the Producers Bargaining Agency for making an effective surplus control plan. In early winter of 1937 it became evident that it would be quite impossible for 75% of the producers in the Metropolitan Milk Shed and who made up the Producers Bargaining Agency at that time to control, through voluntary effort, surplus milk as production increased. Forces were working to keep producers divided as always and increased membership in the Agency in time to check flow of surplus to fluid dealers at low prices seemed doubtful.

As early as December 22, 1937, at a meeting of representatives of the Producers and the Distributors Bargaining Agencies, we were notified by the dealers' representatives that they "were interested in surplus control plan but only insofar as the mechanics of it were 3892 concerned; its set up being wholly a producer problem." In other words, producers were plainly told that surplus control was entirely a producer problem. All knew that there could be no better prices until there was an effective means for controlling surplus. To find a means was purely a producer's problem. In the meantime producer prices must fall. That was realized by all.

Nevertheless, on January 1, and again on January 16, price agreements were entered into between the Board of Directors of our Agency and the Bargaining Committee of the New York Metropolitan Milk Distributors Bargaining Agency, which brought about beneficial results to some producers. It also had a stabilizing effect on the whole price structure. It served as a brake in the downward fall of prices; it slowed down the price decline; it added thousands of dollars to producers' checks. Both of these price agreements included a second alternative, which was a flat price where entire output of country plants were taken by a distributor. It soon became evident to all that the second alternative was not sound and could not be continued when production increased. It was more and more evident as season advanced that stability of prices depended on ability to control surplus and other fundamental principles that must be agreed upon and incorporated in the plan. On March 28th the second alternative was discontinued and a classified price for all milk was adopted. Again the action of the Bargaining Agency slowed down the decline and added money to producer's check.

The Delegate Body, on January 16th, foreseeing the problem, voted that the Board of Directors as a committee be instructed to enter into negotiations with Federal officials and with State officials to the extent necessary in looking towards the drafting in final form of a marketing order for submission to the Delegate Body.

On January 28 Dr. Gaumnitz came before the Delegate Body and discussed the policy of the Federal authorities. Following his address requests were made to the Secretary of Agriculture and to the Department of Agriculture and Markets for assistance in maintaining prices and care of surplus. On February 2 letters setting forth principles that had been agreed upon, were sent to both Federal and State authorities. These principles were:

1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for same use.

2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the fluid outlets.

3. An equal share by each producer in the burden of the surplus and the expense of controlling it.

4. Reasonable contributions to those having surplus facilities for the use of them seasonally for market protection.

5. The effectuation of the foregoing principles in such a manner as will perpetuate and encourage cooperatives.

On February 7 several representatives of the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture met with the Board of Directors. Work was started on drafting a marketing agreement to incorporate 3893 the principles that had been agreed upon. Frequent conferences involving trips to Albany and Washington, and several meetings of Delegate Body were necessary before the final draft was decided upon and hearing dates announced.

The first hearing was held at Albany on May 16th and the final one was held on June 4th. At hearings members of Bargaining Agency appeared as proponents of order. The Executive Committee attended all hearings. The Agency was determined to see that the producers' best interests were protected and that the principles agreed upon were well supported by evidence. Following hearings, the Order was put in form for submission to producers and to vote. It was not until August 18, 19, and 20 that voting took place. This gave the Bargaining Agency sufficient time to comply with requests for information, and with the assistance of State and Federal officials, extension departments, and many volunteers it was possible to acquaint producers generally with the provisions of the Order.

In doing this many meetings were held, the mail brought every producer copy of Order and official explanation, the American Agriculturist, dairy papers, and newspapers brought out the facts and objectives, advertisements by newspapers and by radio—all combining brought forth a well informed and united producer sentiment for adoption of a surplus control plan as provided for in the Federal-State Marketing Order.

On August 25th the result of the vote was announced and producers were delighted to find that the Order had been approved by approximately 87% of the qualified producers voting. A joint Federal-State Market Administrator was appointed and the Order went into effect on September 1st. Considering the magnitude of the undertaking, the pains that were taken in seeing that all dairymen were given an opportunity to say what the Order should contain, the thoroughness with which Government officials worked to make sure the document was fair to all, and the explanation of Order so well spread that all producers knew its provisions; it is remarkable, and speaks well for the producers and their organizations, that the task was accomplished at so early a date.

The magnitude of the vote and the speed and determination with which it was put into effect were impressive. Due to the willingness of some dealers to give the Order a fair trial, and due to the insistance of producers in the cooperative associations that made up the Bargaining Agency, most of the buyers of milk promptly signed agreements to abide by terms of the Order.

The Order specified dates on which very definite obligations are placed on dealers, such as the filing of reports and making payments that may be due the Administrator. The sentiment of producers, effectively expressed to dilatory dealers, has resulted in quite general compliance. Milk prices have been increased and there is more stability in price structures than has been before seen in this market.

In other words, due to producer support through their 3894 cooperative associations and in turn through the Bargaining Agency, the surplus control plan that was developed by the producers is bringing about the desired results.

Why a Producers Bargaining Agency?—you ask—now that prices are specified in an Order, which is being enforced by the Governments. In answer, may I say that the Order is not perfect. It was made by man, by milk producers. Time and experience will bring out weaknesses which will be corrected and strengthened by amendments made by producers and approved by them. Producers working through the Bargaining Agency can promptly request change that is desirable and with united support from the Bargaining Agency it will be secured.

The Bargaining Agency is a medium through which there can be a free exchange of ideas and marketing problems can be thoroughly and frankly discussed. It is the logical organization established to take advantage of the opportunities given producers under the Rogers-Allen Law, to which all producers come with their problems and to take advantage of the broad rights that have been given them and get up-to-date information and help. It is a responsible producer service organization to which the Administrator looks for much help and information.

Noncompliance with provisions of the Order by any dealer can best be checked by well-informed producers, whose milk the dealer is purchasing. In fact, the strict enforcement of the Order depends to a great degree upon support of that kind. In short, without sincere support from a united group of well organized cooperative associations, that have the legal right to work together for the common good of all, the Order would fail. The Bargaining Agency offers that service to all producers.

Producers of the Metropolitan New York Milk Shed have made progress during 1938 through the leadership of the Producers Bargaining Agency. That leadership, more experienced than in the past, will be needed to maintain the gains that producers have made and to lead them on to still greater gains.

The Producers Bargaining Agency is a practical service organization working for the benefit of all producers. Its educational accomplishments have been outstanding. Experienced producers are best qualified to help the less experienced. They have confidence in them. The Bargaining Agency has ironed out many individual producer problems and skillfully guided many producers in their desire to legally organize, at least possible expense, to help themselves and to work more effectively for the common good of all. This service must be continued.

As in the past, effort will be made to break our ranks. Some may get faint hearts and falter for awhile. Legal entanglements, into which our surplus control plan may be thrust by dealers, may hinder and delay progress, but united producers will go forward with their cause. An aggressive program must be mapped out for 1939. Our common enemies are on the defensive and they shall be kept there.

The Bargaining Agency was never more needed than right 3895 now and from now on its service will become more necessary to all and I believe more generally appreciated.

A solid foundation has been laid, the plans are drawn, the workers are united, a spirit determined to go forward prevails. All eyes are on the one objective "A living price for milk," day after day, month after month, and year after year. Again we face a new year and again we face the problems squarely and with confidence.

The past year has been filled with problems and hard work, but, with the spirit of determination that has always been shown by cooperative members, the work has been interesting and the year has slipped by quickly.

As your President, I have endeavored to do my part, and I know that your Board of Directors, your Executive Committee, your officers and employees, have taken their work seriously and, at times under most discouraging circumstances, have always done their very best. To them and to the membership I am grateful.

I know that there must be a feeling of satisfaction in the minds of all, as the accomplishments of the year are reviewed. Each has a right to be proud of being a part of this organization and proud of the part he has taken in the constructive work.

As we close the year, let each of us pledge ourselves to do, to the best of our ability, whatever task may come to us. With this spirit, the Bargaining Agency moves forward to face squarely the problems of 1939.

3896 Report of the Secretary—Mr. J. C. Treat

It is my honor and privilege at this time to submit in as brief form as possible my report as Secretary of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency.

The routine duties can be very briefly stated. Minutes of all meetings, including those of Delegate Body, of the Board of Directors and of the Executive Committee have been properly recorded and, when read and approved, have been filed and placed in the permanent records of the Agency. All papers and records belonging to the Agency have been kept under lock and key and are now in my custody as provided by the By-laws. All bills, when presented in proper form, have been submitted to the Executive Committee and, when approved, have been paid by check, countersigned by me as Secretary as provided for by resolution. The Treasurer's report and the financial statement, which is printed in detail in the report in your hands, will show that the funds of the Agency have been properly handled and guarded in a business-like manner. A list of the cooperative members of the Agency is also printed. The foregoing constitute and describe briefly the routine duties of Secretary for 1938 and as a report is respectfully submitted.

Other special responsibilities came to me as Secretary during 1938. I am not referring to duties as Director or member of the Executive Committee which duties have also taken more than the ordinary amount of time.

Early in January, the books of the Agency were subpoenaed as evidence in a lawsuit brought by Sheffield Producers Association against several producers who had broken contract. On January 21, all books, files, and records were subpoenaed by Attorney General Bennett. The subpoenaed materials were examined at the office and records which required more study, were taken away for examination. All this material has been returned.

Dealers' attempts to block producers' efforts in organizing resulted in action by Federal Trade Commission, which required personal attention on my part. The investigation took up several days of my time as witness. That our records have been kept in proper and orderly manner was proven from the comment of the investigators. Much credit for this is due Miss Stevenson.

As a member of the Executive Committee and as Secretary, there rests upon me some of the responsibility for seeing that the Agency is solvent and financially responsible. I feel justified in calling several problems, relating to this matter, to your attention. The Agency must carry on its work and meet any emergency that may arise. Always forcefully meeting an emergency tells the whole story. To do this, the Agency must be solvent at all times and funds must be available for use when needed. In other words, our expenses cannot exceed our income. On this point we can all agree.

3897 All kinds of service are requested and sometimes demanded of the Agency. This service the Agency is well equipped to give. There is no use of enumerating the types of service or the wide territory over which it is spread, for much of it has already been mentioned in the President's address. We know that service of this type costs money and we all know that money does not grow on bushes. All funds that come to the Bargaining Agency have to come from the cooperative associations that make up our membership.

Has the Bargaining Agency been really worth the cost? From a cold financial point of view should it be continued? What has the service meant to the producers in dollars and cents? Can we not roughly answer this as individuals? You remember the benefits the producers received while agencies were bargaining for prices last year. You know that millions more dollars were received by producers during 1937 as a result.

I will not attempt to make any estimate as to the increased income last year, but I do know and you know that conservative estimates, made by officials well qualified to judge, indicate that the milk producers of the Metropolitan Milk Shed received in their milk checks for September and October, the two months just past, two and a half million more dollars than they would otherwise have received. Mind you—this was secured when producer prices in other states were falling. Make your own estimate as to the total financial value to producers of the service rendered by the Bargaining Agency since it was formed. You place the dollar value where you may and I will be satisfied for the comparison that I am about to ask you to make.

Do you know that since the Agency was first formed less than 17 months ago until November 1, 1938, this Agency received from all sources combined $164,826.74? For this investment, the producers received the benefits that you have estimated. Perhaps this is not $75.00 profit for every dollar invested, but most certainly it is more than $50.00. We can all agree that even in boom times, no one heard of investments of that kind, especially when the money invested was paid in installments over a 17 month period.

Certainly producers are glad to have an opportunity to make such investments and to share in the cost of the Bargaining Agency and would even be willing to put in more money to take care of the greater service that is demanded and which, in turn, would bring still greater returns. Let us look at the record—as Al Smith would say—and see if they have. An investigation of the books shows that probably less than 70% of the producers have paid total cost of this service. It shows that all have had the benefits and that some co-operatives, not many, that have been members of the Agency and financially able to carry their full share of the expenses, have criticized and complained and growled about the Agency and its activities, but have contributed not a cent to the cause for months or in some cases not at all.

I realize the difficulties that new groups have in becoming organized, so that they can demand that their dealer set aside from 3898 the value of milk purchased, a sum that can be paid directly to the cooperative and thus the cooperative gets funds from which it can pay its share of its expenses in the Bargaining Agency. All this is known and well understood. There is a general desire on the part of most cooperatives to do their full share in every way and they are doing all within their power to overcome every obstacle that prevents them doing so, but what about some well established collecting cooperatives where Boards of Directors have the money in their own hands? What have some of them done? They have received the benefits and have contributed not one cent. I wonder if the producers, making up these cooperative associations, know the policy that has been followed by their officials. I cannot believe that they do. I believe firmly that all producers want to do their full share for the good of the cause.

The attitude of the Agency has been, from the beginning, that of a big brother. Service has been rendered freely to all. As President Rolfe said—the Agency is the logical organization that all producers come to for personal help and advice. This service the Agency must continue to render, but it is time that we state plain facts. Someone will have to pay the cost.

We must remain solvent. We are bound together for common good of all. We share equally in the markets. Producers want to share equally in giving service by paying their share. Producers must have the facts.

Perhaps some one may say these are matters that should not be included in the Secretary's report. Be that as it may, I know that I do not like to bring this to your attention. It is a matter that needs to be told. It demands the attention of all producers and I never intentionally dodge a responsibility.

Relief will no doubt come to non-collecting cooperatives as they become qualified for cooperative service differentials as provided for in Federal-State Order. There may be delays due to slight changes in by-laws or past history of policy of cooperative. We are striving to secure greater producer control and every group should work to reach a point where it can get all the benefits that are intended. When that point is reached by any group, that group will be in position to do its full share for the common good of all. Do not be discouraged but rather buckle in and get your share by doing your share.

In closing, I apologize for so long a report, but I cannot apologize for having brought the bare cold financial problem to your attention. Those who would ride without paying their share of cost may apologize if they so choose. I am merely endeavoring to carry out the duties that you have placed upon me.

I want to thank the delegates, my associates on the Board of Directors, and the employees of the Agency for their tolerance and cooperation.

3901 Report of the Treasurer—E. C. Bardin

The by-laws provide that the Treasurer shall have custody of all moneys and securities of the corporation and shall keep regular books and accounts. This has been done as the financial statements and the auditor's report indicate. As Treasurer, I am bonded and as far as I know all duties and responsibilities of the Treasurer have been properly taken care of. I have at least endeavored to see that they were.

There is not much that can be said about my report, except that it is quite evident that we are building up no surplus of money.

I second what Secretary Treat has said. His report is much to the point. I too have a few things that I would like to say about the year's work and my observations.

With field men and with directors, I have traveled approximately twenty thousand miles, spreading the gospel of cooperation. I have not tried to discuss the detail of the Order, but have dealt with the broad general program.

I sometimes wonder whether we of the Bargaining Agency realize the size of the job we are undertaking and the meaning of our accomplishments to date. We have built and have put into operation the greatest program for cooperative marketing that has ever before been attempted. It is the greatest because it is producer-built and producers share equally in the market and it gives all, including distributors, equal opportunity. Mr. Baldwin and others who have attended meetings outside of the New York Milk Shed, where farm leaders from all parts of the country have assembled, have told me of the inquiries and the interest in the work that we are doing. I say to you that the eyes of the Nation are on our work, but far more important, the hope and the future of thousands of farm families that make up this Milk Shed, are dependent on the success of our work. Success depends upon our doing our duty. We must not fail. Success depends upon you, me, and every other producer doing his full share. Each of us have a definite and sacred responsibility. We must not allow the hope of the farm people to be crushed as a result of our neglect. It is a terrible thing to destroy the hope of those who for years have fought to gain for themselves " a living price for milk." Upon those who fail to do their share, whether it is by refusing to cooperate with his neighbor, or by neglecting to give help that is needed by his cooperative association, or by failing to contribute his share to the expense involved, rests a burden that I would not want to carry.

If one knew the condition of our farm homes as I know them; if he had covered as much of the Milk Shed and had talked with as many farm people as I have this year; if he really knew the farm family and the hard work that has to be done by the father, mother, and children to get a simple wholesome living on the farm; if he 3902 knew the fear that the older members have of losing their homes and of their loved ones even going hungry, in spite of their slaving work, in contrast with the wealth and luxury that the dealer takes for directing the distribution of his milk; and then if he also knew the hope that brightens the eyes of all in the family at the thought of securing at last, month after month, "a living price for milk," due to the united producers supporting their Milk Marketing Agreement and making it effective, how could he or any human being, living in a Christian land, think of dragging the Agreement into unnecessary court litigation or cheat by conniving with chiselers or by failing to see that from his milk check his share is paid to carry on the work. We are, all of us, vitally interested, aside from the financial benefits, in the success of this undertaking.

Upon those who deliberately set out to wreck this surplus control plan and on those who fail to be as helpful as possible in making it work, rests a crushing load. When he is alone with his thoughts, his heart must be heavy. He can get little real satisfaction from the few dollars that he may gain as a reward for causing confusion and the misery that will result from it.

Those who do their full share, plus a little more for good measure, know the satisfaction that comes from a clear conscience and the knowledge that he is constructive and helpful to his fellow men.

I agree one hundred per cent with Secretary Treat when he says that all producers who have the facts and who are free to act want to help. Let us hope and let us use our best efforts to see that soon all shall share in the satisfaction that comes from being a part of this—the greatest program for cooperative marketing that has ever before been attempted.

3907 Report of the Executive Secretary—C. H. Baldwin

The President's address and the reports and remarks of your Secretary and of your Treasurer have already given an accurate and rather complete picture of the activities of the Agency since our last Annual Meeting.

This report should, no doubt, be confined to the educational and organization phase of our whole program.

In order that we may all better understand the problem and know it as some of us see it, can we not accept the following as fact:

1. We as a class (farmers) are very positive in our opinions. Our work compels us to make up our own minds.

2. We are apt to lack tolerance towards those who differ with us. We do not always give others the same right to their opinion as we claim for our opinions.

3. The big majority of people are sincere and intend to be right, honest, and helpful, but there is always the exception that proves the rule and there are the demagogues who stir up popular prejudice to gain influence.

4. There are always a few (the chronic agitator appealing to emotion, the muck rakers and the cheap blackmailers) who seem to live to create confusion and thrive on the misery they create.

5. There are those who are afraid they cannot stay in business unless they can chisel and have unfair advantage over competitors, and, therefore, use very questionable methods to cover up their inefficiencies and to keep producers divided.

6. Milk producers have been given the leavings so long that in their desperation they have followed unsound leaders at various times, which have caused them to lose money and have left them in still greater misery and confusion. As a result of this experience producers are naturally suspicious. They have been stung.

7. Understanding through education, with all the conflicting ideas is at best slow, yet progress depends upon it. Once the average producer understands the facts, he will make the right decision. Nevertheless, he does not intend to be stampeded in making decisions.

I am going to take it for granted that all believe these to be axioms that are recognized in the science of public relations as it applies to the dairy industry. Recognizing these as facts, your educational and organization program was built.

As I said last year—"Due to the inherent makeup of the Agency it must always be a democratic organization with control remaining in the hands of the producers themselves." You are to be 3908 congratulated on having had the understanding and the foresight to have adopted that principle in the by-laws of the Agency.

The Rogers-Allen Law merely gave permissive rights to producers. The Agency made that right democratic by its liberal by-laws. The policy of the Agency, which has recognized the axioms that I have mentioned, has created among producers a desire to know the truth, has invited honest study and has encouraged cooperation of all.

One of the proofs of the wisdom of this policy is the producer surplus control plan that has been so often mentioned today. The producers found the need and took the time and with sound, deliberate thought, followed by firm action, developed their own surplus control plan during 1938. When the well informed producers presented their plan to other producers, it was no wonder that support was found. And later, when it was presented by the Government vote, it was no wonder that it was overwhelmingly approved by voting producers who, by voting, were only expressing their indi-al opinions and proclaiming to all that they had done their very est in developing a program to help themselves. They said in effect "It is the best we know how to do under present conditions."

After it was adopted, they told the World that they intended it hould have a fair trial. They knew that weaknesses might develop s time went on, but they also knew that they built the plan and hat they could make changes or even discard it when they so de- ided. It was their plan and they expected that the destructive ele- ents, that we have recognized as a groveling minority that is al- ays with us, will, true to their nature, attempt to destroy it. That s a certainty. It cannot be otherwise. Accordingly, producers ntend to defend and improve their plan.

As long as the policy and the program of the Agency is kept in he hands of the producers and we keep in mind that once the aver- ge producer understands the facts, he will make the right decision, he producers will go forward with their program for greater and till greater efficiency in production, processing and marketing, with nore equitable returns to the efficient. That will mean "A living rice for milk" to the efficient producer. The progress that is made epends upon how quickly and how well the producers understand he problems and the possibilities. That, in turn, depends upon the ffectiveness of the educational program. Organization follows edu- ation as sure as day follows night.

Progress has been made during 1938 and that progress has been lue to catching up the loose ends and combining the gains that edu- ation has made over a long period. This was made possible by the ights given under the Rogers-Allen Law, the Bargaining Agency nd its democratic policy.

I know full well the popular cry for action that always goes up rom those who do not know and from those who would tear down. I know there are those who criticize the slowness with which the Agency has moved at times. There may be some who criticize the "Big brother" attitude that Mr. Treat has mentioned as having 909 been the policy of the Agency from the beginning. I know there are some who believe farmers can be stampeded or rounded p as a flock of sheep. I will admit that this possibly could be done. We have all seen examples of it in the milk strikes, in mob action and y milk control. Action secured under pressure, force or emotions, enerally lasts as long as the compelling power can retain control. f it is action secured by compulsion or by dictatorship, it is not operative effort. Such action cannot be used in the democratic olicy of the Agency remains in force.

Producers are interested in building their own program and if it s to be lasting, it must be on a foundation that is sound and four- quare with the facts. They already have that. The program will rogress and return dividends to producers in keeping with the esire and the understanding of facts by the average producer. hat understanding depends upon your educational program.

Democracy cannot exist without a well informed public; neither c this Agency nor its program.

The pests of various kinds are always busy spreading propagan and attempting to create strife in producers' ranks. That is th nature. They live for that purpose. It cannot be otherwise. Th fore, our duty is to adopt an efficient and effective means of help all producers in their desire to know the truth and accordingly m the right decisions. It is said that an army can move no faster th its slowest unit; therefore, our interest in all producers. That is t reason for the "Big brother" policy.

We must be sure to keep in touch with all producers, especia the unorganized. It must be done in the most efficient way, in ke ing with the finances and the importance of the work. It is going t take patience, time and money.

Mr. Treat in his report suggested a comparison of costs and r turns and gave the total income of the Agency since it started Taking these figures, it appears that the average producer's sh of the expenses of the Agency has been less than $3.00 for the seve teen month period, or at about the rate of $2.00 per year. For th investment, whether he paid it or his brother producer paid it fo him, he received from $100.00 to $150.00.

Not all people are members of the Church. It would be desirab if they were, and all contributed to the cause. Not all, who are me bers, contribute to the upkeep of the Church. It would be nice i they did. The Church goes on and no church member would want t see the country in which he lives try to get along without the influ ence of the Church. Perhaps for a time longer, the informed pro ducers will have to carry the load.

It would be nice if every producer could be a member of th Agency and thereby carry his share, which would be very little o the responsibility. They contribute twice that amount to milk a vertising and never know it, but that is aside from the point.

You have a plan that is worth selling. We are all always salesm whether we realize it or not. I believe that the education 3910 policy of this Agency must be made more effective and that a constructive forces should be coordinated to bring that abo and to that one point I suggest most careful attention.

When considering any program, I call your attention to your fie force. In them you have an organization that knows the power loyalty to a cause. They have gained the friendship and confiden of producers with whom they have come in contact. Always willin and sincere, they have done their best. They take no credit for r sults that have been obtained, but instead congratulate the produc for having been able to choose so well and to have put into effect constructive a program. It is a pleasure to see field men devel this loyalty to a cause and this grand philosophy.

In closing, I wish to express appreciation for the constructive s gestions and the advice we have received from many producers. I rs coming from them have been evidence to me that they were terested and we were working along the right lines.

I wish I might mention all those individuals who have given unual help to our educational program during the past year. This, course, would be impossible. I must mention a few and place first my list the American Agriculturist and its Editor, Ed Eastman ho is a great big brother to every farm family that is honestly iving to better its condition. He has cheered us on many times hen skies were black. And then I must mention Dr. A. K. Getman the State Department of Education, a true friend of agriculture d a great educator. His assistance and advice have been very helpl. Another is Ed. Babcock who has the reputation of doing his own inking and who has never turned me down when I have come to m for advice and help. Nor can I forget Ed. Barlow whose skill telling a story briefly and effectively has attracted wide attention. he State College of Agriculture and the Extension Service, the nference Board of Farm Organizations and all that it represents, e State and Federal authorities and our Bargaining Agency Market ews, the public press generally, have all been helpful.

There has never been lack of work that needed to be done and many nds have joined in doing all that was possible. Any neglect that ay have been observed has not been due to lack of interest or the sire to do all that was humanly possible. The experience that the ar 1938 has brought has been interesting to all.

As a last word, I acknowledge my appreciation for the patience and mpathetic understanding of the Board of Directors and my associes. I say thank you one and all, and history will record for all of us at 1938 in the New York Milk Shed was a year of progress in operative effort.

INUTES OF A MEETING OF MILK PRODUCERS ORGANIZATIONS HELD AT HOTEL MARTIN IN UTICA, N. Y., MAY 29, 1937, AT 10 A. M.

The meeting was held pursuant to the following notice:

Important Notice

Notice of meeting to be held at the Hotel Martin, Utica, N. Y. turday, May 29, 1937, at ten o'clock, Standard Time.

The committee which was appointed at the meeting of the organd milk producers co-operatives to wait on the Governor, with refence to the Rogers-Allen Milk Bill, met today with others invited Chairman Rolfe to consider what would be done by organized ilk producer co-operatives under such bill which is now law. This eeting was held as a preliminary to a larger meeting which is to held Saturday, and to which all interested organized milk proucer co-operatives are asked to attend.

This committee considered prevailing conditions in the market and discussed various prices and suggestions as to operation under the new law. It has approved of a rough outline of a charter and by-laws of a new Co-operative Association to be formed, to act as a producers bargaining association for the New York Metropolitan milk marketing area. This committee has been appointed to complete the terms of such proposed organization and to submit the results of their efforts to the meeting Saturday for its action. It was the prevailing opinion of the meeting that such an association should be formed now as a preliminary step toward having a production area designated by the Commissioner and to take advantage of the opportunities afforded to producers under the new law.

It was the sense of the meeting that there is at present no need for such action as to upstate marketing or production areas.

Please arrange to attend.

Homer Rolfe acted as chairman and Lloyd C. Anderson acted as secretary.

Mr. Rolfe stated that the Governor's Committee which had been selected to wait on the Governor in connection with the Rogers-Allen act had not found it necessary to take any action before the Governor and that he thought it advisable for them to form a nucleus for further action on industry matters. This committee had met on the 25th. The Secretary was requested to read the minutes of this meeting which he did. These minutes were approved.

Mr. Rolfe then read a telegram from E. R. Eastman as follows:

"Chairman ROLFE,

"Care Cooperative Milk Meeting, Hotel Martin, Utica, N. Y.

"I regret that it is impossible for me to attend Dairy Cooperative Meeting today but wish your work Godspeed; if you can work out a program that all of you can support it will be the most con-3913 structive, far reaching move for Dairy Farmers in many a long year. American Agriculturist has worked for repeal of state price fixing of milk because I believe selling milk is the dairymen's job; we have also urged both Legislature and the Governor to pass the Rogers-Allen Bill because Dairymen could not accept responsibility for milk marketing if it is illegal for them to cooperate but now you have the responsibility for selling your members milk and they are looking to you to come through with a program; no single individual nor cooperative can solve the problem but all cooperatives working together can bring the farmer fair and living prices for his milk; all progress is made by compromise; you will each have to give and take; eyes of all citizens are watching you now to see how you come through with this grave responsibility. I know you will not fail and I pledge the wholehearted and complete support of American Agriculturist first to the cooperative movement in general and in particular to any united program which you will adopt and put into action.

"E. R. EASTMAN.

"President and Editor American Agriculturist."

Nominations were then called for for permanent Chairman and Secretary. Mr. Rolfe was unanimously elected permanent Chairman and Lloyd C. Anderson was unanimously elected permanent Secretary.

Mr. Evans was called up to make a report in behalf of the committee which met in New York City to prepare a draft for the proposed certificate of incorporation and of the by-laws. He said in part that 4 of the committee met with the Legal Department of the League at New York City and at that time drew up an outline for the Certificate of Incorporation and of the By-Laws. A great many matters were discussed and they were all hashed over with the Dairymen's League and Sheffields. We were fighting for checks and balances and so were the League and Sheffields and others represented there. That he believed the documents presented represented the true compromise thought of this committee.

Mr. Sexauer was next called upon and he said he didn't know of any more he could do but to support Mr. Evans' statement and then there was a very earnest discussion of what should be set up. We went on the theory that any program that was not almost unanimously adopted should not be adopted at all. He personally felt very greatly gratified with the attitude and responsibility which the committee of 14 adopted in Utica when they selected this committee.

Mr. Skillman was called upon and he said he didn't know as there was anything he could add. That when the committee was called together it was suggested that Mr. Sexauer should act as chairman but he said "no" and Sheffields said "no" and Mr. Evans was appointed chairman of that committee.

Mr. Laidlaw said there wasn't anything he could add. That he wanted them all to understand that he was one of the sponsors of the Rogers-Allen Bill and now that we have the law he was inclined to take the position that as it is the law of the land we all ought to operate under it. This group offers more constructive opportunities than anything we have ever had. He believes that the industry is at the cross-roads to a greater extent than ever before.

3914 He regrets we are not in a position to negotiate a price for June now. He hoped enough progress could be made so this marketing organization can be in affect by the 15th or 20th of June to call the dealers together to negotiate a price for July. If something isn't done to make a price for July we are going to have trouble. If Sheffields have to negotiate a price of $1.30 for 3.5 milk that means we are going to have a lot of dairymen in New York who will cause trouble. If you take off the transportation differential and consider that many producers only have 3% milk and then take off the farm trucking the dairymen only get about $.85 a hundred. This Committee is going to offer a constructive program or you are going to have the darndest milk strike you have ever had. We must proceed with all possible haste consistent with sound progress.

Mr. Rolfe said that he wanted to say that Laidlaw hasn't magnified the situation at all.

Mr. Henry said that he couldn't add anything to what had been said about the committee's work. He doubts if the committee believed it has done a perfect job. He thinks it has submitted a plan which is pretty sound. He suggested that a discussion of the by-laws and the plan submitted would be helpful.

Mr. Treat said that he really believes there is actual sincerity in the plan. This is the most serious moment he has ever seen in his life in regard to farm industry, and he hopes we will be able to carry on in the spirit that has been manifest during all these meetings.

The Secretary was then asked to read the proposed Certificate of Incorporation which he did as follows:

Certificate of Incorporation of Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc.

We, the undersigned, desiring to form a cooperative corporation, do hereby certify as follows:

1. The name of the proposed corporation is Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc.

To carry out such other objects and purposes as may be authorized under and pursuant to said Article 4 of the Cooperative Corporations Law and as are further authorized by said Cooperative Corporations Law for corporations organized pursuant to Article 4 thereof, and in order to effectuate the purposes set forth in Section 258–1 of the Agriculture and Markets Law.

4. Its duration shall be perpetual.

5. The number of its directors shall be not less than fifteen nor more than thirty-five. The initial board shall consist of fifteen directors and the number shall be increased from time to time to give representation to additional members.

8. All the subscribers are of full age, at least two-thirds of them are citizens of the United States, at least one of them is a resident of the State of New York, and of the persons named as directors at least one is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the State of New York.

9. The property rights and interests of the members of the corporation in its capital funds shall be on a pro rata basis of amounts contributed.

10. The membership of the corporation shall be limited to cooperative associations organized under or subject to the provisions of the Co-operative Corporations Law of New York state or of similar laws of any other state and organized and controlled by milk producers.

In witness whereof, we have made, signed, acknowledged, and filed this certificate in duplicate.

Dated this ____ day of _____ 1937. Name _____ Post Office Address_____.

Mr. Rickert moved that we incorporate and that this Certificate be adopted. The motion was seconded and unanimously adopted.

There was some discussion as to whether we should proceed so fast and it was felt that it would be better to have a roll call on the motion. Mr. Cook suggested that a motion be made that we reconsider the vote by which the motion was carried and he moved accordingly. This motion was seconded and carried, and Mr. Rickert offered the following motion: He moved that we incorporate by adopting and signing the proposed certificate. My suggested motion is as to all those who are actually in a position in this market to become members.

3916 Mr. Treat seconded the motion and there being no discussion the vote was called for by associations. Mr. Rolfe said that this vote would only apply to those who operate in the New York Metropolitan market.

On roll call the following response was had: Crowley's Milk Producers Cooperative Assn. (In favor), Little Falls Coop. (In favor), Sauquoit Coop. (In favor), Brown & Bailey (In favor), Dairymen's League (Yes), Conesus Cooperative (Yes), Otselic Valley Cooperative (Yes), Sheffield Producers Cooperative (Yes), Amsterdam Cooperative (In favor of the motion but needs to be ratified by the Board of Directors), Cannonsville Cooperative (In favor), Guernsey Breeders (Yes), Lowville Cooperative (Favor very much but it will have to be taken up with Directors), Rondout Valley Producers Assn. (No response), Tri County Milk Producers (Believe will be in favor), Central Cooperative (Yes), Schuyler Junction Cooperative (Yes), Oriskany Valley Cooperative (Personally in favor), Philadelphia Cooperative (Yes, personally in favor but it must be taken up with the Board), Coventry Cooperative (Yes), Gracie Cooperative (Yes), Camden-Western Cooperative (Personally yes), Boonville Cooperative (Yes, subject to approval of Board), Horton Producers (Laidlaw) (Personally favorable but it is subject to our incorporating).

The motion was accordingly carried.

The Secretary was then requested to read the proposed bylaws. Before doing this he explained to the meeting that with reference to the Certificate which had been approved, that Directors should be decided upon, and inasmuch as most of those here present would probably join, and although some were not qualified as yet to join under the statute it would be better and leave a better feeling if the entire meeting joined in the selection of the first directors. Then the Certificate should be signed, acknowledged, and forwarded to the Department of State at Albany for their approval. That the bylaws should be gone over and while they didn't necessarily have to be binding upon the incorporators, he felt that the incorporators would feel bound by whatever action this meeting took. He further stated that practically every association here represented would have to have the direct action and approval of its Board of Directors before it could become a member and the meeting should proceed with that understanding. This met with the approval of those present. He then proceeded with the reading of the bylaws and the following action with respect thereto occurred:

Article 1, Sec. 1. Approved.

Article 2, Sec. 1. Objects.—Approved without correction.

Article 3, Sec. 1. Membership.—Approved without change.

3917 Article 3, Sec. 2, was amended to read as follows:

"Any member may withdraw at any time from membership in the corporation upon 30 days' written notice addressed to the Secretary."

The reason for the elimination of the part of the proposed bylaws was that there was a feeling that this was covered by the statute and that so long as an association had producers under contracts who had delivered milk into the market for 2 years they would be qualified to be members for a period of 2 years after they ceased to deliver milk and that if there was any question about it it could be tried out and determined in a proceeding to expel the member.

At this time Mr. Anderson stated that it was the opinion of the committee that until such time as the different associations entered into actual contracts with the Bargaining Agency that it was under no contractual relation to it.

Before this section was amended a committee composed of Messrs. Cooke, Anderson, and Sexauer was appointed to draft the amendment and the foregoing was upon their report.

At this time Mr. Evans moved that a Chairman designated committee act as a nominating committee to present a list of original directors. The motion was seconded and carried and the chairman appointed on this committee Messrs. Chapin, Kinney, McLean, Treat, and Evans.

Article 3, Sec. 3 was amended as to the second paragraph on the 5th and 6th lines so that it reads

"* * * producers represented in the Association, provided * * *".

Article 4, Secs. 1 and 2, were completed so that the fiscal year of the corporation commences December 1st and ends November 30th, and the annual meeting of the corporation is to be held the second Tuesday of December in each year.

Article 4, Sec. 3, was amended by having the last line of this section read as follows:

"* * * thereof, at least five (5) days by mail or 48 hours by telegram or telephone, before the date and time of such meeting."

Article 4, Sec. 4, was amended in the second paragraph so that the 10th line of the second paragraph reads as follows:

"* * * per cent (75% of the entire number of producers represented in the Association and also * * *"

Except as above noted the remainder of Article 4 was approved.

Article 5, Sec. 1. Quorum.—Was approved without change.

Article 6, Sec. 1. Directors and Officers.—Was approved without change excepting that Mr. Anderson said that it was the committee's intention that the bylaws read as all directors should be elected at large, but that the League and Sheffields could not have more than the number stated but that any other association conceivably could have all of the directors and that it was intended only to limit Sheffields and the League. The draft did not state the committee's intention.

Mr. Lent said that that was so and the change could be made.

3918 Article 6, Sec. 2, after considerable discussion was amended as follows:

"The officers of the corporation shall include the President, Vice President, secretary and treasurer who shall be elected annually by the Board of Directors for the term of one year. The president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer shall be elected from among the directors. Vacancies shall be filled for unexpired terms by the board in the manner provided for original elections.

"The Board of Directors shall appoint an executive secretary and an assistant treasurer which appointees shall perform such duties as shall be from time to time designated by the board. Such appointees need not be directors."

A new Sec. 3 was inserted to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. There shall be an executive committee consisting of 3 directors, including the president, as ex officio a member thereof, elected by the Board of Directors from their number, which committee shall have such powers and duties as the Board of Directors shall from time to time give them."

Old Sec. 3 was renumbered Sec. 4 and approved without change.

Old Sec. 4 was renumbered 5 and approved without change.

Article 6, Secs. 1 and 2.—Duties of Directors.—were approved without change.

Sec. 3 was amended by changing the last sentence to read as follows:

"The secretary shall give each director written notice of such meetings and the purpose thereof at least 5 days by mail or 24 hours by telegraph or telephone previous thereto."

The last paragraph of Sec. 3 was approved without change.

Article 8. Duties of Officers.—Secs. 1 and 2 were approved without change.

Sec. 3 was approved without change excepting for changing the word "company" in the second line to read "corporation."

Article 9, Sec. 1. Finances.—was approved without change excepting that the "certificates of indebtedness" was amended to read "certificates of capital participation."

Article 10, Secs. 1 and 2. Accounts and Audits.—were approved without change.

Mr. Cook said that one of the rocks upon which many associations foundered is the failure to fully acquaint the membership with the receipts and disbursements and he thought it would be a good idea to audit the books more often than annually. The best way to allay suspicion is by acquainting everyone with just how much money is taken in and how much is being expended. It was thought that the statute covered this point.

3919 Article 11, Seal.—was aproved without change.

Mr. Dale moved that the by-laws as submitted and amended be adopted by the charter members of the corporation as the bylaws of the corporation. The motion was duly seconded and unanimously carried.

Mr. Cooper suggested that there should be some official organ set up for giving information to the membership and spoke of the Dairymen's League News and Sheffield Producers publication and he thought such an organ was well worth while.

Mr. Maynard said he though that would be a good thing.

Mr. Dale pointed out that this might run into a lot of duplication as there were all ready a number of publications in the field.

Mr. Sexauer said that he thought the expense would be prohibitive and there would be overlapping of effort. He thought the organization might furnish a tear sheet which could be included with the regular publications and sent out without additional expense.

The nominating committee was then called upon to report and the report was given by Mr. Treat, The nominees for directors were as follows: Messrs. Sexauer, Coulter, Chapin, Williams, Rolfe, Skillman, Evans, Treat, Bardin, Norton, Maynard, Childs, Davy, Fitch, and Humphreys. It developed that Mr. Sheldon was not present and as it was intended that directors should be original charter members, Mr. Bardin was nominated in his place.

Mr. Anderson outlined various procedure which could be followed in connection with additional nominations, voting, etc. Additional nominations were called for but none were made. Whereupon on motion duly made, seconded, and unanimously carried, the nominations were closed and it was then moved that the Secretary cast a ballot for the nominees, which motion was seconded and carried and the secretary cast a ballot in favor of 15 nominees and they were so declared elected.

Mr. Dale said that a committee should be appointed on publicity and on motion duly made, seconded, and unanimously carried, Messrs. Maynard, Williams, and Chapin were appointed a committee on publicity.

Mr. Sexauer spoke on the advisability of uniformity and organization of unorganized groups, form of contracts, etc. He also spoke on the matter of immediate finances. He said that it was going to take some money to put this thing across and the big fellows are going to have to provide most of the money. He didn't think any one wants to have the large fellows contribute all of it. That there had been a discussion as to an assessment of $.10 per member as original contribution. It would mean about $3,500.00 for $3,700.00 to the League and $1,400.00 for the Sheffield group.

Mr. Rathbun spoke with reference to the progress made and the need for action.

The following resolution was presented to the secretary to be read at the meeting:

"Resolved: That we, the reprepresentatives of the various milk marketing cooperatives, commend Charles H. Baldwin for his constructive leadership in bringing the cooperatives together in 3920 this promising movement to stabilize and improve the milk industry in New York State."

"Be it further resolved: That we extend our appreciation to the Holstein Association for making Mr. Baldwin's services available and urge that his services in this regard be continued until a satisfactory degree of stability is attained."

The resolutions were seconded and unanimously adopted.

The directors for the new association were asked to meet together immediately following the adjournment of this meeting to consider and elect temporary officers, to discuss ways and means of selling bargaining agency idea to associations not members, to discuss and develop a uniform producer contract and to consider the advisability of asking each of the members to contribute $.10 per member to the new association as initial contribution. These suggestions were put in the form of a request for the directors so to act. The motion was seconded and carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

ORGANIZATION MEETING, TEMPORARY BOARD OF DIRECTORS, METROPOLITAN CO-OPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS' BARGAINING AGENCY, INC., HOTEL MARTIN, UTICA, N. Y., MAY 29, 1937

E. H. Skillman acted as temporary chairman and immediately H. Evans of The Central Co-operative placed in a nomination for Homer Rolfe of Sheffield Producers, to be president of the organization. This nomination was seconded by J. C. Treat of Conesus Co-operative. Nomination was approved and Mr. Rolfe was chosen. He immediately assumed the office and acted as Chairman of the meeting.

L. A. Chapin of the Dairymen's League was nominated and elected for the office of Vice President.

J. C. Treat of Conesus Co-operative was nominated and elected for the office of Secretary.

H. H. Evans of The Central Co-operative was nominated and elected for the office of Treasurer.

After a discussion it was decided to select the officers already elected along with Mr. E. H. Skillman, of the Crowley Producers, to constitute the temporary Executive Committee of the organization.

A short discussion on the matter of a selection of an Executive Secretary for the organization was carried and it was decided to offer the position to Charles Baldwin, of Albany, New York, former State Secretary of Agriculture. This action was unanimously approved by the directors.

It was moved and approved to solicit 10¢ per member as an initiation fee from all groups to start the financing of the organization. This was approved.

It was decided that the Executive Committee should meet 3923 Tuesday morning, June 1, 1937, in New York City.

All directors were present in addition to Mr. Henry, of Sheffields, Mr. Lee, of the Dairymen's League, and V. R. Tompkins, of the Mutual group.

3924 TEMPORARY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING, METROPOLITAN CO-OPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS' BARGAINING AGENCY, INC., NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 1, 1937

The following were present at this meeting—Messrs. Rolfe, Chapin, Treat, and Evans. Mr. E. Skillman was absent.

Bird, Bureau of Markets, State Department of Agriculture, Albany, N. Y.; Mr. H. J. Henry, Sheffield Producers, and V. R. Tompkins, Publicity of Mutual group.

The matter of a uniform contract for the producer to use was discussed. Also the details in the formation of their cooperatives was taken up.

Matters pertaining to Certificate of Incorporation and changes were also taken up. Mr. Birdsall took a prominent part in this phase of the meeting.

I. Application form for membership in the Metropolitain Bargaining Agency was discussed and approved. Herewith submitted:

Whereas, Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., was organized at a meeting of representatives of about twenty-three dairy cooperative associations at Utica, N. Y., on May 29, 1937, and a representative of this association took part in such meeting;

3925 IL Uniform credentials of representatives from cooperatives and their power to act on behalf of their respective cooperatives, prepared and approved.

After much discussion the copy herewith presented was the one suggested. This form to be sent to each group accompanied by a letter explaining the meaning of the power given each delegate. In each instance it was explained that cooperatives could use this form if desired, or formulate the designated power for their delegate in matters of business with the parent body.

Copy follows:

Resolved that_____ be appointed as a delegate of this association to attend all of the meetings of members of Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., for the period of one year from date unless such appointment be sooner revoked, to the end that this association may have the representative in such corporation as authorized by the bylaws thereof, and that said delegate shall have full power and authority to act for and in behalf of this association in the completion of the organization of said corporation and shall exercise such rights and powers in its operation as are conferred by the bylaws of Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., to its members.

3926 The action of the Board of Directors at Utica in setting up a membership fee of 10¢ per producer as initiation fee approved by the Executive Committee.

After considerable discussion with Mr. Bird and Mr. Birdsall in laying out a compaign to organize the unorganized producers into cooperative groups, and also invite into membership the organized cooperatives, these two gentlemen offered their full cooperation and furnished the organization with an up-to-date list of cooperatives and their official family to use in the campaign.

Meeting adjourned until Wednesday morning, June 2, 1937, at 10 A. M. at New York City.

3927 TEMPORARY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING, METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS' BARGAINING AGENCY, INC., NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 2, 1937

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 A. M. The following were present: Messrs. Rolfe, Treat, Chapin, and Evans. Mr. E. Skillman was absent.

Mr. H. Henry and V. R. Tompkins were present on invitation.

The initial topic was the matter of delegation of power to delegates selected by member cooperatives. Action taken at Tuesday's meeting was approved.

Mr. Chapin suggested that a letter accompany each form sent out, explaining in simple language that the form was a mere suggestion, but that each cooperative could designate just what powers their delegates could be clothed with in the meetings, discussions, and matters pertaining to contracts, etc.

A general discussion was held on the matter of a model form of contract used by the various cooperatives. It was the thought in mind that the one used by the Montgomery & Eastern Cooperative was very good while simple. A copy of this contract is to be sent to all member cooperatives of the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency for them to study.

At this point Attorney Miller informed the meeting the Certificate of Incorporation as presented at Albany needed certain changes—as suggested by Mr. Sharp of the Secretary of State's office at Albany—in the wording. These changes do not in any way change the meaning and purposes of corporation but were mere technicalities of law.

The committee decided to rewrite it and make the changes as suggested and resubmit it to Albany for final approval.

The committee decided to hold a general meeting Tuesday, June 8th, at the Hotel Martin, Utica, N. Y.

A discussion on the matter of an initiative in forming a dealers 3928 bargaining agency was taken up. It was the concensus of opinion that steps should be taken immediately to inform the dealers that we are ready to meet with them in the near future.

It was decided to immediately start an organizing campaign throughout the state as soon as the meeting ratified the Certificate of Incorporation, Bylaws, Board of Directors, Officers and Executive Committee and employees selected.

The Bylaws were carefully checked and after considerable discussion certain proposed amendments were suggested. These amendments are as follows:

AA. Proposed Amendments to By-Laws of Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc.

Amend Article IX by the addition of an additional section to be numbered section 2 to read as follows:

"SECTION 2. There shall be an initiation fee for each Cooperative association applying for membership in the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., of ten (10) cents for each member of the association so applying for membership, to be paid when such association is accepted as a member. The fee, however, shall be limited to those members of the applicant association whose milk is qualified for shipment to the metropolitan market.

"There shall also be a service charge of not less than two mills nor more than five mills per hundredweight for the milk equivalent of all milk or cream sold for fluid consumption by a member association in the metropolitan markets, such dumpage charge to be paid by each member association to the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., as soon as the latter be-3929 gins to function in the negotiation and sale of milk of its members, the amount of such charge to be determined from time to time at a membership meeting.

"The Board of Directors shall have power to waive or defer, for such periods as within its judgment seems sound, the collection of initiation fees or service charges it it determines that any member association does not have means of financing the payments of such fees or charges or that its milk cannot be sold to a distributor under a contract which will allow for the deduction of funds for such financing."

Financial matters were discussed and the Committee decided to employ an Executive Secretary at a salary of $5,000.00 per year, subject to negotiations. The name of Mr. Charles Baldwin was offered as a possible selection for that office.

The Committee recommends that all members of the Board of Directors and all officers receive a per diem of $10 a day and expenses on all committee meetings and work in connection with official business of the organization.

The Committee decided to recommend that a Publicity Dept. be set up whose duty would be to edit and see to the publication of the organization bulletin, to send out bulletins to the official family of the organization, to check on press clippings and assist the officers in keeping the organization's activities before the producers.

This committee recommends that V. R. Tompkins be employed to handle this work at $100.00 per month and expenses. All expenses pertaining to this department are subject to the approval and audit of the Executive Committee.

In connection with the work of the Publicity Dept., the committee recommends that an official semimonthly magazine be issued 3930 and sent express prepaid to each member group, office, or plant, and sufficient copies to take care of all producers who are members of these groups be supplied.

A discussion was held as to whether or not we should call for a blended price of three classes in our anticipated meeting with a Dealers' Bargaining Group who may meet with us in the near future. All members of the Committee present took an active part in this discussion and expressed their views. A tentative plan as follows was suggested:

Class 1—Flat price for all milk sold in fluid form.

Class 2—Flat price for all milk used for cream sold for fluid consumption. Changeable prices on cream for ice cream.

Class 3—Blended price on Federal Evaporated Milk-Butter and cheese.

At a later date the matter of an audit-on classification of dealers' books to see that the producer receives the payment for his milk in the class which it was actually used, will be taken up. These audits should be made by C. P. A. in the employment of the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency.

Meeting adjourned subject to call of President Rolfe.

Milk Measure up to Farmers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6th—A Federal-State marketing program, designed to regulate the handling of milk of the nation's richest market, the New York metropolitan area, awaited the approval of more than 60,000 Northeastern dairymen.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace approved the program and ordered a referendum to be held on August 20 among milk farmers in seven States serving the New York market. The pact must be approved by two-thirds of the dairymen before it becomes effective.

Representatives of New York's $2,000,000,000 dairy industry claimed strong support for the agreement among milk farmers, but predicted that it would precipitate a bitter controversy between dealers and the producers.

The proposed agreement establishes minimum prices for nine classes of milk, provides a marketwide pool arrangement to assure uniform prices to all producers and assesses dealers for the cost of administering the act.

At hearings preceding the drafting of the final agreement dealers lodged strong protests against the regulatory provisions. One large

New York distributor denounced the marketing pact as "discriminatory, economically unsound, and unenforceable."

Secretary Wallace, however, declared that the program "takes into consideration the consumer and distributor, as well as the dairyman."

He described the aim of the marketing pact as "to help producers and co-operative associations of producers get a reasonable price with a stable market for their milk, to treat handlers (dealers) equitably, and to assure the consumer a steady, safe supply of milk and milk products."

The Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., of New York, representing 40,000 producers, sought the Federal order after they said State control legislation had failed to stabilize conditions in the New York market. Dairymen in other States, serving the New York market, were not affected by the State's marketing regulations. About one-third of the milk received in the New York area comes from outside the State.

The Federal order, if approved at the referendum, would complement a similar order by the New York State Agriculture Commissioner and, in the opinion of Federal and State officials, provide effective control in the metropolitan market.

3932 Minimum prices for fluid milk in the proposed Federal-State pact range from $1.80 to $3 a hundred pounds during the months of April through July and from $2.05 to $3.25 during the months of August through March. They are based on the price of 92-score butter on the New York market.

On the basis of the New York wholesale butter price range of 25 to 29.9 cents a pound, the minimum price of fluid milk for the months of August through March would be $2.45 a hundred pounds. During last June the price averaged from $1.39 to $1.70 and producers received as little as $1 a hundred pounds.

Secretary Wallace said the nine classifications of milk, established in State control law, were retained in the proposed Federal-State agreement "because of the large territory of the New York milk shed, the wide variations in conditions of production and climate and the great variety of the possible manufacturing outlets for milk which is not used in the top-price fluid classes."

The agreement would require handlers to pay producers a higher price for quality or grade A milk and provides freight differentials.

An administrator for the pact would be selected by the Secretary of Agriculture and the New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and would be authorized to require periodic reports from handlers, showing deliveries and tests of milk received, the use made of this milk, and payments to producers.

The referendum will be conducted in New York and parts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Vermont.

New York City—

Milk Price Raised by "Independents"

A rise of 1 cent a quart in the price of milk set by the so-called independent distributors—as apart from that sold by the Borden Company and Sheffield Farms—has been effected, it became known.

Subject to further reverberations of the recent price war, and to the possible ramifications of the dispute between distributors and retailers over the amount of ice the latter get from the former, the move will raise the over-the-counter price of a bottle of milk to 8 or 9 cents, and of a paper container to 9 or 10. The usual deposit will apply to bottle sales.

The increase was attributed to the end of the "flush" season, usually May to July, by Leroy A. Van Bomel, president of Sheffield Farms. He confirmed the rise in the price of milk distributed by Breakstone Brothers, like Sheffield a subsidiary of National Dairy, whose milk is delivered in Sheffield trucks.

Pointing out that "milk is commanding a very much higher price," Mr. Van Bomel said Breakstone's price to the stores had gone up from six to seven cents for bottles, and seven to eight cents for containers. He said this did not necessarily imply a rise in the price of the standard Sheffield milk, but revealed that a conference between producers' and dealers' bargaining agents was scheduled for later this week.

Other sources, agreeing that the end of the flush season and recent weather factors had tended to eliminate surplus, indicated they would not be surprised if an increase in the Borden and Sheffield milk, which makes up more than half of that consumed in the metropolitan area, followed.

3933 Charles Ackerman, head of the United Independent Retail Grocers and Food Dealers Association, said its membership was "very much upset" about the increase, but could do nothing about it. The association recently threatened a sales stoppage as an outgrowth of the ice question, but the action never materialized. The association held a meeting last night to discuss the price rise.

Although Mr. Ackerman and a spokesman for one of the distributors whose rate went up agreed that Reid's Union Dairy shared in the increase, this was denied by a spokesman for the Borden Company, reached at his home. Reid milk is controlled by Borden's in an arrangement similar to that between Breakstone and Sheffield. The Borden spokesman said, after some telephoning, "There has been no change in Reid prices."

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 2nd.—Allegations of "price slashing," made at New York City milk distributors by a dairy farmers union official, were referred today by Attorney General Bennett to the State Law Department's Anti-Monopoly Bureau.

The allegations were made by Archie Wright, organizer of the union, which claims a membership of more than 13,000 up-State dairymen.

In a letter to Mr. Bennett, Wright appealed for "an immediate investigation of the activities of milk dealers in price raids."

The union leader declared several large distributors and retailers, through their subsidiaries, had engaged in "recent raids on wholesale milk prices in New York City."

NEW YORK, CITY, Aug. 5th.—

Deal to Call Off Milk War Probed

One of the large independent milk companies, charged with conducting a ruinous price war, was under investigation today by Attorney General Bennett.

The company, selling an unadvertised brand of milk, is said to have offered to stop cutting prices if other dealers agree to stabilize the price of unadvertised brands at 7 cents a quart wholesale.

New in the field, the company reputedly has built up a large business through its price-cutting practices.

Bennett's office has not ceased its quiet investigation of milk companies since its report to the Legislature in March. At that time Bennett said investigation indicated severe and cutthroat competition in the wholesale end of the independent milk field.

Some of the small milk companies have charged that not only has this large independent company called for a stabilized wholesale price, but has virtually demanded that the price be stabilized.

Further, the large company has allegedly warned the small group of companies that whoever fails to meet the standardized price will face a ruthless price war and ruin.

An upward trend in milk prices, wholesale and retail, is expected at this time because excess milk from farmers is falling off rapidly as it always does in July and August.

3934 Usually, an upward revision in prices comes in July, but it is said to have been delayed among the unadvertised brands because of the violence of the price war.

Pay by test, Jersey Producers Request

New Jersey representatives of the Inter-State Milk Producers' Co-operative appeared before the New Jersey Board of Milk Control at its public hearing on July 22, and asked for establishment of milk prices according to the butterfat content of milk. H. T. Borden, manager of the South Jersey Market, asked that a price be set for higher testing milk that would be in keeping with the higher cost of production. It was pointed out that with the present price of $2.76 per hundred pounds of 3.5 percent milk the Grade B producer is paid 78.87 cents per pound of butterfat, while the producer of 4.5 percent milk is paid 70.23 cents per pound of butterfat and 5 percent milk returns 67 cents per pound.

Requests from producers in New Jersey also favored adjusting retail prices according to the butterfat content of the milk, suggesting that Grade B milk testing more than 3.7 percent butterfat sell as an extra cent per quart. Some producers went further and asked that B milk testing more than 4.2 percent should sell at 2 cents above the milk testing under 3.7 percent.

In the face of the demand from some quarters that the retail differential on Grade A milk be reduced, it was brought out forcibly that the present differential should be maintained because of the extra cost of producing and processing Grade A milk. Instances were cited where the Grade A market disappeared when the price margin between Grade A and Grade B milk was reduced.

A group of New Jersey dealers asked that the producer price of Grade A milk be reduced to $2.76 and Grade B milk to $2.53 per hundred pounds. The dealers, in making this request, called attention to the rich pastures and abundant feed crops.

The Board is taking the requests of the various groups under consideration but as yet no announcement is available.

"The Committee" Tells the Farmers

From Dairymen's League News, July 12, 1938

Time was when the city slicker went to the country to get easy money from the farmers. Those days are in the past. Today the general run of city slickers do not attempt to fleece farmers. They have found that the average farmer is too smart for them. Now they work their urban brothers selling them most anything from worthless stocks to gadgets peddled from a sidewalk stand. It has been a long time since a farmer bought a gold brick or the Brooklyn Bridge.

Certain milk dealers, however, still appear to think themselves pretty slick and farmers just as gullible as they were in the horse and buggy days. Evidence of the low regard one dealer outfit has for the average farmer's mind came to light last week in a lengthly report that was being circulated by hirelings of the dealer outfit. The report is headed: Report of committeemen on their investigation of the Boston federal marketing order made June 6 to June 8 inclusive.

It is signed: The Committee.

3335 It is a long report. It purports to reveal a lot of things wrong with the Boston order and to show widespread dissatisfaction among New England dairy farmers with the plan. It tells of $2,000,00 being held in escrow pending court decisions. (The actual figure is approximately $1,500,000.) The report makes the startling assertion that were it not for the federal order this $2,000,000 would have been paid to farmers. Most people will disagree with that claim. Had it not been for the federal order in Boston the dealers would probably have had that much more added to their profits.

In the report of The Committee nothing is said about the dealer tactics that plunged New England dairymen into a plight that made it necessary for them to seek government help. Nothing is said of the fact that dealers fought the plan from the start. Nothing is said about the fact that the dealers have spent a small fortune in litigation trying to prevent the plan becoming wholly effective.

Ommission of facts is not surprising. Neither is distortion of facts surprising. These are common dealer practices. The surprising thing about this report is that even a dealer and his hirelings would be so cocksure as to think they could hoodwink farmers with such a sleazy document. It is a strain on the credulity of farmers to assume that they can be convinced that a three day investigation could cover the New England territory and provide accurate data for such a sweeping report.

And, it is a strain on the intelligence of farmers to expect them to accept as worthy of any consideration whatever a report signed: The Committee. What is this committee? What responsible body created The Committee? Who are the men on The Committee? Why are not their names on the mimeographed copies of the report that are being circulated among farmers?

These are questions that most farmers will ask themselves, and concluding that there's a nigger in the woodpile they will properly value the report for just what it is—dealer propaganda.

Milk Dealers Assailed

SYRACUSE, Aug. 8th.—Charges that New York City milk dealers "have already started a campaign to scuttle" the Federal State milk marketing program, "and are attempting to brow-beat farmers into voting against it" were made today by Leon A. Chapin, Franklin County dairy farmer.

"Before the ink was dry on the official document which was signed in Washington, Aug. 5, dealers began condemning the plan under which farmers hope to attain a living price for milk," said Mr. Chapin, who is vice president of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency.

"This is a fight to the death to determine whether milk dealers are going to continue dominating farmers and setting their own price on his milk, or whether the farmers are going to have a voice in determining what they shall receive," said Mr. Chapin.

Farmers will vote on the proposed order Aug. 19 and 20.

3936 Where Do We Go From Here Producers?

Producers and friends of the producers—Have you read the above statement by Mr. Chapin? Here is a gentleman who does not have much to say, and when he does he means it. Most of us feel that he is absolutely right in making the accusation. Hardly had the order been issued when several executives of large milk concerns made attacks on the order declaring it illegal and finding so many faults that we wondered if all of the brains in the world were not stored up by these large executives. Somehow or other, some people, as they grow higher in their positions of life, assume an attitude that no one else but themselves knows anything about the milk business. We do not intend at this time to discuss any political cooties, misguided editors, and news writers; or some of the leeches that fasten themselves on the producers with the one thought in mind of making a dollar. Let us talk now in plain language about milk, this Federal Order, and present conditions.

How many of you farmers want to have many milk checks like you have been receiving lately when milk has been down as low as 72¢ per hundred? Every one of you have been hit in some way or another, except those that manage to secure side money from the "pie counter." You want to make a fair living for yourself and family and the officials of the Bargaining Agency have done everything they possibly can in the past year to better your conditions. Up until February of this year things were going along at a nice level and most of you were contented with your price of milk. However, the continued sniping, and seemingly the work of an "unseen hand" was at work to disrupt the Bargaining Agency. Each week when you look into certain farm journals you found that we were all robbers, controlled by the milk trusts, and etc. However, none of these gentlemen who have become rich off of the backs of farmers have ever attended the Bargaining Agency meetings and listened to the serious discussion which was for one purpose—and that was to put the milk business in the State of New York and adjacent territory on an even bounce so that the producers could get a fair return from their milk.

Finally it was decided that the only recourse was to ask for a Federal Order. This was done, and a great many of you know how the opposition lined up many high powered attorneys and speakers who did their best to confuse the issue and even attempted to filibuster the order by stalling at the New York City hearings. After these hearings an order was presented which may not of pleased all of us, but it was better than anything that had been offered by the opposition. Please keep this fact in mind that the opposition has never offered you anything, but they have continually lambasted any plan that your leaders presented.

Now the final order is here and you are in the midst of a campaign which is being waged for and against the approval of what Washington feels is a fair proposition for the producers who furnish milk to New York City.

The mere fact that the opposition almost unanimously does not like this final order, is enough in itself to convince you that you should vote for it and go out and fight for it every step of the way.

Your leaders in the Bargaining Agency have only been elected to those offices by your votes and if you had attended a few of the recent meetings, you would of seen how some very capable men have gone down in defeat, simply because a majority vote had decided that possibly the other candidate or candidates presented better qualifications to represent you producers. Your writer has been going around the New York milk shed for the past seven 3937 years and he received his initial baptism acting as a newspaper man covering the big strike. Since that time we have attended hundreds of meetings and we personally have a mailing list of 4,900 persons that we know and have talked with in regards to milk. We receive on the average of 50 letters a week in regards to this subject. Tis' true, some of them have not been so pretty, but most of them have been fair, and from all of this knowledge gained through these years we have been able to judge the characters and capabilities of a great many producers and officials of small co-operatives.

With this thought in mind—we have often set back and digested the qualifications of the present official family of the Bargaining Agency. All in all, they a pretty sincere bunch of high class fellows, and don't let anyone tell you that they ever will sell you out by offering you any plan, expecially this Federal Order which is for your benefit. They want to secure for you the best possible prices for your milk, but they have in mind, however, to keep the industry on an even level and not make it so spotty as it has been in the past.

About the only way that you can express your approval of the officials that you have selected in the Bargaining Agency is to approve of the Federal Order that is now up for your consideration. By voting for this order you simply vote for something that is for your own protection.

Washington—

The Agriculture Department geared up its publicity machinery for a vigorous campaign to "sell" to 60,000 farmers in seven northeastern states a milk marketing program for the New York metropolitan area, the nation's biggest milk market.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace signed the marketing order last week and called on the milk producers to approve it at a referendum August 20. It must be approved by two-thirds of the producers before it becomes effective.

New Jersey will participate in the referendum which will be conducted by secret ballot. Sixteen polling places have been assigned New Jersey.

Farmers entering the polling places will be handed a blue ballot which they will mark and sign and then drop in the ballot box. When the polls are closed the ballot boxes will be sealed and shipped to Washington, where they will be opened at AAA headquarters.

The result of the referendum is not expected to be announced for three or four days after the polls close.

In New York the producers also will vote on a state marketing order to complement the federal order. The state ballots, which will be pink, will be placed in a separate box and sent to Albany for counting.

Commissioner Noyes in urging support of the orders, emphasized the need of milk control and described the proposed orders as: "fair and reasonable." He was confident, he said: "that if adopted it will stabilize conditions in our milk industry, which cannot be assured in any other way."

Support yourself by voting for these orders.

DRAFTING MILK MARKETING ORDER FOR NEW YORK

SYRACUSE, February 7.—Actual drafting of a proposed federal and state milk marketing order for the New York city market started here today.

Officers and directors of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency were in conference with representatives of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

The meeting resulted from a series of discussions by directors of the Bargaining Agency, which at the end of last week asked Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Commissioner Holton V. Noyes to lend their aid in drafting an order under the Agricultural Marketing Act and Rogers-Allen law.

It is expected that all of this week and perhaps longer will be needed to write the order, which must be drafted to meet the requirements of both the federal and state governments. When the order has the approval of both governmental agencies it will be presented to dairy farmers for open discussion at hearings and will be voted upon by dairymen, according to Edmund F. Cooke of Buffalo, attorney for the Producers' Bargaining Agency.

"The Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency has taken leadership in presenting to dairymen a concrete plan for solution of many of the difficulties confronting the industry," said Mr. Cooke in a statement today.

"The Bargaining Agency does so with no thought or intention of excluding from the conferences necessary to develop and mature a practical plan, any representative of organized or unorganized groups, but because the Agency is the only recognized legal agency under the law clothed with the power and authority to initiate such a movement. No unorganized group and no group incorporated but not a member of the Agency need feel any apprehension regarding its rights. The Agency assumes the responsibility which the law imposes upon it, by initiating a plan for the control of surplus and stabilization of prices to producers, but it recognizes too its responsibility to guarantee and protect minority rights.

"The meetings of the officers and directors of the Producers Agency are held in an atmosphere tense and surcharged with the necessity of immediate action. Conditions by which we are surrounded, 3939 create that atmosphere. When we survey the New York market we find that prices are rapidly sliding. Unless the decline can be stopped, the price to producers for milk must fall lower and lower. The political activities of the New York City administration in behalf of cheap milk persist in aggravated form.

"It is not in New York City alone that the situation cries aloud for remedy. Among producers exist evils of their own fabrication, evils which are destructive of any attempt to procure a fair and stabilized price. Small groups of producers insist upon conniving with notorious chiselling dealers at prices below those set by the Producers Bargaining Agency. In several instances these producers are willing to sell to these dealers without any commitment by dealers as to prices. These producers, with their 5,000 or 6,000 cans of milk in the hands of unconstructive dealers, are responsible more than any other factor for prevailing conditions.

"The question is: How long will producers as a whole, tolerate a collusion between producers and dealers which is destructive of a fair price to all producers? Unless farmers are satisfied to accept economic domination by a wilful minority some remedy must be sought and applied.

"To a greater or lesser extent, farmers have been confronted by indentical situations year after year, and the only effect upon a large part of the industry has been discussion without remedy or action. In those years, concentrated action was difficult because the major portion of the industry was unorganized. That situation has been completely reversed. In the Producers Bargaining Agency more than 50,000 of the less than 70,000 producers in this Milk Shed are represented through 102 cooperatives.

"That force combined with the active support of many producers not members of the Agency should be effective enough to eradicate many of the destructive influences which now block progress. To the aid of these producers backing a constructive program must be brought every aid designed by state and federal government for establishing processes of stable and orderly marketing to preserve and develop this vital industry. There remains but one alternative. That involves invoking state and federal assistance in the establishment of a federal and state order.

"Farmers have their choice between disorder, confusion, and financial failure, and the adoption of a rational system of orderly business conduct. Other milksheds equally distressed and oppressed have through state and federal assistance achieved the stabilization. No oppressive measures have been engaged to obtain results. No valid reason exists for doubting that farmers here can attain as much. The results will depend upon the dairymen; upon the equality and integrity of their leadership; and the intelligence and activity of every producer. Continuing without remedy the future outlook is without promise. With governmental assistance farmers can expect helpful results."

METROPOLITAN COOPERATIVE MILK PRODUCERS' BARGAINING AGENCY, INC., ONONDAGA HOTEL, SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Immediate release.

SYRACUSE, April 5—Dealer opposition to a proposed federal milk marketing order stood today as the "main obstacle to be overcome in the battle to obtain for farmers a living price for milk," said Homer S. Rolfe of Lisbon, president of the Metropolitan Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency.

Directors of the Producers' Agency met at the Onondaga Hotel and spent the day examining the latest draft of the proposed marketing order. Mr. Rolfe expressed the belief that within another ten days the order will be in such shape that application can be made to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and New York State's Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets Holton V. Noyes to call public hearings.

"We are proceeding as rapidly as possible with the final drafting of the order in which we have been helped by assistants of Secretary Wallace and Commissioner Noyes," said Mr. Rolfe. "Only a few minor details remain to be worked out and then the order will be ready for public presentation to dairy farmers by the federal and state governments.

"Despite our haste in getting this order ready to prevent a complete collapse of farmers' milk prices, it is evident that the dealers are equally as fast in laying plans to prevent the order becoming a reality. Some of the Bargaining Agency directors indicated today that dealers are already working throughout the milk shed to block adoption of the order. It is apparent that the dealers are going to present a united front in opposition to the order when it comes to public hearings. We have information indicating that they are contemplating making use of various consumer groups in their fight against the farmers attempt to obtain a fair price for milk. We know that some dealers have already started work among different groups of farmers to create opposition to the order by planting false statements, nurturing petty zealousies, and promoting group animosities.

3941 "It is plain that if we are to succeed in enlisting the governmental aid available to farmers to obtain a better income there will have to be a general uprising among producers in demand for this kind of help. I am confident, however, that the hard pressed dairymen of this state will give this movement their full support and free themselves from the dealers' yoke that has dragged them down during the last decade."

Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, N. Y.

Immediate release.

SYRACUSE, April 7—Officials of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency returned from Albany today with the announcement that formal requests for joint state and federal public hearings upon the proposed milk marketing order will be made this week.

Leon A. Chapin, North Bangor, vice president; J. C. Treat, Honeyoe Falls, secretary; and Earl C. Bardin, West Winfield, treasurer of the Producers' Agency, were in conference with Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, Holton V. Noyes, Wednesday. Also present at the conference were representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Bargaining Agency officials announced upon their return, that at Wednesday's conference the draft of the proposed marketing order which is to be the basis for public hearings was completed.

Next step is the formality of making a formal request to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Commissioner Noyes to call public hearings. That will be done this week and it is expected that announcements calling the hearings will be issued next week. It is understood that several hearings will be held throughout the territory. Two weeks must elapse between issuance of the call for hearings to comply with requirements of governmental procedure.

Bargaining Agency officials were elated over the progress that has been made in the last fortnight toward providing dairymen an opportunity to enlist state and federal assistance in their attempt to obtain a living price for milk.

After public hearings have been held the Secretary of Agriculture will provide means by which dairy farmers may vote on the marketing order.

3944 Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency, Inc., Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, N. Y.

Immediate release.

SYRACUSE, March 28—The Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency is moving forward on two fronts this week to bring about improvement and stabilization of dairy farmers' prices for milk.

Charles H. Baldwin, executive secretary of the Agency, declared today that the directors of the Agency are going to "develop an alternative plan for price stabilization to be ready in case of any failure or delay in obtaining federal and state aid."

Officers of the Agency are in Washington today and Tuesday conferring with Department of Agriculture officials on a plan to obtain joint federal and state government assistance.

"Delegates of the Producers' Agency," said Mr. Baldwin, "have decided that it would not be wise to have all their eggs in one basket. They have instructed the directors to formulate an alternative plan and laid down the nine fundamental features upon which such plan shall be based."

The nine fundamental features were enumerated as follows:

1. Survey of all available milk supplies, both controlled and uncontrolled.

2. Formulate detailed methods of temporary control of supplies at present uncontrolled.

3. Formulate detailed methods for disposal on best possible basis of any supplies unsold at stabilized prices fixed by Producers' Bargaining Agency.

4. Formulate detailed methods for supplying, through absolutely controlled channels, milk necessary for children, hospitals, etc.

5. Formulate detailed methods of allocating, as well as possible, the benefits of serving dealers who pay the prices established.

6. Formulate methods of allocating, as well as possible, the burdens of surplus disposition of milk which loses its market by refusal of dealers to pay prices.

3945 7. Formulate detailed methods of contracting firmly with dealers who buy at established Bargaining Agency prices.

8. Investigate legal methods of cooperating with other producer groups to accomplish stabilization.

9. Contract with such groups, insofar as legally possible, to carry out the stabilization program.

Mr. Baldwin said the Agency is hopeful of obtaining joint action by the United States Department of Agriculture and the New York State Department of Agriculture and the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets to provide methods of controlling milk prices paid farmers.

"There is always the danger," he said, "that selfish dealers may succeed in blocking our efforts. We know that efforts are being made in that direction now. It is for that reason that the delegates of this Agency have instructed the directors to draft an alternative plan which can be put into effect any time it is needed."

For the Dairymen's League News Issue of July 20, 1938

New York Milk Shed dairy farmers, angered by dealer propaganda against the proposed Federal and State milk marketing order and delay in voting, have sent representative leaders to make thorough investigations of actual conditions in the Boston Milk Shed where a Federal milk Marketing order is now operating.

Not one, but many dairy interests in the New York milk shed are represented by independent investigating groups studying dairying conditions in New England this week. Last week's News reported the extensive tour made by E. C. Bardin, President of the Sauquoit Valley Farmers Cooperative, Inc., and Treasurer of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency. This week the visiting groups include some of the most liberal and some of the most conservative of the dairy leaders of the New York area.

Stanley and Felix Piseck, Poland, N. Y., dairy leaders who have been stormy firebrands of many tense situations in the history of milk marketing during recent years, are making a personal tour of inspection in the Boston area to see for themselves what the Federal marketing order there is doing for the farmers. Stanley Piseck, strike leader who warned dealers during the recent series of Federal and State hearings not to try the farmers' patience too far, made the following statement before leaving with his brother for Boston:

"Can it be that Federal assistance is as unpopular among producers in the Boston area as the dealers would have the farmers believe? Or are these reports distorted and magnified to give a false impression? That's what we're going to find out!"

Mr. Piseck said that no thinking dairy farmer was in favor of letting the dealers continue to classify milk and set prices as they saw fit. We as producers must control the "surplus." "I know," he said,

"that producers in the New York Milk Shed are quite thoroughly dissatisfied with present-day prices and with the dealer control that causes them. I can understand how some producers in the Boston area, even with Federal assistance, may still be dissatisfied with present prices; dissatisfaction always has and always will be present in some meaure—that's the germ of progress any industry needs. But the poisoned statements, the exaggerated reports, that are being spread by dealers, milk brokers, and farmers under their control, are too far-fetched to be believable. I think the only farmers who know the facts and who still oppose farmer control of the market are 3947 getting paid by the dealers to spread this false propaganda.

But these misinformers are no longer leaders. Their one time leadership has crumbled. Leadership to be successful and endure must be sincere."

"We are determined to get first-hand information," Mr. Piseck said, "and we are doing our bit at this time to help farmers to know the truth about what is going on in the Boston Milk Shed where a Federal Marketing Order is being tried. The propaganda-spreading dealers representatives from now on will have to build more than spooks and hobgoblins to hide behind. Mere rumors and stories will not hold water when the facts are available to everybody."

Distrust of dealer propaganda is not confined to any one dairy group. At the very hour that the Piseck brothers were crossing the Massachusetts State Line on their way to Boston, another party of New York Milk Shed dairy leaders was filling another automobile for a similar expedition. In the car were Homer S. Rolfe, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., a director of Sheffield Producers Cooperative Association, Inc., and president of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency; Ross Kinney of Amenia, N. Y., and D. D. Burditt of Vermont, directors of Sheffield Producers. These men will spend several days studying conditions in the Boston Milk Shed and will call also on the Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of Vermont, as well as other Vermont officials and producers.

Two other outstanding dairy leaders now on their way to New England for the same purpose are J. C. Treat, president of the Conesus Cooperative and secretary of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency and Ernest Strobeck, of the Executive Committee of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association and a Director of the Producers Bargaining Agency. Mr. Treat and Mr. Strobeck will visit many dairy farmers at their farms throughout New England and will return with first-hand information on what the farmers themselves think of the Federal Marketing order as it is operating right now in New England.

It has often been pointed out by New England farmers that although the marketing order there was voted in by only a slight majority over the required percentage, the farmers are now for the plan by more than five to one. Milk Prices there have been higher than they would have been without the order and even with about 25 cents a hundred held back by the dealers the farmers still receive more than they would have received without the order. When the courts decide on the question of the 25 cents a hundred, the farmers will receive this amount of back payment for all milk they have delivered since August 1937, amounting to more than a million and a half 3948 dollars, if the decision is in their favor as they expect. They will also receive this increased amount for all future milk delivered.

Reports of several of the New York Milk shed investigating parties have been coming in day by day to Charles H. Baldwin, executive secretary of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, from the various touring groups.

"The different parties of New York Milk Shed farmers have encountered various conditions," Mr. Baldwin said as the News was going to press, "but one common reaction is expressed by all. Every man who goes through the Boston Milk shed and witnesses conditions there with his own eyes reports the farmers there strongly behind the marketing order. As Mr. Bardin said upon his return last week, 'Seeing a handfull of disgruntled producers or dealer stooges might give dealer representatives the information that they desire. Casual Comparison of prices in various sheds without considering the factors that differ so widely might also give figures for comparison which would well serve the dealer. To get a true picture, representative producers living in various parts of the shed must be interviewed. There are other very important factors covering market conditions in Boston that have to be given consideration.' All thorough studies report dairymen in New England as saying that without the Federal order they would be completely at the mercy of the dealers, just as farmers in the New York milk shed are now. There's no doubt but that the order is successful in the Boston area and that a similar order, coupled with the additional support of a State order, would greatly benefit farmers in the New York area."

New York Milk Shed farmers, Mr. Baldwin declares, would benefit even more than Boston farmers have, for various reasons. For one thing, he points out that while in the Boston area the State and Federal officials are working independently, in the New York area the Federal and State department of agriculture officials work hand in hand and have already joined cooperatively in working out identical marketing orders which will throw the coordinated authority of both Federal and State governments on the side of the farmer when the marketing plan is voted into operation. Besides, Mr. Baldwin points out that there is a much greater percentage of membership in the Metropolitan Co-operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency here than there was in the New England Milk Producers Association before the Boston order was put into effect. And as Government officials 3949 have frequently pointed out, both here and in Boston, the better organized farmers are in any area, the better any marketing order will operate.

"The feeling among farmers of the New York Milk Shed," Mr. Baldwin declares, "is overwhelmingly in favor of the proposed Federal and State marketing order. I believe that the farmer vote on the plan will be the most decisive victory for farmer control of the market and A Living Price for Milk ever seen in the history of our milk shed."

SHEFFIELD PRODUCERS CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Certain information about the Association and the computation of milk prices paid its members, from May 1933 to and including March 1938. Prepared at request of Federal and State officials, for submission on May 16, 1938, relative to certain proposed milk marketing orders.

3951 SHEFFIELD PRODUCERS CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Foreword

The Association has been requested by Federal and State officials to make available information about the prices paid its membership in recent years and the manner in which they were computed, for the light this information would cast upon the proposed milk marketing orders to be considered at public hearings of May 16-20, 1938. This information is presented in a sincere desire to co-operate with those officials by making readily available information which they consider to be of public interest. The Association does not present this information either in support of the proposed orders or in opposition to them.

Organization

The Association was incorporated on May 6, 1927, under article 8 of the Co-operative Corporations Law of New York State. Prior to August 1, 1937, its membership was composed exclusively of persons producing milk and delivering it to plants of Sheffield Farms Company, and its membership still is composed primarily of such persons. From 1922 until 1927 Sheffield producers were organized in an unincorporated association known as "Sheffield Farms Company Producers." The 1927 certificate of incorporation was 3952 amended July 29, 1937, to provide that the Association could sell to other dealers than Sheffield Farms Company.

Membership

In 1922 there were about 3,000 Sheffield producers, in 1927 there were over 10,000, in November 1934 there were about 15,000, in July 1937 there were about 13,000, and at the present time there are less than 11,000. These producers are mostly in New York State, but there are substantial numbers in Pennsylvania and Vermont, which are now a greater percentage of the total membership than in previous years.

Membership Contract

Prior to November 1934 no separate written contract was executed between each Sheffield producer and the Association, but since then all Sheffield producers have been required to sign the marketing contract as a necessary condition of membership in the Association. Information about the contract and the reasons for its adoption, together with its text, is to be found in "The Sheffield Producer" for November 1934. A duplicate original of the contract is given to each producer signing it.

The Sheffield Producer

This is a monthly magazine or pamphlet printed for the Association and distributed to all its members. It has been published 3953 each month commencing with May 1927. Until recently it was distributed through the plants and milk haulers of Sheffield Farms Company, but it is now published at Cobleskill, New York, under the immediate supervision of the Association Secretary and distributed to the members by mail from Cobleskill.

Directors

There are 17 directors of the Association, corresponding to the 17 districts into which the membership is divided. A director for each district is elected once in three years, or when a vacancy occurs. Election is by vote of the delegates of the respective district. A local section is composed of the members delivering to a particular plant, and each local section elects one delegate to participate in the district election of a director.

Sheffield is Association's Principal Customer

The Association owns no plants or other facilities, and does not physically handle any milk. Its main function is to bargain with Sheffield Farms Company monthly for the price to be paid its members for the milk delivered during each month. Until August 1937 Sheffield Farms Company was its only customer, necessarily by terms of the certificate of incorporation. Since then a few sales of milk have been made to affiliated companies, but Sheffield Farms Company remains substantially the only customer. The milk is all delivered to Sheffield plants and paid for by checks mailed on the 15th of each month from the Company to each producer.

395 Association Is Principal Sheffield Source

In every month in recent years Sheffield Farms Company has received milk from sources other than the Association, and in some months it has purchased substantial quantities from such sources. These consist of groups of producers delivering to Sheffield plants but not members of the Association, purchases from affiliated companies, and purchases of milk and cream in the open market. However, the Association has at all times since 1922 been the principal source of supply for Sheffield Farms Company.

Quantities of Milk Handled

The volume of the milk sales from the Association to Sheffield Farms Company is shown by the following figures, which are the total pounds for each recent year:

1925	708, 303, 961	1932	1, 327, 943, 532
1926	840, 732, 370	1933	1, 241, 597, 086
1927	901, 700, 813	1934	1, 302, 837, 505
1928	955, 084, 072	1935	1, 340, 759, 797
1929	1, 022, 080, 495	1936	1, 403, 509, 034
1930	1, 183, 227, 771	1937	1, 112, 270, 668
1931	1, 293, 401, 571

3955 According to the Ernst & Ernst audit, Sheffield Farms Company handled in 1936 a total of 1,446,278,346 pounds of milk, so far that year the milk supplied by the Association was about 97 percent of the total milk handled by the Company.

Manner of Computing Price

In five months of 1937 the members of the Association were paid flat prices agreed upon and announced in advance of each month. With that exception, and excepting about 20 percent of the total milk, described as "interstate" and sold at a flat price during the last two years of State milk control, the price has always been upon the classified plan, at least since 1926. Before and since the period of State milk control the class prices were and are negotiated in advance of each month. From May 16, 1933, to March 31, 1937, they were set by State milk control officials, as to the milk under their control. Since July 1, 1937, the class prices have been those negotiated by the respective Bargaining Agencies.

A tabulation is appended which shows the more important steps involved in recent years in figuring out the actual producer prices from the class prices. Practically all of this data has been published in The Sheffield Producer or otherwise distributed to the members, but this may be its first publication in composite form.

Inasmuch as it is impossible, within reasonable limits of space, to show all the details of the computation, and some of the data 3956 is not strictly comparable throughout all the period covered, the following comments may be important:

"Total Pounds Delivered" of course means the total milk supplied from the Association to Sheffield Farms Company. In some recent months small additional quantities were delivered for use by other dealers for prices at least as favorable to the Association. In every month shown the Company handled some milk from other sources and hence not included in these figures.

"Class 1 Price" and "Class 2–A Price" is the price set by the New York State milk control officials to and including March 1937. Where the price changed during a month the average is weighted according to days at each price, but not according to quantities of milk handled by the Company. The class prices for July 1937 and subsequent months are those set by the Bargaining Agency, which also set the flat prices for September and October of the same year.

"Percent Class 1" and "Percent Class 2–A" has a peculiar significance from February 1935 to March 1937, inclusive, because of the way "interstate" milk was reported during that period. In January 1934, for instance (and the same was true for all months except those just indicated), each percentage expresses the relationship between the total milk sold from the Association to the Company and the portion of it used for the particular purpose. That report shows:

	Percent	Price
Class 1, Fluid Milk, N. Y.	59.276	$2.305
1-A, Fluid Milk, N. J.	7.714	2.11

The present tabulation combines the percentages and quotes only the New York price.

3957 But the report for January 1936, for instance, is prepared along different lines. It shows:

	Percent	Price
Class 1, Fluid Milk, N. Y.	54.704	$2.45
1-A, Fluid Milk, N. J.	6.001	2.33

etc., making up 100 percent of the New York produced milk, and then shows that this was only 78.132 of the total milk sold from the Association to the Company, the remainder being produced in other States and not classified. Assuming that the "interstate" milk was used 90 percent for Class 1, the percentage from January 1936 comparable with that of two years earlier would be 67.11 instead of 60.705 shown in the tabulation. Upon the same assumption pricing the "interstate" milk for January 1936 at $1.70 instead of $2.45 was equivalent to a special allowance of $.1278 per hundredweight upon the total milk delivered that month. The assumption is approximately the fact, but exact figures about use of the "interstate" milk are not in the Association's files.

"Pounds transferred" includes milk received at one plant and transferred to another for better utilization. "Extra plant handling cost" is the rate per hundredweight allowed for extra handling of that milk and "average cost of hauling" is the average amount per hundredweight allowed for hauling it from plant to plant. "Allowance for hauling and handling" is the total allowances for those services on transferred milk, expressed in cents per hundredweight applicable to the total milk delivered.

"Allowance for mailing checks, etc.," which has been uni-3958 form at $.0225 throughout the period involved, covers a range of services such as are performed by some other associations for their members, as stated in a Federal Trade Commission report made in 1936. The nature of the "special allowance" is probably best indicated by the name it received in early 1934, "discounts to meet competition." Those allowances taken in February, March, and April 1934 were not permanently retained by the Company, but were used to increase payments in May and June of the same year. The "special differential" paid in August 1936 was an arbitrary increase of 10 cents per hundredweight added by the company to what would otherwise have been the price. The allowances made in recent months have not been broken down in statements to producers but are lumped together as "service differentials per contract." These are shown under the heading, "total allowance." The "interstate" milk factor was not included in that total for the period during which it existed.

Subtracting the total allowances and the milk publicity tax item from the classified value of the milk results in the figure described as "net price to Association." No such figure is used in the actual accounting, but that figure (subject, of course, to differentials for butterfat and freight, and Grade A premiums) is the amount per hundredweight which is the net cost per hundredweight to the Company, assuming that the tax is a general expense. The Association is paid dues of $.005, and the members are paid the amounts shown as "net price to members," which is for milk of 3.5 butterfat, delivered at plants in the 201–210 mile freight zone, exclusive of Grade A premiums.

3950 Month	Total pounds delivered	Class 1 price	Class 2-A price	Per cent class 1	Per cent class 2-A	Pounds transferred	Extra plant handling cost	Aver. cost of hauling	Allow. for hauling and handling	Allow. for hauling hacks, etc.	Special allowance	Interstate milk			Milk publicity tax	Net price to assn. DECEMBER 20, 1938.

E. M. HARMON, Market Administrator,
N. Y. Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area,
95 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Today, I had a telephone conversation with Mr. Noyes in regard to the determination of the five-cent co-operative differential for this co-operative. Mr. Noyes said that this determination was made by him and the Secretary of Agriculture, on termination was made by him and the Secretary of Agriculture, on your recommendation.

Your office has informed us that the determination was made entirely by the Commissioner and Secretary of Agriculture. Now, we want to know where and to whom we are to look for a settlement. If we are not entitled to this five cents, we want to know why we are not, and if we are entitled to it we want to know why we do not receive it.

The farmers in this section feel that your office looks to the Bargaining Agency for advice and guidance and they believe that the Bargaining Agency is not acting in a manner fair or beneficial to them. This feeling was intensified by an article which appeared in a Dairymen's League paper about the Co-operative in Chateaugay. This statement contained statements which were absolutely false and definitely injurious to every co-operative in the state.

If this co-operative is to go along with the Marketing order, as it has done from the beginning, we must have some definite information for them at once. We will consider it a great favor if you can give us some definite information within the next few days.

Yours very truly,

Clinton Co. Dairymen's
Co-op. Association, Inc.
ELMER STAFFORD, President.

MARKET ADMINISTRATOR NEW YORK METROPOLITAN MILK MARKETING AREA

Federal Order No. 27. Issued By The Secretary Of Agriculture
d New York Official Order No. 126. Issued By The Commissioner Agriculture And Markets. Telephone: MUrray Hill 3-2940. 95 dison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

DECEMBER 23, 1938.

. Elmer Stafford, President, Clinton County Dairymen's Coopera-ive Association, Inc., Plattsburg, New York.

Dear Mr. Stafford: Your letter of December 20 is certainly ite a surprise. There must be a misunderstanding. This office s never, at any time, made any recommendation as to the status of y cooperative in the market with regard to payments from the Procer Settlement Fund, either to the Secretary of Agriculture or to mmissioner Noyes. Neither do we believe that Commissioner yes has in any way indicated that he was acting on recommendans from this office. Since this is the fact, your insinuation that s office "looks to the Bargaining Agency for advice and guidance" just as ridiculous as it is unjust and uncalled for. No powers atever are delegated to us, either by the Secretary or the Com-ssioner, and there is no opportunity for doing anything other than ing right down the road on the Order as outlined. So far as these perative determinations are concerned, they are made entirely by e Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets in Albany and by the cretary of Agriculture in Washington, and our only part in it is make the proper deductions from the Producer Settlement Fund d the proper payments to cooperatives when they are due. In the ht of the facts, your insinuations are unjust and unfair, and we ent them.

In your last paragraph, you say, "If this cooperative is to go along th the Marketing Order as it has done from the beginning . . ."
an only reply that your cooperative is not in compliance with the rketing Orders. We have not received payments to the Producer ttlement Fund which were due on November 18, nor have we re-ved the amounts which were due on December 18. As a result, have been obliged to report your organization to the Secretary of griculture and to Commissioner Noyes for having failed to make ur payments in full.

We are anxious to cooperate with every organization in the Milk

It is further stipulated and agreed by and between the parties as llows:

1. The average daily fluid-milk shipments to New York City for e months of August and September 1938 were approximately as llows: By railroad in tank cars, 1,380,000 quarts; by tank trucks, 60,000 quarts.

In addition to the foregoing, approximately 140,000 quarts daily re shipped by rail and road in 40-quart cans.

2. The allowances for trucking milk, which are provided in Arti- VII, Section 6, Sub-section 1 of Order No. 27 and Official Order . 126, represent the approximate cost of shipping milk by tank ucks.

3. The standard rate approved by the Interstate Commerce Com- ssion for shipments of milk by rail in tank cars from points 201– miles from New York City is 2.7 cents per gallon, equivalent to 2 cents per hundredweight. The freight differentials in Order No. and Official Order No. 126 are approximate to the nearest half- t of the differences per hundredweight between this standard tank- rate for the 201–210-mile zone and such rate for each other ten- le zone. These standard tank car rates are 70% of the standard es for the shipment of milk in 40-quart cans in less-than-carload s. Truck competitive rates have been established at certain points ich are somewhat lower than the approved standard tank car rates those points.

4. Where shipment is made by rail in tank cars or in cans to a city nt not on railroad tracks, there is an additional cost for transpor- ion between the rail terminal and the city plant. Where shipment tank truck is from the country receiving plants to city plants, the k truck delivers the milk to the city plant and the trucker's charge truck-operating cost covers such delivery to the city plant.

Opinion

Cooper, J.

10835 . This suit was brought by the Secretary of Agriculture in the name of the United States for a mandatory injunction to compel the defendants to comply with the provisions of order No. 27 issued by the Secretary on August 5th, 1938, effective September 1, 1938.

The order was issued by the Secretary to make effective the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement act as amended in 1937.

The order is concerned only with milk produced by producers approved by the City of New York for sale in interstate commerce in the Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area, consisting of the counties in New York City and the Counties of Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester.

Order 27, among other things provides for the payment, by non-cooperative dealers, called proprietary handlers, who buy milk from the producers, of a minimum price to the producers.

It also provides for the payment by all handlers, proprietary or cooperative, under varying conditions, of certain moneys into a milk pool or equalization fund, called Producers Settlement Fund, and also for withdrawals from that fund, chiefly by cooperatives.

This suit is brought to compel payment by the defendants into this Producers Settlement Fund of the following sums in compliance with the terms of order No. 27.

	September	October	November
Jetter Dairy Co	Paid	$14,616.06	$9,038.77
Rock Royal	$3,616.56	3,058.24	1,805.74
Schuyler Junction	1,903.00	1,337.40	737.66
Central New York	20,115.56	19,581.60	11,089.13

Similar amounts are claimed to be due for each succeeding month.

The State of New York has a statute called the Rogers-Allen Law similar to the Federal Act to cover milk produced by like approved producers for sale in intra-state commerce in the Metropolitan milk marketing area and under authority thereof the Commissioner of Agriculture, Farms, and Markets, of New York State, issued his order No. 126.

The two orders are complimentary and are administered by the same administrator appointed by each sovereignty.

The State Commissioner intervened as party plaintiff with 10636 the consent of the original plaintiff as did the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association, Inc., and also the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc. But the latter two were allowed to intervene only to help the original plaintiff to defend against acts charged against them by the defendants relating to the referendum, and other things more fully referred to hereinafter.

Three of the four defendants are incorporated cooperative associations and the fourth, the Jetter Dairy Company, is a proprietary handler.

It is not questioned here as the Court understands it, but that the milk of all four defendants reaches the Metropolitan marketing area through the channels of interstate commerce and that they are subject to Federal Order 27 if the Federal Statute and order 27 are valid and are not subject to State Order No. 126.

So the decision here is based on the Federal Order 27 and little attention will be given to State Order No. 126.

Order No. 27 is lengthy and somewhat complicated. That order is attached to and made a part of this memorandum. Parts of it will be referred to herein.

The Secretary contends that Order 27 was appropriate and necessary to effectuate the provisions of the Statute and asks that the defendants be compelled to comply with it by paying the aforesaid sums.

The defendants assert, on various grounds to be more particularly referred to later herein that the order is invalid, that its approval in the referendum of producers was procured by misrepresentation of its terms, that its terms, operation, and effect, and the statute under which it was issued, are so discriminatory that it will confiscate the defendants' property, if enforced, and both statute and order are unconstitutional in operation and effect.

That act reenacts and amends some of the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 (48 Stat. 31) as amended by the Act of August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 750).

The purpose of the act is set forth in the "declaration of policy" contained in section 2 of the Act. That purpose is to establish prices to farmers at a level which will give agricultural commodities a purchasing power, in relation to articles that farmers buy, equivalent to the purchasing power possessed by such commodities in the so-called "base period."

The attainment of the farmers purchasing power at such level is to be had by creating and maintaining orderly marketing conditions for agricultural commodities in interstate commerce through the exercise by the Secretary of Agriculture of the powers conferred by the Act.

The goal sought through the act is to regain for the farmers the favorable financial conditions which they enjoyed without any economic or marketing control during the base period which was about 25 years ago and before the world war.

The regulation of marketing conditions in agricultural commodities in interstate commerce through the machinery provided in the Act is merely a means of reaching and thereafter maintaining the goal sought. The act is in no sense an emergency measure, but is to continue until the Secretary determines that the exercise of the powers therein conferred is no longer necessary or, possibly, is ineffective to obtain the desired object.

The means provided for attaining this object is the issuance by the Secretary of Agriculture of orders applicable to persons engaged in the handling in Interstate Commerce of certain agricultural commodities. Milk is one of the specified commodities (Section 8 (c) (2)).

Orders are to be issued when the Secretary has reason to believe that the issuance of the order will tend to effectuate the declared policy of the act with respect to the particular commodity involved when he so finds upon evidence introduced at a hearing of 19338 which he has given due notice (Section 8–C (3) (4)). Such an order may be issued with respect to the commodity if the handlers of not less than 50% of the volume of such commodity produced or marketed out of the particular area defined in the order shall sign a marketing agreement which regulates the handling of the commodity in the manner provided in the order (Section 8–C (8)).

Should 50% of such handlers refuse to sign such an agreement an order may nevertheless be issued if the Secretary determines that their failure so to sign the marketing agreement tends to prevent effectuation of the declared policy of the act and that the issuance of the order is the only practical means of advancing the interests of the producers (Section 8 (c) (9)).

Whether an order is issued in connection with a marketing agreement under Section 8–C (8) or without such agreement under Section 8 (c) (9), the order must be approved by two-thirds of the producers of such commodity or the producers of two-thirds of the volume thereof, who during a representative period, to be determined the Secretary, were engaged in the production of such commodity for sale in the marketing area to which the order applied (Section 8-C (8) and (9)).

In order to determine that approval, the Secretary may conduct a referendum of producers, and if two-thirds of those represented in the referendum approve, that is sufficient (Section 8 (c) 19).

In conducting such referendum the secretary shall consider the approval or disapproval by any cooperative association of producers bona fide engaged in marketing the commodity or product thereof, covered by such order, or in rendering services for or advancing the interests of the producers of such commodity, as the approval or disapproval of the producers who are members of, stockholders in, or under contract with such cooperative association of producers (Section 8 (c) (12)).

A number of terms and conditions are set forth in the act, one or more of which must be contained in all orders.

These terms and conditions include provisions prohibiting unfair methods of competition and unfair trade practices and, except in the case of fluid milk or cream to be sold for consumption in fluid form, provision for sale of commodities only to be at prices fixed by the handlers and also a provision for the selection of the agency to administer the order.

Besides these general terms common to all orders, the Statute states particular terms or conditions to be included in orders relating to milk and its products. Section 8 (c) 5.

None of these terms and conditions need be included in the order but the order must contain at least one of them.

The first term provides for classifying milk in accordance with the form or the purpose for which it is used, fixing a minimum price for each such used classification, which all handlers shall pay for milk purchased from producers or associations of producers, and a time when payment shall be made. Section 8 (c) (5) (a). The prices fixed are to be uniform for each classification of milk, subject, however, to certain differentials. The classification of milk is to be determined not by the character of the milk sold by the farmer or the handler but by the form in which, or the purpose for which, the handler uses it. The farmers all sell milk in fluid form, varying no doubt as to the grade and quality but still fluid milk. The handler may resell or use such milk in different forms for different purposes. Some he may sell as fluid milk, some he may convert into butter or cream and some he may manufacture into ice cream or other manufactured milk products. Its subsequent use determines the class into which falls the milk he buys from the farmer and the price he has to pay.

The second term or condition is designed to secure for each farmer a uniform price for all the milk he sells regardless of the classification in which it falls. Section 8 c (5) b.

This equalization provision may take one of two forms. It may provide for the payment of uniform prices either (1) to all producers selling to the same handler, or (2) to all producers selling to all handlers, irrespective of the uses made of the milk by the particular handler to whom it is delivered. In either case the uniform prices are subject to certain adjustments for market differentials, grade, and quality of the milk, and point of delivery of the milk. These two alternative provisions may be designated as "dealer equalization" and "market equalization." The first alternative, that of "dealer equalization" secures to the producers selling to one dealer a uniform price for the milk they deliver to him. If different rates have been fixed for different classifications of milk, the dealer may not attribute all the milk of one class he buys to a particular farmer or group of farmers, and all the milk of another class to other farmers. He must allocate among all his farmers equally all classifications of milk he purchases. The second alternative, that of "market equalization" secures to all farmers in the market covered by the order a uniform price for all milk delivered. It is immaterial that the particular handler to whom a farmer sells, buys milk of only one classification. Each farmer in the market is to be paid a price based on his pro rata share of all classifications of milk purchased by all dealers in the production area. The principle of allocation is extended from allocation among all producers of each dealer to allocation among all producers selling to all dealers. In both cases, however, the uniform prices may be subject to certain adjustments.

It will be seen that the first term providing for payment by the handler on the basis of the use to which he puts the milk purchased, and the second term, providing for receipt by the farmer of a uniform price regardless of the use to which the particular milk he sells is put, appear to be inconsistent and to leave open a gap between the amount the handler must pay and the amount the farmer is to receive. This gap will not appear if the provision for uniform receipts by farmers is that of "dealer equalization." The handler will pay to all his farmers as a group a total amount based on his total purchases of milk of all classifications. That total amount will be allocated among all his farmers. But if the provision for uniform receipts is that of "market equalization" the gap is clear. The handler is to pay only on the basis of his own use, and the farmer is to receive on the basis of the use of the entire market. The handler may, therefore, have to pay more or less than his farmers are to receive.

This gap is bridged by the third term that may be included in a milk order (Section 8c (5) (C)), providing a method for making adjustments in payments as among handlers, to the end that the total sums paid by each handler shall equal the "value" of the milk purchased by him at the rates fixed in accordance with the first term. By virtue of this provision in any order handlers who, on the basis of their own use, should pay more than the amount their farmers are entitled to receive, may be required to pay the excess to other handlers who, on the basis of their own use, should pay less than their farmers are entitled to receive. The first term, therefore, fixes the "value" that the handler "owes" for his milk. That "value" may be greater or less than the "price" he has to pay his farmers, fixed in accordance with the second term. If greater, he pays the excess to other handlers. If less, he pays the requir d "price" to his farmers and collects the difference from other handlers whose "value" was greater than the "price."

The fourth term (Section 8c (5) (D)) provides that producers who were not regularly selling milk during a thirty-day period prior to the effective date of the order shall be paid at the rate for the lowest use classification for a period of two calendar months.

The fifth term (Section 8 (c) (5) (E)) is a provision for rendering market information and for verification of weights, sampling, and testing of milk sold by producers, for whom such services are not rendered by a cooperative marketing association qualified under the "Capper-Volstead Act." Appropriate deductions to cover these services are to be made from payments to producers.

The sixth term (Section 8c (5) (F)) provides that cooperative marketing associations, qualified under the "Capper-Volstead Act" may blend the proceeds of all sales in all markets in all use classifications and distribute to producers in accordance with the contract between the association and its producers, thus in effect exempting such associations from the "market equalization" provisions which may be imposed upon competing handlers. The last term Section 8c (5) (G) provides that no milk order shall prohibit or limit the marketing in the area covered by the order of milk produced in any production area in the United States.

Orders, once effective, may be terminated or suspended by 10342 the Secretary, whenever he finds that the order obstructs or does not tend to effectuate the declared purpose of the Act (Section 8c (16) (A)), and must be terminated when termination is favored by a majority of producers engaged in production of the commodity for sale in the marketing area during a representative period, provided such majority have produced more than 50 per cent of the volume of the commodity (Section 8c (16) (B)).

Violation of an order renders the handler subject to a fine (Section 8c (14)). Jurisdiction is vested in the district courts to enforce, and to restrain violation of, any order, regulation, or agreement made pursuant to the Act (Section 8a (6)).

A handler subject to an order may seek administrative relief by petition to the Secretary stating that an order or obligation imposed thereby is not in accordance with law, and praying that it be modified or he be exempted from it. Section 8c (15) (A). The ruling of the Secretary, after hearing on the petition, is subject to review in equity in the District Courts. Any proceeding brought under Section 8a (15) to enforce the provisions of an order abate whenever a final decree is entered in proceedings to review the ruling of the Secretary on the petition (Section 8c (15) (B)).

Order No. 27 in Article III classified milk in 9 classifications, viz, Classes I, II–A, II–B, III–A, III–B, III–C, III–D, IV–A, and IV–B.

Class I may be called fluid milk.

Class II–A is cream with certain exceptions.

The remaining classes relate to various products made from fluid milk.

Article IV fixes the minimum prices for milk in the various classes with variations for certain months.

Article V relates to reports of handlers.

Article VI relates to the determination of uniform prices by formulas therein contained.

Article 7 relates to payment to producers.

Article 7, Section 1, exempts cooperatives from paying the uniform price to their producers.

Article VII, Section 6, provides for certain service payments to all handlers who come within the provisions thereof.

Article VII, Section 7, provides for payment to the Pro-10343 ducers Settlement Fund.

Article VII, Section 8, provides for payments out of the Producers Settlement Fund.

All of the defendants are handlers as defined in the order. None of them have facilities for the manufacture of milk products and none of them are engaged in marketing milk outside the marketing area.

The order established prices to be paid for milk according to its utilization. The price of milk for fluid consumption known as Class I is fixed arbitrarily, depending upon the market price of butter. The price of Class II–A milk (cream for fluid consumption) is likewise fixed arbitrarily. The price for fluid milk has been $2.45 per cwt. since September 1, 1938.

Prices for milk manufactured into various milk products, are the assumed values thereof, based on market prices of the products into which the milk is manufactured which products are sold in country wide competition. The prices for milk used in the manufacture of milk products is determined monthly by the Administrator by the use of formulae therefor contained in the order.

All handlers purchasing milk from producers are required to report to the Administrator monthly, a statement of the amounts of milk purchased by such handler, and the utilization thereof (Article V, Section 2).

Based on the reports of all handlers, the Administrator computes the total value of the milk of such handler, based on the prices provided in the order (Article VI, Section 7). The result of such computation is the "net pool obligation."

Upon these same reports, the Administrator computes a "uniform" price which is the average price payable to producers for milk for each month, subject to certain differentials in part referred to hereinafter (Article VI, Section 2). Such involves also subtracting certain special payments to handlers under Article VI, Sections 5 and 6.

Each handler, which is not a co-operative association of producers on or before the 25th of each month, is required to pay to each producer the "uniform price" for all milk delivered by producers during the preceding month and which was sold in the marketing area (Article VII, Section 1).

10344 Cooperative associations which are handlers are not required to make payment for such milk delivered to them by producers at the "uniform price" or at any fixed or stated price.

All handlers are required to pay into the Producers Settlement Fund on or before the 18th day of each month the difference between $2.45 per cwt. and the uniform price for all Class I milk (fluid milk) Article VII, Sec. 8.

Handlers selling milk outside the marketing area are under no requirement to pay the producers the uniform price for such milk nor to pay into the Producers Settlement Fund the difference between the uniform price and the actual market value of such milk. Such handlers are permitted to "blend" prices paid or purported to have been paid for such milk sold in the outside market, with the uniform price announced by the Administrator for milk sold in the marketing area, thereby reducing the actual price paid to producers by such handlers for milk sold by them in the marketing area in competition with the defendant and others in like situation whose milk is sold entirely in the marketing area. This permits handlers selling in the outside market by blending milk so sold with milk sold in the marketing area to pay the producers at less than the order price and less than the actual value, if the price figured by the handlers for sales in outside markets (called "unpriced milk") is lower than the actual market value.

Cooperatives are not only exempted from paying the uniform price or any fixed portion thereof to producers but are permitted to blend prices of milk received in the production area and sold in the outside marketing area.

Other discriminations in favor of cooperatives and large dealers are briefly referred to hereinafter.

The laudable purpose of the statute to procure for farmers prices for their milk commensurate with their purchasing power at specified periods of better balance of purchasing power is not criticized or condemned. Nor is there any denial that the production or sale of milk presents peculiar problems due in part to excess supply at certain times and almost scarcity at others.

The challenge is to the means set up in the statute and order 10345 for dealing with the conditions. hTese means constitute, defendants claim, such gross discrimination as to drive defendants out of business and confiscate their property by the arbitrary discrimination therein provided and without any lack of efficiency on the part of the defendants.

The defendants contend that the order was put forward by the Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Bargaining Agency in connection with the Dairymen's League, that it was designed for and has the effect of, in connection with the destructive marketing conditions in the Metropolitan area, driving out of business competitors not enjoying special price and other favorable arrangements with cooperatives; that the vote in the referendum of producers was brought about by misrepresentation as to the terms and effect of the order both on the part of agents of the Secretary of Agriculture and the State Commissioner, as well as by the Bargaining Agency and the Dairymen's League; that the referendum was thereby unfair and that the Dairymen's League alone cast two-thirds of the favorable votes cast.

Consideration will be given first to the legislation and the activities of the Bargaining Agency and the Dairymen's League in connection with the legislation and the preparation, promulgating and adoption of the order and the Referendum preceding its issuance by the Secretary.

The Rogers-Allen law was enacted first in 1937 by the Legislature of the State of New York as Chapter 383 of the Laws of 1937. Its provisions, so far as they relate to milk are similar to the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing agreement as amended in 1937.

The amendments to the Federal Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act became effective on June 3, 1937. One of the amendments was the insertion in the act of Section 8 (c) 19, providing for a Producers Referendum to determine whether or not an order is approved by two-thirds of the producers.

The intervening plaintiff, the Dairymen's League, in cooperation with the New York State Conference Board of Farm Organizations, of which it is the sole member representing milk producers, actively sponsored and supported the enactment of the Rogers-Allen Law.

After the enactment of the Rogers-Allen law and almost 10346 immediately after the amendment of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act, viz, on or about the 7th of June 1937, the Dairymen's League in conjunction with representatives of other cooperative organizations of the State, organized and incorporated the Metropolitan Co-Operative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., under the Cooperative Corporations Law of the State of New York. This Metropolitan Bargaining Agency consisted entirely of cooperative associations. Among its directors were several representatives of the Dairymen's League and Sheffield Producers Cooperative Assn., Inc. another large cooperative. While these two cooperatives never had a majority of the Board of Directors of the Bargaining Agency, it is clear that they exercised an important if not the dominating influence over the activities of the Bargaining Agency.

After the Incorporation of the Bargaining Agency in 1937, it set about inducing producers selling milk to proprietary handlers to form cooperatives for the purpose of joining the bargaining agency.

Many were so formed, including all three cooperatives of the producers delivering milk to the Defendant Jetter Dairy Company, though only one joined the Bargaining Agency. In some instances the Bargaining Agency advanced the fee for filing certificates of incorporation.

By June of 1938 there were 193 cooperative associations, most of which were members of the bargaining agency. The membership of these cooperatives included a very large percentage of all the producers. Many of these producers delivered milk to proprietary handlers and many to cooperative handlers.

In July 1937 Mr. E. Harmon, then connected with the Dairy Section of the Federal Department of Agriculture, and later Federal and State Administrator of orders 27 and 126 addressed a meeting of the Bargaining Agency relative to Federal Aid in a marketing program and spent three days monthly commencing with November 1937, at least some portion of which was spent in conference with the representatives of the bargaining agency and others about the marketing program.

About November 1st, 1937, the Bargaining Agency appointed a lawyer's committee to draft a form of marketing agreement in order to regulate the sale of milk in New York City.

0347 The original draft of such agreement and order was presented to the committee by Mr. Allen D. Miller, one of the attorneys for the Dairymen's League.

Early in 1938, the Bargaining Agency presented to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and to the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets of the State of New York, respectively, petitions for the issuance of Federal and State orders under the Agricultural and Marketing Agreement Act as amended in 1937 and of the State Rogers-Allen Law, and presented therewith proposed marketing agreement and proposed order regulating the handling of milk in the New York Metropolitan marketing area.

On April 29, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture and the State Commissioner of Agriculture gave notice of hearings to be held on the proposed order and marketing agreement commencing May 16, 1938, at Albany and continuing at Malone on May 19th, Syracuse on May 18th, Elmira on May 19th, New York City on May 20th, 24th, 25th, and 26th, and again at Albany June 3rd, 4th, and 7th. Hearings were held at these places on these dates. The State Commissioner of Agriculture gave notice of like hearings on the like proposed State order. The hearings were conducted jointly by the Secretary of Agriculture and the State Commissioner of Agriculture through jointly appointed representatives.

Commencing in April 1938, radio addresses were made by representatives of the Bargaining Agency urging the adoption of the agreement and order. The Dairymen's League News and the Bargaining Agency publications, which were widely distributed among the milk producing farmers urged the adoption of the proposed agreement and order.

The Secretary of Agriculture caused to be printed and sent out to producers and others the proposed order and agreement and also certain pamphlets.

The pamphlets purported to explain the meaning and intent of the agreement and order, the latter of which is complicated and not easily intelligible to the man of ordinary education.

The pamphlet "Explanation of the Federal State Marketing Plan" explaining Order 27 states:

"The hearings on the marketing agreement program were 10348 called at the request of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc., which claims a membership of cooperative associations representing over 40,000 producers."

Under the heading "Principal Provisions" appears this:

"3. The establishment of minimum prices which handlers are required to pay producers of each class of milk."

Under "Producers to decide" appears this:

"The definition (handler) specifically includes any cooperative association that operates plants or any cooperative association which causes milk to be delivered to plants of handlers and collects payment for such milk."

These Provisions would undoubtedly lead the farmer-producer who received the pamphlet to believe that the uniform price would be paid to all producers by all handlers, proprietary or cooperative.

True, at a later point the pamphlet also says under "Uniform Pool Prices for Producers":

"The order requires handlers to pay a uniform pool, or blended price calculated by the market administrator, to all producers delivering milk in any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class I milk outside the marketing area. In such an instance the handler is required to pay the uniform price to each producer on that part of the milk received which is equal to the proportion of his milk to which minimum prices are applicable (It does not say on that portion of the milk sold in the marketing area). For the remainder of each producers milk the handler may pay such prices as he sees fit * * *"

But this is so involved and technical and appears on the last page of the pamphlet and would hardly be likely to lead the farmer to doubt that all producers would receive the minimum uniform price fixed by the administration.

On or about August 5th, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture tentatively approved the proposed order and a marketing agreement and sent it out to all handlers who would be subject to the provisions of the order, but the requisite 50% of the handlers failed to sign the marketing agreement.

The failure of 50% of the handlers to sign the marketing agreement required the approval of the order by two-thirds of the producers.

In August 1938 there were 54,111 producers whose dairies had been approved for Grade B Milk and 6,109 for Grade A Milk or a total of 60,220 producers. They were located in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Vermont.

About 420 County milk receiving stations for Grade B Milk and 86 for Grade A Milk or a total of 506 had been approved within this territory.

10349 Of these the Dairymen's League operated 109 stations receiving milk from 11,391 producers. In addition thereto Bordens operated 65 approved milk receiving stations receiving milk from 8,404 producers, all of which producers are members of the Dairymen's League. Bordens pays the Dairymen's League for milk received at these plants and the League pays the producers. The total number of producers included in the Dairymen's League Membership is upwards of 19,500. Dairymen's League does 34% of the milk business in the Metropolitan area.

Sheffield Farms, Inc., and Sheffield Farms Condensed Milk Company operate 87 approved milk receiving stations receiving milk from 10,334 producers. The greater part of these producers deliver milk to Sheffield Farms, Inc., and are organized as a cooperative association known as Sheffield Producers Cooperative Association.

The Department of Agriculture of the United States in August 1938 issued a printed pamphlet under the Seal of the Department. In that pamphlet appears this:

"The Order (27) requires handlers to pay the uniform pool or blanket price, calculated by the market Administrator, to all producers delivering milk during any month unless the handler has received milk and sold it as Class I Milk ouside the marketing area * * *.

"Operation of the pool assures all handlers the same cost for milk sold in the marketing area, and for that milk assures payments to all producers at uniform rate except for the transportation and other differentials."

The last above paragraph quoted from the Government pamphlet is identical, word for word, with a paragraph contained in the Dairymen's League News of August 16, 1938, on Page 5.

These statements were incorrect. There is nothing in the order requiring payment of a uniform price to all producers or that the uniform price or any stated price or any price determinable under the order be paid to producers of the cooperative associations even for milk sold in the marketing area.

About this time a pamphlet issued by the Bargaining Agency was entitled "Mr. Dairyman—Save This Booklet." The Plan it explains may save your farm." On Page 1 under the heading "Principles Upon which the order is Based" appears this:

"The fundamental requirements of the industry which the 10350 order seeks to establish are five in number, viz:

"1. An equal purchase price to be paid by all dealers for milk for the same use.

"2. An equal share to each producer of the benefits of the flu market."

These are not accurate statements, for the Dairymen's League an other cooperatives are not required to pay a price equal to th paid by proprietary dealers.

Had this order been prepared by and for the Dairymen's Leagu and other large cooperatives, it could hardly have been more favo able to them.

The Dairymen's League and Metropolitan Bargaining Agen publications were sent broadcast to producers urging them to vo for the order and assuring that they would receive a higher pri than they had before received, and radio addresses to like effe were made.

Following this and on August 19, 1938, and for several days there after the Secretary conducted a referendum. The State Commi sioner of Agriculture conducted a referendum on State Order 1 at the same times and places.

The referendum was held at the times and places set forth i a schedule of polling places issued by the Secretary prior to th referendum, 308 polling places were designated, of which 233 wer in New York, 35 in Pennsylvania, and 16 in New Jersey.

Prior to the referendum there was sent to each known eligibl producer a copy of the proposed order as issued by him on Augus 5th, the schedule of polling places, and a pamphlet prepared b him entitled "Questions and Answers on the Federal and State Mil Program for New York," and another pamphlet also prepared b him entitled "New York Milk, Explanation of Federal State Mar keting Plan, contained in Order 27."

About 70,000 copies of these documents were sent through Fed eral and State Agencies to such producers.

The Metropolitan Bargaining Agency, whose largest and most in fluential member was the Dairymen's League, spent $108,637.91 t promote the adoption of this order covering salaries, publicity, print ing, radio, etc., of which $12,385.00 was for radio addresses, $7,979.00 which $12,385.00 was spent during the period between June 1 10351 and September 1, during which time took place the last o

the hearings and all the efforts to obtain signatures to the agreement by 50% of the handlers and to procure two-thirds of the producers to vote favorably on the Referendum.

Prior to the referendum, a list of cooperative associations entitle to vote for their members was compiled. There were about 22 co-operatives found entitled to vote for their members. A letter wa sent to each declaring the requirements for voting for their members The 22 co-operatives cast 24,903 votes, of which 24,580 were in favor of the order and 323 were against it.

On the referendum held August 19th for several days, 45,664 vote were cast out of a total of 60,220 producers qualified to vote, bu 7,017 of the 45,664 were rejected as invalid, leaving 38,627 valid votes

Of these, 38,627, 33,663 votes, or 87.1% were in favor of the issuance of the order. Of this 33,663 favorable votes, 22,297, or slightly more than two-thirds, were cast by the Dairymen's League, Inc., alone as a corporation for its members and other producers delivering milk to it. It had only about 19,500 members.

Of the 7,017 votes rejected as invalid, 5,110 votes were in favor, and 1,437 against the order, making a total of 6,547. These were rejected because either the voters were members of co-operatives which had voted for their members or because they were not qualified to vote. 470 voters, of 7,017 rejected, failed to mark their ballots for or against the order.

Had it not been for these misrepresentations the order might not have had the approval of two-thirds of 38,627 votes counted as valid. 12,876 negative votes would have defeated the order. No one knows how these producers, not voted by the cooperative associations, would have voted had they but been correctly informed of the terms and effect of the order, nor how many of the 14,576 voters who did not vote at all, nor the 7,017 whose votes were declared invalid, would have voted had there been no misrepresentation of the terms and effect of the order.

The statute (Section 8 (c) (12)) is mandatory that the—

"Secretary shall consider the approval or disapproval by any co-operative association * * * as the approval or disapproval of the producers who are members of, stockholders in, or under contract with such co-operative association of producers."

10352 That this applies to approval upon a referendum is made clear by Section 8 (c) (19).

So great was the power and voting strength of the Dairymen's League that no order which it opposed could be approved, for it controlled more than one-third of the entire number of producers entitled to vote.

This, urges the defendants, may explain why the order contains so many provisions claimed to be discriminatory in favor of large co-operatives and against proprietary handlers and small cooperatives.

Nor is it affected by the fact that some of the provisions in the order were the same as in previous but generally futile attempts by state action to beneficially regulate the milk industry.

This is not to be taken as suggesting that the Dairymen's League would not approve an order that was beneficial to the milk industry, but it must be an order which the Dairymen's League believes will be beneficial.

The secretary has no right to exclude from voting any cooperative "engaged in marketing the commodity or product thereof, or in advancing the interests of the producers of such commodity." Section 8 (c) (12). Yet the Secretary found only 22 of 193 cooperatives who were entitled to and desired to vote for its members.

The defendant, Schuyler Junction, N. Y., Milk Shed Co-operative made no application to the Secretary for qualification to vote for its members and did not apply for a co-operative ballot and when it attempted, through its President, to vote in the Referendum for its members the President was told that he could not do so. Upon his insistence that his ballot be taken, it was taken, but the President was told that it would not be counted. This was probably error. The statute fixes the qualification for co-operatives and no application is necessary. The burden seems to be on the Secretary to ascertain whether a cooperative meets the requirements of the statute and he may not make any additional qualifications such as applying for the right to vote or for a ballot.

The statute says the Secretary "shall' regard the approval or disapproval of a co-operative which complies with the statutory requirements. There seems no reason to doubt that Schuyler Junction 10353 Co-operative was entitled to vote and its vote should have been received and counted.

It seems that letters under date of July 8, 1938 (Exhibit 14 to Stip.), purporting to be authorized and directed by the Federal Secretary and State Commissioner of Agriculture were sent to these 193 co-operatives or so many of them as were then known to exist. The letters said:

"It is expected that simultaneous referenda will be conducted by the Secretary and Commissioner to ascertain if and when such order is perfected for the New York Market."

Certain information and requirements were sought from and presented to these co-operatives, at least some of which was not necessary to determine their right to vote.

In any event they were required to furnish the required information, determine their intention to vote for their members, and have such information in the hands of the representatives of the Secretary at Washington and the Commissioner at Albany not later than July 16, 1938. The co-operatives were in the same letter notified—

"In the event the requested information is not submitted, or the Secretary determines that such association is not qualified, the member-producer will be given an opportunity to vote individually and any vote submitted by such co-operative will be disregarded."

Here we have the cooperatives required to give information and determine within eight days, less time out for transportation of mail from Washington and to country districts and back to Washington, whether they favored an order not yet definitely known and whether they wished to vote as a co-operative for or against such order.

Assume four days for transportation (two days each way) that leaves four days for the collection of the information, calling meetings of directors, and determination whether the co-operative would vote for its members on an unknown order and in a Referendum not yet called and not held within a month thereafter. It is not surprising that only 54 out of the 193 co-operatives replied within this limited time and that only 22 had time to determine and so inform the Secretary and the Commissioner that they would vote for their members.

It is reasonably clear that the producers were led to believe that equal uniform prices for all producers would be received under order No. 27.

We have, then, a favorable vote obtained or influenced by misinformation as to the terms and effects of the order.

10354 We have also the Dairymen's League alone casting in favor of the order two-thirds of all the votes cast in favor of the order.

Should the conscience of the Court be satisfied that the order should be enforced when it was adopted on such a referendum and under the circumstances here shown? Manifestly not unless the Secretary's finding is binding on the Court, despite the fact that some of the misinformation was contained in departmental literature sent to producer voters.

It is said that the Secretary cannot be held responsible for the acts of the Bargaining Agency and the Dairymen's League. There can be little doubt of the cooperation between Federal and State Agents with the co-operatives to bring about a favorable vote for the order in the Referendum. Of this, the Secretary himself was probably unaware and relied on his subordinates. Indicative of Co-operation is the misleading statement in the Department's published statement of August 1938, taken verbatim from the Dairymen's League News of August 16, 1938.

After the order became effective on Sept. 1, 1938, strenuous efforts were apparently made to persuade or coerce proprietary handlers to sign the marketing agreement, every handler signing the agreement estopped himself from any legal attack on the order after signing and for a period of 31 to 59 days after he should withdraw from the marketing agreement.

Specific instances of diversion of withholding of milk from dealers until they signed the marketing agreement appear in the record and some of them were the result of official pressure, but not directly by the market administrator.

Effort was made to persuade at least one producer to withhold milk from the defendant Jetter Dairy Company. Publications by the Bargaining Agency and the Dairymen's League, letters by officers thereof, frankly suggest pressure, if not more, to persuade the handlers to sign the marketing agreement.

In the Dairymen's League News of Sept. 20, 1938, on the front page appeared an article headed—

"PRODUCERS READY TO DIVERT MILK FROM NON-COMPLYING DEALERS

"League gets thanks from Bargaining Agency for its offer of marketing facilities.

10855 "Volunteer Enforcement Agents—100 Strong Working the Roads Last Week

"This action followed a meeting of delegates of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers' Bargaining Agency in Syracuse, Sept. 10th. The delegates voted to have 100 farmers go out as volunteer enforcement agents to 'crack down' on delegates who have not signed the marketing agreement.

"* * * The Dairymen's League Plants are open * * * and others, too," said Mr. * * * (A state official). "Call me up. I'll tell you where to put your milk. You won't have to divert very long before these dealers will be ready to sign up."

In the Bargaining Agency's "Milk Producers' Market News" for October 1938, appeared this:

"Please bear in mind that our able Secretary who is in charge of the 'Minute Men' is doing a fine job and these men are on the watch at all times for disturbances, chiseling, and other items that are not for the best interests of your producers."

Other statements of suggested coercion and force are frequent.

On September 21, 1938, an officer of the Bargaining Agency issued a letter which was circulated among the producers, including those of the Jetter Dairy Company.

Among other things the letter said:

"* * * almost every dealer in the Metropolitan Market has signed the agreement. In some instances it has been necessary to exert producer pressure and the willingness of producer to cooperate in withholding or offering to withhold their milk until their dealer signed, has been encouraging and gratifying."

From Sept. 1, 1938, to December 1, 1938, the Bargaining Agency has spent $31,348.96.

It is not an unreasonable inference under the evidence of persuasion, pressure, and coercion that no small part was spent in obtaining the signatures by handlers to the marketing agreement to prevent litigation which the agency asserted had impaired the effectiveness of the order in the Boston Marketing area.

The record shows clear evidence that the Dairymen's League and the Bargaining Agency, aided by some officials not Federal, brought about the signing of the marketing agreement by nearly all the handlers.

Efforts were made to persuade the producers of the cooperatives delivering to the defendant Jetter Dairy Company and others who had not signed the marketing agreement to transfer their milk to other handlers, by representations that the producers delivering to Jetter and others might not be paid for their milk.

1083 It is urged that these post-referendum happenings are not relevant either as to the referendum or as to the terms, conditions, or validity of the order or of the statute. The question is not free from doubt. But they seem to this Court to fit in to and illustrate the design to prepare, present, and secure, the approval of this order, first by the public authorities and then by the producers in the Referendum on this order, apparently so greatly desired by the Dairymen's League, the Bargaining Agency, and the large co-operatives and large handlers, and also to aid in understanding the operation and effect of the order.

Without doubt, the Secretary of Agriculture hoped and believed order No. 27 and its complimentary State order No. 126 would remedy the chaotic milk situation in the Metropolitan Area, which had been a vexatious and seemingly unending problem to legislative bodies and executive authority. Undoubtedly the State Commissioner of Agriculture had like hope and belief.

It may be assumed that the Bargaining Agency and Dairymen's League Cooperatives believe that these orders would solve the milk problem when they prepared and put forward their proposed order or orders. The results, however, have not justified such expectations.

The results of the operation of the order would not ordinarily be a matter of judicial concern, but if such results have the effect of taking the property of one set of handlers without compensation and giving such property to another set of handlers, amounting to what the defendants call confiscation, it bears upon the validity and constitutionality of the order and the statute.

It is agreed here that handlers must receive not less than 9¾ cents per quart for milk in glass bottles sold to stores and other retail dealers in order to pay for full butter fat content and all other charges and make full payment under the order to producers.

This price is based upon efficient operation and makes no allowance for inefficiency.

About September 1st, the price to retail distributors was advanced to 9¾ cents per quart. Within two weeks cut throat competition under the order reduced this price to a level of from 8 to 9 cents per quart and milk was being sold generally at that price to 1085 dealers and store trade in the metropolitan area. This is about the same price that prevailed before the order became effective.

Some time prior to September 1st, 1938, the Jetter Dairy Company had been selling to one Weintraub thirty cases of milk daily and the price of the milk on that date was 9¾ cents per quart. On September 4th, 1938, the Dairymen's League solicited said account and by selling milk at nine cents per quart acquired 10 cases of said trade. Gold Medal Farms, Inc., by the same price cutting on the same date also acquired 10 cases of the trade of the said Weintraub. In order to retain the balance of 10 cases of such trade the defendant Jetter Dairy Company was compelled to reduce its price to nine cents per quart on September 5, 1938.

The Sheffield Farm Company offered one Herman Laven milk at 9¾ cents per quart on all milk purchased and in addi thereto delivered 13 quarts per case instead of 12 quarts, the ex quart of milk further reducing the price ¾th cents per quart, mak a net cost to Lavender of 8¼ cents per quart.

The Sheffield Company, a subsidiary of National Dairy Produ Corporation, also sold milk to one Rose Paley. This Company g her 35 cases of free milk to induce her to buy Breakstone milk, latter being also a subsidiary of National Dairy, and its milk be sold by the Sheffield Company.

The Dairymen's League also gave the same Rose Paley 35 cases free milk to procure her using the Dairymen's League Milk.

The Sheffield Company delivered milk to Mrs. Paley at 9¾ ce per quart and collected that amount and rebated to her in cash at t rate of ¾ cents per quart. The Dairymen's League billed milk to M at nine cents per quart.

The Grand View Dairy Company, which had been selling M Paley milk refused to give her any free milk and she discontin buying from it and obtained all her milk from Sheffield's and t Dairymen's League, who made the aforesaid concessions.

The practices above referred to were general throughout the ma keting area and therefore the price of milk to grocers and oth retail distributors was lowered to a price varying from 8 to 10358 cents per quart. Producers who sell directly to the grocer r retail distributors are not subject to the order, selling the own milk and do not have to pay the producers a uniform price n do they have to pay into any producer's settlement fund.

One of these, the Balsam Dairy Company, a producer dealer, ow ing a large number of cows and free from the order, selling milk Brooklyn, sold milk to Israel Hoch in September and October Brooklyn at 8½ cents per quart and presumably since.

From September 1st, 1938, to January 1, 1939, the defendant Jett Dairy Company lost 240 cases of daily sales of milk to competito by reason of these concessions. The Jetter Dairy Company handl a minimum of 40,000 quarts per day. The result—a loss of 1 ce to 1½ cents per quart has been from $400.00 to $600.00 per day.

The average quantities of fluid milk sold by the Dairymen League, including milk distributed directly by the Dairymen League and milk sold by the Dairymen's League to Distributors du ing the months of September, October, and November, 1938, was ap proximately 26,000 forty quart cans or a total of 1,640,000 quart daily, constituting about 34% of the fluid milk in the marketing are

If the Dairymen's League had to pay the same uniform price t producers as does the Jetter Dairy Company and other independe proprietary handlers, on the same basis of sale at 1 to 1½ cents belo the cost price of 9¾ cents per quart, the Dairymen's League woul lose from $10,400.00 to $15,600.00 per day. But the Dairymen League does not pay the uniform price to these producers and is no required by the statute or the order to do so. It may deduct such losses from its price paid to producers. Besides that, it may recoup itself in other ways by service charges and milk sales out of the district.

The amount paid to producers by the Dairymen's League for Class I Milk, at the base for 3.5% butter fat content in the 200 mile zone in cash and certificates of indebtedness to be taken as cash are as follows: September, 1.75%; October, 1.81%; November, 2.01%.

10359 While the uniform price fixed by the administration on the same basis of 3.5% milk for the 200-mile zone was as follows: Sept., 1.87%; October, 1.91%; November, 2.10%.

It will be seen that the uniform price which the proprietary handlers paid to the producer was greater than that paid by the Dairymen's League to the producers as follows: September, 12 cents; October, 10 cents; November, 9 cents per cwt.

Another source of great discrimination in favor of the large milk operators who can sell in the outside market is contained in the provision that the handler may blend the price of milk sold in the outside market with the milk in the Metropolitan area.

The Dairymen's League sold large quantities of milk, called unpriced milk in New Jersey, averaging more than 10,000,000 pounds per month.

The producers' price of milk in New Jersey is fixed by the State Board at $2.76 per cwt. It is not established in the evidence that the Dairymen's League received that price for its milk produced in the New York Production area and sold in New Jersey.

While the Dairymen's League offered the defendants almost all the things they desired about their prices and quantities, etc., the prices at which the Dairymen's League sold in New Jersey was not disclosed and the Court did not require its disclosure.

The New Jersey State Board fixes the resale price of milk sold to stores at 12 cents per quart, in rural districts and 13 cents per quart in the three heavily populated districts.

This compares with prices of 8 to 9 cents per quart received for such milk wholesale in the Metropolitan area.

It is a reasonable inference that its milk was sold at about the fixed price in New Jersey or at very little less than that price, if such price was not obtainable.

10360 The records of the Dairymen's League show that they sold about 20% of their entire sales in New Jersey.

If they sold at the base price of 2.76 per cwt. in New Jersey, the difference between the amount which the Dairymen's League received from this New Jersey Milk and the price it paid to the producers for September is $1.01 per cwt. ($2.76–$1.75). For October the difference was 95¢ per cwt. ($2.76–$1.81). For November the price was 75¢ per cwt. ($2.76–$2.01).

The price which the Dairymen's League paid to its producers for this large quantity of milk (10,208,500 lbs.), amounted for the September milk to $178,648.00. This is on the basis of about $1.75 per cwt. Assuming a sale price of $2.76 per cwt., this leaves about $103,195.00 profit on this milk sold in New Jersey in September from which must be deducted transportation charges and certain other expenses but which could not be measurably greater than on milk sold in the marketing area.

This sale was in the fixed price market in New Jersey whereas the sales in the Metropolitan area were in the competitive market with no prices fixed and where the milk sold at from 1 to 1½ cents per quart less than it cost for production and delivery.

Strenuous objection was made by the defendants against disclosing prices which the group of handlers, of which Aarun J. Rubenfeld is the head, received in the New Jersey market, where most of his direct sales of fluid milk was made and where 99½ per cent of all the milk from the State Hill plant was sold as fluid milk.

It hardly admits of doubt that higher prices were received in the New Jersey market where fixed selling and resale prices have long been maintained than in the Metropolitan market area where unbridled competition exists.

It is quite true, as urged, that the defendants might have applied to the Secretary of Agriculture for a modification of Order No. 27 in some or all of the respects in which they are aggrieved thereby.

But it is not to be supposed that there could be quick action upon such an application for modification of the order and in the meantime great detriment might result to the handlers.

10361 The handler must comply with the order during such time as it takes for the Secretary to entertain, hear, and decide the application for modification of the order and for such further time as it takes for a Court to decide whether modification should have been granted.

The statute also provides.

See also U. S. vs. Melvin Child Andrews (D. C. Mass., January 18, 1939, not yet reported) where any substantial amount of money is involved administrative relief is of little value.

But the order could not be amended in the two most important particulars, viz, cooperatives are exempt from payment of the uniform price to producers and the order is required to permit cooperatives to blend prices received in outside markets with prices received in the marketing area. Adjustment through a scheme such as the Producers Settlement Fund is also provided by the statute so administrative relief would be futile.

Furthermore, it is the Government and not the handler which brings this suit. Also, the power does not lie with Congress to require one whose property is being taken in violation of the 5th amendment to pursue some prescribed administrative remedy during which time his property continues to be taken before he can apply to the Courts for protection and relief.

In a proper case, immediate resort to the Courts cannot be denied for any reason whatever.

The things of which defendant Jetter most complains are the provisions of the directing statute that cooperative associations need not pay the uniform price to producers which is contained in Section 8 (c) (5) (f), the only limitation being that such a cooperative shall not sell its milk products to any handler for less than the fixed uniform price.

This section also provides for the blending of the net profits of all these sales in all markets and in all use classifications. These are two of the things which are most discriminatory.

Article 7, Section 1, provides that all handlers other than cooperative associations shall pay producers not less than the uniform price. It is by the construction and operation of this act that the cooperatives do not pay the uniform price, and may blend the price of 10362 milk sold outside of the State and in other classifications with fluid milk sold in the marketing area and thereby reduce the price paid by them to producers which is never, even for fluid milk, the price required to be paid by proprietary handlers.

The cooperatives also receive payments out of the Producers Settlement Fund that are denied to the proprietary handlers, sometimes amounting to as much as five cents per cwt.

The cooperative handlers may charge to the producers and deduct from the price paid for the milk, expenses of plant operation which run from 15 to 30 cents per cwt. of fluid milk. Proprietary handlers cannot make such deductions of amounts paid for expenses of operation themselves.

While all handlers are allowed 23 cents per cwt. plus transportation costs for milk received at each station equipped 10363 only for receiving and shipping milk and transporting the same to another plant where it is utilized for other than fluid milk purposes, only the large cooperatives and large proprietary dealers are equipped to receive this 23 cents charge.

Cooperatives which are also milk dealers or handlers, may and do pay their producers less than the uniform price and from their payments into the Producers Settlement Fund, if any, they receive payments back for services, which proprietary handlers cannot, and do not, receive.

In fact, there is very little that a proprietary handler, who does not sell any milk outside the marketing area, and who has no plant to which he can transfer surplus milk, can do to recoup his losses. He cannot reduce his price by "blending" a fictitious value on "unpriced" milk with that sold in the area. He has no unpriced milk. He has no manufacturing plant, and may possess neither capital or inclination to enter the manufacturing field already principally covered by Dairymen's League, Bordens, National, and some of the larger independents.

The discrimination between the small proprietary handlers and the Dairymen's League will be manifest from the following illustration of the comparative operation of the statute as applied in Order No. 27 as it affects the defendant, Jetter Dairy Company, and the Dairymen's League. The figures include all the differentials in favor of the cooperatives.

The loss per quart is from 1 to 1½ cents per day for milk sold in the market area.

Jetter sells 40,000 quarts per day all in the marketing area, at a loss of $400.00 to $600.00 per day because required to pay the uniform price to producers.

The Dairymen's League sells about 1,640,000 quarts per day or 41 times as much as Jetter. Dairymen's League sells without loss, for what it does not gain from sales in New Jersey and other out-of-State markets, together with the service and other differentials, it may deduct from its producers because it is not required to pay the uniform price.

Jetter owes to Producers Settlement Fund for September and October (September payment has been made)	$30,000
Dairymen's League paid to Producers' Settlement Fund for September and October	110,000 or only about 3½ times as much as Jetter.

10364 Dairymen's League received from the Producers' Settlement Fund under Article VII, paragraph 5, in September $59,455.59, and in October $60,794.07, or a total of $120,239.66, which is about $10,000 more than it paid in.

In addition, it received from this fund under Article VII, section 6, in September $91,630 and in October $73,994, making a total of $165,524. Adding this to the aforesaid $120,239.00, it makes a grand total of $285,763.

This is about $175,000 more than the Dairymen's League paid into the Producers' Settlement Fund.

Jetter received nothing. Jetter loses at a $400.00 to $600.00 per day loss, on a 30-day month, $12,000 to $18,000. In a year that amounts to $144,000 to $216,000. One year's payments into the fund at $15,000 per month would be $180,000. In less than a year it is practically certain that all the assets of the Jetter Company would be taken by the operation of the order, and it would have no funds or assets to pay producers or to make further payments into the fund. In short, its entire property would be confiscated. This is by force of the statute as applied in the order.

As a matter of fact, the defendant Jetter Company could not last a year. It had on April 1, 1938 only $50,000 capital and $30,000 surplus or a total of $80,000. The taking of its capital at the rate of only $15,000 per month would exhaust its entire assets within 6 months.

Moreover, there is nothing to prevent the Dairymen's League and other large producers from further depressing the price of milk sold in the marketing area in order to capture the customers of competitors and thus forcing the Jetter Dairy Company and others in like situation, out of business at an even more rapid rate.

The Dairymen's League Cooperation, however, could go on indefinitely for the statute and order are greatly discriminatory in favor of cooperatives, especially large ones, which can take advantage of all the opportunities it presents.

The property of the Jetter Company and, of course, all other proprietary handlers and smaller cooperatives is thus taken by operation of statute and without the due process of law required by the Fifth Amendment.

This brings us to the consideration of the questions of law here involved, apart from the misrepresentations to producers in connection with the referendum.

10365 The two most important questions of law are these.

1. Does this statute as applied in the order, in its operation under the conditions here existing, violate the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution prohibiting the taking of property without due process of law or the taking of private property for public use without just compensation?

2. Can the discriminations in favor of cooperatives be upheld under the circumstances here existing on the ground that producer cooperatives may legally receive the special preferential treatment provided in order 27?

It is held by high authority that even though a statute may be constitutional on its face, and may be valid when enacted or when given a particular application, it may be invalid under changed conditions or when given an application which results in arbitrary and prejudicial discrimination or when its operation results in the taking of property of one without compensation and transferring it to another.

Borden Company v. Baldwin, 293 U. S. 194, 210. See also Arrway Corp. v. Day, 266 U. S. 71, 85.

Nebbia v. New York, 291 U. S. 502, 537.

Great Northern Ry. v. Washington, 300 U. S. 154.

The acts of Congress under the commerce clause are subject to the Fifth Amendment.

Currin v. Wallace, supra.

Railroad Retirement Act. v. Alton R. R., 295 U. S. 330, 347.

Monongahela Navigation Co. v. U. S., 148 U. S. 312, 336.

U. S. v. Chicago, Milwauke & St. Paul R. R. Co., 282 U. S. 311, 327.

Congress has not the power under the Commerce Clause, or otherwise, to take without compensation property of one and transfer it to another. And this is so, even though it be for a valid public purpose as is claimed here and as the statute intends.

Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton, 295 U. S. 330, 359.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. U. S., 148 U. S. 312, 336.

Louisville Joint Stock Bank v. Radford, 295 U. S. 555, 580, 602.

There can be little doubt that the statute, as applied in the order by means of the Producers Settlement Fund, takes the money from one group without compensation and transfers it to another, 10366 however disguised that transferring and taking may be, by representing it to be necessary to stabilize milk production and to take care of surplus milk.

The Milk Producers Settlement Fund here bears a close resemblance to the pooling fund, to which, under the Railroad Retirement, the large carriers were required to contribute for the benefit of employees of the weaker roads.

That act was enacted under the commerce clause and was held to violate the Fifth Amendment because it took "the property or money of one and transferred (transferring) it to another without compensation, whether the object of the transfer be to build up the equipment of the transferee or to pension the employees."

The money taken from one (Jetter) was in effect transferred to another (Dairymen's League and some other large cooperatives) for the benefit of the producers of such cooperatives and in effect for the benefit of those cooperatives themselves.

The Fifth Amendment is intended to protect the property and affairs of all citizens alike regardless of all other considerations, and forbids the taking of the property of one without compensation and transferring it to another.

All the public purposes declared to be the object of the Railroad Retirement Act were set aside as no consequence in face of the Fifth Amendment. So here, the welfare of the producers and cooperatives, sought to be served by the agricultural marketing agreement act must be set aside, because here, as in the Alton case the property of one by the force of the statute and order, is taken and transferred to another in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

This case has analogy to Thompson v. Consolidated Gas Utilities, 300 U. S. 551, even though the statute there involved was a state statute.

The validity of the extractions from one for the benefit of the other cannot be supported by the so-called pooling cases upholding workmen's compensation acts (Mountain Timber Company v. Washington, 243 U. S. 219. N. Y. Central Railroad v. White, 243 U. S. 188; nor by the statutes requiring banks to contribute to a common fund for insuring deposits (Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104; Abie State Bank v. Bryan, 282 U. S. 765.

These cases were cited in the Alton case and distinguished by Court and held without analogy.

In all those statutes there was a possible future benefit to 10367 be received by the one whose contribution was required. There is no possible benefit to be received here by the contributors.

The New England Divisions Case, 261 U. S. 184, and Dayton-Goose Creek Railway v. U. S., 263 U. S. 456, are equally without application here. There a fair return either by rate or on the investment was rovided. Here no fair return is provided. The requirements of the tatute and order not only do not provide for a fair return or any re-urn on the investment but in fact take the entire investment in peri-odic exactions.

These cases were also distinguished in the Alton case:

Hegeman Farms Corporation v. Baldwin, 293 U. S. 163, upon hich some of the plaintiffs rely, has little application here.

There was no producers' settlement fund nor other pooling ar-angement for payments by one of the beneficiarys to another. The ecision was influenced there by the failure of any showing by the laintiff that his handicap in competition was not due to his own nefficiency.

There is no question of inefficiency, as has been shown.

It is said that the losses suffered by Jetter Dairy Company and thers are caused by the competitive conditions in the marketing area nd not by reason of the statute and order. It is the order under he statute which compels the proprietary handlers to make fixed pay-nents to producers and other payments into the milk producers set-lement fund and causes these large losses, while permitting coopera-ives to pay what they please to producers and giving such coopera-ives, especially large ones, other discriminatory preferences, both as o the amount paid into and withdrawn from the producers' settle-ent fund. These grossly discriminatory provisions permit in such competitive market, by means of the settlement, the taking of the roperty of some and transferring to others without compensation nd thereby eliminating them entirely from the competitive field.

This competitive condition was known when the statute was enacted nd the order was issued, for it had long existed and could not be ured by any and all the previous attempts at remedy. These defend-nts have no power or control over these competitive conditions. fficiency is not a factor.

This is not a case of "protecting a business against the hazards of ompetition" as plaintiff's counsel assert, citing Hegeman Farms Corp. vs. Baldwin, 293 U. S., Supra.

368 This is more like a case of statutory disarming of one set of competitors and sending into competitive battle with another t to whom the same statute supplies arms.

Neither the order nor the statute made any attempt to remedy the ompetitive conditions and the operation of the order must have been oreseen. In any event the statute as applied in the order brings the rbitrary discrimination and disaster hereinbefore shown.

Nebbia vs. New York, 291 U. S, 502, has little analogy. There the ew York Statute fixed minimum prices for the sale of milk at retail nd provided a penalty for violations. The case came before the ourt upon a conviction for selling under price.

The Court does, in its opinion, summarize the conclusions of the egislative Committee respecting the milk industry of New York. hese conclusions refer to the desirability of compelling an equal sharing of the burden of the surplus milk by all producers and distributors. These statements, however, are those of the committee and not of the Court.

Public Service Commission vs. Great Northern Utility, 289 U. S. 130, is inapplicable. In that case there was, in the first instance, no allegation and no proof that the rates prescribed were confiscatory. Amendment to allege confiscation, but without proof, was held unavailing.

10369 There are no decisions of any appellate Court upholding such an order as this under provisions of this statute.

U. S. vs. David Buttrick Company, 91 Fed. (2nd) 66, C. C. A. 1, merely decided that the provisions of the agricultural adjustment act relating to milk were not covered by the decision in U. S. vs. Butler, 297 U. S. 1, which declared other provisions of that act void.

The district court had held the whole act void under the Butler case and the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and sent the case back for trial. The case related to the statute before its amendment in 1937.

In Hood & Sons, et al., vs. U. S., 97 Fed. (2nd) 677, C. C. A. 1, the District Court granted a temporary mandatory injunction of the same kind sought here.

On appeal the C. C. A. modified the injunction and directed the payment into the registry of the Court of the moneys required under the temporary injunction to be paid to the market administrator. The C. C. A. held that the defenses were not frivolous and should be heard by the District Court before final decision.

In Whittenberg, et al., vs. U. S., 100 Fed. (2nd) 520, the Secretary of Agriculture brought suit against a handler of citrus fruits in Texas from violating the order there involved. There more than 50% of the handlers had signed the marketing agreement and the order was approved by two-thirds of the producers.

The Secretary made weekly regulations forbidding shippers to ship in interstate commerce and to Canada grape fruit below stated standards of size and quality.

The Court held the provisions of the act constitutional.

The Court relied chiefly on U. S. vs. Buttrick, 91 Fed. (2nd) 66, Supra, and Edwards vs. U. S., 91 Fed. (2nd) 767, later referred to and on the Currin case, 95 Fed. (2nd) 856 (Affirmed by the Supreme Court).

It will be noted that there was no equalization fund or producers settlement fund as here and no differentials or other discriminatory preferences.

The handler was not required to pay into any fund for transfer to others and the handler was on the same basis as all other handlers having inferior fruit.

Edwards vs. U. S. 91, Fed. (2nd) 767 (C. C. A. 9), contains no equalization scheme and no fund like the Producers Settlement Fund here into which one set of handlers are to pay into a fund to be transferred to other handlers. The order complained of there merely prorated the shipment of fruit in interstate commerce. It has little analogy to the order and conditions here.

10370 Wallace vs. Hudson Duncan Company, 98 Fed. (2nd) C. C. A. 9,985, is not in strict analogy. The case related to unshelled walnuts.

In that case the order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, and held valid by the Court required that a packer (not a grower):

"either (1) must sell or hold all the walnuts it acquires in the state of acquisition, of (2) export from the State not more than a percentage of its intended shipments determined (percentage) by the Secretary for each crop year—upon consideration of the delivery of the remainder of such intended crop export to a control board.

"The Board may sell the walnuts it received to purchasers abroad or to shellers within the United States, at prices fixed by the Board, or may eliminate all or part of them from the market by donation or sale to charitable institutions in the United States, with provisions that such sales or donations shall not enter the U. S. as unshelled walnuts.

"The Board also has power to release to interstate shipment through the contributing packers all or portions of the surplus delivered to it, if in its opinion, the proper control of the interstate market warrants it. The proceeds of the distribution of the surplus and payments of credit value by the shippers are to be ratably apportioned and distributed to them by the Board.

"or (3) May export from the state all of its intended shipments upo consideration of a payment to the Board, not of what the Packer has sold them for, but for a certain 'credit value' fixed for all shippers by the Board, of the surplus walnuts which would otherwise have been delivered to the Board."

While that order has seeming similarity to the order here involved there are distinguishing differences.

1. There is no discrimination among packers as there is among handlers here where cooperatives are given a decidedly preferential position.

2. There are no prices fixed to be paid to producers as is done here.

3. There the object is to maintain the price of walnuts in the interstate markets, while here the sole object is to secure a price to producers before the milk passes into interstate commerce and no thought is given to prices in the interstate market which are subject to cut-throat competition largely by those given a preferential status in the order.

4. There the packers who deliver walnuts to the Control Board, the proceeds of the sale of which, if sold are distributed ratably to the same packers who delivered to the Board, while here the payments out of the producers settlement fund are not paid to handlers ratably but on a plan involving preferential treatment based on whether or not the handlers are cooperative and whether they render services or not. Also here payments into the pool are subject to gross discrimination.

10871 5. There the walnuts might be kept or sold in intrastate commerce free from the order. Here milk cannot be kept, for it is highly perishable. Here, if sold in intrastate commerce in the marketing areas, it became subject to State Order No. 126, which provides for the same payment to the same producers settlement fund.

In the Hudson-Duncan case the Court recognized that such a regulation would be violative of the 5th amendment if unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious, citing Nebbia vs. New York, 291 U. S. 502, 525, but held that the regulation was reasonable with one judge dissenting. It will be seen that the Hudson-Duncan case has little analogy to the case at bar.

In U. S. vs. Melvin Childs et al., D. C. Mass. (Jan. 18, 1939, not yet reported) mandatory injunction was granted to the Secretary requiring the defendants to pay into a milk price equalization fund. Whether or not there was other discriminatory provisions such as exist here is not disclosed. The discussion relates chiefly to whether all the defendants were engaged in interstate commerce. The opinion discloses that the judge writing the opinion believed there should be uniformity of decision in the District Court of that district. That decision is not controlling or persuasive here.

U. S. vs. Goldsmith Fruit Company, 19 Fed. Supp. 147, upheld the order of the Secretary under the Act before its amendment in 1937. That order had practically none of the provisions here and the case is not analogous.

It is also in direct conflict with Fosgate vs. Kirkland, 19 Fed. Supp. 152, decided one month later in the same district, in which later opinion the Judge said he could not follow the Goldsmith case.

There apparently are no further decisions under the act which have any analogy to the order and the facts here existing.

The defendants make some further contentions which may be briefly considered. It is urged that no provision of the statute authorizes Articles VII, Sections 5 and 6, of the order.

These relate to payments of 5¢ per cwt. to cooperatives and market services of 23 cents per cwt. and transportation charges, both to cooperatives and proprietary handlers.

The court does not find any sections of the act which clearly and definitely authorize such payments. If there be none, the order does not comply with the statute and should not be enforced.

10872 It is also urged that Congress in the Act has neither fixed the price to be paid to producers nor prescribed a formula for fixing such price. This is not free from doubt.

If, without prescribing the price or a formula for determining the price, the statute authorizes the Secretary with the approval of two-thirds of the producers to fix a price without laying down standards to be applied, then there seems no escape from the conclusion that the statute delegates to the Secretary and producers powers which are essentially legislative and such delegation of power is invalid whether the delegation is to the Secretary or the producers separately or to both together.

Carter vs. Carter Coal Company, 298 U. S. 310.

The case would then come within the decision of the Carter case rather than within Currin vs. Wallace, Supra.

Since the decision may be reached on other grounds, this question need not be decided.

Plaintiffs cite many statutes, both State and Federal, providing for certain preferential treatment to producers and cooperative associations of producers, certain cases in which the validity of some of them have been upheld. But none of these statutes carry any such arbitrary, discriminatory provisions as the applicable provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act and order 27. None take from one and transfer to another without compensation. Some are tax cases where producers selling their own products are classified differently from dealers who are not producers and exempted from a tax imposed on such dealers. Some relate to classifications of dealers or other persons not many of which relate to cooperatives.

Warehouse Company vs. Tobacco Growers, 276 U. S. 71, is the case most relied upon. A Kentucky statute aiming to assist agricultural producers in the orderly marketing of their crops, authorized the incorporation of nonprofit associations, with membership confined to producers, to contract with their respective members for ten years to market the members' crops. It also provided that any warehouseman knowingly inducing such member to break his contract by receiving such members' tobacco for sale or auction should be liable for a penalty of $500 to be recovered in a civil suit by a cooperative. The Supreme Court upheld a judgment so recovered. The lack of analogy is clear.

10373 In Frost vs. Corporation Comm., 278 U. S. 515, the Discrimination in favor of cooperatives there involved was held to be unconstitutional.

Chicago Board of Trade vs. Olsen, 262 U. S. 1, has no analogy.

In Eisenberg Farms Inc. vs. Baldwin, 265 N. Y. 662, it was contended that the New York Milk Control Law was unconstitutional because it failed to require cooperative associations to return to their producers the prices fixed by the state milk control law. The Court of Appeals sustained the statute, but without opinion. The decision in the Eisenberg case was explained, however, by the Court of Appeals in Matter of Mayflower Farms, Inc. vs. Baldwin, 267 N. Y. 9, 12, as follows:

"In Matter of Eisenberg Farms, Inc. vs. Baldwin (265 N. Y. 662), this Court decided that the differential classes in favor of cooperative associations which permitted them to pay to producers less than the price fixed by the Commission for milk was Constitutional."

It may be said that the Court in 265 N. Y. 662, wrote no such opinion but did uphold the lower court so deciding.

The discrimination in favor of cooperatives in that statute is but a small matter compared to the comprehensive discriminatory scheme provided in the Marketing Act and Order 27, and can have little bearing here.

There is no need to prolong the discussion of statutes or decisions relating to cooperatives. There are no authoritative cases upholding any such discrimination in favor of cooperatives as here exists. None say that the 5th amendment permits one to be treated differently from another.

The defendant cooperatives are not quite in the same situation as the Jetter Dairy Company. It is quite true, as the Government contends, that they may not complain of any preferential treatment of cooperatives of which they may take advantage.

But there seems no good reason why they may not complain of discriminatory preferences of which only the large dealers, cooperative and proprietary handlers may avail themselves, such as the 23 cents per cwt. for transfer of milk from a nonmanufacturing to a manufacturing plant, the blending of prices for which unpriced milk may be sold in New Jersey and other nonmarketing area markets with prices of milk sold in the marketing area. They can avail themselves of none of these preferential provisions of statute and order.

The order is also discriminatory as against them. They pay money which would otherwise be distributed to their producers, to 10374 the Settlement Fund, in order that it may be paid out to the large cooperatives and large proprietary handlers. They are forbidden by law to sell milk in the area at less than the prices fixed by the order. They are also required to pay into the Producers Settlement Fund to provide preferential payments made to producers living in 18 counties, under the provisions of Article 6, Section 8. The producers in those counties, receive 20¢ per cwt. in addition to the locational differentials which return them a higher price for their milk because they are located nearer New York. By this means, moneys of the Rock Royal and the Schuyler Junction and Central New York Cooperatives, are taken to be given to other producers, for the most part, delivering to the three large proprietary and cooperative handlers, without compensation to these small defendants.

If they pay into the producers settlement fund on the order basis they, like also the smaller proprietary handlers, though in lesser degree, suffer confiscation of their property by the same taking from one and transferring to another.

There can be little doubt that under the situation existing when the order became effective, the large dealers doing 70% of the business in the marketing area enjoy discriminatory preferential treatment over most of the handlers doing the remaining 30% of the business.

There remains to be considered the separate contention of the defendant Central New York Cooperative. This defendant contends that it does not come within the terms of the order because as a cooperative marketing association it merely acts as an agent for the producers in marketing their milk; that their legal status is that of producers marketing their own milk, which, if true, removes them from the operation of the order.

Central New York Cooperative has paid uniform prices to its producers and has left after such payments and payments of all expenses a sum not exceeding half the amounts fixed by the administrator for payment into the Producer Settlement Fund for each month.

This cooperative is incorporated under the laws of the State, rents milk receiving plants, where, as it contends, it receives milk as their agent, from producers who are members and some others under contract with it and still as agent delivers the milk to other agents who are wholly owned subsidiary corporations, who sell to 0375 stores and retail distributors. The proceeds of the sale come back to the defendant cooperative, presumably less the expense of the selling agents and are paid to the producers less the expense of operating the receiving plants.

Such a claim that the Central New York Cooperative and its subsidiary corporations are merely agents for the producers is somewhat difficult to accept. This cooperative owns no farms or cows and directly produces no milk.

The Government contends that such a cooperative is a handler within the definition of handler and therefore liable for payment into the producers settlement fund. It is not free from doubt that such definition is entirely supported by the statute. Moreover, under a similar contract it has been held that such a relation is one of joint venture and not a sale.

Rhodes vs. Little Falls Dairy, 230 A. D. 571, Affirmed in 256 N. Y. 539.

It is, however, not necessary to decide this question, for even as a cooperative handler, Central New York Cooperative suffers the same discriminatory treatment as the other defendant cooperatives who by reason of the fact that they cannot avail themselves of all the opportunities for withdrawal from the Producers Settlement Fund that are enjoyed by the Dairymen's League and other large handlers selling in the New Jersey Market and receiving the other preferential differentials, find their property taken under the order without compensation and transferred to another.

The final conclusion is that the statute, as applied in the order, is unconstitutional as to all the defendants in its application to the situation and condition here existing and that the order was not approved in accordance with the provisions of the statute and should not be enforced.

Judgment may be entered dismissing the complaints as to all defendants, with one bill of costs against the Dairymen's League and Metropolitan Bargaining Agency. February 23, 1939.

6. The District Court erred in making the conclusion of law stated in each and every paragraph of its conclusions of law, with the exception of paragraph 30 thereof, as to which paragraph the intervening plaintiff, Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., assigns as error only the failure to adopt without qualification paragraph numbered 4 of plaintiff's proposed conclusions of law.

27. The District Court erred in holding that the defendants have any legal standing to complain of such alleged discrimination.

28. The District Court erred in holding that the failure of the Act and of Order No. 27 to require cooperatives to pay the uniform
